THE SILVER HAWK

By WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

"In that case, it's none of your affair where she is. You've got some reason for wanting to find her, but it's the kind of reason that you're ashamed to tell a man face-to-face. Ashamed to let be known. Whatever it is, you're a jim-dandy—hounding a girl with your money and your hired snoopers till she's fear-stricken and near driven crazy. You're wasting your time here. If you won't come clean, I don't tell where she is; and you're going to have one heap-hell time finding out."

Soft-Shoe produced an automatic, stepped back a couple paces out of reach of a lunge, and covered Dorn.

Dorn was rather amused at this move. In a city alley Soft-Shoe might be a capable person, but in the bush he was a babe in the woods. With his own hidden automatic, shot from the hip, Dorn could have cut him down. But that was not at all necessary. He considered cooly: 'When the time comes I'll take that gun away from him and slap his jaw. But first—maybe here I can find out something about Aurore's trouble."

"Now, fellow," Carter-Snowdon demanded, "you're going to tell me where she is. I've wasted five days in these damned mountains already. If you won't talk, we'll take steps to make you talk. You had your chance to get a handsome sum, but you played the fool—the fool over her. I suppose it was a nice prospect—to have her somewhere and go visiting."

In the man's tone, more than by what he said, Dorn detected something new and startling a smouldering, primitive jealousy. Unmistakable; it was stamped on his ponderous face and his thick lips and on his cheeks minutely veined by red.

Dorn perceived, he was forced to the conclusion, that the relation between Carter-Snowdon and Aurore was a personal one. Whatever other factors entered in, the man loved her, with a jealous, sensual love; for the mere thought of another man having her in his keeping unleashed the primitive brute.

What was that relation? Had Aurore been engaged to him and jumped the engagement? It would explain his jealousy. It might possibly explain her flight and his search for her. But it was repugnant to think of, and incredible; and more more than that, it was flatly impossible. For Carter-Snowdon was married. In a batch of papers sent to him when he was abroad Dorn remembered reading about that marriage. And Aurore was not his wife, His wife was a girl from the Maritime Provinces, the daughter of a cabinet minister. An Edmonton paper had run a scorching editorial on making political capital out of sacred matrimony.

In his aching desire to find out what that relationship was, Dorn deliberately played upon his enemy's jealousy. With studied provocation: "Yes, it is a nice prospect—with her. You said it."

Carter-Snowdon flushed down to his collar.

"You—d'you think she'd have a nobody like you—even if she could? You damned fool, she's rich, well born, out of your class. She's using you. When she gets through with you she'll throw you out of the window like a banana skin!"

Even if she could, For a third time, that warning, that blunt statement! Dorn felt himself very near to Aurore's secret. Enraged a little more, Carter-Snowdon would blare it out.

"You may be hog-plastered with money and own half the province," Dorn thrust another javelin into him, "but as a man you don't stack up so very high in her estimation."

Carter-Snowdon's fists clenched and unclenched. In his whole life he had never been spoken to with such studied insolence, with such presumption of equality. All his baffled and pent-up anger of the last five days broke out, as though Dorn had pulled the key-log in a jam.

It was Soft-Shoe, watching the drama with his fish-cold eyes, who saw Dorn's purpose and checked Carter-Snowdon from blurting out the ugly fact.

"Sir," he spoke up respectfully, "you shouldn't answer him. He's trying to learn from you what she's afraid to tell him. No use letting him know anything about it, sir. If you please, I'll take him in hand and he'll talk for me."

It blasted Dorn's plan. Carter-Snowdon drew back from the trap into which Dorn had nearly led him, and swallowing his anger, he snapped at the detective: "You said you'd make him talk. Well, get busy on him!"

With no hope of getting any information from these men, Dorn no longer cared to bandy words with them. But before driving them away he proposed to put a little fear of the Lord into this pair. His blood was running hot. That remark about Aurore—his visits to her, the nature of his intimacy with her—burned his ears. He proposed to have satisfaction for that insult to Aurore.

But first the detective had to be disarmed. That looked like a suicidal attempt; the man was fully twelve feet distant, where he could shoot several times before Dorn could reach him, and his heavy black automatic, covering Dorn, did not waver.

Dorn looked at him fixedly for a moment. Then his eyes travelled to the bush just behind the detective and he made a slight motion with his hands, as though gesturing to some ally of his who was creeping up to get the drop.

Soft-Shoe saw the gesture and whirled around to face this supposed enemy. Dorn stooped, picked up a broken tent peg, flung it with all the power of his arm, and then lunged.

The hurtling missile caught Soft-Shoe across the chest. It staggered him, knocked the breath out of him. The next moment Dorn closed in, clutched his gun hand, held it up, and his right fist smashed into the detective's midriff with a sickening thup.

Kicking the automatic aside, Dorn turned on Carter-Snodon. He sized up his bigger enemy like a woodman the tree he intends to chop down. Those hands were big and meaty, those shoulders powerful: Carter-Snowdon was two inches taller and forty pounds heavier; but he carried an inch or two of fat under his belt, and he had the white skin of a person who takes his outdoor life with gloves on.

Dorn slanted up to him, blocked a furious, clumsy swing, and drove in that right of his hard to the jaw. Carter-Snowdon was too big, too ponderous, to be knocked down by a single punch, but it took all the starch and pomposity out of him, and for once he was a plain human being in fear of his life. An ashy-gray pallor spread over his face. He backed up, Dorn following, trying to get close for a second blow.

In his retreat he stumbled over Dorn's wood-pile and sprawled on the ground. Dorn took that moment to glance around at Soft-Shoe, who was trying to pull himself up by the sapling and recover the automatic. When he whirled to Carter-Snowdon he saw his enemy scrambling up with the double-bit axe in his hands. Dorn whipped out his revolver, made him throw the axe aside.

He was thoroughly mad this time when he closed in again; coldly furious at the attempt to brain him with an axe when he had given a man a square chance to get up.

He took a solid blow to the face, but his right went smashing home to the jaw. It snapped back his enemy's head; dazed him. A left stab knocked Carter-Snowdon to his knees. With that remark still burning his ears Dorn struck him once more . . . a long-swinging right . . .

He stepped over, picked up the detective's automatic and came back.

Carter-Snowdon was still lying senseless on the moss.

CHAPTER XVI
THE ANCIENT OATH

For several minutes Dorn and the detective worked with Carter-Snowdon before they brought him around. When his eyes did flicker open, Soft-Shoe plucked at Dorn's sleeve and walked aside. Curious, Dorn followed him.

"I'm fading out of this trick," the detective said curtly. "Don't cotton to't. I'm handling his men and drawing some royal long-green, but I don't give a gin-damn how much money's in it. I'm done."

"What do you mean—you're done?"

"Quitting cold on the job. I draw a line. This trick is a little on the off side. I'll keep tab on husbands for the alimony sisters, but damned fi'll help hunt down Miss McNain. I can't dope out why she done what she done, but she's a plucky little skirt. Everything he said against her, that was all hooey. I was about sick of the job before you put up that scrap. Now I'm burned out complete."

The man sounded sincere. There might be a human soul behind those cold hazel eyes; he might have experienced a sudden revulsion for his job. But Dorn was wary, and scented a trap.

He demanded: "Just what did Miss McNain do? What's her connection with this man?"

"That's her story and his. She's afraid to tell you and he don't want it known. I don't double-cross anybody. But I want to give you some advice if you'll take it. I said once, if you don't pull out of this affair the Dominion isn't big enough to hold you. That's what I mean. You don't know what you're up against. Don't think she knows all she stirred up either. You got a battle right ahead of you, and you're going down and out. D'you know how many men he's got on this job?"

"A couple dozen, likely."

"Couple dozen—hell! Fifty! And some of 'em are just as good at this bush-work as you are. How do you expect to hold out against all them? How do you expect to save her—with all them out to get you?

"Now listen. You called me your Christian friend once, and that's what I am now. I want to give you a right steer. There's only one thing Miss McNain can do. I know what it is. I want you to take her a letter from me She'll understand what I say. Take it to her right off—don't dare waste time—to-morrow at the latest."

Dorn suddenly saw through the detective's scheme. His hands itched to wring the fellow's dirty neck and throw his carcass into the lake. Open hostility he could pardon. But under cover of friendliness Soft-Shoe had tried to stab him. In tones of human sincerity he had masked a fiendish trick.

Dorn did not betray that he guessed the plan. Quite as poker-faced as the detective, he agreed: "All right. I'll take her the message."

Soft-Shoe held out his hand. "You tell her to do just as I say. It's the only way she can save herself. If you've got any doubts about this, between you and me, I'll give you my word of—"

'Don't bother," Dorn bade him. He appeared not to notice the detective's hand. "Go in my tent and write your letter."

He turned away and helped Carter-Snowdon to his feet. It occurred to him that now while he held the power of life and death over his chief enemy, he perhaps should make the man swear he would abandon this hunt for Aurore McNain and never molest her. "But what would an oath mean with him?" Dorn reflected. "He'd break it the minute he's out of gun range."

Soft-Shoe came out and slipped him letter Watching his two enemies shuffle down through the spruces to the boat they had come in, Dorn tore the envelope to bits and laughed sardonically. The detective had given himself away; had spiked his own plan. Dorn knew that Soft-Shoe was expecting to trail him to-morrow. Expecting to dog him on his airy path and discover Aurore's hiding place. The letter was a decoy.

His enemies were after him in an airplane.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

A Thought

DUTY

By Robert Browning.

The sweetest lives are those to duty wed
Whose deeds both great and small,
Are close knit strands of an unbroken thread,
Whose love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpet, ring no bells;
The book of life, the shining record tells.
Thy love shall chant its own beatitudes,
After its own life-working. A child's kiss
Set on thy singing lips shall make thee glad;
A poor man served by thee shall make thee rich;
Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense of service which thou renderest.

What To-day Means To You

"SCORPIO."

If November 5th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:15 a.m. to 10 a.m., from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. and from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m. The danger periods are from noon to 1 p.m. and from 6:30 p.m. to 7:45 p.m.

The action of the planets on this date must be taken into account before you total up the final records of the day. Outward circumstances are to the good but inwardly you will feel at war, and savage thrusts of temper may be your undoing. The postman brings good news.

The child born on this November 5th will have an original and a constructive mind, but it will lack patience and may lose much thru its haste. An ungovernable temper will be exhibited at times. It will have a very high code of honour, and will never be a sneak or cheat.

A study of the map of your life shows that it is made up of many peaks and many depressions, many bright spots and many dark ones. You do not seem to have sufficient stamina to resist circumstances, and they will make your course a zig-zag one. You have inflated ideas about what you would like to be, but punctured efforts and energies. Without the advantage of a major position, without an adequate inheritance, you will drift into a subordinate position, for you are a dreamer and a wisher, but not a doer. You seem to think, from the virtue of your education, your position in life, or something else, that the world owes you a living without the return of the solid gold of human achievement. You are looking for a so-called gentleman's or ladies' job. You choose to join the mighty army of fault-finders and grumblers—your philosophy of living is not a bright or hopeful one.

You have a good command of language in both writing and speaking, and are both a convincing and entertaining conversationalist. You are intensely emotional, and many of your actions are uninstructed impulses, bunches that do not hunch. You will suffer a great deal through your affections, especially if you be a man. You are always willing to mortgage your future for the sake of your present happiness.

CANALS

The Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—A few years ago Bolshevism was rampant in the United States. That was, however, long before it broke out in Russia. The labour unions had decided on "closed shops." They intended like the prohibitionists, to boss the world. They would make money pay them what they (not it) "darned pleased."

They brought matters to a head at Herron, Illinois. From that moment they started to go down and now they are out. You do not hear anything more about threatened strikes. Why? Because money cannot be forced. Business cannot be forced. Religion cannot be forced. Education cannot be forced.

We appear, however, to be committing the fatal blunder of supposing that we have a civilized country so long as wolves exist. What a government! Wolves? Well, what do you know about that?

The canal. What canal you will ask? The new minister of canals says he has no money for the Trent Valley Canals. It will be a long time yet before it will be built. Of course, the famous valley is getting the benefit of having government money spent amongst its members of Parliament. So it is not all a dead loss. We have numerous bodies amongst us too that might start the ball rolling but nobody seems to care or to be able to care. There is no opening for brains in the people's service. That's sure.

All science is inquiry. Whenever it has run up against a difficulty it has imagined a solution for it and that solution has passed current until it has proven simply not to be the case at all. That often happens in science. The farthest reaches of space are acknowledge to be beyond the possibility of our largest telescopes. The little atom is no found to be not what it was supposed to be at all. Mankind was getting "struck on itself." And had failed even in Science. It has failed in government and falls back on Dictators. It has failed in business and must fall back on the bounty of brains and capital or on unemployment and starvation. Universal franchise has made "the people" imagine a vain thing. Nature can neither be fooled nor forced—even by us at the polls. Education (falsely so-called) is making a fool of us—that is most of us. We are not able to absorb it.

Cobourg Driver Fined License Suspended

COBOURG, Ont., Nov. 5—Climaxing an accident of October 15th when Charles Gould local motorist and his companion Charles Leonard crashed through the guard gates at Kingston crossing near here narrowly escaping death from a passing train and from cremation in their car which burst into flames on overturning, the former was fined $50 and costs yesterday, in addition Magistrate Floyd suspended his license for six months. He was arraigned on a reckless driving charge.

REGINALD S. CUFFE CHOSEN SECRETARY

Former Local Resident Specializing in Work With Residents of Y.M.C.A.

MONTREAL, Nov. 5.—(Special to Examiner.)—In preparation for the opening of the new dormitory section of the Stanley street addition to the Central Y.M.C.A., the board of management recently appointed Reginald S. Cuffe, as dormitory secretary. Mr. Cuffe, whose home town is Peterborough, has spent the last four years in one of Canada's largest cities specializing in work with the residents of the "Y".

"As the new building will open next February," said Mr. Cuffe, "I am glad to be here a few months before this event takes place, in order to get better acquainted with the 170 men residing in our present building, before starting in to get acquainted with the 450 men we hope to see gradually fill the new Stanley street addition. You can build a house' you know, but you must 'grow a home,' and it is the home atmosphere and the spirit of the home that we have first in mind in our dormitories.

"Ninety-five per cent of the men rooming in the "Y" are strangers in the city, and as a fellowship movement, the Association's chief responsibility is to make them feel 'at home away from home.' It is not an easy matter to introduce and keep to the fore the 'family idea' especially when the family is as large and changes as often as ours, but we succeed pretty well.

"Our Resident Members Organization is a very democratic one, and is a big help A Council, composed entirely of residents, is elected by ballot. This Council, which is really the 'head of the family' by right of election is responsible for all 'family doings,' including morning breakfasts, fireside hours, hikes, socials, lectures and entertainments. The editor member of the Council edits a weekly paper called The Dormat. Other members call upon newcomers to the building, welcoming them to the Family Circle.

"The people of Montreal have not acted a moment too soon in placing at the disposal of the young men of the city, this new building as one part of the city-wide extension plan," he added.

Airman Drops Ashes Of Father Over Ocean

SYDNEY, N.S.W., November 4 (C.P.).— Wing Commander Charles Kingsford Smith, using the airplane in which he made his last memorable flight from England to Australia, today scattered the ashes of his father over the waters of the Pacific Ocean, which had witnessed his first notable triumph in the air.

On his death bed last week, William Kingsford Smith, father of the aviator, expressed a wish that his ashes be cast to the winds over the Pacific, and his famous son thus today performed his last sad duty to his dead sire.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND BRIEFS

A SPECIAL SERVICE TO THE EXAMINER

Sales of Canadian bonds for the first ten months of the current year totalled $595,376,457, according to a compilation by Dominion Securities, Limited. Borrowing through the issuance of this type of security has shown a striking increase when contrasted to last year sales for the similar period of 1929, amounting to $440,004,497. It is significant also that by far the greater total is accounted for by provincials, including dominions, which are shown in the aggregate at $204,345,000 municipal financing accounted for $104,080,957, utilities for $114,245,500 railways for $118,150,000 and industrial and miscellaneous or $54,555,000. The extent of bond financing this year shows that money has been available and indicates the trend of investment account. It must not be overlooked, however, that a considerable portion of government financing was for refunding purposes and that municipalities were taking advantage of the higher prices to undertake long delayed financing. Readiness with which the public subscribed to bonds of the government and municipal type is also an evidence that there has not been the demand for money for commercial and indus rial uses. The major portion of utility borrowing has gone into development and bringing into production of power sites.

Stimulate Movement.

T.D. Macaulay, president of the Sun Life Assurance Company, of Canada, recently made the suggestion that the federal reserve banks of the United States purchase $500,000,000 of government securities, thereby making available credit of approcimately ten times that amount. The greater volume of credit would stimulate general industrial activity and would strengthen if not start an upward movement in commodity prices. Thereby the banks would do much to lift this continent out of the vale of depression. President Macaulay's scheme is worthy of consideration and the amount of comment which it has occasioned is proof that United States authorities did not lightly turn the suggestion aside. The ills of this continent to-day are not primarily those of credit, however. There is plenty of money available for legitimate enterprise money rates in the call market in New York approximate two per cent and long term rates are steadily coming down. The same is true of interest charges the world over. The old saying that you can lead a horse to the well,but you can't make him drink applies, in its own form, to the money market. You can make money available, but you can't force its use upon an unwilling people. It is the maladjustment between production and consumption that needs be corrected and when this is done demand for credit and expansion will naturally follow. Latest critics of Mr. Macaulay's proposal believe such purchasing of government securities would result in the demoralization of banking in the United States without accomplishing what its opponents think, pointing out at the same time that there is no deflation of credit, in the United States, that the movement might have some temporary results, but would pave the way for further disaster.

Muirheads Report.

The financial statement of Muirheads Cafeterias for the fiscal year ended February 28, 1930, does no. reflect the improved position this company finds itself in to-day since the close of the fiscal year, the lease on the Yonge Street restaurant matured and this place has since been closed down, yet the company is enjoying a greater volume of business in three eating places than it did in the four in operation in the corresponding months of 1929. Readjustment of prices has met with improvement in sales volume with net profits also showing improvement due to larger turnover and economies effected by the closing of the fourth restaurant at which the ratio of operating costs was high in comparison to the others and other economies of operation. During the fiscal year substantial write offs were made by the management and to-day cash on hand is approximately 80 per cent above that as reported for February 28.

Imperial Bonus.

The bonus of 50 cents a share declared by directo s of Imperial Oil is far-reaching in effect. The thousands of Canadian shareholders will receive an unexpected cheque which may aid in Christmas buying. In addition, profits of Sun Life Assurance will be swelled and policy holders will benefit proportionally.

Sun Life Assurance is understood to be the second largest stockholder of Imperial Oil, the first of course being the parent company. Standard Oil of New Jersey, which owns 18,800,000 shares. The extra distribution on Standard Oil of New Jersey holdings will amount to $9,400,000 equal to 37 cents a share on the number of shares of Jersey Company outstanding at the end of last year.

MIXED TREND IS THE RULE ON STANDARD

To-day's Turnover Shows Only Slight Improvement Over That of Tuesday.

NICKEL EASIER.

TORONTO, Nov. 5 (CP)—Confined movements and mixed trend were the rule on the mining market in the forenoon to-day with turnover showing only slight improvement over yesterday.

Renewed interest due to possibility of some constructive organized action for stabilization of copper appears to have died down for time being; International Nickel eased a quarter from last night to $17.50; Noranda was off 10 and Hudson Bay dropped 20 to $4.25, a new low for the stock.

Action in the gold group also had little significance. Teck Hughes, at $6, was up a few cents from last night, Granada recovered 4 to $1.30, and Sylvanite and Central Manitoba moved fractionally higher.

Lindsleys received some attention and displayed irregularity. Falconbridge and Sherritt Gordon regained a couple each to $1.57 and 92, respectively, but Sudbury Basin eased 3 to 62 and Ventures a point to 48.

The oil group was practically unchanged; Clamont, off 4 to 36, and Wainwee, up a small fraction to 2, showing the only movements when the list was taken at noon.

FIRMER TONE TORONTO CURB

INTEREST IN WALKERS.

TORONTO, Nov. 5 (CP).—Trading showed an improvement over Tuesday on Toronto Stock Exchange to-day but the volume still was light. Inter-listed issues were soft, due to the downward trend in New York. The oils eased fractionally; Nickel was off slightly and Brazilian was under last night's close. Ford of Canada just held its own and C.P.R. new was slightly better at 43⅛.

Speculative interest in Walkers increased, due to both belief Democratic interests in the United States would be more sympathetic to wet forces and to the possibilities of negotiations among distillers in Montreal benefitting Walkers from a marketing standpoint. The stock rose rather sharply in the first hour, then settled back to 7 where it was up only the minimum fraction but holding firm.

Page Hersey made a gain of a point and at 81 was the highest in a number of weeks. Standard Chemical rose three points on a couple of less than board lot sales.

and told him I would not stand for such things in my house and threatened to call the police. He went away and returned about eight o'clock. Opening the front door Cracknell said, "Well I'm back," but I did not notice anything in his hands. He fired the gun. I leaped to stop him but was a second too late.

Two Down Slayer.

Frank Smedburg who was in the house at the time, helped me down him on the verandah and we tied him with a rope. He kept asking if his wife was dead and begged me to let him go so that he could finish the job and shoot himself.

Cracknell borrowed the gun from a neighbor on the pretence of going duck shooting to-day.

Only one shot was fired from the 10 gauge gun, it taking effect in the woman's breast and resulted in death about twenty-five minutes later.

Street cars discarded in Chatham, England, owing to increased auto traffic in the streets, are being sold for as little as $25 for use as bungalows, sports pavilions and chicken houses.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

W. C. Ackerman Chosen Local Representative

W. C. Ackerman with offices at 102 Royal Bank Building, has accepted the appointment as representative of McLeod, Young, Weir and Company, Limited, Investment Bankers of Toronto, and will work in close co-operation with F. G. Howson, the Company's eastern Ontario representative, who is well-known to the firm's clients in Peterborough and district.

Mr. Ackerman has at his disposal the complete facilities of the Toronto head office, which will assist him to give sound conservative advice to clients who consult with him on investment problems.

OTTAWA RAISES TIN PLATE DUTIES

Change Made Because Product Now Being Manufactured in Canada.

NEW RATES LISTED.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 5. (CP)—Duties on tin sheets or plates have been imposed by the Department of National Revenue. The departmental edict, now in effect, alters the duty on tinplate from free under the British preference, 5 percent. under the intermediate and 5 per cent. under the general tariff, to 7½ percent. under the British preference, 12½ percent. under the intermediate, and 15 percent. under the general.

This change was made because tinplate is now being manufactured in Canada at the Ojibway, plant of the United States Steel Corporation. Heretofore this class of goods has entered under section 383A of the riff, but under the Department's ruling in future it will enter under 383B which sets forth the higher rates.

The provision that all bona fide orders on contract entered into before Nov. 1 shall enter under the lower rates until Nov. 30 was contained in the Departmental bulletin.

WOULD ENFORCE LORD'S DAY ACT

West Toronto Presbytery Sends Resolution to Attorney General.

AIMED AT SUNDAY GOLF.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 5. (CP)—Inaugurating, it is claimed, an intensive campaign by local Presbyteries of the United Church of Canada for more strict enforcement of the Lord's Day Act, the West Toronto Presbytery has forwarded a resolution to Attorney-General W. H. Price of Ontario, asking his co-operation toward this end. This resolution, it is said, is a forerunner of laymen and ministers who are preparing a strong case to lay before the Attorney-General and if necessary the Dominion Goverment.

The campaign, it is understood, is aimed to halt miniature golf courses from operating on Sundays, gasoline stations from selling fuel, drug stores which sell any article other than that prescribed in the act, golf clubs which allow members to play the royal and ancient game on the Sabbath to the detriment of church attendances and persons who sell fruit and other produce along the highways on the seventh day.

HENRY IS UPHELD

day that Mr. Henry's assessment had been sustained, and the bank's appeal was dismissed. It is likely that J. W. Fraser, manager of the bank, will carry the appeal before Judge Huycke.

Traffic Law Hits Business

Various merchants on George street testified that business on the west side of the street was not as good this year as in years past. They based this claim on the general business decline and also on the city's parking by-law, which makes it unlawful for any motorist to park his car on the west side of George street.

	Amout of Increase.	%
Metropolitan Stores.	$2,200	8½
Woolworth's Store	2,650	8
J. P. Bond	1,282	11½
Dickson's Store	1,128	11½
McDermid and Jury	1,110	11¼
Routley's	2,650	18
W. Flannery, Charlotte street	645	54
Mrs. LeBarr	800	20
C.P.R. Ticket Office	1,390	20
Marathon Candy Kitchen	2,310	36
Tip Top Tailors	1,200	17½
Yeotes' Cafe	2,650	18 1-5

Mr. Ephgrave estimated that the actual value of Woolworth's building had only been increased $8,000 to $10,000 by the reconstruction done last year to the building. He said that the building was obsolete except for the front and in that respect it was similar to all the stores on George street except Kresges and the Turnbull building.

He estimated that land between Hunter and Simcoe streets was worth from $200 to $300 more per foot frontage on George street than that in the block between Simcoe and Charlotte.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORIES LONG BEEN FORECASTED ON STREET

NEW YORK WEAK TO-DAY.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 5 (CP).—Equity shares, if influenced by the widespread Democrat victories at the pools, were influenced adversely, for the stock market pronounced weakness to-day.

The day's session of the market, however, did not differ appreciably from dozens of its recent predecessors. Trading was dull and sluggish, and numerous declines of $1 to $3 a share, and some from $4 to $10, reflected lack of support rather than extensive liquidation.

There was a feeling in brokerage circles that professional traders may have done some short selling on the basis of the returns. Abrupt declines in some of the high-priced shares tended to confirm that belief.

Inasmuch as extensive democratic gains had been rather confidently forecast in Wall Street, the results were not particularly surprising, and may have been rather thoroughly discounted in advance. Speculative circles, however, have not been well pleased with the prospect of a close balance of power in congress, feeling that it injects a new element of uncertainty.

There was a tendency in some brokerage circles to attribute declines in the public utility shares to the victory of candidates favoring stricter control of the public utilities, such as Governor Roosevelt in New York, and Governor Pinchot in Pennsylvania.

Vandalism on Hill 60, which has been fully acquired by the nations of the British Empire that fought there during the World war, has now been stopped.

LABORITES WIN FIRST DIVISION

Balloting on Motion of Conservatives Regarded as Crucial Test.

NO LIBERAL VOTE.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 5.—A majority of only 31 votes carried the Labor Government of Premier Ramsay MacDonald safely through the first important division of the current Parliamentary session last night.

This was regarded as a crucial test, for the balloting was on a motion by the Conservative party to amend the speech in reply to the address from the Throne. The amendment was defeated by 281 votes to 250.

The speech from the Throne has been under bitter attack for two days, the Conservatives regretting the failure of the Laborites to propose any adequate measures to deal with the crisis in the industrial, agricultural and commercial fields or to check the growth of unemployment.

Supporters of the Administration feared earlier in the week that the Liberal party, which holds the balance of power, and disgruntled left-wing Laborites might combine with the Conservatives to bring about a Government defeat, but the danger was virtually removed when the Liberals decided to abstain from voting on the amendment.

GREAT OIL FIRES DIE UPON RIVER

SCHOOLS OPEN AGAIN.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 5. (CP) Oil fires which swept along the surface of the North Canadian River east of here had consumed their fuel and subsided to-day after destroying two bridges and endangering the Harrah Plant of the Oklahoma City Gas and Electric Company.

The river of fire which flared yesterday was an aftermath of the wild gusher of the Morgan Petroleum Company, brought under control Sunday after it had threatened Oklahoma City for three days and poured a stream of oil, into the North Canadian several miles away.

One of the destroyed bridges was a 300-foot structure known as the Waner bridge in honor of the family of Paul and Lloyd Waner of Major League baseball fame.

Although authority has been issued for the resumption of schools, closed because of fire hazard, and of drilling operations in the northern part of the Oklahoma City oil field, firemen took further precautions against fires to-day.

Jealous Chatham Man Shoots Wife Fatally

CHATHAM, Ont., Nov. 5 (C.P.)—During what is said to have been a fit of jealousy, Thomas Cracknell, farm laborer, aged 25, of Harwich Township, is alleged to have shot and killed his wife Alice on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. George Clark, near Guilds, where she was employed as a domestic. They have one child, aged three years.

After the shooting, it is alleged Cracknell attempted to turn the gun on himself, but was overpowered by eye-witnesses, who tied him up with a rope, and held him pending the arrival of the police. He is now in custody at the Chatham Jail, while Provincial Police conduct an investigation preparatory to the opening of an inquest by Coroner Hanks in Blenheim.

When it was proposed to buy a new mirror for the Town Hall at Brackley, England, three women members of the town council objected that it would be a waste of money.

GOLD HUNTERS LOSE NO TIME

Prospectors and Companies Stake 384 Claims in Bannockburn Township.

SAMPLES VERY RICH.

TORONTO, Ont., November 5 (C.P.). — Since the discovery of gold in Bannockburn Township, Matachewan, several weeks ago, 384 claims have been staked by prospectors and companies, it was stated at the Ontario Department of Mines. All the likely areas have now been staked. H. C. Rickaby, departmental geologist, spent several days on the field and returned with the expressed opinion that the find looked "very good." Grab samples of ore were brought back for assay, samples with no free gold showing, and the report of the assay gave them a value of $45.80 per ton.

In his report to the Department, Mr. Rickaby stated some prospectors claimed to have panned gold in many places on the sands and gravel along the creeks of the district.

REV. DR. W. C. POOLE, LONDON, ENG. ADDRESSES BIG RALLIES IN CITY

HAUNTING FEARS.

...the great question of education there are three schools: some people say you need to educate on the basis of instincts, others say you need to educate on the basis of interests and still others maintain a stand for a basis of ideas.

"I am against a theory of education entirely motivated by instincts, because it makes individual caprice the basis.

"In this day people say 'When I was a little girl and showed temper, I got the slipper, but nowadays it is not that which ails little Mary or Johnny. It is rather some impairment in the secretions of their little ductless glands and what the little darlings need is to be taken out in the air and fumigated."

The Rev. Dr. W. C. Poole of Christ Church, London, England, spoke for fifty minutes last night in Murray street Baptist church to a congregation which packed the edifice to its capacity, on the subject "The Place of Christian Education in the Re-Making of the World." A speaker of dynamic power and of sudden, startling bursts of fervid eloquence that enchained the interest of his listeners, he held the attention of his audience through a brilliant and original discourse that, taking his hearers far afield, led them back again to a fervent period that left them at the feet of the great Teacher that Dr Poole invoked in his closing sentences.

"The whole world needs to be re-made", he declared. "Nothing else than its re-making is adequate in the crisis we face to-day. In the past, we have been more concerned with superstructures than with foundations and what we have built has rocked and crashed and shattered itself into thousands of bits, because the imposing superstructure was built upon a foundation inadequate for its maintenance.

Haunting Fears.

"One of the reasons for its re-making lies in the fact that the whole world is haunted by fears. There is chaos in China, in the seething core of India, in the enigma of Russia, where the bear is walking like a bear and menacing the security of empires.

"I don't know just what individual interpretation you may place upon the story of the Garden of Eden, but I do know this, that every time one of you violates the sanctity of Eden, you are expelled from the garden and the angel with the flaming sword guards the entrance against your return.

"What are the fears of the world to-night? The wastage of war and the modern practice of birth control are reducing the white races, while the black races are increasing in numbers. Some people affirm that the final struggle in this world will not be between Celt and Slav and Teuton, but that the final Armageddon will be concerned with the struggle between the white and the colored races for supremacy. That is one fear.

"Then there is the terrible fear that we are a mob: that the gang instinct of the street is taking possession of our courts and palaces and rostrums. Man has become an echo instead of a voice, a wishbone rather than a backbone. We have become enslaved to our tyrannous prejudices. Would that we could say as Luther said 'I have thought it through. Here I stand, God help me. Though there be as many devils in the way as there are tiles in the roof, I'll go through.' What do we care what other people say? Why are we so concerned with the opinions of Mr. So and So? We think so much about what other people are saying that we die down and don't do anything ourselves.

"Then there is the economic fear. Last year, while there was a surplus of 200 millions of corn, four million people died of starvation. And there is the administrative fear: the fear that there won't be men who are big enough to run the country. Someone comes along and promises us an acre and cow, and we follow him. Another one says' "I will give you an acre and a cow and a car", and we follow him, saying: "He has a broader vision". And then comes the third, who promises us an acre and a cow and a car and a calf and off we go with him.

"And there is the fear of unemployment. But unemployment is not a local condition. It is a part of the world situation and Mr. A. is no more capable of solving it than is Mr. J. It is impossible to solve the problem that is not an indigenous problem. It has to do with markets and consumption and high pressure salesmanship. A man can't solve it by turning his hand over and saying "Rabbit, hat, presto, chango".

"Then there are those who fear that religion has lost its hold on the people. But I love the piety and the integrity that is in the world to-day. We may not have so much of the type of man who comes to church in a silk hat and a Prince Albert coat and puts his gold piece on the plate, while his employees are not receiving a living wage, but we can do with less of that sort of thing.

"The Wealth of Nations" and Darwin.

"People argue about the time when these problems came into existence in their most prominent form, but it was just about 1776, when Adam Smith wrote the "Wealth of Nations", when the old feudal system gave way to the manorial system which in turn gave way to our modern democracy; when the machine in the factory with the master at the head took the place of the tools of the artisan in his cottage; when civilization became complex.

"Since 1859, we have been going in the wrong direction. It was at that time that Charles Darwin wrote his book called "The Origin of the Species" commonly known as a hypothesis of Evolution. I think that if Mr. Darwin were sitting in that pew ahead of me to-night and I spoke to him about the cleavage in the thinking world that his book, which was really a study of physiological reactions and animal behavior in the realm below consciousness, had caused, that he would say he was sorry he had written it. He was not talking about man, but about the mastodon and the ichthyosaurus, as against the cow and other animals: a study of life in the realm below the conscious, a study of animal behavior and the inferences thereto attached. But the word of the jungle, the talk about the reversion to type and the survival of the species, the hiss of the serpent and the chatter of the ape, became too loud. It took a long time for their notes to die out. Mr. Darwin wrote his book in 1859 and at that time, it was said that there were not a hundred men in the whole of the British Empire who gave the book a second thought. But it went over to Germany, where the time was ripe and ready to fructify, and it fell into the hands of the German philosopher, Neitzsche, and German historians who adopted the Darwinian theory as the way to run society and it has pretty nearly smashed the world.

"If, twenty years ago, I had stood here and told you that, within two decades of time, three of the ancient reigning dynasties, the Romanoffs, the Hohenzollerns and the Hapsburgs, would have passed from the world forever, you would have considered me as crazy. But, under the battering ram of a false philosophy, the world has tottered and fallen, until to-night it lies in a thousand pieces, because one part of the world can no more escape the infection of disease in another part than one part of my body can escape the presence of disease in another part, a disease that will finally snuff out my life.

"The world to-night is simply a whispering gallery. All the world is a market and sooner or later we will find out that any policy of isolation is destined to fail. I do not care whether that policy says 'England first, Australia first, America first, Canada first', it will surely fail. Everyone in the world is out for self-expression and self-realization.

Educational Recipe.

"But what do I mean by re-making this tortured and tormented world by Christian education? Surely a malady so great will not yield to superficial treatment? We have come to find out that education is not merely putting bodies of material into the human mind. Education means deduction; expression as well as impression. Any kind of education is a process that gives you control. An act of education is an act that gives control. That may sound strange in this blatant, bizarre and blase age when everyone seems bent on saying "We don't know where we are going, but we are on our way. Sixty miles an hour isn't fast enough. Let's go!" But when you get a lot of plus men that are just as much concerned about their responsibilities as their privileges, about their duties as well as their rights and about what they ought to do as well as what they would like to do, then you will get massive men and women.

"If I wanted to make my child a Confucianist or a Buddhist, I could do it without going to China or India. I would merely surround it with an atmosphere that would make it react favorably every time that the word Confucianism or Buddhism was mentioned, not only to external stimuli but to internal life and energy.

"Christian education is the introduction of control to conduct, to social efficiency in the terms of Jesus Christ.

'The Bible tells us: "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out." It is better to go to heaven with no eyes than to hell with two of them. But some will say, "how can I live a full life if I mutilate my personality?" Well, if you believe that the grave ends all, then your philosophy is right, but if you believe that this universe is but the antechamber of another life, that this world is but the opportunity for the Deity to blossom in the dust, then Christ was right."

Speaking of the three theories of education, Dr. Poole spoke as quoted in the first paragraph of this report. He said:

The Father's Footsteps.

"Don't say that your little boy or girl does everything by way of self-expression because in that you flatter yourself immensely. The child's actions are mostly imitative. They don't act on the basis of stimuli.

"People say you mustn't restrain or inhibit, because that takes a primal movement out of its normal track and lays the basis of a complex, which, in twenty years, may result in some awful tragedy and then the whole matter will have to be placed in the hands of the psychological clinic.

"Nor am I in favour of education by interests. It is said that the old system of education was faulty pedagogy. The modern idea is to have the teacher come in with a light step and wearing a general air of receiving a much higher salary than he or she does receive. He has a chaste manner, and he says to his class, in effect: "I had thought to occupy your attention for some forty minutes with composition, but I do not want to intrude upon your personalities. Let us take a show of hands on the subject and see if there is unanimity on composition".

"The great idea of Christian education on the basis of ideas is education as Christ taught us. When the rich young man of the Gospel came to Christ and spoke to Him, he asked Christ for the greatest thing He could give him, and Christ asked him for a quid pro quo; for the greatest thing the young man could give in return. It was the great slogan of the eternal Christ, forever young. No pale Galilean, but always young, with the dew of youth upon His brow, with His unsandalled feet making the pathway upon which unborn nations would travel, His pierced, bleeding feet smoothing the rough waters."

Quoting for his hearers the story of Paganini, the violinist virtuose, fronting a Parisian audience with only one string to his violin, and making them bow to his genius, the one string allied with Paganini, Dr. Poole concluded his stirring address with the words: "There are many strings that are broken; your patience, your constancy and your faith. Your task is to take the one string. But with it is Jesus Christ. Will you play?"

Immediately following the Rev. Dr. Poole's address, a short talk on the work of the Ontario Religious Education Council was given by the Rev. Mr. Priest of Toronto, general superintendent of the Council.

The Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, pastor of Murray Street Church, occupied the chair for the meeting, which was preluded by an organ voluntary played by Arthur Collison, the organist. The Rev. A. E. Moorhouse of St. James United Church gave the Scripture reading, the Rev. D. Wren of Trinity United Church led in prayer and the Rev. W. Allan of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church introduced the Rev. Dr. Poole, referring to his outstanding attainments as a clergyman.

Born in Tasmania, Dr. Poole has held important charges in the United States, has been pastor of Christ Church, London, England, and is now on his way to assume the pastorate of a church in South America.

FINAL MEETING FAIR DIRECTORS

Receipts and Expenditures For Year Settled at Millbrook Meeting.

OUTSTANDING EXHIBITS.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 5.—(Examiner Correspondence). — An important meeting of the officers and directors of the Agricultural Society was held in the Town Hall on Saturday, November 1, at 2.30 p.m., the financial report for the year to date, with details in particular of the receipts an expenditures in connection with the fall fair, being the chief business engaging the attention of the gathering.

The president, G. A. Fair, occupied the chair, and after the reading of the minutes, a committee consisting of A. J. Henderson and T. W. McCamus, was appointed to wait on the Millbrook Council at its next regular meeting requesting a grant on behalf of the Agricultural Society.

The financial report read by J. N. McGill, secretary-treasurer, showed total receipts from the spring fair of $214.20; from the sports' day $159.33; and from the fall fair including some subscriptions pledged but yet to be paid in, $2600.16. This year there is to be paid out in prize money $1,178.00, the number of exhibitors being reported as larger than ever, and the fair all round a marked success.

Deducting expenses there will be a small balance on hand, but again this year the directors are facing the fact that sufficient funds are not available to meet the note held by the bank, the initial need for his arising when the new building had to be erected following the destruction of the old frame one by fire some few years ago.

By departmental judges employed at the fair every year, and by visitors coming from many sections of the country, the Millbrook Central Exhibition is emphatically declared to be one of the best of the small fairs of the province. The showing of horses, especially is invariably outstanding at this fair both in number of entries and quality. Yet for some reason, which the directors are unable to fathom, the gate receipt, which should total at least one thousand dollars, falls below that figure and with a heavy prize list to meet each season, the surplus over expenditures does not leave a wide enough margin to meet the other obligations involved.

The fair undoubtedly serves the community well, and apparently public spirit needs to be aroused toward its support in a much larger degree than has been the case up until now. Its withdrawal would mean the loss of an asset of genuine community value. Full discussion of this phase on the subject took place at Saturday's meeting, and on motion of R. I. Fallis and T. W. McCamus, the financial committee was given authority to renew the note. Carried.

On motion of A. J. Henderson and R. McCamus, the report of the financial statement was received as read. Carried.

On motion of J. H. Paul and H. Tait, P. Stinson, J. N. McGill and G. A. Fair were appointed a committee to look into the matter, in a manner specified in some detail, of improving the financial standing of the Society.

The meeting adjourned to the call of the chair.

Miscellaneous Shower For Warkworth Couple

WARKWORTH, Nov. 5—(Examiner Correspondence).—A pleasant social time was spent on Friday evening in the basement of the Presbyterian church, when a large number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Clarke, formerly Miss Alice Taylor, gathered to present them with a miscellaneous shower of gifts.

Many beautiful and useful gifts showed the high esteem in which the young couple are held in the community.

Community singing, a flower contest, a solo by Mr. Maycock and speeches by Mr. Booth and Rev. Mr. Duncan were much enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke thanked their many friends for their kindness followed by the serving of lunch and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

PLAY PRESENTED BY LITERARY SOCIETY

Campbellford Organization Stage Interesting Meeting on Friday.

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 5. — The first of the season's regular meetings of the Campbellford High School Literary Society was staged on Friday afternoon with the president, Jack Bygott in the chair. Grant Meiklejohn was elected critic.

The program was produced by the pupils of the Fifth Form and was featured by a three act play entitled "Jack of Hearts." This presentation, which was well acted and showed the ability of the students, was received by the audience with a great deal of pleasure. Those taking part in the play were: Muriel Linton, Dalmas Montgomery, Helen Thomas, Doris Rannie, Jack Bygott, Stewart Anderson, Harry Foulds and Ray Thompson.

Other numbers on the program included a talk on "Education" by Malcolm Hutcheon, which was well delivered, a chorus entitled "Betty Coed," and several musical numbers by Dorothy Henson.

After the report of the critic, the National Anthem was sung and the meeting dispersed.

DR. MARK HONORED ON HIS DEPARTURE

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 5.—After two years as pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Campbellford, the Rev. Dr. W. J. Mark with Mrs. Mark and children left the district on Monday for Toronto where they will reside for the time being.

Dr. and Mrs. Mark were the recipients of many gifts before their departure, including a beautiful set of books in seven volums from one donor and a gold pen and pencil from the Rev. Fr. C. J. Phalen, rector of St. Mary's Parish, Campbellford.

On Sunday last Dr. and Mrs. Mark were entertained by about thirty friends at Springbrook, where they went in the evening accompanied by Mr. and Mrs John Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. T. Hooper, Mr. John Russell and other friends. The occasion for the visit was the preaching of Dr. Mark's cousin, Mr. G. Rainey, a returned missionary from China, at the Gospel Hall, Springbrook.

Dr. Mark was called upon to take part in the service and preached a splendid sermon on the theme "Regeneration" and Mr. John Russell rendered a solo, "Wounded for Me".

After the service a reception was held for the departing minister and his wife in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, which was arranged for by their children, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wilson, at which many kind wishes were expressed for the future welfare of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Mark.

Deaf Hear Again Through New Aid

Earpiece No Bigger Than Dime Wins Enthusiastic Following; Ten-Day Free Trial Offer

After twenty-five years devoted exclusively to the manufacture of scientific hearing-aids the Canadian Acousticon Ltd., Dept. 426G, 45 Richmond St. West, Toronto, Ont., has just perfected a new model Acousticon that represents the greatest advance yet made in the re-creation of hearing for the deaf. This latest Acousticon is featured by a tiny earpiece no bigger than a dime. Through this device, sounds are clearly and distinctly transmitted to subnormal ears with wonderful benefit to hearing and health alike. The makers offer an absolutely free trial for 10 days to any one person who may be interested, and a letter will bring one of these remarkable aids to your home for a thorough and convincing test. NORMAN GILROY NEW PRESIDENT

DELEGATES CHOSEN.

MADOC, Nov. 4.—Norman Gilroy of Coe Hill was elected president of the North Hastings Liberal Association at its annual meeting here Tuesday afternoon. F. A. Bapty of Deloro was elected secretary, and John McKenzie of Madoc is treasurer for the coming year.

Delegates were chosen to attend the convention of provincial Liberals to be held in Toronto.

Among those present was Fraser Aylsworth of Madoc, the Liberal candidate in the federal elections. The meeting was representative of the different parts of the riding, and considerable enthusiasm was expressed in regard to the extent of the spirit of Liberalism in the northern part of the county as shown in the last election, in spite of the re-election of the Conservative member, Dr. A. T. Embury

While the use of electricity is increasing steadily in the Union of South Africa, progress is slow in the sale of domestic appliances because of the ample supply of low-wage servants.

W. I. REQUESTS USE OF HALL

APPROVE OF MOTIONS.

BETHANY, Nov. 5.—(Examiner Corespondence)—The members of Manvers Council held their monthly meeting on Saturday, November 1, when communications were received from George Brown re payment of bonus on road fence, no action being taken; Mrs. Reynolds on behalf of the Women's Institute requesting the council to allow them to use the Town Hall, free of charge; Comstock & Company, Peterboorough, re burial of indigent.

On motion it was decided to allow the Women's Institute the use of the Town Hall for the sum of $2, whenever it needed it.

The following motions were adopted: That the inspector of weed be allowed $35 for his expenses, that a rebate of $2 each be allowed on taxes charged in error to H. Spencer and Percy McGill; that the following accounts be paid: Leslie Coalice, kidling for hall, $4; F. C. Dawe, gasoline for lamps, $8.30; Municipal World, supplies for clerk's office, $3.08; B. Richardson, R. P. Halloran and W. A. Jakeman, selecting jurors for 1931, $3 each; Manvers Municipal Telephone System, maintenance, $400; Richard and Richards, printing contract, $50; W. J. McMaster, sheep worried by dogs, $7.56; Morton Davis, sheep worried by dogs, $5; Harold Stinson, sheep worried by dog, $12; W. H. McNeil, voucher No. 15, $480.80; James McMullen, sheep valuator, $1.40; L. B. Werry, sheep valuator, $1.40; W. A. Jakeman, weed inspector, $35; Percy McGill, rebate on taxes, $2; H. Spencer rebate, $2.

The council adjourned to meet on Saturday, November 29, at one o'clock p.m.

Anglican W.S.A. Meets For Month

DUNSFORD, Nov. 5 (Examiner Correspondence)—The Anglican W. A. met in the church on Wednesday with an attendance of fourteen, after the usual opening manner. Mrs. Norman James read the Scripture lesson from the 39th Psalm. Miss Maudie Brien then sang "Guard While I Sleep" after which the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Mrs. Sharpe kindly invited the members to her home for the November meeting and the program was arranged as follows: Bible reading, Mrs. J. E. Brien; solo, Miss Anna Burgess; Study Book, Mrs. J. M. Thurston; C.C.D. money, Mrs. W. J. Thurston, Mrs. J. F. Maires. The meeting was then brought to a close by singing hymn 27 and repeating the members prayer in unison.

Anniversary services were held in the United Church on Sunday. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Rev. A. K. Edminson, pastor of Queen St. United Church, was special speaker for the day and gave two very inspiring addresses. Special music was given by the choir. Miss Margaret Werry, of Omemee soloist for the day sang two pleasing solos. At the morning service little Lorna Elaine Rose Brien, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brien, received baptism.

The committee communicated with Wm. Blackwell, architect and with Mr. Thomas, the ventilating contractor asking them to investigate the source of the trouble. Mr. Thomas has not seen fit to come here" said Mr. Dutton adding, that he did not think he appreciated the great use to which the auditorium is subjected.

The matter was referred to the property committee, who will endeavour to get Mr. Thomas down here to discuss the proposition and to have certain alterations made in the ventilation system.

I. P. McNabb in presenting the Finance Committee report, mentioned the recent purchase of equipment for the automotive school which is to be transferred from the Collegiate and Vocational Institute building to South Central School. There are motor mechanics night classes and it will be necessary to have eight automobiles on the floor at once, in order to give each man full opportunity to get the maximum amount of benefit from the classes. Estimates of the cost of making necessary alterations and repairs and the purchase of other equipment, amounting in all to a sum of $785, received the endorsation of the Board.

Hallowe'en Damage

Mr. Dutton brought to the attention of Board damage which had been caused on Hallowe'en night to school buildings and property. At King George School, shrubs were pulled up and windows broken, similar damage of a more or less extensive nature was perpetrated at Central and South Central Schools and at Alexandra School. Acting on information as to the identity of two vandals, who were responsible for damage at King George School, Mr. Dutton stated that the Board have hopes of prosecuting, and will press the charges. He had no sympathy with wanton damage.

A. Mowat, Inspector of Public Schools stated that it had been the practice in years gone by—previous to the inauguration of The Examiner Hallowe'en parade, which had done a great deal to divert mischievous spirits in other directions—to keep the school caretakers on duty until eleven o'clock on Hallowe'en night. He suggested that this practice be resumed in the near future. The Board agreed.

A request for the use of a classroom at Central School for the use of the Home and School Council meetings was granted.

City Clerk Armstrong's application for the use of the schools for election purposes was also approved by the Board, while the usual sports grant of $25 for each school was granted to the Athletic Association.

Commenting on Dr. A. W. McPherson's report, Mr. Dutton said it was gratifying to find that there had been no infectious diseases among the school population. It was a great tribute to the efficiency of inoculation, which was being undertaken by Dr. McPherson and the school nurses.

Submitting the report of the supervision committee, Mrs. Kate Morris said that after investigating the cases of pupils in attendance at the Collegiate Institute, one from the County of Bruce, and the other from the district of Parry Sound, the committee recommends that they be admitted for this school year on the payment of the nominal fee of $50 and that the Principal be instructed to notify any non-resident pupils who apply for admission and who do not reside in a County adjacent to Peterborough, that they can only be admitted on payment of the full cost of tuition as provided for in the regulations."

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, November 5. — The wheat market was rudely jolted yesterday when values rolled to record low levels in the first hour, the November future selling at the new low of 67⅝c. The losses ranged from 1¼c to 1½c, but before the final gong rang out some of the lost ground was regained, and final quotations were ⅛c to ⅝c under Monday's figures.

There was no buying support, and export sales overnight were disappointing. The election holiday on the United States market also curtailed trading here. Near the close, however, exporters changed their attitude, and commenced the purchase of wheat, lifting prices up from their low points.

The December future closed the day with losses of ½c to ⅝c, at 68⅜c and November was down ¼c, at 68¾c. The May future was selling at 74¼c at the close, down ½c. With the exception of an advance of ¼c in No. 3 Northern values were generally unchanged on the cash wheat market. In the coarse grains, flax featured the trading with a plunge of 5c to lower levels. The other grains held unchanged.

REGULAR PAINS?

SOME women suffer more than others. Often, when there isn't any need! The pains peculiar to women may be relieved as readily as other pains for which Aspirin is intended. These tablets are always a big help at such times, and never the least bit harmful. (Aspirin does not depress the heart.)

Of course, you are familiar with the use of Aspirin for headache. It brings such prompt relief that sudden headaches needn't upset your plans. It will check a cold, or ease the sorest throat; and comfort the worst sufferer from neuritis and neuralgia.

When your head aches—from any cause—when a cold has settled in your joints or you feel those deep-down pains of rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, take Aspirin and you can count on real relief.

OBITUARY

ABRAHAM PHILLIPS.

WARKWORTH, Ont., Nov. 5 (Examiner Correspondence).—The sudden death of Mr. Abraham Phillips, which occurred on Sunday, was a shock to the whole community.

Deceased, who was sixty-five years of age, was always an honorable citizen, and was well liked by his neighbors and friends.

He leaves to mourn his loss, one daughter and three sons: Mary, teacher at Middleville; Owen C. of Hastings, O. B. and J. L. of this village, also one sister and one brother, Mrs. Tom Sykes, Dartford, and Ambrose Phillips, Codrington.

The funeral service was held Tuesday afternoon from the family residence. Interment at Warkworth Cemetery.

TRAFFIC HELD UP BY RAVING MANIAC

was running when one of the madman's well-aimed missiles hit him behind the ear. He stumbled and fell to the pavement. McGregor struck him with several more stones.

Telling of the attack, Mr. Earle, who required four stitches in his head and had his right eye badly injured, said: "I couldn't run like the others. After knocking me down with the stone the naked man rushed at me. I thought he was going to beat me worse. I begged him to leave me alone, yelling 'I'm an old man, for God's sake let me go.' He looked at me and then turned away."

Mr. Earle spoke contemptuously of the lack of courage of the men present. "They all ran leaving me," he said, "Why, there were enough there to easily master him."

Riot Call for Police.

Urgent 'phone calls were sent into police of Peterborough, Cobourg, Port Hope and Millbrook. Provincial Police from Peterborough and Cobourg and city police from Peterborough speeded at once to the scene.

But to Patrol Officer Ted Hornick and Allan Gray must go the credit for the man's capture. Hornick received a call while at his home in Peterborough. He set off on his motorcycle, hitting 75 miles an hour.

Hornick Makes Capture.

Coming upon the madman he leaped to the road and drew his truncheon. McGregor made straight at him, yelling threats. The officer grappled with him, endeavoring to strike him with the leaded truncheon. It was then that Gray rushed upon the maniac from the rear, pinning his arms. The officer struck the battling, raving maniac six times on the head with the truncheon. The blows failed to take effect. With Gray holding the madman, Hornick succeeded in handcuffing him finally.

He was bundled naked into a car and brought to Peterborough.

Mr. Earle was also conveyed bleeding freely from the wound in his head to the Clinic here, where Dr. T. P. McCullough treated him. His clothes were so covered with blood that he borrowed a suit to wear home.

Only for the presence of mind of one of the bystanders McGregor might have run amok among school children. A school stands not more than 100 yards from where McGregor staged his mad scene. The teacher was about to let the pupils go home at 3.30 when she was advised that a maniac was close by. She kept the children in and locked the doors until McGregor had been taken away.

Others Struck.

Frank Davis, 390 Aylmer Street, and Max Botnick, a local merchant, assisted Hornick in making the capture. Before the officer arrived Davis had approached the madman and tried to reason with him. McGregor attacked him, dealing him heavy punches and lacking support from other bystanders Davis beat a retreat. Botnick was also punched by McGregor.

At the police cells McGregor continued his mad display. He could not be dressed, and sat naked and handcuffed on the pavement floor of his cell for hours singing songs and shouting threats.

Dr. J. A. Morgan and Dr. D. W. Clark, after seeing the man, filled out the necessary papers declaring he was hopelessly insane. Early in the evening, handcuffs were locked about his ankles and he was rolled in blankets. He was carried to a car by Provincial Constables William Carey and Aelxander Kidd, of Cobourg, and taken to Whitby.

PIE SOCIAL HELD AT CAMPBELLFORD

Pictures of Trent Waterways Included in Program of Y.P.L. Function.

CAMPBELLFORD, November 5 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — A pie social and entertainment held under the auspices of the Young People's League of St. John's United Church, Campbellford, was held on Monday, when a large attendance was registered to enjoy a very pleasant evening.

The first portion of the program was a series of motion pictures, shown by the Rev. R. C. Tait and Walter Henson, showing views of the Kawartha Lakes region from the north country to Rice Lake.

The second part of the entertainment consisted of a program of select numbers which were well received and heartily applauded. Dr. H.O. Richardson occupied the chair. Featured in this program were several humorous readings by Miss K. Smith, of Albert College, Belleville. The program was as follows:

Violin duet, Ronald and Billy Richardson; vocal duet, Mrs. H. Jones and Mrs. F. G. Smith; vocal solo, Walter Henson; readings, Miss K. Smith, Belleville; guitar selection, Cora Petherick; vocal solo, Miss Emma Meiklejohn; selection by male quartette, consisting of Dr. Richardson, H. M. Donald, W. Lowe, and G. Lucy; vocal solo, Drs. F. DeCarroll; readings, Miss K. Smith; piano solo, G. W. Lucy; vocal solo, Albert Hazel.

Following this program of musical numbers, another series of views was shown of the Trent Valley Waterways and Trent Canal. Beginning at Trenton they showed the locks and scenery at Frankford, Hastings, Gore's Landing, Rice Lake, Campbellford, and Peterborough, including the Lift Lock at that place.

The evening closed with the serving of sandwiches, pie, and coffee.

No Bill Is Returned Against Lloyd Ames

COBOURG, Nov. 5 (Special to The Examiner). — The Grand Jury yesterday morning returned a no bill against Lloyd Ames, Brighton Township, charged with two serious offences against girl, the two charges arising out of the same alleged incident. Accused's counsel was Archie Cochrane. This was the sole criminal case scheduled to come before Mr. Justice McEvoy, who presided over the United Counties' Fall Assizes.

Is This for Too Good Your Cough?

Creomulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven major helps in one—the best helps known to science. It is made for coughs from colds that hang on, for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Creomulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is $1.25—a little more than a single help. But your druggist guarantees it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known.

AFRICANS FEAST WITH NEW KING

Dusky Abyssinians Return Home After Coronation of Ras Tafari.

ALL DRESSED IN WHITE

ADDIS ABABA, Abyssinia, Nov. 5. (By James Mills, A. P. Staff Correspondent).— Thousands of dusky-faced Abyssinians, returning yesterday to their homes in the African brush, boasted of feasting on red raw meat with their Emperor, Ras Tafari, newly crowned as Haile Selassie, Lord King of Kings of Ethiopia.

It was the Emperor's wish that even the humblest of his subjects should share the joy of his coronation, and he planned to the most minute details a banquet which would delight the Abyssinian's heart and please his palate. Some traveled for a full three weeks over pathless waste and cow trails for the privilege of eating with their Sovereign.

The guests assembled in a large banquet pavilion, attired in spotless white shamas or togas. The ocean of black upturned faces, gazing in awe at the Emperor, who is known to them also as the Gaz of Rases, Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah the Elect of God, and the Light of the World, left a vivid and not-to-be forgotten impression on visitors.

As the assembled thousands ate chunk after chunk of dripping red meat, groups of native musicians with long wooden trumpets, ox-hide drums, addly shaped violins, and cymbals played weird African melodies. Unlimited quantities of native wine were furnished as an indispensible part of the festival.

agemnet of the House of Refuge. "There we found 71 inmates, all receiving kind, generous treatment, and everything possible is being done by the officials for their well-being and contentment. The inmates appear to be satisfied, happy, and free of care, and the officials are very courteous and obliging."

Other sections of the report are: "We visited the Cobourg Hospital, and found 17 patients being well cared for. Everything was in the highest possible state of efficiency. The equipment was surprising for a town the size of Cobourg, and some appliances were stocked which are not to be found in the larger hospitals.

"We inspected the Court House at Cobourg and found everything highly satisfactory. The officials are courteous and attentive, and spared no pains to assist us in the performance of our duties.

"The Gaol for the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham at Cobourg we found in excellent condition in every respect. The sanitary and heating arrangements are satisfactory, and the 18 prisoners are receiving careful and proper attention. The officials are courteous and attentive to their duties.

"The present utilities are far from being sufficient and we strongly urge that more lavatory accommodation be installed in the Court House."

In conclusion the jury thanked the presiding judge, the Hon. Dr. Justice McEvoy, for his helpful address and instructions given at the opening of the Court, and expressed the jury's pleasure at having His Lordship preside at the Assizes.

The jury was composed of Lisgar Clarke, of Cobourg, foreman; Charles Bolster, Cobourg; Wesley Bradburn, Cartwright; Maurice Booth, Cobourg; Frederick Clarke, Cavan; H. N. Carr, Campbellford; Lavergne Fallis, Cavan; Warren Free, Murray; Ernest W. King, Port Hope; W. J. Latimer, Brighton Township; H. B. McCarthy, Port Hope; J. F. Wolfrain and Fred S. White, Hope.

The potato and turnip crops have been harvested and were good.

Ploughing is hard on account of the lack of rain, but the good weather is helping.

There was a considerable acreage of fall wheat put in in this district and it is looking extremely well.

You Need Bon Ami Powder as well as Cake

DO you know that Bon Ami comes in two forms—Powder and Cake? Both are made from the same ingredients—both have the same wonderful gift of cleaning and polishing without scratching—both blot up the grime without hard rubbing or scouring.

For cleaning and polishing windows and mirrors, the handy Bon Ami Cake has been the world's favorite for 39 years. But for bathtubs, tiling, fine kitchen utensils, Congoleum and other large surfaces you'll find the scratchless, snowy-white Powder, in its sifter-top can, more convenient. Most housewives keep both Powder and Cake always on hand!

New Exclusive Package Keeps Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice Freshly Crisp

as the moment they were "shot from guns"

CRISPER . . . lighter, more crunchy, more delectably good to eat, even better than before, because now Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice come to you in the new Seal-Krisp package, which is filled by an exclusive process.

These tasty puffed grains are now recrisped immediately before going into the containers. The Seal-Krisp packages, too, are warmed, filled, then doubly sealed. There is no moisture in the grains and the new package keeps moisture out. Hence all the original flavor, all the crisp freshness is there. When you open the package, Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice rustle out as delicious as the moment they were "shot from guns."

Shooting Puffed Wheat and Puffed Rice from huge bronze cannon causes 125 million explosions in every grain, puffs each grain to 8 times normal size. They are as nourishing and digestible as hot cooked cereals.

Your grocer can supply you with Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice. For variety, order a package of each, and treat the family to a new crispness and flavor in cereals.

Mr. and Mrs. William John Thompson of Peterborough announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Elizabeth, to Dr. John C. Armstrong, son of Mrs. Armstrong of Ottawa; the late John R. Armstrong of Ottawa; the marriage to take place quietly November 22nd.

In The Toronto Mail and Empire to-day, the following account appears of the appearance in Massey Hall of the promising young singer, Miss Edythe Marjorie Shuttleworth, who has come to this city twice to sing, her last visit being a very recent event of the Women's Music Club program: "With the second twilight concert of the season by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra yesterday came the interest of a performance of Cesar Franck's D minor symphony, and the last important appearance of Edythe Shuttleworth before the young singer on whom Toronto bases large hopes returns to Milan. A capacity house in Massey Hall spelled increasing interest in Toronto's orchestra. Edythe Shuttleworth sang the "Me Pellegrina ed Orfana" aria from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino." Again she showed an art soundly based, a conception of the music, and the power to infuse feeling in technical performance. Her diction is delightful in English, French and Italian. That it is evident she is on the way to fine accomplishment, rather than completely established, is compliment rather than criticism, for it would be unfortunate if at 21 her art had gone as far as it might. The glory of her singing is that it is sound, and promises fulfilment. After she had sung a joyous song of May by the conductor of the Paris Oper, "Caro El Mio Bambin" by Guarnieri and "Life" by Curran, her audience was still not satisfied, and, after persistent applause, heard again the fine dramatic soprano voice. Simeon Joyce was at the piano."

A party of some sixteen Peterborough friends of Mr. G. S. Taylor, popular merchant of Keene, had a little surprise party at his home last night, it being the occasion of Mr. Taylor's birthday. The evening was most enjoyably spent in the playing of bridge, and a general sing-song, which included many of the new, as well as all the old popular favorites, and Miss Bryce presided at the piano in her own inimitable manner. Mrs. Taylor was assisted in entertaining her guests by her sisters, Mrs. R. H. Turner and Mrs. Patoine, also Mrs. Garrow and Mrs. D. D. Brown. Mr. Taylor was the recipient of many beautiful presents, among them a radio set from his Peterborough friends, who also presented Mrs. Taylor with a bouquet of roses and an arm chair; the address being read by Mr. Charles Lacheur, and the presentation made by Mrs. Jack Comstock. In acknowledging his gift, Mr. Taylor, who was taken completely by surprise, thanked his friends, and expressed the wish that they would soon come again.

Mrs. W. Blackwell, Benson avenue, president of the Lyceum Women's Art Association, entertained the members of the Art Study Club of the society, of which Mrs. R. J. Kidd is convenor, at her home last evening, on the occasion of the opening meeting for this season of the Club's program. Mrs. J. E. R. Munro gave a very interesting paper dealing with the Rise of the Dutch Republic in the 14th and 15th Centuries, and the Dutch painters: Massys, Mabuse, Van der Weyden and Van ou Water. The response to the roll call was the name of a ruler of Holland or Belgium.

FASHION SERVICE

The flat circular shaped peplums of this modish frock posed at either side, reduces the breadth through the hips. It leaves the front in panel effect which gives a decidedly lengthening line.

It is carried out in black canton crepe displaying striking contrast in the white collar and deep flared cuffs. The partial belts that top the center-front and center-back of the skirt repeat the white crepe.

This charming model Style No. 920 is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 52 inches bust.

There are any number of fascinating materials that may be used for its development as flat crepe silk in tweed pattern, crepe satin, crepe marocain and crepy plain or patterned woolen.

We suggest that when you send for this pattern, you enclose 10 cents additional for a copy of our new Fall and Winter Fashion Magazine. A copy should be in every home, for of course every woman wants to look her best without great expense, and this book points the way.

"DANDERINE" Dissolves Crust of Dandruff

Soothes Scalp; Gives New Life and Lustre to Hair!

There's no use allowing unsightly dandruff to steal the life from your hair; make it dull brittle and scraggy; turn it gray or start it to falling out. "Danderine" will dissolve the worst crust of dandruff in a hurry. It will bring the glow of health back to your scalp. Its consistent use will encourage the hair to grow long, thick, more youthful-looking.

You will be delighted by the effects of "Danderine's" first application. Excess oil is removed from the hair; its natural color is brought out marvelously; it sparkles with new life and lustre.

Five million bottles of Danderine used a year shows its popularity! And you won't wonder at this once you learn its easy use and see how quickly it gives health to the scalp and vigor and youthful appearance to the hair!

Every drug and toilet counter in the land has Danderine—35c bottles.

JUNIOR AUXILIARY HOLDS FINE PARTY

Young People of St. George's Church Hold Jolly Hallowe'en Party.

St. George's Church basement was the scene of a merry party last evening, when members of the Junior Auxiliary gathered there for a Hallowe'en party. To the solitary light of a Jack O'Lantern, the young folks were met at the door by a ghost, who conducted them around the room in weird fashion. The room was prettily decorated in the Hallowe'en colors, with cut-outs of pumpkins, black cats, witches and bats. A number of games were played, followed by a 'radio' program of recitations and musical items by the children, the broadcasting being effected through a Jack O'Lantern and pumpkin, Ruth Farr being the announcer. Much fun was caused over the grab apple contest, Betty Ferguson, Alma Carter, Stanley McBride and Walter Farr being successful in "grabbing" the apples. At the close of the evening refreshments, followed by apples and candy, were served by Mrs. Hughes and Mrs. J. McWilliams, assisted by senior girls.

ST. MARK'S WOMEN PREPARING QUILT

Otonabee W. A. Holds Regular Monthly Meeting at Home of Mrs. W. Pickel.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.A. of St. Mark's, Otonabee, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. Pickel. Mrs. T. Graystock, president, presided over a good attendance of members. The work of the autograph quilt was continued, almost all the blocks being completed. It was decided to hold a community social on Wednesday, November 12, in aid of the cemetery funds, the ladies of the W.A. to be convenors for the arrangements. The rector closed the meeting with prayer, after which tea was served by the hostess.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 5.—Limestone, once advertised by Kentucky distillers as producing water peculiarly good for making whiskey, now promises to join the anti-goitre campaign. This rock contains small quantities of iodine, the goitre remedy, says a report of the Kentucky agricultural experiment station, and is useful in making fertilizers.

"When these fertilizers are used in growing important farm crops," says the report, "the iodine content of the latter is apparently enriched and foods better suited for nourishment of animals are thus provided."

WANTED—A VOICE

The excitement of the first day away at school had died away by nightfall and Peggy, young and home-loving, felt overwhelmingly homesick. QUEBEC TORIES GAIN HUNTINGDON

Gov't Retains Maskinonge—Sauve Elected in Two Mountains.

TORY TOTAL NOW 12.

MONTREAL, Que., November 5 (C.P.). — The Government of Hon. L. A. Taschereau in the Province of Quebec lost a minister and a seat in the by-elections held yesterday. Voting took place in Maskinonge, Two Mountains, and Huntingdon. The Government retained Maskinonge, where L. J. Thisdel, the Liberal candidate, was returned, but lost Huntingdon, where Hon. Gordon W. Scott recently chosen as Provincial Treasurer in succession to Hon. Andrew McMaster, was the Liberal candidate. The successful Conservative was Martin B. Fisher. In Two Mountains Paul Sauve, Conservative, was elected. Mr. Sauve is the son of Hon. Arthur Sauve, Dominion Postmaster-General, who held the sea for many years in the Provincial House prior to his retirement, to enter the Federal elections this summer.

The standing of the parties in the Quebec Legislature after eelctions is: Liberals 73, Conservatives 12.

CIRCLE ENTERTAINS MEMBERS OF HOME

St. James' United Church Society Presents Enjoyable Musical Program.

When the girls of the N. L. Mission Circle of St. James' United Church met on Monday evening to present a musical treat to the members of the Protestant Home, it proved a mutually enjoyable evening.

Miss Lancaster, in her usual gracious manner, received and welcomed the large circle of girls and their friends, ushering them to the spacious rooms.

Everyone enjoyed the reading 'The Minister comes to tea" by Miss Edith Smith and the piano solo "Daisy Chain" by Master Gerald Bullied.

Miss Aileen and Jean Rose also contributed a pleasing piano duet, "Polly". "The Hymns of the Old Church Choir" was beautifully sung by Miss Geneva Sedgwick, who responded to an encore with "Prayer Changes Things" and a again kindly sang by request, "He lifted me."

Mrs. Ernest Kitney won the hearts of the hearers with her sympathetic rendering of "When you and I were young Maggie" and "Drink to me only with thine eyes."

"Farewell to Thee" sung in duet by Misses Marion and Marjorie Baldry, was a favourite number, with its note of tender pathos.

Miss Edith Smith gave another reading "Show Him your hands" which was well received.

A charming innocation in the program was the string trio, Messrs. McFarlane, Thackeray and Gillespie.

Memories of other days were recalled by the sweet old song of yesterday, "Nellie Gray" sung by Misses Aileen and Jean Rose.

By request, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" was sung by all, Mrs. Kitney leading, and the program was brought to a successful conclusion with 'O Canada", and "God save the King."

Miss Lancaster, on behalf of the happy old people tendered a hearty vote of thanks to the girls for their mindly musical treat and gave a cordial invitation for a repeat visit.

Western Title Hinges on Twin City-Tiger Game To-day

CUB VICTORY WILL SETTLE LOOP DISPUTE

Windsor Ambassadors and Sarnia Imperials in Deadlock.

LEADLEY MAY RETURN.

Expected New Game Attendance Record Will Be Set at Varsity-Queen's Game.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 5.—Possible settlement of the western group championship of the Ontario Rugby Football Union senior series at Kitchener today provided the highlight of developments among Eastern Canada's major league squads.

The Twin City twelve entertain the leaders, Hamilton Tiger Cubs, and victory for the latter will clinch the title for the yellow and black garbed grid-iron warriors and also ease the minds of the O.R.F.U. executive, for then the much debated game between the Windsor Ambassadors and Sarnia Imperials present champions of both groups, will not be necessary.

The Border City team were originally scheduled to play at Sarnia on Saturday as were the Cubs at Kitchener. The officials fearing a deadlock between Sarnia and the Cubs, advanced the date to today which did not appeal to the Ambassadors a little bit. They refused point plant to play, claiming they could not field a team owing to injuries and inability of players to secure the afternoon off. So the game has been left in abeyance depending the result of the clash at Kitchener.

The badly [illegible] Hamilton Tigers heard good news drifting about their camp today when reports were circulated that "Pep" Leadley, great running half-back of drop kicking fame, would likely make his annual return to the pastime to aid Tigers against Montreal A.A.A., onSaturday An unusually big demand for tickets to the Queen's-Varsity game here indicates fans believe this clash is the headliner of the major league struggles. More than 18,000 tickets were disposed of yesterday and it is likely a new all time Canadian football attendance will be established at Varsity stadium which holds the present record.

Both teams are training hard for the battle that will probably decide the inter-collegiate championship now held by the Tricolor. The latter team is one point behind Varsity in the point column and a win will practically clinch the title as the following Saturday they play McGill university at Kingston while the local students journey to London to meet the Western Mustangs.

A Varsity victory will assure them of the crown regardless of the result of the games the following week. Johnny Keith their clever captain and snap who was out of the line-up last week when McGill held the Blue and White to a tie, has recovered sufficiently to resume strenuous training and will line-up against Queen's. His presence will make a big difference in the morale of the team.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

HOCKEY BRIEFS

QUAKERS AT HOME

CANADIENS READY

MONTREAL, Nov. 5.—The six players who led the attack that brought the world's hockey championship to Canadiens last spring will start to-night the Forum when the Flying Frenchmen make their first formal appearance of the season in the first of a series of two exhibition games against the Providence Reds, champions of the Canadian-American League. The second game will be played on Friday evening, and then Canadiens entrain for London, where they finish off their pre-season training with an exhibition against the London entrants in the International League.

JENKINS TO LONDON?

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Roger Jenkins, defense and right-wing player of the Chicago Black Hawks will play with the London Tecumsehs of the International League this season, providing the recommendation made by Manager Bill Tobin to the owners of the Black Hawks is accepted. The Chicago manager stated last night that it was practically sure that Jenkins would join the London team in time for the game against the Toronto Maple Leafs to-day.

Jenkins, who formerly played with Edmonton, is a likely looking professional prospect. He is nearly six feet tall, weighs 100 pounds and has speed. Manager Roy Brothers has been negotiating Jenkins during the past few days and has watched him perform in the Hawks' workouts.

DECISION LEAVES SARNIA SQUAD IDLE

Imperials Will Await Result at Kitchener—Play-off Arrangement Criticized.

SARNIA, Nov. 5—Officials of the Imperial Football Club failed in their efforts to alter Windsor's stand regarding to-day's O.R.F.U. senior game here, and the locals will have a day of rest while their district fate is being decided in Kitchener. Windsor refused to consider a Wednesday game, and declared they would default rather than play. The original schedule calls for a Saturday contest, and Windsor is adhering to it despite the fact that it was decided at the scheduled meeting to move the games ahead to Wednesday if they had any bearing on the final standing.

Local officials were not certain today whether the Windsor refusal to deviate from the original schedule constituted a default or not. Windsor is quite willing to play the game here on Saturday. Efforts of the Union officials to have the Western District title declared on Saturday, and the winners ready to play Balmy Beach in Toronto next Monday, are not being greeted with much enthusiasm here. The Western champions, it appears, are being sacrificed in order that the Balmy Beach Club be assured of a Thanksgiving Day gate.

SPEED AND DEFENSIVE POWER ON LEAFS' LINE-UP

If the Maple Leafs do not set the National Hockey League by the ears in the coming campaign on the ice, it will not be because they are lacking in speed and all-round skill. There is youth, "pep" and hustling ability in the lot shown above. No. 1 is Harvey Jackson, smart recruit from Marlboro, who is expected to shine this winter. No. 2 is Joe Primeau, smooth centre man. No. 3 is Charlie Conacher, who is also counted to have a big season and who has apparently recovered from the effects of the serious operation which he underwent some months ago. No. 4 is Happy Day, who with King Clancy, No. 5, and Red Horner, No. 6, should form a formidable rearguard. Clancy needs no introduction.

Brydson Signs.

CHICAGO, Ills., Nov. 5.—(C.P.).—Gordon Brydson, Toronto hockey star, yesterday was signed to play with the Chicago Shamrocks of the American Hockey League. Brydson played with Hamilton, Ont., in 1927-28, with Buffalo in 1928-29, and with Toronto and London, Ont., in 1929-30. He plays right wing.

Hawks To Cut Down To Sixteen Players; Five Members in Training Will Be Let Out

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 5.—Sixteen players will be carried by the Chicago Black Hawks, including ten forwards, four defensemen and two net-guardians, according to an announcement made yesterday by Manager Bill Tobin, following their workout at the London Arena. The Hawks have twenty-one players in camp at present, which means that five players will be disposed of when the Chicago team plays its last exhibition game at Windsor next Tuesday. The forward line of "Lola" Coutoure, Vic Ripley and Gottseleg looks exceptionally good, while the second line of Earl Miller, Tommy Cook and Stewart Adams will be effective if the players develop back-checking. In practice the latter line combines well, but lacks back-checking ability. Coach Dick Irvin and Manager Bill Tobin spent considerable time today trying to overcome this fault.

"Duke" Dutkowski will be shifted back to the defense but has been used on the front division to date. Prior to the workout, Manager Tobin held a meeting of the players to discuss the rules. Twenty-one questions were submitted to the players, and the rules, which will be rigidly enforced by referees this season, were read over carefully and explained.

The practice was held behind closed doors, and the greater part of the time devoted to individual instruction. The Hawks have a youthful hockey team, with plenty of speed, and shape up as real contenders in the National League this season

FAIRIES AND WITCHES MINGLE AT GAY HALLOWE'EN FESTIVAL

Concert and Masquerade Held By Senior Pupils of Omemee Public School.

PLANNED BY STUDENTS.

OMEMEE, Nov. 5—(Examiner Correspondence). — The annual Hallowe'en concert and masquerade was held on Thursday evening by the pupils of the senior room of Omemee Public school, the entertainment being arranged by committees of pupils entirely.

Miss Laura Middleton conducted the affairs with dignity and the concert was well planned and carefully carried out.

The glowing windows of the Public school might have recalled to one an illustration from Dante's Inferno and a view of the interior would have added to the illusion for there freaks in variety disported themselves and pictured goblins, owls and witches waved wierdly along the walls.

A grand march of those in costume was enjoyed, those winning prizes: Best costumed couple, the McQuade sisters; most amusing costume, George Hendry; most original costume, Lowery McQuade; best general costume, boys, Hugh Rehill, and girls, Frances McPherson, the prizes being awarded by the chairman.

Supper which had been arranged by a committee of boys was a complete success. After supper all took part in a contest conducted by Dick Vaughan.

A vote of thanks moved by Evelyn Morcombe and heartily made unanimous was tendered Fred Evans, who has been keenly interested in these annual gathering, himself appearing in costume and stimulating interest by donating prizes. Through a temporary indisposition, Mr. Evans was unable to be present at this gathering.

SMITH SCORES GOAL THAT BEAT BISONS

Former Leaf Gives Ottawa Exhibition Game Victory at Fort Erie.

FORT ERIE, Nov. 5.—Ottawa Senators of the National Hockey League defeated the Buffalo Bisons of the International Hockey League here last night in a well-played exhibition game by 3 to 2 before a crowd of more than 2,000. The Senators were given a stiff argument from start to finish, but had the better of the last period, when the Buffalo team showed signs of tiring badly. Ottawa players were not in the best of condition, but their rushes in the final period carried more punch, and with less than four minutes to play Art Smith lifted a high one from near center which Taugher did not see.

Rugby Ticket Sale Sets Up New Record

TORONTO, Nov. 5.—In the very early hours of yesterday morning four students arrived at the door of Hart House, bearing four chairs, a card table and a deck of cards. In a minute a bridge game was in progress. The players were earning for themselves the first place in the line-up for the sale of tickets for the crucial football game between Varsity and Queen's on Saturday.

At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon 3,000 tickets had been sold, and the Athletic office had broken a record in total sales, having disposed of, to students, Queen's supporters, graduates, and the public, through downtown agents, 18,300 tickets.

HUNTERS PREPARE FOR DEER SEASON

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 5.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Preparations are being made for the rapidly approaching hunting season and the village has fairly seethed with activity during the past week.

There are three classes of hunters in the village, those who go for the full time at some of the back lakes of our own or adjacent counties and those who just take a few days and either make up a small party or visit some of the other parties. To many it is the only holiday of the year and is eagerly looked forward to.

The Lakefield-Toronto party which hunts at Pakesley will consist of Dr. S. J. Gibson, H. Wannamaker, M. Wannamaker and J. W. Ridpath of Lakefield and Vic Parker, Gordon Ridpath, D. W. Edwards and Harold Lewberry of Toronto, also S. W. Sutton of Colborne.

W. J. Gill and Harry Gill are hunting in the Parry Sound district with a Peterborough party.

The Grassey Creek Hunt Club left on Monday for Pakesley and consisted of E. H. Northey, E. J. Millage, W. W. Leonard, J. E. Charlton, W. Murduff, all of Lakefield, J. S. Ridpath, J. T. Hill of Toronto, and C. Blundell of St. Catharines.

The Crowe Lake party consists of William Tedford, Lakefield, Joseph and R. Tedford, B. Douglas and C. Watts of Warsaw, J. Davis and G. Davis of Peterborough.

The Payne party is off to the hunting ground at Pakesley, those in the party being: N. Payne, C. Payne, Albert Darling, P. Spence, J. H. Payne of Lakefield, Ralph Payne of Point Anne, Rufus Payne, E. R. Hamblin, Gordon Hamblin of Warsaw, M. Thurston, A. Kennedy of Lindsay, and Gordon Thompson of Toronto.

The following are hunting at Eel's Lake: G. G. Connell, D. H. Charlton, S. J. Charlton, J. C. Strickland, N. A. Moore, and J. W. Allen.

Glenn Brydson Back In Amateur Ranks

MONTREAL, Nov. 5—Preparing to defend the Allan Cup, emblem of amateur hockey supremacy of Canada, the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association is tossing a fine collection of hockey material over the boards in its practices.

Glenn Brydson of last year's team who has been practicing with the professional Maroons, has returned to amateur ranks for at least another year, and will team up with Ralph St. Germain, former intercollegiate star, centre, and "Kub" Wilson as the forward line.

Norman Smith, a local goaler, or Gordie Perry, the football star, will replace Kerr in the nets; Ahearn, Lee, George and Ward and McGillis, will try for defense berths, and several others are attempting to make the team as forwards. Ward is a brother of Jimmy Ward of Fort William, now with Maroons.

The team hopes to be able to repeat the success of last year's squad, many of whom turned professional this season. The Allan Cup winners of next spring will be Canadian defenders of Olympic honors in the 1932 Olympiad.

MADOC

The masquerade ball held in the Armouries on Friday evening under the auspices of the Eastern Star was a most decided success. Many of the masquerade costumes were unusually beautiful and contributed much to the general color scheme. The Armouries were beautifully decorated and excellent music was furnished by Tommy Mason's Orchestra. A capacity crowd which danced until very late or rather early testified abundantly to the enjoyment all had in the evening.

Refreshments were served by the members of the Order of the Eastern Star.

with the village drain providing there is a proper disposal bed, a filter and the required tile for connection purposes. It is understood that it will be only in case of emergency the drain will be utilized if necessary. Mr. Lancaster suggested that the Council include the enlargement of the drain for this purpose, in the present scheme to aid unemployment.

Mr. Kinnaird, Tax Collector for the village, was present and submitted his report. Of the $11,241.30 paid already, $7,338 had been paid in advance. He asked the board to notify ratepayers that he is willing to accept the taxes in convenient installments.

On motion, it was decided to give Bruce Curtis a rebate of two dollars for dog tax, twice paid. A letter from Mrs. Clarke and Miss McWilliams drew the attention of council to an overcharge in their tax bill. This was found to be a clerical error, and a correction was ordered made. A rebate for the difference will be made to the ladies.

The attention of the Council was called to a mistake in the assessment of A. T. Robinson. This was left over. It was explained that the roll is final for the year. Sometimes a clerical error is made, which can be immediately rectified. Where the mistake is in the roll, the full amount must be paid the tax collector, and an appeal can be made the following year, at court of revision.

F. D. Barton asked for rebate of taxes on his property where the house had been burned. No action was taken.

The clerk was instructed to notify the C.P.R. to clean the brush from Plateau Creek on their property, at the west end, and in the drain in front of Mr. Alf. Derrett's property in the east end.

The matter of the holding back of water in front of a place in the east end of the village was mentioned, but no action was taken.

The following accounts were ordered paid:

Fred McAdam, weed inspector, $1.80; Mrs. Hogan, grant re Foley estate, $5; school election, $44.60; Bert Wannamaker, making tile, $60; Charles Dewey, caretaking, etc. $5.80; Ontario Rock Quarry, $139.38; George Jones, labor, $4.65; Prov. treas., assessment town hall, $4.88; Cecil Wilson, blacksmith, acct., $7.60; Harold Standon, acct., $96.47; John Kinnaire, McNichol property, $4.50; Fred McAdam, wood for hall, $30; Board of Health, work, $5; unemployment pay sheet number one, $818.20; fire insurance premium on hall, $48; Hastings Foundary, rates for drains, $99.48; A. Spencer, lumber, $25.14.

DO IT NOW

DRIVE into any garage or service station displaying the Maple Leaf Anti-Freeze and Alco-Meter Service sign. Have them flush the cooling system of your car to free it from scale, and fill it with a mixture of Maple Leaf Anti-Freeze and water of suitable strength for zero weather. This is economical SCIENTIFIC RADIATOR PROTECTION. Unlike many other anti-freeze preparations, it does not contain calcium chloride, chlorine, kerosene or any harmful chemical.

When zero or sub-zero weather arrives, call at a Maple Leaf Anti-Freeze Alco-Meter Station often and have the mixture tested. Add just enough Maple Leaf Anti-Freeze to prevent freezing. The Alco-Meter Service man knows how much you will need—don't use more than the required amount.

Alco-Meter Service is absolutely free at all Maple Leaf Dealers. It makes possible a scientifically accurate service of protection against frost.

IT DOES NOT PAY TO GAMBLE with the weather. Why take the risk of a two hundred dollar repair job, when Maple Leaf Anti-Freeze and FREE Alco-Meter Service offer you guaranteed protection against freezing?

Stop at any Alco-Meter Station before you park your car, and have the Maple Leaf mixture tested—be sure and you won't be sorry. Remember that all testing instruments are not Alco-Meters.

CLUB ENTERING TWO TEAMS IN O. H. A. SEASON

General Meeting For Players and Fans Will Be Held Next Week.

ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Executive Making Arrangements For Indoor Workouts in "Y" Gym.

Peterborough Hockey Club will again take up the cudgel in the O.H.A. hockey wars this season, both junior and intermediate. This was decided by the executive yesterday. The club also decided to enter a team in the junior S.P.A. series. Manager Joe Dwyer will take the boys to Toronto for the initial workouts of the team before the series and all players and fans who are interested are asked to attend a public meeting to be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms at 7.30 on Wednesday evening of next week.

Arrangements have been made for indoor training work at the local "Y" gym, the evenings to be settled at the general meeting.

Cecil Wolfe was chosen to represent the local club at the O.H.A. meeting in Toronto.

NEW OFFICERS SOCIAL CLUB

R. S. Cotton Chosen President of C.G.E. Athletic Organization.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

The following is a list of the new officers of the Social and Athletic Club of the Canadian General Electric Co., who were elected at the annual meeting held last night in the Legion Hall:—

President—R. S. Cotton.
Vice-President—B. I. Burgess.
Executive Committee—Frank Robinson, H. A. Cranfield, Bert May, S. J. Hayes, and W. G. Shiner.

The third attempt to hold the annual meeting of the C.G.E. Social and Athletic Club was successful last night, when over three hundred members crowded into the Canadian Legion Hall in answer to a special request made by the President, which stated that approximately thirty dollars would be distributed in door prizes.

John Barnes, president for the year 1930, was in the chair and the meeting proceeded in the usual orthodox manner; the minutes of the last annual meeting, financial report and auditors' report being accepted with practically no discussion.

The first new business was introduced by Frank Millard, who made a motion that thirty dollars be expended each year by the Association in door prizes at the annual meeting. This motion evoked unfavorable comment from the chairman, who claimed that members of a club should not have to be coaxed to a business meeting, dealing with subjects of vital interest to themselves. The mover, however, stuck to his guns, saying that the money belonged to the members and if they saw fit to dispose of it in this manner, it would be quite in order. The motion, when put before the house, carried without any further comment.

Christmas Tree

C. C. Mowry made a motion that the Christmas tree entertainment be carried on again this year, and this motion also carried.

A notice of motion posted September 1 was the next order of business, which dealt with the introduction of a revised constitution that had been compiled by the constitution committee after much careful study. Mr. Hayes read the new rules to the meeting and they were adopted on the motion of H. A. Cranfield, seconded by F. Roberts.

J. Barnes, before vacating the chair, spoke briefly, extending his sincere thanks to all members of committees and club members who assisted him in directing the work of the club for the past year. The financial statement, he says, shows a substantial balance, which reflects the conscientious efforts of the board of directors.

Frank Millard was appointed chairman to preside at the election of offices and extended the thanks of the Association to the outgoing executive, following a motion by N. E. Crowe, seconded by L. McGillen.

R. S. Cotton was unanimously elected president for the coming year with B. I. Burgess as vice president, and from nine nominations, the following five men were elected to serve on the Board of Directors: H. A. Cranfield, Frank Robinson, S. J. Hayes, Bert May and W. G. Shiner.

The new president took the chair and addressed the meeting, thanking the members for conferring the honor of the presidency on him. He said in part, that he hoped every person present was just as enthusiastic about making the Association a success as the tenor of the meeting indicated. He also hoped that every member realized that the success of the organization depended almost entirely on the whole-hearted co-operation of the employees, who should take an active interest in its welfare, thereby making the club of real value to themselves. He stated further that he would do everything in his power to further the interests of clean sport.

The meeting went on record as being very grateful to the Canadian General Electric Co. for the generous donation received in connection with the Christmas Tree entertainment staged last year.

S. S. Shaughnessy was elected auditor for the current year, the other auditor to be appointed by the Board of Directors.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered O. Nixon, who played the piano during the counting of ballots.

Ton of coal—John Barnes.
100 pounds sugar—Russel Jones.
Goose—C. C. Mowry.
Goose—William Constable.
Goose—Leo McGillen.

GARNET AND GREY SQUAD SWING INTO PRACTICE FOR SATURDAY'S GAME

Coach Legon Sets Gridders Through Their Paces in First Workout of Week Yesterday Afternoon—Expects No Easy Opposition in Belleville "High"—Intermediates Will Act As Reserves.

PRESENT TEAM FAVORABLY COMPARES WITH LAST YEAR'S GROUP WINNERS

The P. C. I. senior football squad was put through its paces yesterday afternoon by Coach E. F. Legon in preparation for their play-off game with Belleville here Saturday and the entire team was reported in fit condition after their struggle in Cobourg last week.

Jack Richardson was back into scrimmage practice after his week's layoff on account of injuries and the entire outfit worked well against an all-star team led by "Toad" Westbrook.

Mel Robinson, Harold Mesley and Arnold Reynolds have been brought up from the intermediate team and are expected to give the senior crowd a much greater reserve strength. Robinson has been starring all season as a high class line plunger in the lower group and should fill in nicely at this time when the team needs all the available strength possible, with the promise of several hard games ahead of them.

Mesley is a big boy, who is playing his first year of rugby, having been a tower of strength to the junior outfit this season and should be of great service to the seniors if Legon is at anytime pressed for weight on the line.

One of the Best

Reynolds is an outside wing man and one of the best tacklers at the school. He will undoubtedly see much duty before the team hang up their togs for the year.

During the heavy signal drill, the entire bag of plays were given a thorough going over, that the newcomers to the squad might get the formations and their parts in the offensive play.

The outfit, now numbering twenty players, went through the entire drill with few misplays and gave all evidence that they will be ready for Belleville's invasion Saturday.

With the group now completed, it is interesting to note how the local Collegiate team compares with last year's winners with regard to scoring ability and defensive strength.

Last fall, in six games, the Garnet and Grey team scored 139 points and had 35 rgeistered against them. This year, in six contests, they have accounted for 122 points with 23 against them. It would appear from the statistics that the boys are slightly weaker offensively but stronger on the defensive.

However, it must be remembered that the other teams in the group showed remarkable improvement over the previous year and it was no easy matter to pile up points against them. Cobourg and Oshawa in particular presented strong line-ups, the latter being the only aggregation to score a win over Coach Legon's hopefuls, this occurring in the opening game of the season in the Motor City.

Clever Plays

The "Petes" have a fine repertoire of cleverly coached plays and with the support of football fans throughout the city, hope to throw the Belleville entry for a loss this Saturday and take a comfortable lead to the Eastern town for the second game.

Five Maroons Will Play With Windsor

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 5. (CP)—All members of last year's Montreal Amateur Athletic Association Allan cup squad signed by the Montreal Maroons of the National Hockey League this morning will stay with the team this season. Coincident with this announcement came the statement that five of the players working out with the Maroons will leave for Windsor at once, four of them members of last year's Maroon squad. The ex-Maroons were Earl Robinson Lawrence ("Baldy") Northcott, William ("Batt") Phillips and Clint Benedict. The other Maroon rookies to be sent to the minor league team was Earl Hinsberger with the Windsor Bulldogs last year. George ("Buck") Boucher, veteran defense man, formerly of Ottawa, will be retained as coach.

ROSS PLANNING TO GIVE BRUINS EXTRA "PUNCH"

Club Has All But Three of Last Year's Regulars Under Contract.

THREE FORWARD LINES.

Weiland, Gainor and Clapper Will Supply Scoring Punch For Bruins.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 5 (C.P.) — The Boston Bruins will have three equally powerful forward lines attacking their National Hockey League foes this coming season if the progressive plans of Manager Art Ross materialize.

Two years ago, when the Bruins became world's champions, the crafty Ross introduced the second-line to professional hockey and last season, when his team swept through the campaign to capture the United States section title, Ross went his rival managers one better by adopting the third line idea.

It was the failure of this now-scattered third trio to click at the vital moments that forced the Bruins to give up the Stanley Cup to Les Canadiens in the final play-offs last spring.

The Bruins have all but three of last year's players under contract. Bill Carson and Mickey Macay, relief centres; Harry Connors, winger, have been dropped, and Ross now has an impressive collection of ambitious youngsters battling for the vacancies on Owner C. F. Adams' payroll.

None of the new players have any chance of breaking into either of the first two sets of lines nor into the regular defense forces. Marty Barry will again be the first string center and he will be supported by his regular wings, the reliable Galbraith and cool-headed Harry Oliver. When this trio softens the opposition, Ross will swing his dynamite trio, "Cooney" Weiland, the league's leading scorer, "Dutch" Gainor and "Dit" Clapper into action to start the scoring.

The aggressive, burly Eddie Shore, Captain Lionel Hitchman, two of the game's greatest defense players, and the versatile George Owen will assist Goalie "Tiny" Thompson, the league's best goal-tender last season, to make enemy scores few and far between.

Ross has but a few more days to study his players, for the Bruins' squad must be cut to 16 men as soon as they open here against the New York Americans on Nov. 16. At present 11 youngsters are being tested and but six of them can be retained.

Ross' axe will spare such experience as Art Chapman, the Canadian-American circuit's outstanding centre last season; Boddy Taylor, who was with the Bruins before he made a name for himself with the Philadelphia Canadian-American league club; Bobby Sutton, who returned to Boston when Harry Connor was turned back to the Ottawa Senators, and Myles Lane, former Dartmouth football and hockey star, who has been a Bruin for the past two season.

Among the newcomers are Jack "Locomotive" Pratt and Ronald Lyon, both from Portland, Ore; Harry "Smokey" Brander, who was playing with Seattle last spring when the Bruins barnstormed to the Pacific Coast; Guy McNeil and Jeffery Carr, down from Edmonton, and Paul Runge, another produce of the Canadian middlewest. All or most of these boys will be shipped to a minor league for polishing.

BROKERS' DEALS ARE DESCRIBED

Auditor's Accountants Testimony Reveals Stobie-Forlong Tactics.

AT CONSPIRACY TRIAL.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 4 (C.P.) — Through the use of Mines Securities Limited as part of the house trading, Stobie, Forlong and Company buys and sells on the day's clearing sheet without making any actual transfer of stock or money, A. Ross McKenzie, accountant for a firm of auditors, testified to-day, the first day's hearing of charges of conspiracy against Malcolm Stobie, Charles J. Forlong and Gordon Draper.

When the firm would purport to buy a certain stock for a client, on the same day and at the same price Mines Securities would sell a similar amount of stock to the broker from whom it was purchased. In other words, he explained, brokers' notes would indicate that Stobie-Forlong made sales and purchases of the same amount of stock at the same price through the same broker on the same day.

REV. LESLIE McLEAN SPEAKER AT KEENE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Toronto Minister Acted as Student Pastor in This Church in Year 1927.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

KEENE, Nov. 5.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Rev. Leslie McLean of Globe Church, Toronto preached at the anniversary services held at Knox Presbyterian church, Keene, on Sunday, being warmly welcomed by the Keene and Westwood congregations to whom he had ministered as a student pastor in 1927.

Rev. Mr. McLean took his text from John 19:20 "and it was written in Hebrew and Greek and Latin." The speaker said that to many today the inscription on the cross of Christ was in a dead language and that every man must translate the meaning of the Cross for himself into his own language and into the experiences of everyday life.

The famous Dr. Jowett had expressed his new conception in these words, "When I visit Calvary, life is transformed from a picnic to a Crusade."

John Anderson, of St. Paul's church choir, Peterborough, sang two solos, "The Plains of Peace" and "In the Garden", the choir contributing "Jubilate Deo."

The church was prettily decorated for the occasion with large yellow 'mums beside the pulpit and masses of bronze mums across the organ top.

Evening Service.

The text for the evening service was taken from John 12:29, "The people said that it thundered. Others said an angel spake to him." Throughout the sermon the contrast was shown between the natural interpretation of a fact and the recognition of the spiritual significance of the same fact. Scientific explanation was contrasted with the religious; the materialistic outlook on life with the spiritual; a lumberman may see a tree and compute the board feet it contains; Joyce Kilmer saw a tree and wrote, "Poems are made by fools like me; but only God can make a tree." Some see in the events of life only natural happenings, others with deeper insight to see the hand of God.

The choir sang "Sun of My Soul" and "The Radiant Morn" while Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Wood, John Renwick and Hugh Renwick sang "Take Time to Be Holy."

HOME TOWNERS

Tidbits. Interesting and Humorous CAMPBELLFORD

The manhood of the town will be scarce for some time to come by all accounts. With the opening of the deer shooting season the sports of the country are busy preparing for that annual event. Already some have left from Campbellford to fix camp and be ready for the first days shooting and more hunters will follow on Monday and Tuesday. We anticipate many good stories when the hunters return.

An error occurred in the Saturday's edition of the Examiner regarding the opening of a new radio store on Front Street. This store is under the proprietorship of John Nancarrow, with Mr. E. F. Clark in charge of the repair department. Many makes of radios will be carried by this new concern including Victor, Majestic and Sparton.

The local fire brigade was called out Saturday to extinguish a chimney fire at a residence on Grand road.

Mrs. E. H. Lewis is confined to her home with a severe cold.

Mrs. Rev. N. Clark Wallace returned on Saturday from Toronto, where she has been since the death of her mother, Mrs. Lockhart.

After spending the past two months at Wiscomsin and with daughters at Brantford and Bradford, Mrs. C. L. Owen has returned to her home here.

Mrs. S. White of Peterborough, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lewis, Canrobert Street.

Mr. John Russell of Buffalo, New York, was a visitor to town over the week-end.

The Rev. Dr. W. I. and Mrs. Mark, with their two children, Agnes and Jean, left on Monday with Mr. John Russell, for Toronto.

Messrs. H. N. Carr and A. D. Bennett, are both visitors to Cobourg, where they have been called to serve on the jury.

John Lowe, the sixteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lowe, met with a painful accident on Sunday, while cranking a car belonging to a friend, resulting in a broken arm. The arm, which was the right one, was broken in two places near the wrist.

Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Bruce of Toronto, were Sunday visitors at the home of the latters father, Mr. W. J. and Mrs. Wilkinson, Canrobert Street, and also to Mrs. Bruce's sister, Mrs. J. R. and Mr. Smith. Mr. Bruce is manager of a branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in Toronto.

The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Lennox of Havelock and Mrs. (Rev.) Brown were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Wilkinson on Saturday, and Mrs. John Armour, of Peterborough, was a recent guest.

Church Services.

CAVAN, Nov. 5.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Service was in the evening at St. John's church, Ida, on Sunday.

In the morning the Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe of Murray street Baptist church, Peterborough, will conduct the service and in the evening the Rev. Mr. McDonald of Knox church, Peterborough.

The choir is preparing special music. A fowl supper will be served in Cavan Community Hall on Monday evening, after which the Cavan Dramatic Club will present their splendid comedy-drama, "The Road Back." There will be good music before the play and between acts.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hootan, Fairmount, and Mr. and Mrs. James Douglas, Cavan, attended Centreville anniversary services and were guests of Mr. George Beery and family on Sunday.

Mr. A. Kennedy, Brantford, is the guest of his sister, Mrs. A. B. Kennedy and Mr. Kennedy.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Coulter, Emery and Beryl, Lindsay, and Mr. and Mrs. O. Kincaid, Manvers, visited Mrs. I. Keegan on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Staples visited Mr. and Mrs. R. Falls, Baliboro, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtiss, Roseneath, were recent visitors at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. Hatherly.

Mr. Percy Thompson, Valentia, visited Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Fallis on Sunday.

WARKWORTH

Mr. W. C. Allen has purchased the eggett block on Front Street.

Mrs. J. D. Kelly has returned to Toronto after spending a few days with his sister, Mrs. James McCrackon.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16 oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make 16 ounces of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded

LEGION WILL HOLD PARADE

CADETS TAKE PART.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 5.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The members of Lakefield Post No. 77 of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League will celebrate Armistice Day on Tuesday, November 11, with a parade led by the Citizens Band and consisting of the High school cadets, Grove cadets and members of the Legion.

The parade will form on the Public school grounds and will march to the cenotaph where a short service will be held, conducted by prominent ex-service men. The annual banquet will be held at the Lakefield Inn at 6.30 in the evening.

It is twelve years since Lakefield with ringing bells, bonfires and parades celebrated the first Armistice Day, but the celebration each year partakes more of rememberance than of hysterical joy and with ever deepening feelings of thankfulness to Almighty God for the dawn of peace and sincere desire for a continuance.

Sale of Work.

The members of T.O.G. Club of the Baptist church held a very successful tea and sale, of work in Hendren's Store on Queen street on Saturday afternoon. The dainty and fancy articles were sold by Mrs. J. B. McCormack and Miss Alice Nicholls, the Misses E. Shields and Edith Nicholls being in charge of the table of homemade cooking. Mrs. Charles Waldon and Miss Stabler had a table of sets while Mrs. J. C. Harvey, Mrs. S. Hunter and Miss Ruby Nicholls were in charge of the afternoon tea. Miss Vina Nicholls acted as treasurer.

To Observe Anniversary.

Anniversary services in Regent street United church will be held next Sunday wth Rev. A. E. Moorhouse of St. James' church, Peterborough, as the guest preacher.

The members of the Ladies' Aid will serve a fowl supper in the basement of the church on Thanksgiving evening which will be followed by a concert. Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland of Peterborough, reader, and Bert Hiscock of Bowmanville, soloist, have been engaged for the program.

C.P.R. REDUCES TRAINS TO FOUR

New Schedule Will Take Effect on Saturday, November 8.

SCHEDULES CHANGED.

Peterborough's travelling citizens will be considerably affected by recent changes adopted in the C.P.R. train schedules. Formerly six trains ran through this city, but by the new schedule, which takes effect at midnight on Saturday, November 8, the number has been reduced to four.

Greater convenience to those travelling to Montreal and Ottawa has been accomplished, however. The train going east will leave Peterborough at 11.50 p.m. and by connecting with another train at Smith's Falls will carry passengers to either Ottawa or Montreal. Formerly the Montreal train did not leave Peterborough until 1.55 a.m.

Instead of three trains going west in the mornings there are to be two. There is now only the 5 o'clock train in the morning from Montreal and Ottawa, which corresponds to the late night train going east. At 7.30 the local leaves for Toronto. This train may be speeded up considerably.

The usual afternoon train to Toronto leaving Peterborough at 3.50 will follow its old schedule, except on Sunday afternoon. On Sunday the train will leave Peterborough at 5.45 p.m., arriving in Toronto at 7.45.

It is to be judged that Peterborough citizens week-ending in Toronto will notice the greatest change. Only one train will leave Toronto for Peterborough at night, the late train having been cut off. The one train will leave Toronto Union Station at 9.30 p.m.

Trains numbered 33 and 34 are the trains caught off. These trains ran between Ottawa and Toronto, passing through Peterborough for the east at 1.50 a.m. and going through for Toronto at 4.30 a.m.

COLONEL OUTLINES WINTER ACTIVITIES

Peterborough Rangers Will Participate in Splendid Program of Sports and Thrills.

At a regimental smoker held in the Armouries last evening Lieut.-Colonel M. H. Park, V. D., O. C. Peterborough Rangers addressed the large gathering of officers, N.C.O.'s and men and outlined a splendid program of winter activity, which will include the formation of a softball league, shooting on the indoor ranges, boxing, gymnasium and physical drill.

These activities are scheduled to commence on the third Tuesday of this month, when it is also hoped that the musketry prizes—cups and medals—will be ready for presentation.

Major J. A. Dewart, M. C., O. C. No. 3 Company, C. M. G. C. has been invited to participate with his company in this program organized by the Rangers. He spoke a few words of thanks and appreciation to the gathering following the offer.

During the course of the evening moving pictures were shown by Major J. Winterbottom, M. C., of this year's camp, while Major Dr. Yelland also showed pictures of his recent trip to the West, among many others being some wonderful views of the Rockies. The program was much enjoyed by the men.

Earlier in the evening the usual regimental parade was held, which was a smart turnout. The program came to a conclusion with the serving of refreshments.

LARGER GRANT FOR WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

Minister of Agriculture Promises Increased Grant to Institutes.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 5. (CP)—An increase shortly in the women's institute government grant of $80,000 per annum was promised by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, in addressing the 16th annual convention of the women's institutes of western Ontario at the Masonic Temple here Mr. Kennedy praised the work of Women's Institutes in Ontario.

Taking the ground that legislation cannot be effective without education, the Burgessville branch has brought before the annual convention a resolution contending that in the interests of clean living, sobriety and temperance the Department of Education should make hygiene, physiology and temperance compulsory studies for an hour a week from the fifth to the eighth grades inclusive.

The South Oxford women want equal rights for the rural schools as compared with the urban, on two points: First, they ask that rural scholars be given their entrance certificates on the year's work, instead of by examination, and secondly, they want the rural teachers to be taken into the exchange system under which urban teachers have trips to other parts of the Empire.

Banquet In Honor Of Richard Lees

Richard Lees who has recently retired from the Inspectorate of the Public Schools, after forty years yeoman service, will be honored at a banquet at Murray Street Church on Thursday night, which is being tendered by the joint convention of Peterborough County and City Public and Separate School Teachers.

The schools close their doors, tonight—to the delight of all school children—until Tuesday morning. The convention which opens on Thursday morning at the Normal School will be addressed among others, by Inspectors Copp and R. F. Downey; Richard Lees, Colonel Snyder of Port Hope, Wm. Morris of Toronto and Mrs. W. R. Morris.

Many of the teachers, and also Inspector A. Mowat, are leaving for Windsor where they will visit the new type of Rotary Schools and will have the opportunity of seeing them while the pupils are at work. They will be banquetted in Windsor on Thursday evening and on Friday will go to Detroit to visit the schools there.

OBITUARY

JAMES E. KYLE.

The death occurred this morning of James E. Kyle, 533 Downie street, at the age of seventy-three years.

The late Mr. Kyle was born in Owen Sound and lived here more than forty years and was a foreman in the C.G.E. for more than thirty-four years. He was also a member of Knox church.

There are left to mourn his loss besides his wife, one daughter, Mrs. V. J. Tully, 536 Downie street.

The funeral will be held on Friday, Nov. 7 at 2 o'clock p.m. from his late residence, the Rev. William McDonald officiating. Burial will be made in Little Lake cemetery.

DR. T. B. MOODY IS DEAD.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Nov. 5 (C.P.).—Rev. T. B. Moody, M.A., Principal of Stanstead Wesleyan College, Stanstead, Que., is dead, following a heart attack. Dr. Moody was born in Berwick-Upon-Tweed, England, June 12, 1864, and had been Principal of the college for two years.

The British Government is considering several plans to increase the consumption of oil fuel made from coal, including a proposed increase in its use by the navy.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN No. 45 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

With a barking guttural, the female ape called the attention of the others to the intruder. Several huge bulls stood erect to get a better view. With deep-throated ominous growls, bared fangs, and bristling necks, they advanced slowly upon Tarzan. "Karnath, I am Tarzan of the Apes," said the ape-man in the vernacular of the tribe. "Do you not know me?

"Together we teased Nums, when we were still little apes." The brute he addressed stopped with a look of dull wonderment. "And Major," continued Tarzan, "do you not recall your former king, he who slew the mighty Kerchak? Look at me! Am I not the same Tarzan—mighty hunter—invincible fighter—that you all knew for many seasons?"

The apes crowded forward in curiosity, muttering among themselves. "What do you want among us now?" asked Karnath. "Only peace", answered the ape-man. Again the apes conferred. At length Karnath spoke: "Come in peace, then, Tarzan of the Apes," he said. And so Tarzan dropped lightly to the turf into the midst of the fierce and hideous horde.

There were no greetings such as would have taken place among men after an absence of two years. The apes went on about their activities. They paid no more attention to Tarzan than as though he had not been gone from the tribe at all. For several days the she-apes, with young, remained suspicious, but soon even they became accustomed to him.

FOUR ARE KILLED IN U.S. ELECTION

TWO WOUNDED.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 5. —Four persons were killed and two were wounded owing to violence during the Congressional election in the United States. All dead were in Kentucky.

A double fatality occurred at Stinking Creek, Ky., where Boyd Bingham, aged 40, a Democratic magistrate shot and killed Hampton Smith, aged 45, a farmer, only to be shot down later by Smith's son, William.

At Danville, Ky., Joseph Hayden, a Democrat candidate, shot and killed Ed. Doneghy, a negro. He was said to have fired in self defence.

Eli Dotson, aged 50, a farmer of Phelps, Ky., was arrested and charged with murder after the death of Ward Hatfield, aged 35. It was said the two quarrelled over the removal of Hatfield as deputy constable.

FOWL SUPPER HELD BY ST. LUKE'S L.A.

Under the auspices of the Women's Guild of St. Luke's Church, a very successful fowl supper was held last evening in the new hall of the parish house, which, with its shining new interior, presented a very attractive appearance and was tastefully decorated in the season's colors of black and gold. The tables were arranged with vases and bowls of orange and yellow chrysanthemums and black and gold candles in silver holders. Over three hundred people were in attendance for one of the most successful fowl suppers in the history of the society. The president of the Guild, Miss E. Stewart, acted as general convenor.

The draw for a quilt made by Mrs. S. Perry and Miss L. Graham, took place last night, the winning number being held by Mrs. Forbes, Rogers street.

An interesting program was presented after supper, with mixed quartette numbers by Mesdames Binks and Wand and Messrs. Binks and Smith; vocal solos by Mrs. Mendell Braund, a duet by Mrs. Binks and Mr. Agnew; a male quartette that included Messrs. Greenslade, Binks, Smith and Agnew; readings by Miss Queenie Hope; vocal solos by Miss Bertha Binks, and violin selections by Roy Rome. Accompanists of the evening were Mrs. W. A. Greenslade and Miss Marguerite Rome.

SIMON LACKING FAITH IN GOV'T

LONDON, England, Nov. 5 (C.P.) Cable)—To-day, after the Labor Government has been sustained in the first pitched battle of the Parliamentary session, Liberal headquarters made public a letter written by Sir John Simon, Liberal M.P. and eminent jurist, to Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George ten days ago. Sir John, in his letter, expressed complete lack of confidence in the Government.

The Government was a complete failure in practically all departments, Sir John's letter said. All Mr. Lloyd George's well-meant efforts to help it do something effective and to get a more satisfactory understanding had produced no result, except to expose the Liberals to the reproach that they were keeping in friendly contact with Labor merely in an effort to save their own skins, the letter added.

COLLISION AT DOWNER'S CORNERS.

Two cars sustained damage in collision at Downer's Corners at about 3.30 yesterday afternoon, the occupants of both vehicles fortunately escaping without injury.

One automobile contained Rev Dr. J. E. Moore, 174 Hunter Street, this city, who was accompanied by his wife, while the other car belonged to Archie McIntyre of R. R. 13, who was also accompanied by a passenger.

The Moore car, travelling south, received the brunt of the impact, and had to be towed in while the McIntyre car was able to drive away under its own power.

SHED FIRE

Three telephone calls and two alarms from the telegraph boxes, gave notice of a fire at 115 Park Hill road, at 6.30 last evening, and resulted in a rapid response by all equipment.

The outbreak, believed to have been caused by the indiscriminate disposal of hot ashes, was confined to a shed adjoining the kitchen. The damage was slight and is covered by insurance.

Apple Cider May Replace Ale Sale

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 5 (C.P.). —Announcement is made by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, that an effort is now under way to put Ontario cider on the market "in a big way."

The Province has just completed arrangements with the Ottawa authorities, whereby a winery company will put 300 barrels of apples through their plant under the best English recipe. The resultant product is to be matured until April, and then put out under a Government label, extensively advertised, in the hope a wide-scale production and sale can be effected by the fall of 1931.

In this cider venture, the Government has a two-fold object, said Mr. Kennedy: First, the establishment of a big market for surplus apples," and, secondly, the reduction of Ontario's annual beer consumption.

ILL HEALTH ENVIES GOOD HEALTH

Just as poverty envies prosperity. To enjoy life and succeed in your undertakings you need good health. One way, and a most logical way, too, of helping yourself to health is to keep your spinal nerves free of irritation and pressure. Because if a nerve is constricted it cannot supply its quota of energy to the tissue cells. This means lessened capacity for work and lessened resistance to disease. Your nervous system controls the activity of every part of your body. Therefore, it is important that no nerve impingement exists along the spine.

OBITUARY

MRS. R. YOUNG.

Mrs. Rebecca F. Young, 81, a resident of Toronto for more than 50 years, died on Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry McGill, 24 Heybourne Street. She was an Anglican and formerly active in the Women's Auxiliary and Home Circle.

Surviving are four sons: George of Chicago, Henry, Richard and William of Toronto; a daughter, Mrs. McGill; eight grandchildren, and a sister, Mrs. G. R. Stephen, Toronto. She was also a sister of the late Richard and Thomas Foster of Peterborough. Her many friends in this city will regret to learn of her demise. Following a service conducted at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Henry McGill 24 Hepbourne Street, Toronto, Monday evening, Nov. 3rd, the remains were forwarded to Port Hope, Ont., where interment took place. The pall-bearers were six nephews of the deceased: Jack, Earle, Eric, and James Young, Bob McGill, Edward Pearson, all of Toronto.

EDWARD J. McCARTHY.

The late Mr. McCarthy was born in Ogdensburg, N.Y., being the second son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy, of Compton, Quebec. His father was a prominent railroad contractor of his day and at an early age the late Mr. McCarthy joined his father in business and had been actively engaged in railroad engineering for many years, including work at Crow's Nest Pass on the Grand Trunk Pacific, and on the Lindsay and Bobcaygeon road.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his widow, formerly Mary Ada Hurley, two daughters, Mrs. George Bayard Smith of New York City, and Mrs. F. J. Blanchfield of this city, two sons, Mr. A. E. McCarthy of New York City and Mr. Basil McCarthy of Toronto; also three sisters, the Misses Mary and Catherine and Mrs. LeBlanc, all of Montreal.

The funeral will be held from the family residence on Friday morning at 9 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM

CHATTEN—In loving memory of Mr. J. W. Chatten who passed away Nov. 5, 1927.

I think of him in silence,
And his name I oft recall

Ohio Mine Explosion Claims Toll Of 87

RESCUE WORKERS TAKE LAST BODY FROM DEATH PIT

Fear Expressed For 18 Who Escaped Blazing Inferno Alive.

IDENTIFICATION DIFFICULT.

Victims Placed in Huge Improvised Morgue Till Claimed By Relatives

MILLFIELD, O., Nov. 6. — Number six mine of the Sunday Creek Coal Company gave up the last of its dead shortly after seven thirty this morning when the 87th and last body of the men who met death when an explosion and fire wrecked the underground workings late yesterday was brought to the surface.

Fear that this toll might be increased however, was expressed by rescue workers and officials of the Sunday Creek Company because of the serious condition of eighteen men who escaped from the inferno alive.

They were brought to the surface late last night and early today after having spent several hours in the gas filled shaft.

Bodies of the dead were placed in an improvised morgue in an empty store room and efforts were being made by relatives to identify them. The bodies were discolored and it appeared that the men had died from the effect of inhaling poisonous gas.

BENNETT INVITED TO GREAT FEAST

CITY HAS HARD TIMES.

SHEFFIELD, Eng., Nov. 6 (C. P. Cable).—The Cutlers' Feast, an institution which in former years had something of the significance attaching to the famous Guild Hall Banquet of the Mayor of London, will be attended by Premier R. B. Bennett of Canada to-night, the Canadian Prime Minister being in Sheffield to receive the Freedom of the City.

Formerly the feast was regarded as a convenient rostrum for some prominent member of the Cabinet, who could inform the country of the Government's actions and plans. The institution originated several centuries ago when the cutlers of Sheffield, holding holiday once a year, were permitted to chase and kill a deer in Sheffield Park.

From the viewpoint of material prosperity Sheffield has had cause to regard disarmament ruefully. Great armament works here are practically idle and the cutlery trade is enduring a dismal time. The master cutler nowadays is often only discreetly connected with the cutlery business. P. B. Brown, Master Cutler this year, is head of Hadfield's, famous steel works

POLICE SEEKING CROWN WITNESS

ROYAL BODY PROBING.

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 6 (C.P.).—A warrant will be issued to-day for the arrest of James Gallen, Crown witness, who failed to appear to give evidence before the Saskatchewan Royal Commission yesterday in connection with the charges against the former Liberal administration arising out of his own Saturday declaration.

When the Commission met yesterday, it listened to the testimony of G. E. Gregory, K.C., senior Crown counsel, who being duly sworn, declared Gallen had been paid the sum of $295 for witness fees by himself and his associate counsel, J. G. Difenbaker, K.C. Thereupon the Commission acceded to Col. Gregory's request for a bench warrant for the arrest of the principal witness in the "Gallen charges."

Scotland Yard Hears Reports Of R-101 Plot

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 6 (C.P.).—Scotland Yard is investigating statements made by a man concerning an alleged plot to wreck the huge dirigible R-101 which crashed near Beauvais, France, October 5.

The man stated that while he was travelling on a train between London and Southend he overheard a conversation among three men about the plot. This conversation was on the day prior to the dirigible's fatal flight.

No further details of the alleged plot were revealed to-day.

QUOTA SCHEME OF WHEAT BUYING FOUND PRACTICAL

Method of Increasing Empire Trade Must Be Sanctioned By Conference as Whole.

CANADIAN OPINION DIVIDED.

Adoption of Plan Probably Mean Dominions Supply 55 Per Cent Britain's Needs.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 6 (C.P. Cable)—The Imperial Conference's special committee has finally concluded the quota scheme of purchasing by Britain can be practicably applied to wheat and flour, if this method of increasing Empire trade is favored by the Imperial Conference as a whole. But, as forecast, the experts have found so many difficulties in the way of a quota on canned fruits, canned fish and dairy products, that the scheme could not be practicably applied to these commodities.

One Of Alternatives.

Quota purchasing of wheat is one of the British Government's alternative suggestions to the scheme of Imperial tariff preferences put forward by Premier R. B. Bennett of Canada. All the suggestions are designed to open the way for increased Empire trade.

If the conference approves the quota on wheat, it is believed it will be worked out so the Dominions are allotted 55 per cent. of Great Britain's requirements, the remainder being divided between British wheat-growers and foreign countries.

In other words, British millers would be required by the Government to secure 55 per cent. of their requirements from the Dominions, this figure being in turn allotted between the chief wheat-growing units of the Empire, as much as possible of the remainder from home farmers, and the rest of their requirements from abroad. One difficulty in this plan would be to ensure that wheat shipped to the United Kingdom would not be diverted in transit.

Flow In Defined Channels.

The wheat quota plan is considered practical because wheat and flour flow along well-defined channels of commerce, unlike dairy products, and canned fish and canned fruits, which would have to be purchased over a scattered area.

Canadian wheat men, it is understood, are divided over the advantages of the quota scheme, some consider it would be difficult of administration and enforcement, especially when not buttressed by a tariff system such as prevails in Germany and France. Others do not see why there should be any difficulty in requiring British millers to conform to the plan if it is adopted, and they see in the quota the advantage of a more secure British market for Canadian wheat, even if purchases are at world prices.

OFFICIAL HELD FOR MAIL FRAUD

New Yorker's Wife Occupies Adjoining Cell on Assault Charge.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 6 (CP)—George Griffin, aged 40 years, said to be treasurer of L. C. Smith and Corona typewriters, Inc., is under arrest on a charge of mail fraud. Authorities charged the firm's books had been falsified to cover the theft of between $200,000 and $250,000 in the last two years.

In another cell in the West 30th Street police station was Griffin's wife, Mrs. Bessie Griffin, aged 42 years, of Syracuse, N.Y., she was charged with felonious assault and violation of the Sullivan anti-fire-arms Law.

PRICE OF BREAD TAKES BIG DROP IN PETERBOROUGH

Twenty-four Ounce Loaf is Now Being Sold For Six Cents in Some Stores.

CHEAPEST IN CANADA.

No Hope is Held Out That Low Prices Will Remain Long.

A price-cutting bread war was launched in the city this morning by several of the large bakeries. Bread prices dropped steadily throughout the morning and at noon a 24-ounce loaf could be bought in one store at least for six cents. Other bakers were delivering at seven cents a loaf, and some stores retailed bread at six and a half cents.

Housewives benefitted in most cases 3 cents a loaf by the bakers' war. Bread retailed mostly throughout the city yesterday at ten cents.

Unfair competition, The Examiner was told by one of the city's large bakers, was the cause of the bread war. Some bakeries had been cutting prices, he said, and now the whole industry had joined in slashing of prices.

No hope was held out that the present low prices would continue long, although it was intimated that while the present situation existed they might go even lower. The war is an effort to get bread competition in the city back to a sound basis, The Examiner's informant said.

A meeting of the bakers was called recently when the retail situation was thoroughly discussed. Failing to reach an agreement, the price war commenced to-day.

Housewives here have not been able to buy bread so cheaply for more than ten years. Some years previous to the Great War, bread retailed for five cents, but during the war it steadily mounted. About a month ago bread was reduced in Peterborough from twelve cents a 24-ounce loaf to ten cents.

As a result of the disunion among the bakers, Peterborough to-day enjoyed the cheapest bread in Canada.

WINNIPEG MAYOR ATTACKS "REDS"

Will Travel to Ottawa and Urge Premier to Root Out Communists.

DOMINION WIDE FIGHT.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 6.—(C.P.)—Mayor Ralph H. Webb, of Winnipeg, will travel Canada from coast to coast and raise "hail columbia" if the Dominion Government does not attempt to 'root out Communist agitators and leaders and deport them."

Speaking at a banquet held by the County of Winnipeg Loyal Orange Lodge last night, the Mayor challenged newspapers to publish his statement. "I will bet you dollars to doughnuts the newspapers are afraid to publish that statement," he commented.

Activities of communist leaders constituted a greater menace to freedom than that which more than 300 years ago culminated in the gunpowder plot, declared Mayor Webb. He appealed to the Orange organization to come out boldly and stand by him in his fight against Communism.

He had been alone in his fight for five years, the Mayor said. He asserted that as soon as Prime Minister R. B. Bennett returned from the Imperial Conference he was going to Ottawa to find out "just how much longer the Federal government is going to stand for the state of matters existing."

Queen Alexandra Association Meets

The regular business meeting of Queen Alexandra Home and School Association was held on Monday evening in the school. Reports from various committees were received and discussed. Final arrangements were made for the school's music night to be held November 21.

Mrs. Foster sang, accompanied by Mrs. Purdy. There was a large attendance of parents, the attendance picture being won by M. H. Park's room. A paper collection will be held the last Wednesday of this month.

The ladies enjoyed an hour's bowling at the close of the meeting.

Tea is being featured as a drink in a restaurant in Paris this season.

SURVIVORS TELL TALES OF HORROR IN MINE TRAGEDY

COMPANIONS DROP BEHIND.

MILLFIELD, O., Nov. 6. — His wife's apron saved the life of George Rasp of Jacksonville, one of the trapped workers who escaped death in the Millfield mine disaster.

Rasp said he was blown almost 100 feet from the place where he had been standing by the force of the explosion. He heard a roaring noise and then the shouts of his fellow underground prisoners.

"In my hand, for some reason, was my wife's apron, which had brought from home this morning to tie around my face because the air has been so bad lately," Rasp related.

Dipped Apron in Coffee.

"I dipped the apron in some coffee I found in a lunch bucket and tied it across my face. Then I crawled on my hands and feet—it seemed like a mile I crawled—until I came to an air shaft where I was able to get up on a wooden stairway."

For a while he had companions who helped each other across fallen timber and piles of slate, but when he reached the air shaft he was alone. He did not know the fate of the others.

John Butsco of Millfield, who was working about a mile from the explosion section with 30 others, told of shouting a warning and of a race against death. He and his crew and about 60 others, he estimated, escaped.

A story of how he and his "buddy" escaped the death-dealing gases was told by Walter Porter, 40. Porter, the father of seven children was one of those injured by the explosion. He suffered broken ribs and cuts on the forehead.

"It was nearly 12 o'clock when I and my buddy, Emmett Oblers, were called to fix some latches to work when there was a terrific noise and a wall of flame.

"The explosion blew our truck, containing our tools, approximately 35 feet, and catapulted it up against the timber. I thought the trolley wire fell off when I saw the burst of flame.

"After regaining my senses I tried to rise but something continued to fall about and imprison me. The explosion blew coal high and brattice board in all directions. It came so fast I could hardly recall what happened.

Mine Turned Hot.

Porter told how he and Oblers, dazed and not knowing whether they

I.O.D.E. Place Wreath On the Park Cenotaph

At the regular meeting of the Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E., held yesterday afternoon in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., with the regent, Mrs. C. A. White, presiding, it was decided to place a wreath on the Cenotaph on Armistice Day.

At the home of Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, Weller Street, a tea and sale of work and cooking will be held on Thursday, November 20th. The draw will then be made for the quilt donated by Mrs. C. A. White and the luncheon set donated by Mrs. F. L. Robinson.

R-101 NEVER HAD FULL POWER TEST OFFICIAL STATES

STARTLING TESTIMONY.

Vice Admiral Dowding Claims His Instructions Never Obeyed.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 6. — (AP)—Hugh Dowding a Vice-Marshal of the Air Ministry, created a sensation today at the inquiry into the R-101 disaster by testifying that he had ordered a full power trial as soon as possible after the dirigible had left her mooring mast on the Indian voyage, but that his instructions were not obeyed.

Test As Safeguard

The ship had never had a full power trial, he said, and he had issued his order as a safeguard, figuring that if anything went wrong on the trial the R-101 could immediately turn back to England.

Vice-Marshal Dowding said he had given his instructions verbally to Wing-Commander Colmor, who perished in the crash.

It also was brought out that Lord Thomson ,the Air Minister who also was killed, had issued a certificate of air worthiness without a formal written report on the one trial to which the dirigible had been submitted.

Before the certificate was issued there was a final inspection which took two men about two hours. The ship started for India before these inspectors had time to make a formal written report.

Simon Presses Witnesses

Sir John Simon shot innumerable questions at the witnesses to determine whether the airship was rushed away on her voyage without proper preparation because of Lord Thomson's desire to start on October 4.

All the witnesses agreed that the departure was hurried but all except Mr. Dowding, said they believed the dirigible was fit.

SOVIET DELEGATE TO GENEVA MEET ASSAILS FRANCE

Litvinoff Declares World Faced With Grave Menaces of War.

SECURITY DEMANDS A BLIND

Hopeless of Success on Russia's Proposals For Absolute Disarmament.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 6. — (AP)—Attacking the League of Nations Disarmament Commission today, Maxim Litvinoff, Russian delegate, declared that the world was now faced with grave menaces of war.

The Soviet spokesman especially assailed France and those who demand security before disarmament as dangerous enemies of peace.

Ask Security—Plan for War

"It is no wonder", Litvinoff asserted, "that among the countries which were loudest in their demands for 'security' guarantees were some in which the chiefs of the military staffs were, as is now common knowledge, at the same time devising and carrying out plans for the provocation of war with their neighbors."

The Russian delegate declared himself hopeless of success for the Soviet's former proposals for absolute disarmament, and later for proportionate disarmament. He demanded, however, that the commission substitute the word disarmament for the terms "limitation and reduction of armaments."

Athough ruled out of order by Chairman Loudon who forbade the translation of Litvinoff's speech, the Russian delegation has prepared copies of his propouncement which were distributed to the press after he had read it to the commission in English.

Press Races for Copy

A disturbance arose in the hall when the chairman forbade the translation. Most of the occupants of the press section stampeded for the exit where copies of Litvinoff's remarks were being distributed, and the chairman sternly called for order.

Lord Cecil of Great Britain, Count Von Bernstorff of Germany, Naotake of Japan, Litvinoff and Chairman Loudon occupied the session with a discussion of the method of procedure. Count von Bernstorff and Chairman Loudon wished to continue where the Commission left off at its last sitting eighteen months ago, without reopening questions already settled.

Litvinoff, however, derided the idea and declared that the passage of eighteen months could not be ignored. Lord Cecil wished to proceed with final and third reading of the draft convention.

The Commission has been trying for five years to complete this draft convention for submission to a general disarmament conference. It finally was agreed in principle that questions formerly settled should not be reopened, except at the discretion of the chairman.

Afternoons Open

Before adjourning the first sitting, the Commission agreed to sit each morning from 10.00 a.m. to 1.00 p.m., leaving the afternoon open for private conversations and exchange of views.

Litvinoff's speech—a prepared documents—was interrupted in the middle by Chairman Loudon with the suggestion that the Russian was out of order, as it was understood general discussion would not be reopened in the interest of speed. Litvinoff, however, continued to read and was permitted to finish.

Two Armed Bandits Get $7,000 in Bank

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6. (By (Canadian Press, 4 p.m.)—Approximately $7,000 was obtained by two armed bandits who held up the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Unionville about 20 miles northeast of Toronto, about three p.m. to-day. Four persons were in the bank at the time.

The bandits escaped in a motorcar.

ALASKAN STEAMER DISABLED

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 6.—Carrying between 30 and 50 passengers, the Alaska steamship Company liner Northwestern was drifting helplessly two miles south of Cape Spencer, Alaska, today after losing her rudder. NUMEROUS HOUSES ARE DAMAGED WHEN WORST BLAZE IN MONTHS BREAKS OUT IN WEST END HOMES

STARTED AT 7.50 A.M.

Blaze Believed to Have Originated in Large Shed on Donegal Street.

Captain William Jones of Peterborough Fire Department was admitted to Nicholls Hospital this morning as the result of being rendered unconscious by smoke in one of the worst fires this city has experienced for some months.

Almost one dozen different lots of property are more or less affected, the fire having been rendered exceedingly difficult by the high wind which was blowing at the time.

Started in Shed.

The blaze is believed to have had its origin in a large shed belonging to Sam Abbot, which is situated close to his saw mill. The shed, part of which was occupied by Sam Lowe, extended for eighty feet between the rear of 495-497 Donegal Street and 496 Gilchrist Street. It is completely destroyed along with the entire contents, while the surrounding property is all damaged by fire and water more or less extensively

Lawrence Wilson, 495 Donegal street and Fred Saulter, 497 Donegal street probably received the brunt of the fire's ravages. These two houses are combined. Built of red brick the walls are still standing, but the flames which danced out of the roof, gave evidence of the fierce fire which was raging inside the building, and some idea of the damage which is necessarily caused by water, fire and smoke.

A Mr. Hopkins and his family who have recently moved in, occupied 499 Donegal street which also suffered severely, while James Steadman living at 501 Dongal street, was more fortunate, the fire in his case being confined to a hen house at the rear of the house.

On Gilchrist street which is at the rear of the above mentioned property Sam Lowe was forced out into the cold with his wife and five children, while the house next door No. 490 Gilchrist street, tenanted by Norman A. James was also damaged slightly.

The severity of the fire can be well imagined, by the fact that sparks blown on the strong breeze, carried over to Downie street, some few hundred feet distant, setting fire to the roofs of property in Dawson's terrace and at Mrs. A. Ward's house at 467 Downie street. The damage in these instances was very slight and was confined to the shingles, nevertheless it caused considerable anxiety to the members of the Fire Department who were rushed over to combat the danger. Their absence from the more serious fire on Donegal street and on Gilchrist street, could be ill-spared.

Sam Lowe of 496 Gilchrist street in conversation with The Examiner said he was preparing to go to work. At about 7.30 a.m. he went to his garage which adjoins Sam Abbots shed. He had a kettle of hot water to put in the radiator of his car, to facilitate starting. He was about to open the garage doors when he saw smoke coming from, the other shed. He immediately ran to the house and phoned for the Fire Brigade. On returning to the garage to get the car, he found that it had already been destroyed, so fierce and sudden was the blaze.

Similar scenes were witnessed at all the other houses involved, and shortly the roadway on Gilchrist and Downe Streets was littered with all manner of goods and chattels, hurriedly thrown out. They were covered with tarpaulins by the firemen, which saved them from damage by water.

A squad of policemen, under Sergeants Wigg and Thomas, were on hand to keep back the large crowd of people which congregated, and some householder thoughtfully supplied a large kettle of steaming hot coffee for the firemen, who were drenched with water, and feeling the effects of the severe struggle.

Chief Gimblett states that there are fourteen separate parties, who actually suffered loss in the fire, including the William Hamilton Company, where fire broke out in about fifteen different places on the roof of a shed. This outbreak was successfully dealt with by the company's own fire squad, but not before it had spread south of Murray street on to the property situated at 474 Donegal, from which place it bridged large gap and, as already stated ignited the roofs of property on Dawson's terrace. Downie street and at property of Simcoe and Stewart streets. The brigade pulled away from the scene of the fire at 10.36 a.m.m after a fight of two hours and fifty-six minutes.

Prince Receives Canadian Flier

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 6.—(A.P.) Captain Errol Boyd and Lieutenant Harry P. Connor were received by the Prince of Wales at York, House to-day

"The Prince gave us a marvellous little time,' Captain Boyd said. "We were with him talking probably for forty minutes. Mostly he discussed aviation. He seems to know a great deal about flying. He mentioned the German DO-X and seemed very interested in the possibilities of future development along this line. We gave some impressions of our trans-Atlantic flight about which he asked a lot of questions."

The Prince also spoke of his forthcoming trip to South America to which he said he was looking forward immensely.

HON. GEO. HENRY EXAMINES ROAD NEAR HAVELOCK

Engineers' Plans Omit Havelock Village From New Highway.

NORWOOD DIVERSION.

Hon. George S. Henry, Ontario's Minister of Highways, motored today over the Peterborough-Havelock section of the projected highway to Ottawa to investigate personally and understand the merits of a proposed diversion at Havelock.

The Minister proceeded to Wooler where he will be the guest tonight at a banquet with which the Murray township village celebrates the completion of the paved county road from Wooler to Brighton which was built by the Raynor Construction Company as part of the 1930 program of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham.

Hon. Mr. Henry has a double engagement in the district today. He is winding up one job in Northumberland, although ostensibly was a united counties enterprise, and in Peterborough he was trying to accelerate a new one.

Promise to Lancaster

In coming to Peterborough and Havelock today, Mr. Henry kept a promise which he made to T. P. Lancaster, M.P.P. for the county riding respecting a possible alteration of the route of the highway in both its easterly and westerly approaches to Havelock.

On the one hand the Department is building its trunk highways for posterity and also for the broad advantage of provincial traffic in the present day, but on the other there is a desire to accede to and promote the practical ambitions of local municipalities.

HAWKS IS AFTER ANOTHER RECORD

PRESENT MARK 14 HOURS.

VALLEY STREAM, N.Y., Nov. 6. (CP)—Captain M. Hawks hopped off from Curtiss Field at 7.45 a.m. (E.S.T.) to-day on a flight to lower the speed record for airplanes between New York and Havana Cuba.

He expects to cover the 1 600 miles in less than seven hours with 15 minute stops at Columbia, S.C., and Miami, Fla., for fuel. He said he expected to reach Columbia in about 3 hours and 30 minutes after his take-off.

The present record for the New York-Havana flight is 14 hours, set by the late Wilmer Stultz in the monplane Columbia in March 1928 with Mabel Boll and Charles A. Levine as passengers. That was a non-stop flight.

BIG FLYING BOAT MAKES FIRST LAP OF ATLANTIC TRIP

Twelve Motored Seaplane DO-X Reaches Amsterdam Without Mishap.

FOLLOWED RIVER RHEIN.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Nov. 5. — (AP) — The huge Dornier flying boat DO-X arrived at Amsterdam at 4:50 p.m. (11:50 a.m. E.S.T.) five hours and 2 minutes after the take-off from Altenrhein, Switzerland.

The big ship completed this first leg of her projected flight to New York without mishap, flying through clear weather all the way.

Followed River Rhein

The plane had been scheduled to start shortly after 8 a.m., but the low temperature delayed preparations and necessitated a longer warming up, so that it was 11.27 a.m. (5.27 a.m. E.S.T.) before the ship nosed into the wind and rose gracefully from the somewhat choppy surface of the lake.

Start Delayed by Storms.

The plane was captained by Commander Friedrich Christiansen, who hoped to stop at Amsterdam and Southampton before flying to Lisbon, from where the trans-Atlantic flight will be begun probably about November 9. The start of the plane from here was delayed since Sunday morning because of adverse weather conditions.

Three Atlantic stops en route from Lisbon to New York are planned, the first at Horta, Azores Islands group, the second at a fuel ship midway to Bermuda and the third at Bermuda, the object being to demonstrate possibilities of the machine and a safe scheduled voyage rather than to make a speed record.

There were only sixteen passengers aboard for the trip to Amsterdam, although the craft can carry 150 or more without difficulty. Maurice Dornier of the Dornier Works, is going to Lisbon by train and will board the plane there, while Claude Dornier, his brother, will board the plane at Amsterdam.

FUTURE OF R-100 NOT YET DECIDED

SMALL PAYMENT DUE.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 6 (C.P.)—The future of the R-100 giant airship which visited Canada in August, was the subject of questioning in the House of Commons yesterday. Hon. Frederick Montague, Under-Secretary for Air, declared no decision had been made on the future use of the airship until the present inquiry into the disaster to its bigger sister, R-101, which crashed on a French hillside, Oct. 5 and hurled 48 to their deaths, had been completed. Then the findings of the inquiry and a number of other factors would be deliberated upon.

At present the Under-Secretary informed the House, R-100 is being deflated and a full inspection of her entire structure is in progress together with execution of minor repairs later the great envelope will be removed from the framework.

It was revealed the Government has already paid £337,000 to the airship Guarantee Company, builders, on account of the R-100 but the Government has not yet formally accepted the airship. On the satisfactory completion of repairs found to be necessary on her trial flight to Canada, a further and comparatively small amount will become due to the builders, but this amount cannot be definitely estimated.

Watches Unemployment

Agnes McPhail, the only woman member of the Canadian House of Commons, when on a visit to Boston, declared that unemployment is the most important serious situation facing the world to-day.

SIMPSON TO AID WORKLESS MEN

ARRANGES FOR SHELTER.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6 (C.P.). — Complete re-organization of the city's system for caring for the unemployed and unsheltered was advocated by Controller James Simpson, vice-president of the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, in an interview here. He said, particularly was this necessary in the case of unemployed men who had no homes and were turned out on the street each night from places where they managed to find shelter during the daytime.

Following the appearance of a deputation of unemployed before the Board of Control to complain of the manner in which city officials were allotting relief work, Controller Simpson stated he inspected the registration office afterward and found it inadequate, inefficient, disorganized, overcrowded and unsanitary. From 500 to 600 men stood about in a bare room, the Controller said, waiting for jobs. The floor was a litter of papers, dust and scraps. A single lavatory was perpetually occupied and never cleaned, he added.

As a result of his investigations, Controller Simpson said he would place before the City Council a number of recommendations for improvement of registration conditions and to have certain buildings kept open at least the major part of the night so that homeless unemployed will not have so long a period on the streets at night.

CURSE FOLLOWS TOM LONGBOAT

SEEKS MEDICINE MAN'S AID.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6. (CP)—Lying ill in bed here, Tom Longboat, one of the greatest marathon runners of all-time, is certain he is a victim of witchcraft.

The famous Indian runner believes the curse will follow him until he dies or until he finds "strong medicine to overcome its magic spell.

A streak of bad luck has followed Tom during the last few years. First he had a toe crushed, then his leg broken and now a mysterious illness which white man's medicine cannot heal. Shortly he will visit the medicine man at the Six Nations Reserve at Caledonia and if he cannot effect a cure Tom will journey on to the greatest of all medicine men on a New York States reserve, he said, to have them try a cure not only for his illness but for the spell of witchcraft which he believes must be broken before he gets well.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGED TO PIRT

JURY OUT 80 MINUTES.

DAUPHIN, Man., Nov. 6.—Former Royal Canadian Mounted Police Constable Joseph Pirt late yesterday was found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. Sophie Light Ipswich, North Dakota, at a picnic near here, Sept. 1. Pirt was alleged to have shot Mrs. Light while under the influence of liquor, and was charged with murder. Sentence will be pronounced to-day.

Chief Justice D. A. Macdonald turned the case over to the jury shortly after 4 o'clock after two days of evidence. The jurors returned 80 minutes later with the verdict of guilty of manslaughter.

HENRY IS UPHELD IN BANK'S APPEAL

Hearing Continued Into Numerous 1931 Assessment Appeals.

PROPERTY ESTIMATES.

That increases in land assessment made for 1931 taxation by City Assessor W. J. Henry on property occupied by stores on the west side of George street between Hunter and Charlotte streets averaged 10 per cent. and one lot went as high as 36 per cent, was the testimony given yesterday afternoon before the Court of Revision by T. C. Ephgrave, contractor. The Court, under the chairmanship of W. F. Johnston is considering the appeals of the stores, which they claim they have been overcharged on their 1931 assessment.

Judgment was reserved in all the cases until Thursday, when more will be heard.

BURGLARS ENTER STIRLING STORE

Garments Valued at $250 Are Taken From Store of F. Ward.

ENTER SECOND SHOP.

STIRLING, November 6 (Examiner Correspondence). — F. Ward's clothing store and J. Sarles' harness shop were entered by burglars early on Wednesday morning, while an attempt was also made to enter B. Eccleton's grocery store.

Provincial Police are investigating, but are without clues up to the present.

Opening his store for business on Wednesday morning, Mr. Ward found that the plate glass panel in the front door had been cut out. The burglar had obtained entrance by opening the catch from the inside. Garments valued at $250, including overcoats, ties, socks, and sweaters, were taken, while from Mr. Sarles' store two club bags and one motor rug had been stolen.

SUFFERINGS TOLD BY WAR PRISONER

Former R. A. F. Man States Wounds Left Undressed Nearly Week in German Camp.

CLAIMS PRESENTED.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6. — The physical and mental torture suffered in German war prisons by Canadians was resurrected here before Errol M. McDougall, K.C., presiding over the War Reparations Commission, when ex-members of various Canadian units and the Royal Air Force presented their claims for consideration.

Lieut. Gordon Douglas Hunter, formerly of the R.A.F., related how he was shot down with a bullet wound in the back and another in the arm. He was taken from his plane and a field dressing put on his wound. Then he was carted to a hut at the rear of the officers' mess of Baron Von Richthofen's squadron That was on a Sunday.

"I remained there without having my wounds dressed until Friday night. My arm had become green with gangrene and swollen terribly. After that they amputated it in the hospital without anaesthetic. The doctor there told me the wound was only a flesh wound and had it not been neglected I would never have been troubled by it."

Asked about his treatmet while he lay in the hut, Lieut. Hunter continued: "Well, you see, it was just when we got out new battle planes and machine guns. They wanted information. That is why they kept me there. They used to come in often, and question me. Richthofen often came.."

B.C. Govt. Gains Seat In North Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 6.—The Tolmie Government gained a seat from the Liberals in the Provincial Legislature when Alderman Jack Loutet, Conservative, was elected in yesterday's by-election in North Vancouver over Alderman E. LONDON, Eng., Nov. 5 (C.P. Cable) —England defeated Scotland in an Interleague soccer football match at White Hart Lane to-day by 7 goals to 3. The score at half-time was 3 goals to 2 in England's favor. Twenty-five thousand people saw the match.

PILE SUFFERERS

End Your Misery Without Salves or Cutting.

The cause is internal—bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel. The veins are flabby—the bowel walls weak—the parts almost dead. To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles an internal medicine must be used to heal and strengthen the affected parts.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, a specialist after years of study discovered a real internal Pile remedy. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for 1000 patients, with the marvelous record of success in 960 cases, and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID from their own druggist.

Don't waste time on external remedies or think of the pain and expense of an operation until you have tried HEM-ROID. McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store will supply you and guarantee money-back if it does not end all Pile misery.

"Uneasy Lies Head That Is Attached To Nice Fowl Supper," Runs Saying

LINDSAY, Nov. 6. — With Thanksgiving almost here and reports circulating that thieves are after every kind of domestic fowl, rural correspondents are reporting that our barnyard friends are distinctly ill at ease. "Uneasy," so to speak, "lies the head that is attached to a nice fowl supper." While turkeys are being led into believing that they will figure in the Christmas celebration, ducks, geese and chicken are especially worried now.

Chickens, geese and ducks will be plentiful for Thanksgiving, poultry buyers state and the price will not be prohibitive. Owing to the extremely low price of grain, the quality of fowl this year is said to be excellent.

Comparatively few turkeys find their way on to the family tables for the Thanksgiving dinner, as it is a little too early in the season. By the time Christmas rolls around, the monarch of the barnyard fowl is at his best.

Turkeys will be plentiful for Christmas this year, reports say, and the price will be reasonable.

BROKERS' ERRORS IN BOOK ENTRIES ARE BROUGHT OUT

Substitution of Nordon For Noranda Made $250,000 Difference.

Defense Counsel Rebuked.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6. (CP)—Errors which created differences of hundreds of thousands of dollars in the books of Stobie, Forlong and Company, were brought to light by J. M. Singer, K.C., defense counsel yesterday in the trial of Malcolm Stobie, Charles J. Forlong and Gordon Draper on charges of conspiracy to defraud.

One apparent mistake, the substitution of "Nordon" for "Noranda" made a difference of about $250,000. Similar errors such as adding instead of subtracting when transactions were made created smaller differences, all in the books as kept by the firm's own staff.

Owed Vancouver 3,160 Shares

Early in January 1929 the local office owed the Vancouver office 3,160 shares of Noranda, H. C. Dell, accountant stated under cross-examination by Mr. Singer. By January 22 it was 3,510 indicating a delivery o. sale.

Then in January 28 1930 they owed the Vancouver office 9,510 Noranda according to the books. Mr. Singer asked Mr. Dell to account for the difference of 6,000 but he stated he could find no such entry.

However, there was an entry for 6,000 Nordon, which would have evened things up. But the interesting part of it was that Noranda was about $38 then and Nordon was something over 50 cents, which, Mr. Singer remarked would simply mean a difference of a quarter million dollars.

From what had been shown, he suggested, and by similar errors throughout the books, the picture which the Crown had presented from those figures was an altogether imperfect one.

Judge Issues Rebuke

He proceeded to press the point with a list of examples showing various errors in different book entries amounting to smaller sums and made some remark about "continuing this sort of thing for a week," which drew a rebuke from Mr. Justice Jeffrey: "I told you before and I won't tell you again not to make such remarks before the jury" said Mr. Justice Jeffrey.

CAMPBELLFORD ANNIVERSARY

Armistice Service Will Be Staged at War Memorial on Sunday, Nov. 9.

JUDGE HUYCKE TO SPEAK.

CAMPBELLFORD, November 6 (Examiner Staff orrespondence). — Under the auspices of the Campbellford Branch, Canadian Legion, No. 103, B.E.S.L., the twelfth aninversary of Armistice Day will be observed on Sunday, November 9th, when His Honor Judge Huycke of Peterborough will be the guest speaker for the occasion. The service, which is scheduled to be held at the War Memorial at 3 p.m., will be attended b y the local veterans and visiting comrades. Invitations have been extended to branches at Havelock, Warkworth, Hastings, Brighton and Norwood, and it is expected that all returned men from the surrounding districts and towns will participate in the annual observance.

The Legion, under the command of Major J. M. Bygott, will parade at the Armouries at 2 p.m. Accompanied by the band of the Northumberland Regiment, under the baton of Bandmaster W. Pearson, the parade will be formed and will march to Market Square.

At this point it will be swelled by the Public and High School Cadets, under the command of E. H. Greig, principal of the High School, the 1st Campbellford Troop of Boy Scouts headed by Scoutmaster M. H. Sergeant, and the Girl Guides, under Miss G. Payne, and will proceed to the Memorial, where the placing of wreaths and flowers on the War Shrine will commence the service.

All the local ministers will take part in the service, including Rev. N. Clark Wallace, Christ Church, Rev. R. C. Tait, St. John's United Church, Rev. L. M. Smith, Baptist Church, and Rev. J. C. Robinson, of Uxbridge, special preacher at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for the day.

It is requested that uniform be worn if possible, and if in mufti all medals and decorations will be displayed.

Tidbits, Interesting and Humorous CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, November 6 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Owing to the fact that J. G. G. Kerry, of the Quinte Power Company, is unable to attend the adjourned meeting of the Campbellford Court of Revision scheduled for Wednesday, a postponement has been made until Wednesday, November 12.

Mrs. S. White, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lewis for the past few days, left on Wednesday to visit friends in Cobourg.

Visitor: "You seem to have been lucky in your shipwrecks."

Old Sailor: "I'll say I 'ave. Why, once I was marooned on a desert island with a case of whisky and a chap who was a staunch teetotaller."

We are sorry to hear that Mr. N. Stone was forced to undergo an operation on Tuesday, but reports say that he is progressing as well as can be expected.

The delegation from the Town Council to interview the Government in regard to the unemployment relief fund left on Wednesday for Toronto for that purpose. It consisted of Major C. D. Davidson, Reeve J. M. Bygott, and Councillor W. S. Wiggins.

Mrs. Harry Lawson of Toronto left for her home at that place this week after spending a week with friends and relatives in town.

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—With lower prices prevailing, the local butter market took on more activity late Tuesday, but yesterday trading was back to the old level of "slow." On Tuesday, two cars of western brought 31c per pound, but the shipment was fresh made, from leading Manitoba creameries and scored high. New Zealand butter has been sold lately for 31c and in smaller lots than that offered from the west.

Dealers were quoting 30c to 30½c for Ontario, No. 1, and 29c to 29½c for No 2, yesterday, but the slightly better trade of Tuesday had disappeared and the market was again draggy.

Cream buyers reported unchanged prices at 33c for special; 32c for No. 1, and 29c for No. 2, f.o.b., country points.

Cheese

Prices for September, "all grass cheese" were unchanged yesterday at 15¼c to 15½c for new large, 15½c to 15¾c for twins, and 15¾c to 16c for triplets, colored, paraffined, Government graded.

Eggs

Country shippers were offered higher prices for ungraded eggs, delivered, cases returned, at 48c to 50c for extras, 42c to 44c for firsts, 26c to 27c for seconds, and 35c to 37c for pullet extras. This was an increase of 2c on extras, and considerably higher on pullet extras. Large wholesalers have not been receiving many new laid eggs lately and so have been calling on short held supplies to meet the retail demand.

Prices

Brokers were offering new laid eggs at higher prices. They made sales at 53c to 54c for extras, 46c to 48c for firsts, and 30c for seconds, graded, in free cases. Regular storage supplies were quoted at 35c to 36c for extras, and 33c to 34c for firsts, but wholesalers have not been buying very many yet, as they have fair supplies themselves. Wholesalers offered the trade storage extras at 38c and firsts at 36c.

Retailers

Prices to retailers for new laid eggs were 57c for extras in cartons; 55c for extras loose; 48c for firsts loose, and 37c for seconds loose. Wholesalers offered short held supplies at 42c for extras in cartons; 50c for extras loose; 44c for firsts loose, and 35c for seconds loose. Trade has been good and retailers have been able to get as high as 65c for new laid extras.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Nov. 6—Ontario cheese was ¼ of a cent lower here yesterday, being quoted at 13¾c a pound, while Quebec was firm at 13¾ to 13½c. Receipts were 1,188 boxes.

On the butter market Eastern Townships No. 1 pasteurized creamery, in carlots, was quoted at 29¼c to 29½c a pound, with solids 32 cents and prints 33 cents to retailers. Receipts totalled 416 boxes.

Less than carlot prices for new-laid eggs were: extras, 53c to 55; firsts, 45c, and seconds 30c to 32c. Receipts were 2,063 cases, of which 900 were frozen eggs and there were also American eggs going through here for export included in the receipts.

The potato market was 10 cents lower. New Brunswick Green Mountains were selling, ex-track, at 90 cents per 80-pound bag. Prince Edward Island Cobblers were 85 cents and Prince Edward Island Green Mountains 95 cents per 90-pound bag.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, November 6. — Losses of 1⅝c to 1¾c were marked up on the wheat market yesterday as the three futures plunged to new record low levels. Lack of export demand, weakness at Chicago and Liverpool, were the depressing factors here.

Reports that interest on the Continent had increased in Canadian wheat because of the mixed quality of grain from Russia failed to stimulate demand on the local market. From the outset the market headed downward till the low marks were reached. November closed at 66¾c bid, December 67c, and May 73⅛c to 73⅜c.

The shaky market in the futures was ignored on the cash wheat section where prices advanced ¼c. Coarse grains were dull with the exception of oats and barley, which gained ¼c.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—All grain underwent setbacks yesterday to fresh bottom price records, wheat falling furthest and out-doing any parallel since 1906. Reports indicating big crops of wheat in southern hemisphere countries were largely responsible, together with sympathy shown regarding continued weakness of the stock market. Corn displayed relative strength most of the time, but finally gave with wheat although the corn market is but little higher now than last July, when the corn crop was expected to turn out virtually a billion bushels larger than is now being looked for.

Prices Down 1¾ to 3 Cents

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at nearly the day's bottommost level, 1¾ to 3c a bushel under Monday's finish. Corn closed irregular, ⅜c off to ¾c up; oats 1¾c to 2c down and provisions unchanged to a decline of 12c.

CIRCLE RE-ELECTS MRS. E. WOOD HEAD

Financial Report Shows a Total of $455.64 Expended on Relief.

Mrs. E. H. Wood was re-elected president of the Onward and Upward Circle of the King's Daughters, at the annual meeting this week. Mrs. F. L. Roy is vice-president for the coming year. Mrs. Ev Taylor is secretary and Mrs. B. B. Gillespie, treasurer.

The annual meeting was held at the home of Miss M. Rogers, Hunter street, and reports were presented by the treasurer, Mrs. B. B. Gillespie, and the secretary, Miss Elizabeth Scott.

Miss Scott's report was concise and interesting and outlined in detail the various activities of the society during the past twelvemonth. The year was very successful, both as regards work and finance.

29 Members

The total membership is twenty-nine. Nine regular meetings and one special were held during the year.

Books and magazines were sent to Nicholls Hospital and a book shower early in the year replenished the Hospital's bookcase. The annual Christmas cheer baskets were sent out and Mrs. R. R. Hall and her helpers were very faithful in calling on the old people at the Protestant Home. Christmas gifts were also sent to them.

During the year, thirty-five deserving families were visited and substantially helped with clothing, food and fuel. Owing to the kindness of Messrs. Hooper, Jopling and Mason, the president packed and delivered baskets to needy families on Christmas Eve.

Flowers were sent to several members who were ill during the winter.

Funds for carrying on the work were raised by means of teas and sales held at the homes of the members. The Major Bennet Chapter I.O.D.E. contributed the sum of $50.

The report concluded with an expression of thanks from the society to the members who had opened their homes during the year, for teas and sales, and it also thanked the president, Mrs. E. H. Wood, "who has been so interested in the society and so willing to answer the many calls for help during the past year."

This Great Healing Oil Must Banish Eczema and Skin Troubles

Or Your Money Back

Make up your mind to-day that you are going to give your skin a real chance to get well. Never mind what caused it—you've probably been, like a lot of other people, convinced that the only thing to use was an ointment or salve (some of them are very good), but in the big majority of cases these sticky salves simply clog the pores, and the condition primarily remains the same.

Go to McDermid Drug Co., Bond's Drug Store, McDermid & Jury, or any good drug store to-day and get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength).

The very first application will give you relief, and a few short treatments will thoroughly convince you that by sticking faithfully to it for a short while your skin troubles will be a thing of the past.

One bottle we know will show you beyond all question that you have at last discovered one sure way to restore your skin to perfect health.

Remember that Moone's Emerald Oil is a clean, powerful, penetrating antiseptic oil that does not stain or leave a greasy residue, and that it must give complete satisfaction or your money cheerfully refunded.

Business Transacted By Smith Council

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE RELIEVED

A SIMPLE, SAFE, AND RELIABLE WAY THAT CALLS FOR NO UGLY TRUMPETS, PHONES OR OTHER INSTRUMENTS

To have catarrhal deafness is very annoying and embarrassing. People who are deaf in this way are generally mighty sensitive on this subject And yet many catarrhal deaf folks carry around instruments that call attention to their infirmity. Therefore people who are hard of hearing who suffer from head noises or who are actually deaf from catarrhal trouble, will be glad to know of a simple treatment that can be easily made up at home for a few cents cost that is really quite efficient in relieving the disagreeable deafness and head noises caused by catarrh.

From any druggist get one ounce of Parmint (double strength). Take this home and put it into a simple syrup made of ¼ pint of hot water and a little ordinary sugar Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

This treatment should by tonic action reduce the inflammation in the middle ear, that a catarrhal condition would be likely to cause, and with the inflammation gone the distressing head noises, headaches, cloudy thinking and that dull feeling in the ears should gradually disappear. Anyone who suffers from catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises should give Parmint a trial. It is pleasant to take and is quite inexpensive.

REMEMBERING OUR WAR DEAD.

Peterborough citizens are expected to co-operate as usual with the local branch of the Canadian Legion in the community observance of Armistice Day.

On Saturday the annual Poppy Day campaign will be held, and the flower of remembrance will be on sale in the city's streets.

The public is urged to buy these flowers and thus aid the Legion in its work on behalf of returned soldiers and their dependents, and to wear the poppies over the Armistice week-end as a tribute to the memory of the Peterborough soldiers who gave up their lives in the World War.

On Sunday the customary impressive ceremonies will be observed at the cenotaph at the Legion Hall, followed by a memorial service, and citizens generally are cordially invited to be present on both occasions and to participate with the ex-service men in this annual public recognition of the deep debt of gratitude this community owes to the men from Peterborough and district who made the supreme sacrifice.

Fortunately it is that the Canadian Legion should supply the leadership in this most solemn and important duty: their interest in the occasion should be recognized by whole-hearted support from the community in connection with the Poppy Day appeal and with the Sunday ceremonies.

RELIEF FOR THE UNEMPLOYED.

Peterborough's unemployment relief plan, toward the completion of which the Ontario and Federal Governments will contribute $40,000, has already begun to function as the construction of new drainage facilities throughout the city gets under way.

It has been planned to divide the work into shifts so as to give the maximum amount of employment, and as by far the greatest item of expense is the cost of labor, it is hoped the construction work now being launched will take the edge off the unemployment problem and at least provide for those most in need of relief.

Ald. Huffman states that work will be provided for 75 unemployed men, in addition to the Board of Works' regular employees, and while the number mentioned may occasion the comment that it does not loom up very large against a $80,000 appropriation, there is no doubt that the situation will be materially relieved if the more urgent cases are considered in the employment of labor for this municipal-provincial-federal program.

In addition to this work, Peterborough is also to share in the distribution of direct relief inasmuch as the Federal and Provincial Governments are each to pay one-third of the extra cost of relief during the winter, basing their payments on the amounts spent last year as compared with this winter's monthly expenditures.

AN EXCELLENT CHOICE.

In naming John R. Marshall to fill the vacancy on the Board of Education caused by the regretted passing of Joseph John, the members of that body have made an excellent choice, and their selection will meet with general approval.

Mr. Marshall's executive ability, as demonstrated by the success of the industry of which he is the head, and his keen interest in social service and community affairs, should stand him in good stead as a member of the Board of Education, and he will bring to the deliberations of that board qualities that should enable him to be of excellent service to the public.

The Board of Education is one of the most useful as well as one of the most responsible public bodies in the community; its jurisdiction touches the majority of Peterborough homes and effects the future of most Peterborough boys and girls.

So important indeed are the responsibilities of those entrusted with providing the facilities for a thorough education for the new generation that the board needs sound advice and counsel in its decisions, and the new member should measure up to that exacting standard and justify his selection.

THE UNITED STATES ELECTIONS.

The results of the United States elections were admirably summed up by Senator George H. Moses, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, when he said on election night: "This is plainly a raw, a wet and characteristically a Democratic day, and the next two years will contain an amplitude of difficulty for the administration."

In other words, the United States in this test went decidedly Democratic, and pronouncedly against prohibition.

The American political system is worse than a cross-word puzzle to the average Canadian—and we are inclined to suspect a considerable proportion of Uncle Sam's electorate.

Briefly, it may be explained that what the United States was concerned with on Tuesday was the election of a full House of Representatives—435 members in all—a duty that crops up every two years, and the election of one-third of the Senate members, of which hold office for six years.

In addition, of course, there were various referenda on prohibition issues, the election of governors and many officials—in fact, a variety of side shows that helped to complicate the situation.

Although at the time of writing it was not certain that the Democrats would gain control of Congress and the Senate situation indicated a deadlock, the battle of the ballots was on the whole a Democratic triumph that can largely be accounted for because of economic conditions in the United States.

The old theory that an administration facing the electors in a period of depression is certain to be treated roughly ran true to form: the unemployment situation and the industrial and business slump were undoubtedly the most useful allies the Democrats had in Tuesday's elections.

There are a lot of people who would like to pay their debts if it wasn't for their motor cars.—Galt Reporter.

AIRPLANES AND AIRSHIPS.

If any one should suppose that the disaster to the R-101 has put an end to, or even dampened, British enthusiasm for imperial airways projects, such idea is effectually dispelled by a statement just received from the Society of British Aircraft Constructors, London, England. Whatever changes of policy may result from the catastrophe to the big airship there will be no letup in progress. Naturally, as a result of the accident, there is greater interest being shown in heavier-than-air machines, and these are being developed to a surprising extent. Next year it is expected that two huge British flying boats, each with six engines, will be put into service. These will be capable of flying more than a thousand miles without alighting to refuel, and there is accommodation for forty to fifty passengers on each, maximum speeds of 150 to 160 miles an hour being attained. They are, according to the report, "pre-eminently suited to the operation of long routes which lie largely over water, such as those linking the dominions and colonies in the British Commonwealth with Great Britain and with each other." The larger boats, too—with a loaded weight of as much as forty tons—promise a greater degree of seaworthiness than that possessed by smaller craft. As regards the R-101, costly as the experiment has been in life and money, it is not felt that its building has been entirely in vain. Even should the big flying boat and the big land plane be called upon to shoulder the entire burden of air routes without assistance from lighter-than-air craft, the knowledge gained by the construction and operation of the giant airship remains—"much of it of value to the construction of airplanes as well as airships."

The recent flights of Commander Kingsford-Smith, notably his solo flight to Australia, have contributed greatly to the prestige of Empire aviation. Miss Amy Johnson's feat and the many other long-distance solo flights successfully completed in record time have still further enhanced the reputation of heavier-than-air machines. One airplane journey described in this circular about which not so much has been heard is the eight-thousand-mile flight of Mr. R. F. Capareuthus, South African pilot, "probably the most significant achievement of the light plane flyers." It was the quickest trip ever made from England to Cape Town. "The modern British light airplane, therefore, is again proved capable of flying day after day non-stop stages of a thousand miles or so." What the small machine can do to-day the air liner should easily surpass to-morrow. It is felt that the entire length of the African continent will soon be traversed, with regular services, bringing Cape Town nearer in point of time to London "than was Edinburgh little more than one hundred years ago."—Hamilton Spectator.

AN ASTOUNDING STATEMENT.

Leo Bouchard, senior examiner of the Civil Service Commission at Ottawa, made an open charge in an address at Ottawa that will attract attention, and it should. His claim was that there were many applicants for positions on the Civil Service staff who, when writing their qualifying examination, secured others to do the work for them. Mr. Bouchard named Montreal as the point where this practice was being followed to the greatest extent, and intimated that it would be necessary to use the finger print system in order to make certain that the persons writing on the examinations were actually the parties whose names were signed to the papers.

One reads of such a thing and gets a sensation that is nauseating, and it also leads to a surmise as to whether good, wholesome, old-time honesty has vanished from the minds of these people.

There is more to it than that.

If the Civil Service is attracting a class of applicants who will resort to trickery and meanness in order to qualify for positions, what sort of servants is this country going to have if they are actually accepted and placed on the Government payroll?

If they prove themselves dishonest before they are accepted, what are they going to do after they secure positions with the Civil Service?

To our way of thinking applicants who are found unfair in their method of approaching the Civil Service should be ruled out for all time to come.

Mr. Bouchard, we notice, also made the statement that with proper readjustment of the Civil Service, it would be possible to save the country $29,000,000 per year.

That is indeed interesting; that is something about which we want to hear and learn more.

Twenty-nine millions of dollars is a goodly amount of money to be paying out each and every year if there is a way to avoid it.

The interest on that alone in one year would be $1,450,000 at five per cent.

Just what does Mr. Bouchard mean by the "proper readjustments" to which he referred? He is in a position where he must understand the situation; he must know where there is an immense amount of unnecessary service being available which is not being adequately or intelligently used, otherwise he would hardly dare state that it would be possible to save so great an amount as $29,000,000 per year.

The Dominion has no desire to be niggardly in dealing with men and women in its employ, but the country has a right to insist that public business and expenditures in all departments shall be as carefully and as shrewdly handled as those of any competent private business concern.

We do not imagine such a statement as that made by Mr. Bouchard can be allowed to pass unnoticed.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Casualty lists of the United States elections indicate that while political speeches may have gone wide of the mark, the bullets of election day gunmen were on the target.

Governor Roosevelt of New York State had a majority of around 700,000 votes, which was probably enough to convince the other fellow that people did not want him.

Hon. Gordon W. Scott's tenacy of the finance portfolio in Quebec was about the shortest on record, the electors of Huntingdon ending his political career almost before it started.

Premier Bennett has been made a freeman of the city of London. But even that honor does not sell any more Canadian wheat.

It is said that "O Canada" as sung by the Brantford choir at its first English concert was strange to the London audience. It must be admitted that some of the words are strange even to Canadians.

A proposal to allow dogs to travel free on the Aberdeen tramways is, I understand, under consideration. It is denied, however, that certain of the citizens are learning to bark.—Passing Show.

THE SILVER HAWK

By

WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

Late that evening, when Dorn had shaved, and dressed his battered knuckles and eaten supper—a lonely meal after his breakfast with Au ore—he hailed a meti passing in a canoe and sent word for old Luke to come over and see him.

It was no comfort to remember he had whipped and humiliated those two men that afternoon. His triumph was a barren one, with no consequences except indeed that now Carter-Snowdon broe him a personal enmity. Henry Carter-Snowdon had been knocked down, knocked down, by a man's fist, and the devil would be to pay for that.

Looking at the whole situation Dorn reflected. "At first they were hunting all over two provinces for Aurore; now it's narrowed down to my cartographing territory. For a while at first they hadn't the faintest clue to her; now they know I've got her somewhere and they've tracked me down and it's a question of days or maybe hours till they train their guns on me." He thought grimly, "They're an efficient outfit—nailing me there in Edmonton, waiting for me here." This search reminded him of a hunting eagle spiralling in ever-narrowing circles, closing in relentlessly, till its wings folded and it shot down upon its prey.

Their next step would be an attempt to capture him. He was quite safe from a bullet in the back, because he was the only mortal who knew where Aurore was, and they had to have that information. Soft-Shoe's words, "He'll talk for me," were ominous warning. That alley-wolf probably knew methods to loosen the tongue of any man.

With a threat of torture facing him now, Dorn reasoned in hard, practical fashion: "By day, in the Silver Hawk, I can take care of myself. But I can't fly in the daytime and sit up with a rifle across my knees at night. I've got to sleep, and sleep relaxed. If old Luke is on guard out in the spruce shadows, they won't sneak past him; and I'll be safe at night. With a rifle and automatic apiece he and I could put up a wonderful argument. A dynamite fence—wires strung under the moss, this whole area around camp mined—that would help out wonderful too."

Old Luke came, much the better for a few hours' sleep. In the twilight the two of them sat down on the moss in front of the tent. Dorn was aware that he was taking a decisive step. To no other man on earth, excepting Kansas Eby, would he have entrusted the secret of Aurore McNain's whereabouts.

He said in the Jargon: "Luke, I am in trouble. I have many enemies; I need your help. I tell you everything; then you can say yes or no whether want to help me. This wawa that I tell you now is precious. It must never be whispered. Before I tell you . . ."

With those glittering black eyes watching him Dorn took out pipeand tobacco, put a mere pinch in the bowl, lighted it and passed the pipe to the old Beaver. Luke took it and puffed smoke solemnly to the four directions, and handed the pipe back. Dorn knocked the ashes into his palm, scooped a tiny hole at his feet and buried them in Mother Earth: and so between him and the old Beaver Indian stood the ancient oath of secrecy, of good faith. Ashe performed the primitive ritualDorn thought it a strange commentary on white man's honour that this old Indian, who lived in a shack beneath the railroad grade and possessed little on earth save the blanket he wore, would keep his promise inviolate where one white man spoke with a double tongue and another, the richest man in three provinces, would make and break a pledge in the same breath.

He said: "Luke, up north two hundred miles on old Carrier trail is lake. Seven islands in that lake, and up above it is meadow where the foolish-bears" (mountain goats) "come to pasture." Drawing an imaginary map on the moss, he pointed out where wilderness lake and island cabin were. "You kumtux place I mean, huh?"

"Before you born," old Luke said gravely, "I pitch teepee on island of big pines, hunt siam-siam the grizzly in thiose mountains."

"Kloshe, you know. Luke, you once took white man and young girl to lake of seven islands. You remember girl, huh?"

"What name, her? In Bergelot's wawa it mean sunrise, huh?"

"Yes, Aurore—Aurore McNain."

"Do I remember young squaw-siche and her father? . . . Five summers I go with them north to lake; be hunter, guide. I know her when she only this so-high; when she make pies out of mud and papoose-doll out of pine-cone and rag. Over danger places on trail I carry her in these arms."

Dorn thought that surely the old Indian who had known Aurore so well in years past would know something to light up her present trouble. He asked: "You go north with them five summers, huh? How long ago last time?"

"Four Great Suns."

Four years. The signs at the cabin had told him substantially that. Four years since Aurore had gone Outside. He asked: "You hear, know, anything about her since last trip, huh—where she go, what she do, what happen to her?"

Her father had died, Luke said. Old Bergelot had read that news to him out of a paper; and they had often talked of Aurore. But since that last trip they had lost track of her. Every Christmas time she sent them both a present—from Victoria, from Montreal, from New York, Beyond that she had dropped completely out of sight.

Dorn related how Bergelot had brought Aurore across to his tent the night she fled from the Transcontinental, and how he had flown her north to the lake, and about his Edmonton trip, and about her enemies who were closing in upon her.

When he finished, old Luke sat chewing meditatively on a sweet-birch twig. When he finally spoke, he talked at greater length than Dorn had ever before known him to. His former guardianship over Aurore, her return now after these years, seemed to have loosened the strings of his tongue. He ventured an explanation of her flight—an echo of the vague guess Dorn himself had made.

He mused: "She mountain-born. When she very little girl, hair pigtails, she lope bush like Indian and climb trees like lynx kitten and swim like little brown mink, and I teach her see things white man's eyes never see. And I teach her hunt, fish, shoot bow and walk still over forest leaves.

"Then she go away. But always she mountain-born, always love bush. I think Outside in white man's big cities she get caught up like leaf in skookum chuck and whirled along, but always she hear voice of the mountains; and in end, when she get in some terrible trouble, when she not much want to live, when she have sickness no root or herb can cure, then she flee back—home."

Then Dorrn asked him: "You know now that my trouble is, why I cannot find these hiyu enemies alone; will you help me protect her?"

The old Indian deliberated, like one who does not enter a thing lightly. If he promised, the oath would bind him; there would be no drawing back when danger loomed in the days ahead. Finally he made decision, and without reaching his hand to Dorn and with no thought of money payment, he said in croaking guttural:

They sat till late, Dorn and the old Beaver, talking across a handful of fire; and while the wolf howl quavered down from Titan Range and the song of the mountains arose in the night silence, they laid their plans for the struggle that was tightening down to battle.

When he awoke the next morning Dorn found the air too thick and hazy for cartographing. After making old Luke go to sleep, he wrote up his flying log, boxed his precious films for shipment, and went over to the station. There he wired to Edmonton for a machine gun, and procured a box of gelatin dynamite from a meti prospector; and back at camp he fixed brackets in the plane cockpit to mount the gun, and planted a neat dynamite mine around his tent.

At noon he roused old Luke and said: "I fly away now six, seven hours. S'pose you go scouting, find out where enemy camp is, how many men."

After Luke had gone, Dorn made up a bundle of things—the camera Aurore asked for, a few camp articles she had overlooked, a moth-eaten bathing suit of his own, a couple of extra blankets for Aurore—and started westward from Titan Pass.

He had a double purpose in his flight that day: to make his enemies believe that Aurore was hiding somewhere in the western ranges; and after he had led them astray, to fly back northeast to her and visit her and learn definitely from her lips whether old Bergelot's "Can never" was true or false.

He thought: "I know her well enough now to ask her that. And she'll tell me. If it's true, she won't let a man go on with her. She'll want me to know."

He knew also that Aurore would tell him something about herself. During the hours of their tramp she had asked him many question about his babyhood, his wander-years, his flying career. It was her way of deepening and broadening their friendship; and Dorn felt she was preparing to tell him of her trouble.

Sailing along at moderate speed, he noticed, far away in the north, a heavy thunderstorm covering several hundred square miles and creeping eastward. Underneath his ship a ligher cumulus lay in gray lakes and pools, slowly gathering, taking on a darker hue.

Sixty miles west of Titan Pass he let the Silver Hawk fly itself and turned and gazed back along his airy trail. In a moment or two he spotted a small shiny speck hanging in the sky. It grew no bigger, no smaller; but maintained a steady distance. A thousand feet lower than he, it kept dodging in and out of the clouds, taking advantage of them and of the mountains to hide from him.

Reaching out his binoculars, he drew the enemy ship up close. The machine was a big biplane equipped with pontoons—a slow and heavy craft. It might carry a couple of machine guns, but it could never get in range of his swift Silver Hawk.

When Dorn judged he had led his enemy far enough astray, he settled down to the job of shaking them off. Twenty minutes after he pushed the throttle wide open, the shining speck behind him dwindled to a pinpoint and vanished.

To make a sure job of it, he cut abruptly north, whipped over a saw-tooth range into a mountain valley, got down under a blanket of cloud stretching from peak-line to peak-line, hummed north thirty miles into the oblivion of the thunderstorm area, and whirled back east.

Two hours later he sighted the huge star-shaped glacier overlooking the Lake of the Dawn.

CHAPTER XVII
"CAN NEVER"

While Dorn was speeding toward his landmark the glacier, Aurore McNain was sitting on a rock at the west side of her island where the wolf-foot moss was soft and vevety beneath her and where the sun beat down warm and golden and life-giving.

With thunderstorms rumbling in the mountains like distant battles drawing near, the afternoon was hot and sultry; and Aurore had gone swimming in the cool waters of the lake. Her hair flowed down from her shoulders and spread on the moss behind her; she was sitting pensive, her arms about her knees, watching out over the lake where a pair of band-tailed pigeons, graceful and rhythmic as a poem of motion, tilted and volleyed in their airy mating dance.

Aurore was thinking very earnestly, not of what lay between her and Henry Carter-Snowdon, for the past was irrevocable now, and she considered herself safe at present from pursuit, but of a new crisis, come upon her all suddenly—her relation with Jim Dorn. Since yesterday when she saw unmistakably that Dorn wanted her, she had been trying to force herself to a decision which dismayed her and from which she shrank, but which she felt driven to by all Jim Dorn had done for her and by a tender sympathy for his happiness.

She thought: "I must shield Jim. Whatever I do I've got to spare Jim. When he speaks of a terrible wreck he calls it a 'crack-up,' and that's what this will be to him if I let it drift on and he comes to like me—more than he does."

At first Aurore had been afraid of Dorn, because he seemed so very stern and strong. A sword, Dad Dergelot had called him, and probably he was a sword to other people. She still trembled to think how severe his standards were and how terrible his judgment of her would be, but she was no longer afraid of him personally, for she knew that the power was not his, but hers. She was more afraid of herself, and puzzled by her own feelings. It bewildered her, it was a new and startling experience, to remember that yesterday when she realized he wanted her, she was not frightened, as she should have been,and did not think the less of him for it, and did not want to send him away.

Certain incidents between them lingered in Aurore's memory with an intensity out of all proportion to their significance. She kept re-living those moments when Dorn had lifted her with one arm into the Silver Hawk that first night and had raised her so lightly and easily to peer into a humming bird's nest. She thought: "But it's not just his strength; it's his character. And that's why—because he's got character and would never let himself want a girl unless he loved her—that's why I mustn't allow this to drift."

She accused herself: "I'm a coward. I ought to have told him yesterday. I did hint to him; I said I wanted to keep his respect as long as I could; and he wouldn't believe me."

FATAL PROSPERITY.

"Nothing succeeds like success" is an oft-quoted maxim, but one full of error and danger to the man who is influenced by it. Prosperity in business has been the ruin of many a man. A speaker, in addressing a large audience recently, said of a certain man: "He had the misfortune of being very prosperous." Prosperity has made more moral derelicts in our world than any other agency. Poverty has not one-half the dangers to face that wealth has. A firm may have first-class rating commercially, and be morally bankrupt.

The same thing can be said of an individual. A man may be in a business or a profession and make nothing out of it but money. Anyone who has made only money out of his undertakings has made the highest kind of a failure of life. The laborer who works for wages only and the employer who plans for profits only are both victims of a sad delusion.

What To-day Means To You

"SCORPIO."

If November 6th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a.m. to noon, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. and from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. The danger periods are from 8 a.m. to 9:15 a.m. and from 2:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Astrological influences on this date are not of a stimulating nature, and there will be a tendency to let things drag, and the day's rightful business may be postponed. "To-morrow is an old deceiver and his cheat never grows stale." Health should be specially guarded.

Children born on this November 6th will be brilliantly successful as boys and girls, but, as with most precocious children, their adult achievements will fall flat in comparison. They should be encouraged to go in for athletics, as they will always want their noses stuck in a book.

You are a very non-talktative being, and although not an ungrateful one, your silence is often understood. Silent appreciation is always inferior in quality to spoken appreciation. You have an inconspicuous character, and court neither popularity nor unpopularity. You belong to the vast army of clean and sane and temperate livers—the best and most dependable citizens of your country, (if not the most conspicuous.—There is much stubbornness revealed in your character, and you often hang on to an idea long after you should let go of it. This trait is probably your weakest one. You hate to outwardly admit that you are ever in the wrong, although your errors may be staring you in the face.

You are morally very upright, almost a prude—the animalism in your nature is pretty well conquered. You are capable of very sincerv, clean emotions, as expressed in your love for children and for animals. You are always sorry for the "under dog," and go to his assistance if it be possible. Men born on a November 6th are fitted for agricultural pursuits, and should never attempt to lead sedentary existence. You will make good where patience and industry are essential. You are not a promoter or a speculator, and although the fruits of your efforts may be modest, they will always be sure. You are too retiring to make friends easily, but you are very loyal to those few whom you have.

Stage Fight With Thugs

In a hand-to-hand tussle with a thug carrying a toy pistol, James Segel, above, of Toronto, Ont., fought off the intruder, who made his escape. Mary Ostuk, also above, grocery store proprietress, threw two pop bottles at an armed Chinese bandit and put him to flight, only, however, after he had taken a few dollars.

SCHOOL PUPILS ARE INOCULATED

Two Hundred and Eighty-nine Guarded Against Diphtheria in Public Schools of City.

NO INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

Dr. A. W. McPherson, M.D., school medical officer in his report to the Board of Education, states that, "we have completed our inoculation against diphtheria with the exception of a few pupils who were absent at the time we visited the schools". In one day 289 pupils were inoculated, distributed as follows:

The absence of diphtheria among the school population tells its own story, is Dr. McPherson's brief comment on a very satisfactory condition which demonstrates the effectiveness of incoulation. In the past month one diptheria carrier was found attending school and was excluded. No cases of infectious disease among the school population were noted whatsoever.

Of 451 children who were examined by the doctor and school nurses, 127 were found to be suffering from major defects. They are classified as follows:

Enlarged tonsils, 100; abscessed teeth, 28; permanent and decayed teeth, 10; underweight, 17; defective vision, 6; defective hearing, 3; defective speech, 4; enlarged thyroid, 3.

Voice of the People

IMPROVING THE CITY.

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I see the city is going to spend some money to relieve the unemployment. Well, as Andy would say, "that sounds good to me." Well, here is the "propolition." How about building a real ladies' lavatory and a real gent.'s lavatory? These buildings have been sorely needed a long time, and I hope this "propolition" will be "checked and double checked."—Yours truly,

PROGRESS.

THE SALARY GRAB

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—Any man who works for the public or anybody else for nothing is either a fool or a knave and is worthy of his hire.

Toronto is furnishing an instance of managing the business of a large city at very low salaries for the men doing it and it would serve the people of Toronto jolly well right if as has been done in the past capable men dropped out just when they were needed most.

Locally, Alderman Tuggey, who is a good, earnest man goes back on all the principles of work and wages when he grudges aldermen a meagre pay for work actually done. Peterborough has been handled with great skill these last few years and so good a judge as the famous artists, Kathryn Wallis, told me lately that Peterborough is really beautiful.

I am not venturing to speak for people who would take high pay for doing nothing or less but for people who are not afraid who have no little nests to feather and whose good works (if a little expensive) are worthy of all praise.

The people, of course, there as elsewhere positively hate anybody who excites their jealousy. They want men who like pet cats can be petted or kicked out (and will stand for it) as the people in their stupenduos numbers feel most inclined to.

However, it is brains not numbers that rule the world and make things go. Numbers furnish employment. That is the best they can do. "Muzzle not the ox that treadeth out the corn."

J. H. Burnham.

High Sea Holds DO-X In Amsterdam Harbor

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Nov. 6 — (A.P.)— A gale which kicked up a fairly choppy sea outside the Zuider Zee held the DO-X, Giant German flying boat, at Amsterdam today and prevented continuation of its flight to Southampton.

The Do-X, with 16 persons aboard, came her yesterday from Altenrhein, Switzerland, where its home hangar is located, making the trip in five hours and 20 minutes.

The plane is anchored in Schollingwoude Basin.

PLOUGHMEN COMPETE IN SCARBORO.

TORONTO, Ont., November 6 (C. P.). — Ploughmen from many parts of Ontario competed yesterday in Scarbara Township's 100th annual ploughing match. The sweepstake prize for the best ploughman on the field was captured by J. Tran of Whitevale.

CAR RUNS AWAY—MINER KILLED

NOTTINGHAM, Eng., Nov. 6.—One miner was killed and 36 injured in the derailment of haulage cars in the Moor Green Colliery which got out of control and ran down a hill. Six of the injured were in a serious condition.

REPUBLICANS NEED ONE SEAT FOR MAJORITY

Balance Being Decided in Minnesota Where Farmer-Labor is Entered.

Democrats Lead Elsewhere.

Possibility of One Party Outnumbering Other By Lone Vote in Senate.

(By Cecil B. Dickson A. P. Staff Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—With the victory of Representative Selvig in the ninth Minnesota district, the Republicans have captured 217 house seats, on the basis of late returns, or one less than a majority.

Only one more seat is needed by the Republicans to obtain 218 seats or a bare majority. A second Minnesota seat, that in the tenth district, is still undecided between a Republican and a Farmer-Labor.

Democrats Lead In Kentucky

The Democrats are leading in the six undecided districts in Kentucky and the defeat of Representative Langley in a Republican stronghold in that State appears likely on the basis of late returns.

Senator Robison was trailing the Democrat, M. M. Logan, for the Kentucky Senatorial seat, while Senator Schall, Republican, was cutting down the first lead established by Einar Holdale, the Minnesota Democrat.

Although the Republicans apparently have retained House control, the Democratic National Committee announced to-day it would refuse to accept the unofficial returns as final in the close districts in Illinois, Indiana and Pennsylvania. The committee has assumed the attitude of awaiting the final outcome on the basis of the official count.

House Line-Up

Republicans	217
Democrats	210
Doubtful	7
Farmer Labor	1

It requires 218 seats for a majority in the House of 435 members.

In view of the close races in Kentucky and Minnesota for the Senate, the possibilities are that one party will outnumber the other by one vote.

Should the Democrats capture both undetermined seats, they would have 48 seats, the Republicans 47, and Farm Labor, 1.

PIVOT ISSUES REMAIN FIRM

Trading Tends to Expand on Declines and Contract on Advances at New York.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 6.—(CP)— The stock market braced itself against further selling flurries to-day, and even made a few half hearted attempts to push forward.

The drop into new low ground yesterday appeared to have ceased considerable jettisoning of weakened marginal accounts in the early hours of to-day's session, but only the utilities and specialties were driven much lower. Pivotal industrials were firmly supported. Trading tended to expand on declines, and contract on advances, however.

In the utilities, American Water Works, Consolidated Gas and American Power and Light sagged 2 to 3 to new lows for the year, and nearly a score more recorded new minimum prices with smaller losses, but pronounced rallying tendencies appeared in afternoon. Several of the rails also sagged into new low ground, and this group showed little inclination to recover. Such industrials as American Can, U.S. Steel, Dupont, Loews, and National Biscuit sold up 1 to 2, and Allied Chemical more than 3. Burrough's mounted 3, Eastman dropped 3½, then recovered. American Telephone touched a new low at 190 7-8, then rallied. Call money was a little firmer in undertone. The official rate held at 2 per cent, but outside offerings at concessions were scarcer than they have been of late, reflecting the credit requirements which are usually reflected a few days after the first of the month.

The Bank of England made no further reduction in its discount rate of 3 per cent, although there has been some talk of it in London. Governor Harrison of the New York Federal Reserve bank is now on his way to Europe, and Wall Street expects that any chance in the Bank of England rate would now be deferred pending his interview with Governor Norman.

Workless Try Vainly To See Mayor Wemp

TORONTO, Ont., November 6 (C. P.). — Early to-day between two and three hundred unemployed marched to the City Hall with the intention of waiting on the Mayor and Board of Control. As they were about to enter a number of constables emerged from the building and ordered them away. The Deputy-Chief told the men that he sympathized with them, but explained they were unable to do anything for them. The gathering took the advice of the Deputy-Chief and returned to the employment office where the city is looking after them.

GOLF NOTES.

A leading Toronto paper only last week editorially referred to this new ball in a most misleading manner as coming into use next year in Canada. Personally, almost every day I receive letters from all parts of Canada asking about this new ball and where it can be secured. The superintendent of the public parks, Winnipeg, which runs two courses and sells balls by hundreds of dozens, writes asking at once for authoritative information.

This new larger and lighter ball authorized by the U.S.G.A. is not recognized at all in Canada or Great Britain. The 1.62 ball, which has been the official ball in Canada for the past five years, will still be the official ball in 1931. Canadian golfers, clubs and professionals need not worry at all about buying their supplies for next year.

I do hope sporting editors of newspapers throughout Canada will prominently announce this fact, as it is causing a great deal of unnecessary worry and anxiety. To reneat—the 1.62 ball as used throughout Canada the past five years, will be the official ball again in 1931 as authorized by the Royal Canadian Golf Association. There is absolutely no change. The action of the U.S.G.A., in regard to the larger and U.S.G.A., in regard to the large lighter ball next year has no significance whatever in Canada.

YOUTH SENT TO ASYLUM

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Nov. 7. (CP) Harold Ickey, 25, of Escott township, has been arrested in connection with recent fires in that district, after being examined by physicians he was committed to the Ontario Hospital for the insane.

Winnipeg Review

Following an erratic trend in the early stages the market yesterday worked to lower levels, with the class of support throughout of an indifferent character. Short covering followed a temporary decline at the opening bell, largely because of firmness shown in the Chicago market at this time. Political changes in the United States caused some uncertainty but the southern market did not hold so well later on, with the result that local support was withdrawn from our market and prices went lower.

Cables indicated that Liverpool refused to follow the late upturn here Wednesday and export business was the same old story, namely, just thin and scattered. Weakness in the Buenos Aires market indicated that little anxiety was felt there as to rush developments and news from Australia was also favorable, with one private report mentioning an estimated crop of 210,000,000 bushels.

Country wheat marketings yet again exceeded the 2,000,000 mark and hedging pressure was therefore a factor, although offerings from this source were not oppressive. The large Canadian interest was credited with liquidation in the May on the early upturn.

The cash market was quiet with only a fair demand for certain grades of round lots hard to obtain and bids on these grades were ½ better. Offerings were only moderate and holders generally appear to be satisfied with their position but holders chiefly are elevator interests and who have a full carrying charge assured. There was no change in the flour situation. Winnipeg futures closed near the bottom for the day showing a loss of 1 5-8 to 1⅞ from the previous close, new low levels being established on all futures.

Coarse Grains.—These markets followed the trend of wheat but there was not much selling pressure in evidence, while the demand insignificant. The cash markets continue quiet with only the odd car changing hands.

An Ex-Constable.

Gallen is an ex-constable of the old Saskatchewan Provincial Police, and is one of the outstanding witnesses for the Crown in the list of accusations levelled in the Legislature last session against the former Liberal Government and now being sifted by the Royal Commission.

According to Col. Gregory's testimony, Gallen had been receiving his witness fees at the gate of $4 a day. He was entitled to 69 days' fees, making a total of $276, but had actually drawn $19 over this sum.

In the absence of Gallen no other witnesses were available and no evidence could be taken.

Still Operator Is Remanded For Week

LINDSAY, Nov. 6 (Special to The Examiner).—William Baldwin, a native of Laxton township, Victoria county, but who has been residing in Chicago, faced Magistrate Jordan yesterday with operating a still in his native township. He was remanded on bail for a week.

Baldwin's arrest was not without its thrills. He was found early yesterday morning hidden under the bed, which was occupied by his wife and daughter, after the latter had told the officer that they knew nothing of his whereabouts. He was clad in an old-fashioned nightshirt, and when he was located he informed Officer Porter that if he (the officer) were in Chicago he could pull nothing off like this.

Baldwin's son is also charged with operating the still.

INTER-LISTED ISSUES STRONG

General List Lacks Trend With Losses and Gains Evenly Divided at Noon.

NORANDA UP QUARTER.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6.—(CP)— Interlisted issues were slightly firmer in a dull forenoon mining session to-day, but general list lacked trend, losses and gains being about evenly divided at noon.

Noranda strengthened a quarter to $15.50. Nickel regained an early recession to stand unchanged when taken, and other base metal stocks were holding fairly well. Lindsleys were still under light fire, however, Falconbridge and Sudbury Basin easing five each to $125 and 60, respectively and Sherritt Gordon 3 to 85.

Home Oil displayed the only softness in the oil section the price declined another 10 to $2.10. Nordon recovered 3 to 64 and East Crest 4 to 70. Acme Gas, Mayland and Calmont also registered small advances.

Hollinger and Teck Hughes were off 5 each from last night at $5.80 and $5.90 respectively, but rest of the golds were steady. Lake Shore moved up a quarter to $21.50, and Wright Hargreaves and Kirkland Lake gold were selling a cent or so higher to midday.

TO ADDRESS SUPPER CLUB

The Y.M.C.A. Friday Night Supper Club meeting, commencing at 6.15, will this week be addressed by Charles E. Cooke, advertising manager of the De Laval Company. A large attendance is requested, as Mr. Cooke has an important message to deliver.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND BRIEFS

A SPECIAL SERVICE TO THE EXAMINER

Shareholders of Canadian Distillers may stand to benefit from the most recent election in the United States if the trend is to be taken as a vote for the repeal of the 18th amendment. Should the 18th amendment be repealed it would open a large market for the products of Canadian companies and increase the exports of Dominion products to that country. In recent years the distillers have been steadily increasing their inventories of raw spcies until to-day there are many gallons included in the assets of such companies. These inventories are carried on the books at from 50 to 75 cents per gallon which is considerably less than the price to be obtained in the event of an increased demand. Canadian companies are in a position to not only supply the completely manufactured product by the most essential ingredient and a change in prohibition laws of the United States would open an immediate market that could well be supplied from the stocks on hand in this country.

Level Sales Volume.

Since the close of their fiscal year, June 30, Tooke Bros., Ltd., sales volume has been maintained at a normal level. The months of July and August are always quieter months for the company's lines, but it is stated a substantial increase has taken place since that time. For the month of October sales were practically on a par with those for the same month of 1929. The company has up to the present kept its plant operating on full time production and the management is confident this condition will prevail right through until the early months of next year, when it is hoped general business conditions will begin to show improvement. According to officials, the principal change affecting their business at present is the small margin of profit being realized on business handled this is a result of more intense competition in their field due to falling off in buying power of the general public, which has accompanied the general trade depression.

Canadian stocks have given another demonstration of their ability to resist the reactionary trend on Wall Street and in Wednesday's session held well in the face of general weaknesses in New York. Selling of securities in the American market was particularly true of the reaction in the public utility group. Some brokers to-day express the opinion that the result was not a surprise, but merely presented an opportunity for the bears to attack.

The line of least resistance since early in Sept. has been downward in New York but here reactions have been stubbornly resisted and the Canadian markets have given a much better performance selling have halted off considerably and distress liquidation was completed some weeks ago. Security holders to-day are not easily disturbed and there was no reason to expect Canadian stocks to sell off because of an American election. Another factor in Wall Street is selling to establish income tax losses and this as well does not apply to the Dominion. In fact there are several conditions influencing the American markets that can well be ignored by the Canadian boards. Prices for most issues are down to a level that fully discounts decreased earnings conservative and the type of buying has changed from that of speculation to investment, with a consequent reduction in the floating supply.

Unwarranted optimism is as dangerous a mood as unwarranted pessimism. In fact the first condition induces the second as hope fades and reaction follows. At times like these when national and world industrial pulse-beat is low, it takes coverage to face the fact and speak frankly, especially when all the bally-hoo is being raised in both this country and the United States concerning the new era of prosperity that already is upon us. C. H. Carlisle proved himself such a man of courage at the annual meeting of Good Year Tire and Rubber Company yesterday. There are those who accuse Mr. Carlisle of pessimism of painting a picture of gloom, but only a person with a calm confidence and fact in this country and an underlying optimism could have spoken as did Mr. Carlisle, he spoke for the benefit of an intelligent and thoughtful people, for those willing to listen and appraise, not for the impressionist, the headline hunter who whoops it up one day and sits in gloomy despair the next. It is time we realized not by veneering the unsightly, but by enquiring into conditions can we hope for permanent improvement.

President Carlisle told Goodyear shareholders that in his opinion 1931 will see a slight improvement in business which will be permanent, but he did not look for a rapid improvement. Improvement in Canada will be dependent upon world conditions. He spoke of the dangers of the dole and expressed the belief that capital should shoulder the responsibility of working out means to take care of unemployment. One cause of unemployment Mr. Carlisle stated to be the multiple control of capital and this he thought was working to the disadvantage of society.

Bowling Alley Gossip By Pin Boy

All City League pin busters are reminded that to-night the teams will perform beginning at 9.30 instead of at 8 o'clock, and a full turnout of players is requested.

Fred Hickey's amazing performance last week in this league in which he set up a new low record has been puzzling his team-mates, but the only solution that presents itself is the fact that Bud-Weese failed to appear for the game, and the absence of his side-kick apparently worried Hickey to such an extent that a gutter ball was the only one which he could deliver properly. However, this week's battle may produce a reverse.

Some of the delicate little 200 pounders who hammer the maple in the league down on the K. of C. alsies, slide so far over the foul line that the pin boys are getting set to check a flying tackle.

A feature bowling battle was witnessed at the K. of C. Alleys on Monday night, when Joe Sharpe's team tangled with Harry Ranger's outfit, the latter coming through in impressive style to amass a three-game total of 3,417 pins, winning 6 points. The following are the scores:—

H. Ranger	191	261	259—	711
B. McGee	231	270	197—	698
V. O'Connell	235	280	244—	759
W. Crary	179	162	202—	543
V. Jones	221	205	280—	706
	1057	1178	1182—3417
J. Sharpe	190	182	167—	539
S. Shaughnessy	216	195	208—	619
G. Rutherford	184	240	185—	609
C. Shaughnessy	242	199	232—	673
Macpherson	—	181	220—	401
V Rutherford	248	...	...—	248
	1080	997	1012—3089

Dr. Crough's heavy hitters contined their winning rampage this week by trundling the pins for a 6—2 win over Letellier. Dave Grant with 242, 280, 155, and Bud Weese with 247, 198, 230, were the sluggers for the winners, while Tom Curvin was the only threat on the opposition, securing 243, 217, 274.

Consistent bowling scored an 8-point win for McCabe this week over Gilliece, although both the captain and Doris on the losing side were hitting the high spots, making singles of 262 and 261 respectively. Bill Prindible's 266 single was high for the winners.

Crowley's optimists took another trimming this week, Meagher's team being the winners, taking every game for an 8-point gain. The following singles were outstanding: Donovan, 275; Guerin, 271; Meagher, 262.

John Patton Suffers Heavy Fire Damage

LINDSAY, Ont., Nov. 6 (Special to Examiner).—A serious fire, caused by the explosion of a lantern, occurred on the farm of John Patton, who resides near the village of Cambray, on Wednesday night at six o'clock. Mr. Patton's large barn, with the season's crop, three horses and farm implements, were totally destroyed. Very little insurance was carried. The fire spread with great rapidity, the fire fighters simply devoting their efforts towards preventing the fire from reaching the dwelling.

TORONTO STOCKS EASE SLIGHTLY

Declines Mostly Fractional in Extent With Issues Firming at Lower Levels.

WALKERS STRONGER.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6.—(CP)— Stocks eased off at the opening on Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, following the trend of New York, then firmed at the lower level. Declines were mostly fractional in extent. Nickel, Noranda, Brazilian, Ford of Canada, Massey-Harris, Power Corporation and most of the oils were selling fractionally lower at midday. Page-Hersey went back over most of the ground picked up this week, C.P.R. also showed a loss.

Walkers continued firm at 7 or better. Bell Telephone sold up ½ point to 148, F.N. Burt gained one and Supertest at 26 was up one.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARTHA SUTTON

One of the oldest residents of the city, Mrs. Martha Sutton, aged 92, passed away early this morning at her late residence, 22 Aylmer street, after a short illness. Mrs. Sutton was born in Omemee, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Laidley. For the past twenty-five years she had lived in Peterborough, and was a member of St. James' United Church.

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 1:30 from 22 Aylmer street with Rev. Moorehouse officiating. Interment will be in St. John's Cemetery, Ida.

COPPER COMPARISONS.

TORONTO Nov. 6 (Special to The Examiner)—Seekers after funds for additional development of even the more advanced prospects report slightly improved interest but little actual encouragement in the way of cash. Members of the fraternity who formerly almost invariably had a few extra dollars with which to take a chance on anything that looked good are holding off for some turn in events. Improvement in general business conditions might change the picture, it is thought and clearing up of the brokerage situation will undoubtedly facilitate forgetfulness of other ventures and leave the road open for renewed efforts. Temporary curtailment of Consolidated Smelters' operations on two northwestern Ontario base metal prospects is indicated in stoppage of exploration on the Anderson Spence and Beaver Mountain groups it is understood this is not indicative of poor exploration results but rather of the unfavorable situation in metal markets. Both properties are being retained under option by the company, it is believed.

The effect of present prices on the higher cost copper producers is evident from the statement of Calumet and Hecla for the third quarter which shows a deficit of $217,443 compared with a profit of $1,687,899 in the corresponding period of 1929 and $847,638 in the same quarter of 1928. At that the average copper price in the third quarter was considerably higher than the current quotation difficulty experienced in disposing of production is another factor which is affecting earnings probably as much as the low price.

Actual copper buying continues good on foreign and fair on domestic account though in neither market are producers willing to sell all that fabricators desire to purchase. Little change is reported in the production situation and whether producers will curtail output voluntarily ore whether the price must go down to a level that will force curtailment is still problematical much apparently depends on what Katanga, the important Belgian Congo producer is willing to do.

It is understood Nordon Corporation recently closed negotiations with Cities Service company to drill another well, known as Rio Bravo, approximately four miles south and six miles east of the Button Willow well in the San Joaquin valley, California, now being drilled by the former company. The Rio Bravo property consists of about 6,200 acres. Nordon's agreement with Cities Service is on a cash and half interest basis.

The museum of the University of Manitoba has been presented by Consolidated Tin Corporation with a beryl crystal from 10 to 12 inches in diameter and two feet in length. The crystal, an unusually good specimen weighing in the neighborhood of forty pounds, was found on the Acman claim on Beryl Bay, Bernic Lake.

FINE POTATO CROP IN U. S.

Official Surveys Provincial Districts and Predicts Most Valuable Yield Since 1926.

KENTVILLE, N.S., Nov. 6.—Nova Scotia will this year, produce its finest crop of potatoes in the last four years, in the opinion of Fred B. Kinsman, federal superintendent of illustration stations for this province. "The quality is exceptionally good; they are sound, dry and clean as a general rule all over the province," he said after an inspection of the potato districts.

Mr. Kinsman thought the potato growers of Nova Scotia would receive more for their product this season than any year since 1926. From 65 to 75 per cent of the crop had already been marketed, he estimated, potatoes of exceptionally high grade, and practically all of them were sold at an average price of approximately $2.25 a barrel. At the present the price was $1.65 a barrel, but considerable improvement was expected. The late crop, he said, was turning out better than expected and of remarkably good grade.

It was generally admitted, Mr. Kinsman said, that the Nova Scotia crop would show a slight decrease from the 1929 harvest of 2,872 000 cwt. Leading growers doubted the accuracy of the recent Dominion fruit branch estimate of an increase of 200,000 cwt. A total yield of 47,262,400 cwt. for all Canada was expected, an increase of approximately 10 per cent over last year.

The last shipment had gone to Cuba, on account of the duty coming into effect November 1.

In Prince Edward Island it was estimated that 70 per cent of the crop, mature and of excellent quality, had been already harvested, and that the total yield would be 4,500,000 cwt., a gain of approximately 700,000 cwt., over 1929. New Brunswick's crop was estimated at 4,653,000 cwt., practically the same as last year.

EXTREME CASE OF FIDGETS.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 6 (C.P.).—Sinclair Lewis, first American author to win the Nobel prize for literature, had an extreme case of the fidgets after word of the award had been cabled from Stockholm.

Though in 1926 he turned down the Pulitzer award, given him for his book, "Arrowsmith," Lewis said he would accept the Nobel prize. He will sail for Sweden early in December to receive the award for his book, "Babbitt."

HON. GEO. HENRY

In an interview with Mr. Lancaster in his newspaper office at Havelock yesterday The Examiner obtained a perspective of the line of the new Peterborough-Tweed-Ottawa highway which amplifies details already published.

One interesting aspect is the Norwood diversion as planned by the Department's engineers. It will extend from the east end of Peterborough Street in Norwood parelelling the C.P.R. on the south side of the railway to Logan's crossing, a distance of three miles. The contract for this section has been let to the Raynor Construction Company of Toronto who have just finished the Trenton-Wooler pavement and also a job near Brockville. Mr. Lancaster stated that the company was expected to arrive on the Norwood ground this week.

This diversion from the old road between Norwood and Havelock presents obvious traffic advantages. In the first place it avoids the dangerous C.P.R. crossing on the east side of Norwood, and it eliminates various corners on that section.

Entirely New Road

The road as mapped out by the government's engineers first crosses property owned by the Finlays of Norwood and presently reaches farm lands, fields and clumps of woods which it will traverse on the south side of the C. P. R. This will necessitate the construction of an entirely new roadbed. The highway runs close to the railway, and its width of 66 feet thereby traverses farms along their railway frontage instead of cutting across them with serious impairment of their values.

The government will have to purchase the right of way in the usual manner, and one of the factors arising in the equation is the access of a provincial highway to these farm properties. It is expected that should prices for the right of way be considered exorbitant, the government will have to resort to expropriation, by which values will be determined by arbitration.

Logan's crossing on the C.P.R. is the only one between Norwood and Havelock, and is familiar to motorists who have traveled that road. According to the engieners' plans, the highway diversion returns to the present road immediately east of Logan's. Thus, two dangerous crossings would be eliminated; the one at Norwood and also Logan's. The highway then continues easterly to "Old Havelock" and straight on towards Marmora, without turning north through Havelock village.

However, no contract has been let for the link east of Logan's crossing, and it is understood that Hon. Mr. Henry's ispection visit to-day was largely to familiarize himself with the several alternatives that are presented in that section.

Problem at Tweed

The highway continues due east to Marmora and Madoc, and beyond that point the route has been held up by conflicting local interests. Some persons want it to be deflected to pass through Actinolite, but that direction would isolate Tweed, and residents of that town are contending for a place on the map of No. 7 highway.

Mr. Lancaster expressed the opinion that the Peterborough-Madoc link would be completed within four years, and Ottawa would be reached probably between 1940. This may be mostly a personal estimate, and some of the problems along the way suggest that the Havelock editor and legislator may be a little too sanguine.

Eventually No. 7 highway will be just as good as No. 2 along the lake front. Miles of it in eastern Ontario but west of Peterborough, are already paved.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. John Riddell and daughter, Jean, have returned home after a trip to points in the southern States.

The Sunday school session of St. Andrew's United church was held in the church auditorium on Sunday morning, owing to the thorough renovation program being carried out in the basement, it is hoped, however, that the work will be completed in time to use the regular class rooms on Sunday, November 9.

Dr. H. A. Turner arrived home on Saturday evening after a two weeks' absence during which a medical convention at Minneapolis was attended, and a visit was made to the Mayo Brothers' clinic at Rochester, Minn.

The Women's Guild of St. Thomas' church held a successful sale of home baking in Dr. H. A. Turner's store on Saturday afternoon, the service of afternoon tea being also a popular feature. Over forty-five dollars was realized from the sale, practically everything being disposed of by early evening. Mrs. R. H. Scott is secretary-treasurer of the Guild, which is an organization within the W. A. of St. Thomas' church; a number of willing helpers assisted with the sale.

The diamond jubilee of the Carmel United church will be held on Sunday, November 9, at 2.30 p.m., with Rev. G. S. Sisco, of Port Hope, chairman of the Cobourg Presbytery, as the special preacher. The Men's Bible Class of St. Andrew's church, Millbrook, will lead in the service of song. The history of the work at the Carmel appointment will be rehearsed during the Sunday service, the information being supplied by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D.

A service in the interests of boys' work will be held on Sunday, November 9, at 7 p.m., in St. Andrew's United church. Reeve P. Stinson, who is a member of the Durham County Boys' Work Board, presiding. There will be a boys' choir, and the service will take the nature of a platform meeting, with addresses by more than one speaker. This gathering is now an annual affair, and of wide interest.

MISSING FARMER FOUND BY POLICE

Trail of Dutton Man Led Officers Across Ontario in Search Month Long.

HAD MANY GOOD JOBS.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 6. (CP)—A Province-wide police search ended last night when John H. Wilson, 45-year-old Dutton farmer, who had been missing from his home for almost a month, was located on a farm near Owen Sound. The missing farmer, who is suffering from loss of memory, led Provincial officers a merry chase during his month of wandering, his trail leading through a dozen Western Ontario centres.

Wilson was to-day being detained by the Provincial Police at Owen Sound, and arrangements are being made to return him to his wife and family. Owen Sound authorities propose to take him to Guelph, where he will be met by relatives, Provincial Police here were told.

Police here learned that Wilson has worked at good jobs on farms in widely separated sections since he dropped from sight on October 11 last. He had left home, telling his wife that he would be back in half an hour, but failed to return.

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful of powder or four tablets in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Agriculture Parley Is Called For Nov. 17

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 6.—New departures in Canadian methods of agriculture are expected to develop from a conference to be held here November 17 and 18 between Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, and Ministers of Agriculture of the various Provinces. The conference has been called in the hope of formulating a national agricultural policy. Not only will the views of the Provincial Ministers be presented at the conference, but suggestions from the various agricultural colleges will also be put forward. Major Weir has already been in communication with deans of colleges throughout Canada, inviting them to express their opinions.

The discouragement suffered by farmers in marketing their crops had confirmed the minister in his determination to evolve an effective national agricultural policy, according to department officials.

Governors-General Choice Is Discussed

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 6.—(CP)—The Times to-day discussed appointment of Governors-General, one of the matters which has received consideration of the Imperial Conference and concluded that one of the few remaining formal links binding the Empire would be severed or at least weakened, if Governors-General were to become merely nominees of the reigning Governments in the Dominions. "At the same time the editorial adds it does not follow that a Dominion Government should surrender the voice in selection which they have had for a good many years."

Concerning the discussion on whether a Governor-General should be a citizen of the Dominion in which he holds high est office, the Times said, it did not see why any class should be ruled out from the area of choice.

Nobel Prize Given To Sinclair Lewis

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 6 (C.P.).—Sinclair Lewis, American novelist and creator of "Main Street" and "Babbitt," has received this year's Nobel prize in literature.

Although the greatest secrecy surrounded the name of the actual winner until the formal announcement was made, Mr. Lewis has been prominently mentioned as a possible candidate, and it was known that he has several champions among the members of the Swedish Academy which annually awards the prize.

For a time the name of Theodore Dreiser also was mentioned in connection with the Nobel prize. This year the award is worth $46,350. Even since the publication in Swedish of "Main Street," Mr. Lewis' books have been widely known here.

Among other of his books which have been translated into Swedish are: "Elmer Gentry," "Mantrap," "The Man Who Knew Coolidge," and "Arrowsmith."

NEW AUSTRALIAN DUTIES LISTED

Effect of Increase is to Reduce Margin of British Preference On All Items.

GENERAL RATE DOUBLED.

CANBERRA, Australia, Nov. 6.—(CP)—via Reuters—Tea, coffee, tobacco, floor coverings, lace and millinery, wire and a variety of other commodities are all affected by increases in the customs duty announced by Hon. A. Lyons acting treasure, in his financial statement to the House o Representatives to-day.

The effect of the increased duties is to reduce the margin of British preference on all items in the schedule on which preference was given. The rates which were formerly 20 per cent in the general tariff and 10 per cent in the preferential tariff, are increased to 40 per cent general and 30 per cent British and so on. The duties come into operation to-morrow, part of a general plan to cut down the immense deficit which Australia will otherwise face when the fiscal year is ended.

Primage Duty Up.

The new tariff table increases the primage duty from 2½ per cent to 4 per cent. This is the percentage addition to freight required to be paid to owners or freighters of vessels.

Tariff changes are as follows: Tea, a duty of eight cents a pound in bulk, in packets, duty increased from two cents to 12 cents.

Imported tobacco duty raised from seven shillings to nine shillings (roughly $2.25 per pound). Excise duty doubled, becoming four shillings and a penny (roughly $1) for handmade and four shillings and fourpence (about $1.06) for manufacturers.

Why— Children need BOVRIL

Children need Bovril to fortify them against cold and illness. Bovril is the best of the beef in its most concentrated and digestible form.

The special body-building powers of Bovril are due, partly to the actual nourishment in Bovril itself, and partly to its unique power of enabling the human system to derive far greater nourishment from the ordinary diet. It assists development and increases stamina. Give the children Bovril every day for a month and note the difference.

The Body-building powers of Bovril have been proved by independent investigation to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken.

RADIO DEVELOPS HOME INTEREST

WEDNESDAY NIGHT PROGRAM

On Wednesday night, November 2nd, Westinghouse, "The Pioneer Broadcasting Station of the World," repeated their first pre-announced broadcast given over the air exactly ten years ago. What a giant industry radio has become during these past ten years. It has grown to amazing stature with super-powered transmitting stations—short waves, rebroadcasts, international hook-ups, broadcasting from planes, ships and trains.

It has developed the home interests of all civilization, evolving the radio set from a puny crystal receiver to the magnificent Super-Heterodyne—Lord of the Radio Waves.

The Westinghouse salute last Tuesday evening was brimful of human interest. It emphasized the leadership of Westinghouse throughout the history of all radio developments. It established recognition of the part played by Westinghouse Radio Engineers, Westinghouse Production Engineers and Westinghouse Radio Dealers.

It glorified the Westinghouse Super-Heterodyne for its amazing superiorities. It created prestige for the stores and men who render Westinghouse service.

Westinghouse developed the Super-Heterodyne and until this year were the only radio manufacturers to make them available to the buying public.

With a super-heterodyne it is possible to separate stations only one-half point apart. The other night, right here in this city, five stations were brought in clearly and distinctly without any cross-talk, in two and one-half points on the dial. Think of that. Five stations where only one used to grow before.

Grant & Thorpe are the only dealers in Peterborough who sell the Westinghouse radio, the radio developed by the company who operates the oldest broadcasting station in the world.

CARAMEL PUDDING

One of the most delicious desserts one can serve, and it is one especially loved by children, can be said practically to make itself. It is called Caramel Pudding. Here it is:

"Place an unopened can of Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk in a kettle of boiling water and simmer for two and a half hours, being careful not to let the kettle boil dry. Remove can, cool and chill. Remove top of can, cutting along the side of can—not the top—so that the contents may be removed whole; place on a serving dish and garnish with broken nut meats and whipped cream. To serve individually, cut in slices, garnish with nut meats, and whipped cream — or use plain unsweetened cream, with or without garnish."

HOLIDAY HOURS.

On Thanksgiving Day, Monday, November 10th, the Post Office wickets will be closed except between the hours of 8.30 a.m. and 10.30 a.m., during which period the General Delivery and Registration wickets will be open and Postage Stamps will be on sale.

There will be no delivery by letter carrier. All outgoing mails due for despatch after 12 o'clock noon on that date will be closed at the regular hour

There will be one collection only made from the street letter boxes, commencing at 8.00 p.m.

In connection with the above, there will be an afternoon delivery by letter carriers on Saturday afternoon, November 8th.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

There are times when it is important to move noiselessly about the house.

• • • • • •

For instance, you must walk noiselessly when someone is ill in the family or some adult is asleep or a mother wishes not to waken a young child who is susceptible to sound.

• • • • • •

Very little babies, it may be added will sleep through noise much better than when they grow older. Very aged persons are usually not quick to waken at slight noises.

• • • • • •

It is persons in the prime of life, nervous people, those with acute hearing and ill persons who waken at slight sounds.

• • • • • •

There are times when it is extremely important that they have undisturbed sleep during the day and that they sleep late in the morning. Unless the homemaker moves quietly, the sleepers will waken.

• • • • • •

Quiet action and speed do not go together. It is well to appreciate this. Work has to be done without any rush and movement must be slowed down.

• • • • • •

To accomplish much leisurely, requires concentration so that each motion brings results. Also all work that can be done at one time in one place should be managed.

• • • • • •

Avoid going up and down stairs except when it is imperative. Beware of letting water run where it can be heard. The splash of water as it pours into the washbowl or sink is peculiarly awakening and the sound of taps being turned off and on is disturbing.

• • • • • •

There are ways of moving noiselessly about and there are knacks that can be acquired to lessen and stifle sound. A burglar once told how to go down stairs without making any sound.

• • • • • •

This was his method. Put the foot down very slowly. When the toe of the shoe feels the step, let the weight down so gently that no board creaks.

• • • • • •

When one step has been taken, wait an instant before taking another so that there will be no consecutive rustle, should there unfortunately have been any.

• • • • • •

It is easy to see that he followed the rule "haste makes waste." The homemakers realizes this only too well, if when she moves about she waken someone who has to be looked after as soon as this happens.

• • • • • •

A door can be opened and shut without any sound, if it is in good order. Grasp the knob firmly and press down on it a little as it is turned just as far as it will go. This releases the catch perfectly and the door swunk open without a sound.

• • • • • •

Do not release the knob until the door is pressed firmly against its frame and then gradually turn it back into position again. Take the hand off the knob very slowly.

• • • • • •

To deaden the sound of running water into a tub, tie the top of a clean white stocking about the nozzle of the faucet; let the stocking lie along the bottom of the tub and turn on the faucet so that the water runs in slowly.

• • • • • •

A jelly bag can be used in the same manner in a kitchen. The important thing is to have the end where the water runs out rest well in the bottom of the container.

Don't Worry About Vitamins

Of course, you need vitamins—and you can get them all in this breakfast: A glass of orange juice for Vitamin C—then a bowl of Shredded Wheat with whole milk for Vitamins A, B, D and E. A delicious breakfast, easily and quickly prepared and costs but a few cents. If you like a hot dish, pour hot milk over the biscuits.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Alice Michaelis

Wealth of Living

This is true wealth of living:
To share in others' lives,
To feel their joy in giving,
Their faith which upwards strives;
To lend to others' weakness
What strength we can command
To learn to live with meekness,
To try to understand.

This is true wealth of living:
Not hoarding any good,
But day by day forgiving
Each hostile word or mood;
Not keeping any treasures
Just for our selfish ends,
But passing on the pleasures
Each sparkling morning sends.

This is true wealth of living:
To cast self all aside,
And in serene thanksgiving
For all life's good, abide.

MRS. J. G. MANN ELECTED HEAD

W.C.T.U. of Bridgenorth United Church Holds Organization Meeting.

INTERESTING PROGRAM.

BRIDGENORTH, Nov. 6. (Examiner Correspondence.)—Mrs. J. G. Mann was elected president of the W.C.T.U. at the annual meeting held in Bridgenorth United church on Monday afternoon.

After the usual opening exercises, a short program was given, consisting of instrumental numbers by Mrs. Totten and Miss Ida Heard; a duet, Mrs. Clayton Telford and Mrs. Joseph Mann; recitation, Mrs. W. Heard.

Other officers for the coming year are: Mrs. P. Udy, secretary; Mrs. A. Armstrong, corresponding secretary; Miss Lily Udy, treasurer.

Hallowe'en Party.

Miss Jean Coates, teacher of S.S. No. 11 Smith, gave a jolly Hallowe'en party on Friday evening for her pupils and their parents and friends.

The school was prettily decorated for the occasion and the program consisted of solos, recitations, dialogues and choruses. Mr. Potter, music teacher of Petertborough, favored the audience with several musical numbers.

At the close of the program contests were enjoyed, followed by the serving of lunch.

No Christmas Cards For Gov't Ministers

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 6 (C.P.)—In a newspage item The Ottawa Evening Journal says no specially embossed Christmas cards will be made gratis for Ministers of the Crown and Deputy Ministers this year, instructions having been issued to the King's Printer by C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State, to stop the practice. "The order of the Secretary of State," the newspaper adds, "was issued in the interests of economy, as cost of the engraved cards has run into thousands of dollars. For the past few years the figure has been mounting and in fact for some ministers averaged about $100.

Mr. Ivison Fee attended the funeral of the infant daughter of Mr and Mrs. E. McCarrell in Lindsay on Thursday.

Miss Marion Storey entertained the choir of Bethel church on Monday evening, it being practise for the aniversary service to be held on Sunday, November 16. Rev E. W. Rowland of Stirling a former pastor of Bethel will preach both morning and evening.

The Women's Guild of St. James' Anglican church held a very successful Hallowe'en concert in their parish hall last Wednesday night October 29, being in the form of a masquerade party.

Mr. Alvin Franks very ably acted as chairman in the absence of Rev. Mr. Weir, who is ill at his home. The program was very interesting consisting of dialogues, readings, solos, instrumentals and choruses.

Prizes were given for the different costumes.

Lunch was served by the ladies, consisting of hot dogs, pie and coffee, which was very much enjoyed by the good crowd present.

Miss Margaret Mann of 435 George street, Peterborough, is visiting her nephew, Mr. Herb. Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Connel of Omemee spent last Sunday evening visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Lowes and Miss Olive McElwain motored to Kingston on Sunday and were guests of the former's son, Mr. Edward Lowes, who is attending Queen's University there.

The annual anniversary services will be held in Bethel United church on Sunday, November 16. Rev. E. W. Rowland of Stirling will conduct the services.

The regular meeting of the mission band of Lakevale Presbyterian church was held on Thursday night at the home of Mrs. Joseph Hunter in the form of a Hallowe'en masquerade.

The regular meeeting took place after which a jolly time was indulged in. Refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Finley and Mrs. Andrew McCarrell attended the funeral of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett McCarrell in Lindsay last Thursday.

$150,000 RELIEF PROGRAM IN NORTH BAY

NORTH BAY, Ont., Nov. 6—North Bay city council will be asked to endorse the spending of about $150,000 to provide work for the unemployed of the city. The contingent committee met last night and decided to recommend the construction of sewers, sidewalks, pavements and considerable other work, half the cost of which would be borne by the city.

$10,000 Fur Shipment Made To Europe Ports

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 6 (Special to The Examiner).—Representing an investment of more than $10,000, a consignment of live mink, badger and silver fox was shipped from Winnipeg Wednesday by Canadian Pacific Express from Western producers to European farms. The bulk of the shipment was in the mink, 86 animals in 22 crates valued at $6,500 and with seven silver foxes valued at $3,000, was destined for Akersberga, from a firm of Winnipeg growers. Shipped from Edmonton, keeping company with the mink and fox in the same car, was a crate of seven silver badgers en route to Bayern, Germany.

The mink shipment had a large representation of females, which points to European breeding requirements.

ST. JOHN'S BOYS' CHOIR DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCE

PLEASINGLY RENDERED.

The Boys' Choir of St. John's Church, winners of innumerable prizes and shields in contests in the city, in Stratford and in Toronto, delighted a capacity audience in St. John's Church parish hall Tuesday evening, when they presented the entire program of the evening.

F. G. Mann, L. Mus., organist and choirmaster of St. John's Church, deserves a very large meed of credit for the fine training imparted by him to these young boys. They have brought renown to the city at every appearance out of town and within it, and have invariably been prize-winners in every contest in which they have taken part. They sing beautifully and their concert was a splendid demonstration of the excellence of their training and the manner in which they have co-operated with their teacher. All the boys who took part are pupils of Mr. Mann and all, with the exception of Orville Wainman, are members of the Boys' Choir of St. John's Church. In their neat black suits, their faces shining with enjoyment and their demeanor expressive of intense interest in their work, they presented a very attractive ensemble of youthful, boyish charm. Their stage setting was attractive also, the arrangement of plants and lighted lamps adding a touch of color to the background. Miss R. Quartermaine assisted with this arrangement

Pleasingly Rendered.

Every number was exceptionally pleasing. The choral efforts were outstanding. The twenty-four boys sing true to pitch, with fine intonation and expressive rendition. Their volume is splendid in the forte passages and they sing pianissimo effects with a delicate precision. Their pleasing deportment and careful enunciation were added attributes to interest and hold the attention of their hearers. A very interesting choral number was the rollicking "Mermaid," an old sea song, rendered with fine effectiveness.

The solo numbers were also very fine, with a trio of outstanding excellence in the vocal solos rendered by Roy Pitchford, Orville Wainman and Victor Coleman. The little brothers, Tom, Fred and Jack Hooper had a trio all to themselves and sang it splendidly, while Fred Hooper also contributed a piano selection. Arthur Barnes was the other instrumentalist of the program, playing a violin solo.

W. W. Gray, president of St. John's Choir, acted as chairman, and made a brief, appropriate opening speech. During the intermission, Mr. Mann spoke and, at the conclusion of the program, the Rev. Dr. Blagrave addressed the audience, pointing out the merits of the program, the excellence of Mr. Mann's training and the manner in which such youthful enterprise will become a benefit in later years.

Accompaniments were played by Mr. Mann for the soloists and by Miss Lily Bacon for the choral numbers. The program was as follows:

"O Canada" by the choir; vocal solo, "Killarney," by Donald Perks; violin solo, "In a Monastery Garden," by Arthur Barnes; vocal solo "Foreign Lands," by Walter Dyer; "O Who Will O'er the Downe," by the choir; "Glorious Land of Spring" by the trio, Tom, Fred and Jack Hooper; vocal solos, "After the War" and "Happy Summer Song", by Roy Pitchford; "Where the Bee Sucks", by the choir; "The Mermaid" (Old Sea Song), by the choir; vocal solos, "Keep on Hopin'", and "Big Brown Bear," by Orville Wainman; piano solo, "Pixies' Night Song," by Fred Hooper; vocal solo, "Come to the Fair," by Gerald Perks; "Sunshine and Butterflies", by Griffen Young; "It Was a Lover and His Lass," by the choir; "Mary" by Victor Coleman; "List to the Convent Bells" by Roy Pitchford and Albert Stevens, and "Now is the Month of Maying", by the choir.

Gooderham Constable Has Five Wolf Pelts

LINDSAY, Nov. 6.—Provincial Constable W. J. Dovell, stationed at Gooderham, was in town yesterday morning on official business and happened in to Magistrate Jordan's office while the police court reporter was there and displayed one of the reasons why the wolves in Haliburton are becoming less. How? He had five wolf skins which he had the magistrate certify to before sending them on to the Department of Game and Fisheries for his bounty of $25 per pelt.

Constable Dovell stated that last year he got four wolves all year, but this year he has got five of them already and is looking for more. When questioned as to his method of trapping them this Haliburton Nimrod admitted the use of skilfully set snares and also wolf traps. Of the five beats which he has bagged this year three are pups or cubs, and two are old and wily ones.

CANTON PASTOR HOLDS SERVICES

Fleetwood Choir Contributes Special Music in Anniversary Services at Brick Corner.

ANNUAL FOWL SUPPER.

FANKLIN, Nov. 5—Rev. Fred Lane, of Canton, took charge of the anniversary services held on Sunday, Oct. 26, at the Brick Corner. The Fleetwood Church choir contributed special music, Miss Margaret Werry, of Omemee being the soloist for the occasion.

On Monday the fowl supper was held in the school house, after which all adjourned to the church where a splendid program was given, the Rev. Mr. Scott acting as chairman. The following kindly assisted in the program: musical selections, Messrs. Morrow and Poulton, of Lindsay; readings, Mrs. Carlo, of Nestleton; solos, Miss Margaret Werry, accompanied by Miss Lowe; solos, Mrs. Scott, of Bethany; selections, Fleetwood orchestra.

The autograph quilt which had been made by the ladies of the congregation was auctioned off by A. H. Monk, of Bethany, and was sold to T. E. Shea for $7. W. W. Staples of Lindsay made a speech as did F. W. Bowen, of Orono.

The autograph quilt obtained more than seven hundred names and the proceeds of the sale amounted altogether to $157. The proceeds of the fowl supper amounted to $136.15 and the offering on Sunday amounted to $29.85.

SPEAKERS COMING TO CONVENTION

Cheesemakers' Convention in Belleville in December Attracts Leading Dairymen.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 6.—A long list of distinguished speakers has been arranged for the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association annual convention which will be held in the city hall here on December 2nd and 3rd next. Heading the list is J. B. Fairbairn, Deputy Minister of Agriculture in the Provincial government. Other speakers include Dr. Berry, Sanitary Engineer, Provincial Health Department; Dr J. A. Ruddick, Canadian Dairy Commissioner; George B. Rothwell, Dominion Animal Husbandry Department, Ottawa; George Barr, Director of Dairying in Ontario; A. E. Plant, President of the Ontario Milk Producers' Association, Brantford, and many others. A big banquet, to be held in the Moose Academy is being planned.

SAFETY COMMITTEE MEETS IN DELORO

Dr. H. Crawford Gives Splendid Review of First Aid Work.

MARMORA, November 6 (Examiner Correspondence). — The monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee, held at the Hub on Monday evening under the presidency of R. A. Elliott, proved to be of an interesting character.

Two safety suggestions, one of which was deemed worthy of award, was reported as being received in October. The flag will be flown for equal parts of November at the four departments in the competition. The star goes to the oxide plant.

For the Competitive Committee, S. J. Sanderson outlined a prone method competition which is to be a feature of the next meeting. Twelve teams of five men each will compete, and in consequence the December meeting is arranged to be held at Deloro Hall. A. V. Yates, as floating member, brought in a good report for the Inspection Committee.

No floating member was appointed for the current month, the chairman of the committee, Floyd Gray, to carry out an inspection and report accordingly.

Harry Smith told of prone method practices having been carried out in the past month and R. D. Murray was appointed to carry out practices in the oxide plant this month.

C. H. Buskard having given his statement of benevolent relief funds, W. R. Reynolds reported for the Publicity Committee. He mentioned the placing of the golden stairs near the bulletin board. These stairs are very attractive, being three in number. Four gaily painted men representing the departments are shown in their progress up the stairway daily. Progress is halted when a lost time accident occurs in the department represented by the man.

Dr. H. Crawford, who was present at the meeting, gave a review of First-aid work, which in the unanimous opinion of those present, was the best they had ever listened to.

Towards the close a motion was carried that the secretary, F. Paquet, obtain a list of live safety organizations from the Industrial Accident Prevention Association with a view to arranging the exchange of ideas.

FRANCE GIVEN ART COLLECTION

PARIS, France, Nov. 6—Art objects valued at more than $1,000,000, gathered by Edward M. Tuck, wealthy former Bostonian, over a period of 40 years, were presented the French Government yesterday and placed in a new museum set aside in the Petit Palais.

All phases of French political artistic and social life were represented at the ceremony and President Doumergue himself viewed the collection and thanked the donor.

District Churches

ROSENEATH UNITED CHURCH.

ROSENEATH, Nov. 6 (Examiner Correspondence)—Owing to the absence of Rev. R. W. Paton, the pulpit of the United Church was occupied by Rev. J. Campbell of Camborne, on Sunday evening. Rev. Mr. Campbell took for his text from the gospel according to St. Luke, chapter 2, verse 49 using the words, "I must be about my Father's business."

The speaker then gave a brief resume of the circumstances which led to the words of the text chosen. The life of Jesus may be studied from many angles. The life of Jesus is a life of unity. Our lives show a lack of unity, there is a great contraction between what we do and what we are. We do not run a straight race, we get tired very often and we go by fits and starts. Jesus through his whole life shows one qauity.

Whilst ye not that I may be about my Father's business? You will always find the same truth in the doctrines of Jesus Christ.

We do not know the future but we may take the right direction. There are many temptations but you can test yourself from the life of Jesus at any significance and it is just the same. His whole life is labeled. Jesus had to choose this life He prayed earnestly with God seeking the best things in life.

Jesus faced hard problems even at the age of twelve years, there is no youth but does, but we must establish certain loyalities and learn the truth. Our young people of to-day may meet with great difficulties but we must not imagine that this is the only generation. Learn the truth, keep your hearts pure, right thinking, stand on your guard and don't think your are the only one tempted. It is a cowardly thing to blame some one for your own sins. The generation of to-day is wise, so yield your heart to Jesus Christ and say by the grace of God I will do what you want me to do. You cannot stand the test alone, you must have have the power of God and Jesus Christ in your life.

Take this serious for you will be tested over and over again. Have you said, I must be about my Father's business.

Next Sunday will be the annual anniversary and Thanksgiving services when Rev. Dr. Gandier, Principal of Emmanual College, Toronto will be in charge. The morning service will be at 11.30 a.m. and the evening at 7.30.

Special music will be rendered by the choir.

Muscular-Rheumatic Aches and Pains

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Distressing muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond pleasantly to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant," because it gets action and is not just a salve. Musterole helps bring soreness and pain to the surface, and thus gives natural relief. You can feel how its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses.

Keep Musterole handy; jars and tubes.

Guelph Bank Head Held For Forgery

GUELPH, Ont., Nov. 6. — Facing two charges of forgery and theft, A. George McNee, manager of the Belwood branch of the Imperial Bank, appeared in police court here to-day, and was remanded for a week without plea or election. McNee was taken into custody by Provincial police after informations had been sworn out by Aylmer Ogden, an inspector of the bank. The charges allege theft of $359, and forgery of a note for the same amount.

COUNCIL WILL BUILD CULVERT

DISTRICT NEWS.

OMEMEE, Nov. 6—(Examiner Correspondence).—The regular monthly meeting of Omemee village council was held in Council Chamber, Coronation Hall on November 3, at 7.30 o'clock, with Reeve Southworth and Councillors Magee and Moncrief present. The minutes of last meeting were read by Clerk Lamb and on motion of Magee and Moncrief were adopted.

The following accounts having been examined and found correct the treasurer was authorized to issue cheques for same:

Street lights for October, $77; lights for fire hall, $2; lights for Coronation Hall, $4.04; W. H. Magee, for hauling gravel, $13.75; R. W. Mitchell, account, $10; H. Lamb, coke, $19.72; Dr. Earle, account, $39; P. Winn, burying horse, $1; selecting jurors, $15.

Isaac Fee was present and addressed the council regarding a drain on Mary street. It was moved by Moncrief and seconded by Magee, and carried, that a culvert on corner of Mary and Sturgeon street be lowered and that the reeve and Councillors Magee and Moncrief supervise the same.

Moved by Councillor Moncrief and seconded by Councillor Magee, that R. W. Mitchell be authorized to install two hot air pipes from small furnace to auditorium in Coronation Hall and enlarge the cold air pipe to 16 inches. Carried.

Council then adjourned to meet the first Monday of December.

The regular monthly missionary and business meeting of the W.A. of Christ church was held in the basement Thursday afternoon with a fair attendance.

In the absence of the president Mrs Weir, the vice-president, Miss Cornwall, conducted the opening exercises. Several letters were read and papers were given on the work in Japan by Miss E. Curry and Mrs. Jamieson. It was decided to pack a bale for the white settlers Monday afternoon, November 3. The next meeting will be held at the home of the Misses Curry, when the regular bale will be packed.

SOO PAPER MILLS TO CLOSE

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 6.—(C.P.).—Owing to the decreased consumption of newsprint, the Sault Ste. Marie mills of the Abitibi Power and Paper Mills will be closed temporarily about the middle of the month, it was announced today by George R. Gray, vice-president. He could not say how long the mill would remain inactive.

Eczema Itched Badly. Face Disfigured. Healed by Cuticura.

"Eczema first appeared on my forehead in pimple-like form. Later it spread from my forehead towards my nose and gradually my whole face became affected. It itched and burned badly at times, and when I scratched it caused eruptions. After a while the pimples would dry up and then new ones would come in their place. My face was disfigured. The trouble lasted over a year.

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Nellie Gach, Ladywood, Man.

RADIO

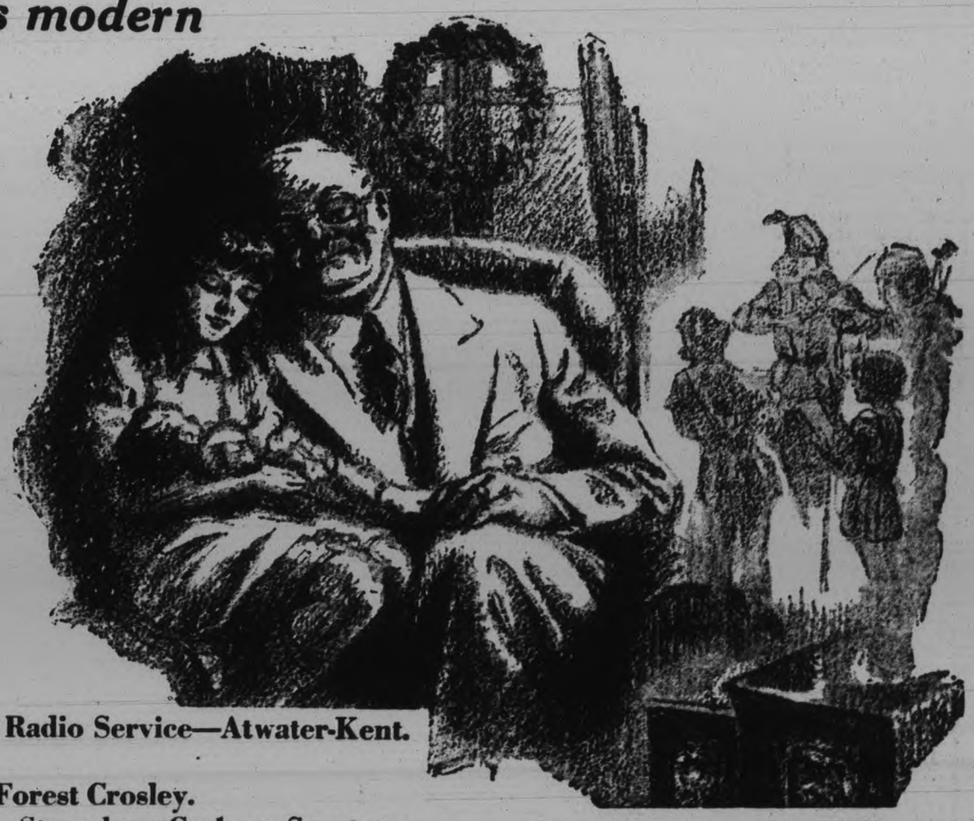
The Marvel of the 20th Century

NO longer is it the exclusive privilege of the wealthy to revel in the song, or music of the great artists and organizations; the presentations of the world's finest Drama; the fun and drollery of headliners in entertainment, to listen to the country's foremost statesmen. All this, the present generation can have, seated comfortably at their own fireside through the world's scientific masterpiece—

◁ RADIO ▷

THAT Wonder of Wonders, the Microphone, catches the melodies of orchestra, band, pipe organ, violin, the actual presentations from metropolitan stages, featuring the greatest artists; dance music at its best; the most important sport happenings—baseball, football, hockey, pugilism, as seen and heard from the best reserved seats; lectures; addresses; campaign speeches; church services, and real entertainment of every description, broadcasts it on the air at hundreds of different wave lengths, and your Radio selects just what you want to listen to and brings it into your home exactly as rendered hundreds of miles away.

Radio owners know the joy of this modern entertainment now being brought within the reach of thousands more homes.



YEARS of scientific effort have gradually evolved from the original crystal and battery sets, which lacked power to bring in a program except under most favorable conditions, the electrically controlled receiving sets that have ample power for selective results, and choice programs fill the homes with melody at the will of the operator.

Radio Industry Is Revolutionized in Ten Years

ART OF BROADCASTING WAS BORN 10 YEARS AGO— OVER STATION K. D. K. A.

First Invisible Audience Numbered Only 100 Persons.

50,000,000 TO-DAY.

Earlier Attempts Were Made During Years 1907 and 1908.

By J. E. Smith, President, National Radio Institute.)

The art of broadcasting as we know it to-day was born ten years ago. Like many other instruments and agencies of great potential human service, it had an humble origin—cradled, as it were, in the garage of Frank Conrad, an engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. The first broadcasting station was christened 8XK, only later to assume the now world renowned combination of letters KDKA. While the germ of broadcasting had its experimental beginning with the amateur station of Dr. Conrad, 8XK, the natal event of broadcasting as a public service dates from November 2, 1920 — when KDKA broadcast the election returns of Warren G. Harding.

The "first night" audience of KDKA was hand-picked, as it were—only friends and officials of the company fortunate enough to be favored with crude and simple receiving sets manufactured especially for the historic occasion. This drafted invisible audience perhaps numbered 100 persons, all told, whereas to-day 50,000,000 persons may listen simultaneously to the broadcasting of a humorous skit or the round-by-round description of a boxing match. The first feeble broadcast of KDKA was faintly heard beyond the city limits of East Pittsburgh; to-day a whisper uttered in the studio of this same station could be heard half way around the earth.

Earlier Attempts at Broadcasting.

Historical accuracy, however, cannot altogether escape mentioning attempts to broadcast the human voice earlier than November 2, 1920. Antedating the initial broadcast of KDKA by many years was the pioneering effort of the Navy Department in equipping the naval fleet with arc telephones and by positioning phonographs before the microphones of the arc transmitters radio music was broadcast. That was as early as the winter of 1907 and 1908, and it was perhaps the first attempt at broadcasting music. One of the earliest efforts at land broadcasting, as noted in the records of the Radio Division of the Department of Commerce, was that of radiating phonograph music by the Wannamaker, New York, radio station in May, 1914. Other claimants to such pioneering attempts are the friends of a Kentucky man, how dead, and to whom was recently erected a monument as the first person to transmit the human voice through space.

KDKA Fires Imagination.

Worthy as these early efforts were in striving to pioneer a new art, it remained for KDKA to fire the popular imagination, to awaken a then slumbering servant of the public, the entertainer of the masses, and the annihilator of all space. Frank Conrad, H. P. Davis, J. C. McQuiston, S. M. Kintner, L. W. Chubb and other members of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company were the Lindberghs of broadcasting—they challenged the imagination of the populace to an old art in a new guise as a dissipator of distance and a hurry-up messenger in bearing news and music far and near. They refused to accept a pessimistic statement appearing in an electrical handbook as early as 1915 to the effect: "There is little demand for the wireless telephone, and at its best its range is limited and will be unfit for long distance service."

First Broadcasts of Church Services.

Not content with the enviable title "The Pioneer Broadcasting Station of the World," KDKA has sponsored, with periodic regularity, a notable sequence of events that have contributed to the historic lore of broadcasting. When Dr. E. J. Van Etten, pastor of the Calvary Episcopal Church of Pittsburgh, first preached to an invisible audience on January 2, 1921, he was the sponsor of a radio contribution that has not only inspired many churches to build their own broadcasting stations but eventually to work towards a world federation of churches and congregations by radio. President Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce, was heard "over the air" for the first time on January 15, 1921; and one month later three other members of President Harding's Cabinet also spoke into the KDKA microphone. At another time the late William Jennings Bryan made his first radio address through the same station. Priority in broadcast events then seemed to glorify KDKA in rapid succession—the broadcasting of time signals from Arlington, Va.; radiating the first sports event, the boxing contest between Johnny Ray and Johnny Dundee, in Pittsburgh, April 11, 1921; broadcasting first tennis match on August 4, 5, 6, 1921; and on August 5, 1921, inaugurated the new popular radio feature of transmitting a play-by-play account of a baseball game.

RADIO ON THE TELEPHONE.

A new and unexpected sort of "network" was added to the regular NBC station group carrying a recent program of Lester Place and Robert Pascocello, according to a letter received by Place from a cousin in Alamosa, Colorado. The mother of an office worker called from home to tell her daughter that she had just tuned in by accident on a radio program featuring their cousin. Miss McLaughlin could hear the two pianos so plainly through her receiver that the switchboard operator hooked up all the office phones and the entire staff listened to the 15-minute recital.

ROGERS-MAJESTIC SALES MORE THAN $1,700,000

Splendid Record is Set for Past Two Months by Canadian Company.

CONDITIONS REVERSED

In the months of September and October, the volume of sales of Rogers and Majestic radios exceeded $1,700,000 at retail values, setting a new high record in the history of the company.

This fact expresses, more eloquently than could any extravagant statements, the simple truth that here is one Canadian company to whom "hard times" and "business depression" are a myth.

Some interesting and surprising facts in connection with the radio industry, and Rogers-Majestic Corporation in particular, were given by B. A. Trestrail Vice-President in charge of distribution for the Rogers-Majestic Corporation, Limited, of Toronto, when questioned concerning their remarkable record.

Stimulating Record.

"This wonderfully inspiring record should thrill not only our dealers and owners who have made it possible, but to every citizen and industry in this country it will carry a stimulating message of faith, courage, optimism and good cheer," said Mr. Trestrail.

"It is fitting that the world's pioneer electric radio—Rogers Batteryless, a product conceived, created, developed and perfected in Canada almost six years ago—coupled with the meteoric Majestic, 'mighty monarch of the air,' should combine to explode the 'hard times' fallacy. Few products in any field have enjoyed such outstanding popularity and preference. The prestige of these names, the tremendous public confidence and support, have been built on merit and proven performance.

"And the new 1931 models just released represent the acme of value in design, finish, performance and price.

"It is the exceptional value offered in these new models that made it possible to smash all sales records and outsell production.

Conditions Reversed.

"It is only a few years since there was little or no radio business in the summer. Batteryless Radios, with a uniform power and efficiency, coupled with the tremendous development in the quality and quantity of broadcast programs, are largely responsible for making the radio industry a year-round business.

"When we introduced the first Rogers in 1925, the season started in September and closed in February. To-day we have just time enough between May and June to prepare for the new season, and by far the greatest percentage of our rapid increase in volume has come in what were formerly the off months. Our August sales this year almost equal our entire year's sales in 1925-26, while our total volume this year will be more than ten times that year."

SPECTACULAR RADIO DEVELOPMENTS.

Radio developments unfold with such surprising swiftness as to defy the efforts of imaginative writers and to nullify the far-seeing predictions of those that would anticipate future achievements. Complete weather maps transmitted to ships at sea, vivid microphone descriptions of corals at the bottom of the sea, broadcasting of the silent borings of the bark beetle in a pine tree or subtle activities of a grain-eating insect in a corncrib.

About $7,500,000 has been allotted by the Soviet Government to pay the way of the new institute for chemical development, the purpose of which is to keep Russia in step with the world's chemical progress.

Two sixteenth century needlework panels were sold at auction in London recently for $20,000.

RADIO BE VITAL IN NEXT BIG WAR

War Has Usually Been Caused By Economic Competition, U.S. Officer Says.

STRATEGY OF WAR.

Radio, which is responsible for most of the elaborate international communication networks that have spread over the globe within the last decade, will play an important role in both the cause and the result of the next war, in the opinion of Major-General George S. Gibbs, Chief Signal Officer of the United States army. He calls attention to the fact that modern world communication systems work both as a barrier to future and as a medium for propaganda that may bring about another international conflict.

Declaring that wars have often, if not usually, been caused by economic competition, the chief signal officer contends that modern world communication systems are, in addition to augmenting international trade, "making peoples acquainted with each other, all over the world, to a degree never before existing in history.

Strategy of War.

"When we pass from the strategy of peace to the strategy of war a very different set of conditions is encountered," General Gibbs asserted. "Channels that have operated as integral parts of the world system suddenly become unavailable, and the whole system undergoes a transformation. As far as cable channels are concerned, command of the seas plays an over-whelming part in determining the availability of cable communication in every part of the world. It is an easy matter to interrupt cables. They can be grappled and cut at any point in their entire length.

"Long distance radio channels present a different problem. Technically, they are not easily subject to interuption. Transmitting and receiving stations can be and many of them are, placed in locations where they can be protected. Their retention and continued operation depends very largely, if not wholly, upon the retention of sovereignty."

C.N.R. PIONEERED RADIO ON TRAINS

USE WIRELESS TELEPHONES

Radio, commonplace as it may now be, is one of the most marvellous of the achievements of a century that is already crowded with marvels, in spite of the fact that it is little more than a quarter gone. Science has crossed continents and oceans with music and has directed the voices of the great to the ears of multitudes, sitting, not in stuffy halls, but in the comfort and privacy of their homes. In extending radio so that the traveller in the lounge car or in his own drawing-room may hear while he is speeding across country from city to city on a fast train, science has added triumph to achievement.

The first railway to adopt radio as part of its service to the public was the Canadian National System. Experimentation on the Canadian National began back in 1902, when Sir Ernest Rutherford, world-famous expert on the atomic theory, who was then a professor at McGill, carried out successfully the transmission of wireless signals to a moving train on the Grand Trunk Railway, now the Canadian National, between Toronto and Montreal.

Taking advantage of every new discovery, the Canadian National now has receiving sets on all principal trains and maintains a chain of broadcasting stations stretching from Atlantic to Pacific. Their concerts are heard far down into the United States, up to Alaska and the Yukon and even in isolated stations within the Arctic circle.

E. A. Weir, director of radio for the Canadian National, who works under the jurisdiction of W. D. Robb, vice-president, has made it his ambition to bring the most significant programs to his unseen audiences. A few days ago Canadians heard the Prime Minister of Canada, the Right Honorable R. B Bennett, speak from the Imperial Conference in London, England. His outstanding broadcast was made over the Canadian National network.

Arthur Pryor, who directed the General Electric orchestra in its summer series over an NBC network, is reputed to hold the record for the number of solos played by an individual musician. While with John Philip Sousa's Band he played over 10,000 trombone solos in this country and abroad.

Why you should buy a Majestic RADIO

A NEW Majestic Electric Radio actually costs you less to own and operate than many sets being offered at special bargain prices. First, because while you may buy some radio sets for less, the depreciation, service, performance and trade-in value wipe out this mythical saving and more before a season has passed.

Most people now buy radios on time, so the purchase of a Majestic means but a few dollars more outlay at the time of purchase and a few more monthly payments. At the end of that time the value of the Majestic as a "trade-in" is definite and sure. There is always a demand for used Majestics, whereas the loss you will take on nameless "stencils" or "specials" or cheap radios built to a price makes your original purchase an expensive one.

Majestic is the largest manufacturer of complete radio receiving sets in the world. It is fathered in Canada by the Rogers-Majestic Corporation Limited — the largest radio manufacturers in the British Empire. Were it not for this tremendous output Majestic prices would be 10% to 25% higher, if the same quality were maintained. Due to this enormous production Majestic prices are as low as most radios of much cheaper construction. Thus, every Majestic is really a bargain—extraordinary value for your money.

The 1931 Majestic Models with Super-Screen Grid and Super-Colotura Dynamic Speaker are now on display at our store. Come in, see them, and find out about our liberal terms . . . today.

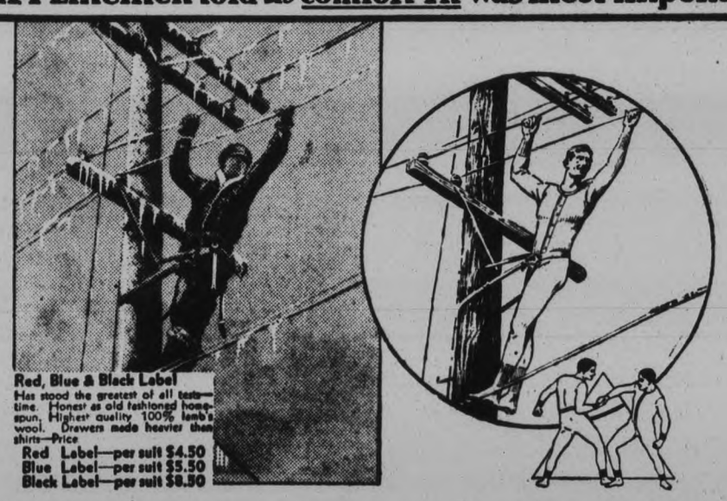
114 Linemen told us Comfort-Fit was most important



A RAGING STORM. Uprooted trees, freezing coats of ice—getting heavier on wires that bind us town to town. Then a snap—a city cut off from communication—isolated—alone.

Bitter weather—almost impassable snows—it's the lineman's job to bring relief. His tools must be right. But of even greater importance is his clothing. Warm it must be! It must not bind or impede his movements—and it must be as sturdy as the man himself.

Perhaps that's why you find more linemen—more outdoor men of all occupations—wearing Stanfield's underwear than of any other kind. Soft—warm—durable, it brings utmost comfort.

Tailored to exact measurements it fits without cramping or bunching. And because it is unshrinkable, it keeps its fit throughout the entire long life of the garment.

"NO DULL TIMES" POLICY WINS WIDER EXPANSION FOR DEFOREST CROSLEY

Compani Has Built For the Future and is Ready For Big Output.

COURAGEOUS DECISION.

Engineering Staff Has Produced Set Which More Than Met Standards Set.

In the dark days of last spring, when the wheels of industry were rapidly slowing down and trade was approaching a standstill, a conference was called of the executives of the De Forest Crosley Limited to review the situation and to determine a course of action to be pursued.

Courageous Decision.

Particularly were they impressed with the existence of unemployment, for they realized the fundamental truth that the worker in one industry is the market for the products made by other workers, and vice versa. Remove the buying power of one and the others lose their market, which means unemployment multiplied and a rapid diminution in demand through sheer inability to buy. There were two ways to meet the situation—a policy of inaction or a policy of action.

The former would involve discharging employees, reducing plant and "unbuilding" a trade situation which represented the work of many years of concentrated effort. The latter policy necessitated a firm belief in the essential soundness of Canadian business conditions and a strong faith in the future of the Dominion. It demanded courage, backed by aggressive effort to fight against the tide of affairs. De Forest Crosley officials cast the die and by one bold stroke retrenched this company's position among the leading industrial corporations of Canada.

Survey is Made.

A survey of the Canadian market was made to determine the current buying power and how it could justly be expected to be applied to the purchase of radio. Every centre in the Dominion was surveyed and a quota set for each one. Wages paid to workers were investigated and the amount which they could afford to pay for a radio was determined. The situation was studied in all its complexities, and the various contingent influences duly weighed. The time had come for aggressive action.

The engineering department was called upon to produce a receiver more efficient than had hitherto been produced and which could be sold at a new low price. A period of intense research and experimentation followed. Having determined the design to be adopted, the engineers were sent to find materials which would prove more efficient than those formerly used and would be at the same time more economical. Days were spent studying how five cents could be saved and efficiency simultaneously increased. Finally their labors were complete and a set designed which more than met the standards which had been set.

Building for Future.

De Forest Crosley Limited has proved the fundamental soundness of Canadian conditions and justified the faith in the intelligence and enterprise of the Canadian people. While some were sitting back bemoaning the times, this company was building for the future; 1930 sees De Forest Crosley with a larger and better equipped plant than ever before, with unprecedented production facilities working to capacity with the heaviest advertising campaign in its history and with the largest sales figures to date compared with any previous year. This is a fair omen for the future of industrial Canada in assuming her place among the great manufacturing countries of the world. The aggressive and courageous policy which De Forest Crosley Limited has adopted stands as a tribute to Canadian business enterprise.

RADIO BRINGS NEWS TO THOSE IN NORTH

Word From Home Folk Broadcast to R.C.M.P. in Far Northland.

For nearly ten years, one broadcasting station has linked civilization with out-of-the-way places—sending the so-called "Far North Broadcasts" to the posts of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The transmissions are unusual in that they consist of letters, news reports, and other information from employees, relatives and friends of the adventurous folk living above the Arctic Circle. Each winter, about midnight on Saturdays, broadcast listeners in Canada can hear KDKA transmitting this series of messages—lightning-like information that has saved lives, rearranged winter plans, caused happy reunions and even produced heartaches. The area covered by these "Far North Broadcasts" roughly extends from Greenland to the coast of Labrador and across Northern Canada, a section often without contact with civilization save by these friendly greetings riding on the invisible waves.

ANDREE AFRAID OF CRITICISM

Famous Explorer Believed He Was Committing Suicide When He Set Off For North Pole.

SAYS WALTER WELLMAN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Another chapter of the tragic story of Solomon Auguste Andree has been brought back out of the shadowy past by Walter Wellman, who set out 20 years ago from Atlantic City in the dirigible America on the first attempted aerial voyage across the Atlantic.

Four years before, in the America—a little airship not more than a fourth as large as the R-101—Mr. Wellman had attempted to fly over the North Pole from the same base, on Dane's Island, whence started the ill-fated Andree balloon expedition in 1897.

"One of the men who had worked for Andree up there worked for me," Mr. Wellman said, "and he told me that Andree believed he was committing suicide when he set off for the North Pole in his balloon, but that he went anyway because he was afraid of public criticism.'

Andree was supposed to start for the North Pole in his baloon in 1896, Mr. Wellman said, but he failed to get away. He was severely criticized by the newspapers, and it hurt him deeply.

Mr. Wellman in his seventy-second year now had other stories to tell—reminiscenses of four attempts to reach the North Pole, twice with dog sleds and twice by air, and of that first attempt to fly across the Atlantic.

On a foggy Saturday morning 20 years ago, the America set out on her gallant attempt to chart an aerial path across the Atlantic. She trailed behind her in the water a long serpent of steel casks, in which were stored surplus fuel and supplies. This device was known as an "equilibrator", and it was supposed to serve as ballast. Fogs and storms—which everybody knows about now, but of which nobody had any conception those days—lay ahead of her.

Adrift Three Days.

Four days later, 1,000 miles east of Cape Hatteras, her crew brought her down near the water, cut loose the lifeboat they had swung underneath her, dropped it to the Atlantic with a mighty splash, and from the deck of a steamer that rescued them watched her bag, almost empty of hydrogen now, drift away. For three nights and more than three days they had fought with wind and weather. Once in the dark and fog, they missed by inches the masts of a schooner, whose crew seeing the America's black bag with her engine exhaust pipes red hot, come at them out of the dark sky—were frightened almost out of their wits. Once she almost exploded. On the third morning the sun came out, the hydrogen in her bag began to expand, and she shot up to an altitude of 4,600 feet.

"They'd opened the air valve instead of the gas valve," Mr. Wellman said. "We didn't get that gas valve open a second too soon. And then when we did open it, we were through. We had to let out so much gas that we knew that when the sun went down, and the gas contracted, she would no longer stay up. We were so short of hydrogen before that happened that we'd had to break up one of our three motors, which was out of commission, and throw it overboard."

Since that adventure, Mr. Wellman has never ridden in any kind of aircraft. He has never been up in an aeroplane at all, but he believes in planes as the future masters of the air.

RADIO STEMMED DRIFT TO CITY

ENJOY RADIO AT NIGHT.

The decline in number of persons moving away from farms to towns and cities during the last three years has been attributed, either flippantly or seriously, to ample automobile parking space in the country and to an increased number of radio receiving sets in rural homes. Dismissing the first-named reason without serious consideration, the popularity of broadcasting in the countryside appears to be a significant factor in rural contentment and an answer to that inquisitive song, born of the World War, "How Are You Going to Keep 'Em Down on the Farm After They've Seen Paree."

More than a coincidence it must be, that the crest of popular broadcasting should run parallel to the three years—1927, 1928, and 1929—when the drift from the farm to the city showed a gradual slackening. The movement away from farms to towns and cities was smaller in 1929 than in 1928, smaller in 1928 than in 1927, and smaller in 1927 than in 1926. While it is difficult for the economist or sociologist to single out the basic factors which are arresting this drift from rural homes to cities, unquestionably radio broadcasting is making for rural contentment and calming that unrest which seizes the country-dweller when he compares the drudgery of the farm to the amusements, recreation and social life of the city. This is no longer a condition of such unfavorable comparison. It is trite to repeat that broadcasting has brought the city nearer to the country and that radio reception, with its music, plays, and world important speeches, has ushered the farmer into the halls of music and art and into the auditoriums of statesmen and figures of international renown.

FIVE BIG COVETED GOALS ACHIEVED BY BRUNSWICK

DESIRABLE FEATURES.

Five coveted goals have been before every radio manufacturer for years, namely, (1) selectivity, (2) sensitivity, (3) fidelity of tone, (4) volume without distortion, and (5) simplicity of operation.

Many of the leaders may lay claim to having travelled far toward attaining these five goals, but Brunswick Radio of Canada offers itself as a manufactured proof that the five virtues may be successfully incorporated in a radio receiver. Brunswick, however, has had one goal in sight for all these five attainments. It is expressed in the well-known Brunswick slogan, True Performance. The sensitivity of the Brunswick lines in its three tuned screen-grid stages of radio frequency, its selectivity in its accurate tuning instruments and its completely armored chassis, its fidelity in the delicate balancing of the various parts, its possibilities for great volume without distortion in its special power transformer, power output tubes and a super dynamic speaker capable of resounding to the full reproduction of all notes, high or low, and, lastly, its simplicity of operation lies in the now famous Brunswick uniselector and horizontal tuning scale.

These are desirable features which become apparent once one has operated any of the 1931 models of the Brunswick.

EXTRAORDINARY

Nell Vinick, a Columbia System beauty advisor, is modest. She has never permitted personal biographical facts to be published and the first time her picture appeared in print was in a recent edition of a radio magazine.

ANNOUNCER WAS FOOTBALL STAR

Ford Bond, NBC announcer, was a football star in his high school days in Louisville, Kentucky. Old friends still greet him as "Corky," a name he acquired as a result of a gridiron injury to his leg.

Broadcast Reception On Rock In Mid-Ocean

Light stations—sentinels of safety for mariners—are frequently located on an upifted rock in mid-ocean, on an uninhabited island, or on a coral reef in a lake. These isolated spots are without telephone and telegraph facilities, the keepers of these lighthouses being cut off from civilization for days, weeks and even months. Now, these beacons of navigation have been provided with both radio sets for receiving broadcast programs of entertainment and radio-telephone transmitters and receivers for summoning relief in the event of emergency. The radio-telephone is the one avenue of communication whereby the keepers of these remote lighthouses may establish contact with shore or passing ship, even ships and boats being kept at a forbidding distance by jagged projections of the rocks or by the treacherous character of the reefs.

Chain Broadcasting Began December, 1923

Chain broadcasting, or networks as they are familiarly known, started when KDKA sought affiliation with a group of sister stations—WBZ of Springfield, Mass., WJZ, Newark, N. J., and KYW of Chicago. Short-wave broadcasting interested KDKA as early as 1923, and on December 31 of that year a New Year's greeting was flung across the Atlantic Ocean to Europe—the first international broadcast. H. P. Davis, known as the "Father of Broadcasting," heralded the achievement as "an epoch in human history, for mankind truly had conquered space. The world's boundaries had been shifted. A human voice was heard simultaneously in North America and Europe—a greeting coming to millions of people, spanning Nature's barriers—electric impulses activating man-made machinery, with no connecting media except the invisible and the unknown. Such was the pioneering achievement in voice transmission, and probably in all the year of history no greater feat of science has been recorded."

RADIO DISPLACES OLD RIVER SIGNAL

For 35 Years Colored Lights Were Used to Flash Weather Predictions.

ONCE ONLY STANDBY.

With the coming of the more swift and dependable radio communication, the need for the older modes of communicating the weather along inland water routes is no longer felt. An example of this is the removal of the old weather signal tower atop the Bourse Building in Philadelphia.

For 35 years the signals which were hung from the tower warned pilots on the Delaware River of wind and weather conditions. Colored lights were used at night to flash the weather predictions, while a series of flags were used during the day.

In the days when the tower was erected, rivermen welcomed any direct communication from land. The tower's signals often were the only indication that pilots had of what the elements had in store as they steered down the Delaware to the sea.

Since the development of the radio, the use of the tower has diminished. Two years ago Bourse officials stopped putting up the daily signals, and the tower stood as a mute witness to the changes of maritime progress. To-day many mariners have no doubt nearly forgotten the old beacon which was once their standby.

FIRST BROADCASTING TRANSMITTER WEIGHED LESS THAN 500 POUNDS

The first broadcasting station, KDKA at Pittsburg, was so diminutive as to be accommodated on the top of an ordinary table; the transmitter weighed less than 500 pounds; the energy transmitted was only 500 watts; and the antenna consisted of a short wire stretched between a boiler stack and corner of a building. Ten years later that same broadcasting station's equipment occupies 10,000 square feet of space in a two-story building; the transmitter weighs 328,000 pounds and it is capable of radiating 1,500,000 watts of electrical energy; and the antenna system embraces an area of ten acres.

The first broadcasting station was fashioned from the amateur station 8XK, operated by Frank Conrad, and it emerged from its original home in a garage only, for a time, to occupy restricted space on a table. A decade later there are 600 licensed broadcasting stations; about 3,000 applications on file for permits to operate new stations; and nothing less than an edict as unyielding as a ruling of Benito Mussolini would prevent the operation of 5,000 stations within twelve months were the present ban on broadcast-station licenses lifted. Coast-to-coast hook-ups are routine procedure, and we speak of international broadcasting with the glibness common to a discussion of the weather. While the first invisible radio audience, drafted for the historic event, numbered only 100 persons, the potential audience for any great sporting event or momentous deliverance of the President of the United States may summon an invisible audience of 50,000,000 persons.

The extent of the radio business ten years ago did not exceed $2,000,000 and, aside from jobs for announcers, a few radio operators and radio merchants the increased demand for personnel was not appreciable during the first year of broadcasting. To-day, approximately 400,000 persons are engaged in conducting the affairs of this young business giant; the annual business of the industry exceeds $600,000,000—all of which is either directly or indirectly stimulated by that lusty youngster, born in a garage, broadcasting.

TENOR RECOVERS CRUISER.

James Melton, tenor of The Revellers' quartet, heard in NBC programs, has just recovered his cruiser, which went on the rocks off the Vermont coast of Lake Champlain during his vacation in late summer. The craft was forced aground in a heavy storm, during which the singer almost lost his life in attempting to make the boat ship-shape.

Dog's hair is the latest material to be spun and wwoven into textiles at Bradford, England.

WHAT TRUE PERFORMANCE MEANS TO YOU

"TRUE PERFORMANCE"—two simple words with a wealth of meaning—a victory long sought, now achieved by the new 1931 Brunswick Radio—a receiving set that faithfully recreates sound exactly as it is put on the air, nothing added, nothing taken away. This is what "TRUE PERFORMANCE" means to you—perfect home entertainment.

Completely armoured chassis, one dial control "uni-selector," tone control, rigid tuning scale, power, selectivity, sensitivity, all these perfected, as only Brunswick could, to the highest degree, makes possible Brunswick "TRUE PERFORMANCE."

By what it does a radio proves what it is. Performance is something definite, something you can easily judge for yourself. Visit your Brunswick dealer today, note the supreme beauty of the new cabinets, arrange for a demonstration; this only can reveal to you what "TRUE PERFORMANCE" really means.

RADIO RESEARCH ANNOUNCES COMBINED RADIO-PHONOGRAPH

Standards Revolutionized.

The year 1930 sees a new star on the entertainment horizon—the radio-phonograph combination, the single instrument that combines two of the greatest sources of modern entertainment, recorded music and broadcast programs.

That this new instrument has already gained widespread popularity is readily understood. That its popularity will grow we can confidently anticipate, rendering a double service it is doubly desirable. Yet it is little more costly than a single quality instrument of either type.

The recent development of this new instrument has this year, in many places, raised the question, "Why has such a combination not been previously available?" That question turns us to an interesting review of the progress made in musical reproduction during the last five years

Five years ago the phonograph industry was stagnating into the doldrums of apparent market saturation. For almost ten years the phonograph instrument had made little advance. During recent years sales had fallen with ominous annual decreases.

The radio receiver, which had made its appearance commercially a few years earlier, seemed to be making drastic inroads into the phonograph market. Though at the time it laid little claim to the title of musical instrument, though it had all the objectionable inconvenience of most new developments, the novelty of its accomplishments and of its entertainment found ready asseptance. Undoubtedly in many cases it gained that portion of the family expenditures that might otherwise have been invested in a phonograph.

Standards Revolutionized.

Then came a very definite step upward in the phonograph instrument—the development of what is most commonly known as the orthophonic principle of reproduction. This contribution to the mechanical reproduction of recorded music revolutionized all former phonograph standards. Adding new notes that had formerly been entirely lost, it entirely changed the phonograph's musical character and made all earlier instruments definitely obsolete. Public appreciation of the development was immediate. Phonograph sales bounded upwards.

Meanwhile the radio receiver was also changing its aspect. Investments of millions of dollars annually in research were bringing amazing progress in this new science. Headphones were replaced by the loud speaker. Added power in the receiver took radio from the rank of a hobby that to of a family entertainer. Set and speaker were incorporated in a single cabinet and radio really began to have the qualities of a musical instrument.

Sales grew at an exceptional pace and paved the way for continous progress. Broadcast programs and broadcasting equipment improved in character. Increased attention was turned to the development of the quality of musical reproduction.

Then four years ago came satisfactory batteryless operation of the radio set. Now increased power was made available It opened the way to important advances in both amplification and reproduction. It brough a musical character that overshadowed anything formerly attainable either in radio or mechanical phonograph reproduction.

Short-Wave Stations Are In Great Demand

The commercial demand for permission to construct and operate short-wave broadcasting stations is widespread. Radio companies, telegraph companies, press associations, oil-prospecting concerns, police stations, airplane operating enterprises, public utility corporations, railway companies, and even apple-growers in the Far West are among the diversified industries which have applied for short-wave licenses. The variety of uses to which these short waves would be put range from the novel application of the orchardist in treating insect-infested fruit trees with high-frequency currents to the operation of a network of radio-telegraph stations, competing with telegraph companies in the distribution of commercial messages. In England and Scotland newspaper photographs are being sent and received on short waves; in France, very short waves are being used to treat certain diseases and in quelling riots by communicating on short waves from airplanes to police squads on the ground; in Germany, short waves are being capitalized as a medium for commercial communication purposes; and, in Canada, oddly enough, short-wave broadcasting stations have been established as sort of outposts for forest-fire patrols—airplanes soaring above a woodland fire flash the news to base short-wave stations and the fire-fighting crew is thus speedily summoned to the scene of the conflagration.

TIME SAVERS.

Time-saving devices are coming into greater use in radio circles. The latest is a public address system recently installed in seven studios of WABC, key station of the Columbia network. By use of carbon microphones and magnetic type loud-speakers production men sit in glass-enclosed booths and give instructions to artists rehearsing in the studio without having to run back and forth.

TONE IS COMPELLING FACTOR IN ALL VICTOR INSTRUMENTS ALL HOME RECORDING DEVICE

Synchronous Radio Using Screen Tubes a Feature of Victor.

MANY POSSIBILITIES.

With the [illegible] radio authorities [illegible] anticipation [illegible] the new departure in radio receiver [illegible] tion [illegible] than usually noted by the announcement that Victor has introduced for the first time the only five-circuit micro-synchronous screen-grid radio and a home recording device in combination with the most comprehensive instrument Victor Radio Electrola says a Victor announcement.

Many Possibilities.

[illegible] of commercial application, it is safely predicted that these innovations will present amazing possibilities for greater entertainment. Backed by Victor's thirty years of experience they are considered the logical culmination in the science of sound reproduction and recording.

Victor's achievement [illegible] year, the discovery and making practicable of micro-synchronous balance save the announcement was a tremendous stride toward perfection in radio. It brought to reception a new plane of beauty and realism but now that scientific research has revealed a means whereby this exclusive principle may be augmented through the use of screen grid tubes, further great improvement in selectivity, sensitivity, performance and tone becomes actuality.

Where the incorporating of screen-grid tubes and micro-synchronous balance into a five-circuit radio is a vast improvement over an already highly developed instrument, home recording is an even more radical departure, an entirely new element in home entertainment. Through it all sorts of recording may be done in the home with the same ease which marks the two playing features of this triple instrument, the reproduction of music from air and records.

Tone One Factor.

Tone is once again a compelling factor in all Victor instruments. Improvements in the audio stages have brought out a brilliance from both broadcasts and records hitherto unknown, and the new and exclusive Victor inertia tone arm has further enhanced the beauty of record reproduction. Tone control, as created by Victor, is, of course a feature of the new instrument.

Victor's 1931 radio line, in new and beautifully designed cabinets, consists of five models, a range covering demands for radio in the Dominion. In addition to the new Victor Radio Home-Recording Electrola there are two exquisite models of the new five-circuit micro-synchronous screen-grid Victor Radio, a low-priced Victor Radio and a battery-operated radio.

AVIATION AND RADIO ARE SIAMESE TWINS

Flight of Graf Zeppelin Around World Demonstrated Value of Radio.

Radio and aviation have long been companion sciences—as far back as the World War the voice being broadcast out of the sky. However not until recently have the great potential services of radio to flying reached their full fruition—such as furnishing weather information to pilots in flight, two-way voice communication between one airplane and another in flight, guiding aircraft by radio waves, having the flying machines ride the slenders beams of radio along a charted course, as it were, sending charts and photographs by radio from airplanes to ground radio stations, sending up a tiny broadcasting station in a balloon to report weather conditions in the upper atmosphere, and guiding a radio equipped automobile by radio waves transmitted from an airplane flying at a 2,000-foot altitude.

The flight of the Graf Zeppelin, giant of the air, around the world demonstrated the value of radio in charting its course by radio-direction finders and reporting the progress of the expedition momentarily. Broadcasting rendered an indispensable service in this instance, it being the only known method of establishing communication between the airship and millions of citizens interested in the success of the epochal flight. Mindful of the service of radio to lighter-than-air craft, the Navy Department is equipping its two large airships, now in the course of construction, with powerful broadcasting stations, comparable in power rating and distance coverage to our land broadcasting stations.

RADIO BENEFITS REMOTE PLACES

Hunter Brothers Were in Communication With Land During Flight

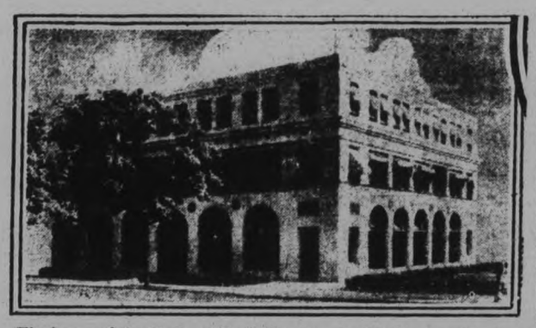
GREAT AID TO LONELY.

Broadcasting in out-of-the-way places, where music and speech penetrate remote points and dispel isolation, conjures up scenes that give additional strength to the platitude "the romance of radio." There is the picture of the lonely school-teacher living in the cabin of a Montana ranch where the terrifying howl of the coyote is alone subdued or made less disturbing by broadcast music from afar; there is the photograph of the antenna towering above a cabin in Arkansas, the occupants of the hut residing 100 miles from a railroad, and yet they listen to the Boston Symphony Orchestra and laugh with Amos and Andy; there is the touching scene of the 90-year-old husband and wife, too feeble to attend the country church, figuratively going to services in New York City or Chicago; there is the desolate picture of a forest ranger, with his look-out post pitched on a mountain miles above sea level, figuratively mingling with the crowds in a million-dollar broadcasting studio as he visualizes the entertainers and revels in their jokes and wise-cracks; and, finally, there are the Hunter Brothers, remaining aloft for 23 days, listening to music while they cruise monotonously above an airport in a sustained endurance flight.

Game Overseer Is Attacked By Deer

LINDSAY, November 6 (Special to The Examiner).—While assisting in the work of removing a number of beaver to their winter quarters at the Experimental Fur Farm near Balsam Lake on Tuesday, R. D. Windsor, Game and Fisheries Overseer, was attacked by a buck deer and seriously injured.

The animal made its attack in the dark, and in order to have himself Mr. Windsor grabbed the angry deer by the horns. He was soon obliged to release his hold, however. The deer charged him several times, and he would undoubtedly have been killed had not some of the attendants come to his rescue. He is at present in the Ross Hospital, suffering from cuts and severe body bruises.



The home of the National Radio Institute in Washington, D. C. This Home-Study School has trained 40,000 men for all branches of the Radio industry.

75,000 STUDENTS STUDY OVER RADIO

Home Study Schools Supply Ever Increasing Demand.

The schools, colleges and other radio training facilities have been coextensive with the growth and development of broadcasting and its by-products. Physical equipment has expanded to meet the demands, and the needs for trained personnel have been met and are being met by home-study schools—supplying the ever-increasing demand for men and women who follow radio either as a vocation or avocation. Take, for example, our own institution—the National Radio Institute—it has expanded from a room, cramped for elbow space, a code madhine, and a couple of chairs—in 1914—to a structure and institution of 18,000 feet of floor space and a staff of 125 teachers and trained personnel.

The home-study schools of the entire United States and Canada, have equipped 75,000 men and women for the pursuit of radio occupations. The National Radio Institute, the oldest of this type of schools, has trained an army of 40,000 students during the decade of broadcasting and its active student enrollment of to-day numbers at least 18,000 persons. Somebody has said that death is a leveler of the various strata of human society, but dismissing this somber thought after using it as a simile, we might say that our National Radio Institute is a world-wide educational leavening process—including in its roster of students and graduates the daughter of a Mexican President, a Russian Colonel, a 90-year-old-man who is convinced that it is never too late to learn, a son of a Lieutenant-General of the Polish Army, a radio serviceman in the remote mountains of a Western State who was proffered a goat in lieu of cash for his services, sons of Congressmen, and radio-men who trek the burning sands of the deserts and scale the mountain fastness—for this world-wide student body is scattered through North America, South America, Alaska, Mexico, Canada, Europe, Asia, Africa, Central America, Australia and the Philippine Islands.

CANUCK TALENT ON C. N. NETWORK

PROVIDE GOOD MUSIC

That Canada, young as it is, and busy as it is, is playing a responsible part in the affairs of the world, glorying in its growth and energetically developing its physical resources, is not wholly bound by things material, but has a deep feeling for what have been called "the finer things of life" is the opinion of E. A. Weir, director of radio for the Canadian National Railways, who discussed to-day the plans of the system for the coming season.

"The response that was made last season to our Sunday afternoon broadcasts from Toronto," he said, "is ample evidence that radio listeners the Dominion over have a desire for good music and a discrimination that is most encouraging to us in our efforts to keep the standards of broadcasting high.

Sir Henry Thornton discussing the subject recently said: "Again we will feature Canadian soloists exclusively. By creating an environment and atmosphere in which Canadian artists could best express themselves, we succeeded in revealing and in a measure developing a wealth of talent that I venture to say most Canadians did not dream existed."

The "Electric Eye"

A by-product of broadcasting is the development and new-found uses of the photo-electric cell—a modified radio tube. This has been called the "wonder cell" or "Aladdin lamp," because of its ever-increasing magical applications. This vacuum tube, slightly larger than the tube we use in our radio receiving sets, is being put to so many uses as to defy enumeration, including: Sorting beans and cigars, detecting smoke in forests and thus reporting forest fires, recording fog and smoke in cities to determine their relationship to public health, registering variations in the magnetism of the earth, counting traffic at intersections of streets, serving as burglar alarms in banks, turning on and off lighthouses and light stations, registering the time of competing horses at race-tracks, operating clocks, without mechanical contact, serving as the "electric eye" in radio vision and television, standardizing various products by grading them with respect to their various hues, and taking the place of photometry in making certain light measure[illegible]

AIR DEVELOPMENT BURDENED BY LAWS

Major-General MacBrien Declares Numerous Regulations Retard Aircraft Growth.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6.—(By the Canadian Press)—Commercial aviation in Canada has made tremendous strides in the past few years, but still greater steps will be made in the future, according to Major General J. H. MacBrien, president of the Aviation League of Canada. The future development of this industry will be greater than might be expected from a country with only ten millions of people, General MacBrien says, for the following reasons:

"Our great distances and widely separated business communities provide ideal conditions to obtain the fullest benefits from the use of air transportation. Much practical productive work is available in our northern areas. Our geographical position is a most important one for in addition to our national routes, we have international and imperial air routes traversing parts of our country."

However, before this development can reach its peak, General MacBrien says, study of air economics must be made. A study of the development of aviation shows that technical design and performance of aircraft has outstripped the study of its economic usefulness. "The greatest changes in the habits of the world are made by time saving devices," the famous aviator continued. He believes a more general knowledge of air economics is needed by the general public, for the science is yet young and its practice not well understood.

One of the greatest obstacles to the progress of the science is the number of laws, rules and regulations, national and international, which retard its growth. The aeroplane is burdened with the law of the sea and the law of the land, as well as with the air laws and regulations, Major-General MacBrien declared.

Radio Greetings Sent To Bottom Of World

Short-wave broadcasting made possible an uninterrupted contact between Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and folks back home during his South Pole expedition. Two-way communication between civilization and the bottom of the world was maintained while this band of explorers sought new scientific facts in this frozen waste of territory. Personal messages to Admiral Byrd and members of his party were sent weekly from WGY of Schenectady, relatives being permitted to transmit intimate facts from the home firesides. For instance, when a boy was born to Mrs. Malcolm P. Hanson, Mr. Hanson, Chief Radio Operator, was informed of the happy event by short-wave broadcasting. This was an unique broadcast, the wonderful wireless waves bringing the home ties over thousands of miles to the bottom of the world. And picture to yourself the romance of radio as suggested in the incident of Malcolm Hanson trudging through snow and in 'way-below-zero weather to points far removed from the Byrd camp in order that he might study the vagaries of radio waves, such as the cause of fading, for instance!

ARE OUR ASSETS OUR LIABILITIES ASKS HISTORIAN

Professor Chester Martin Addresses Members of Canadian Club.

COUNTY IS TOO LARGE.

"I am just wondering whether these things that we consider as assets; our tremendous railway mileage, our wonderful mountain scenery, the lakes and rivers in this great area of Canada, should not be considered, instead of assets, rather in the light of liabilities. And they will not cease to be liabilities, in our time. If we had one-quarter of the area of the Dominion with two or three times as many people, then we would be happier and more contented and a more prosperous people than we are. Our weaknesses are really physical and geographical. Our assets are in the things of the spirit, the spirit that has made the Canadian nation."

Professor Chester Martin, head of the History Department at the University of Toronto, addressed the Women's Canadian Club in the auditorium of the Public Library yesterday afternoon, taking as his subject some important Canadian problems.

The president of the club, Miss Margaret Hamilton, introduced the speaker as a native of New Brunswick, one of the early Rhodes scholars who made history his postgraduate subject at Oxford University, who was for some time head of the History Department of the University of Manitoba, who has earned an international reputation as a speaker, research worker and as author of several books, and who now replaces Professor Wrong at the Toronto University.

Professor Martin outlined at some length the difficulties confronting the Fathers of Confederation and the early Canadian fight against the barriers of physical geography. He spoke of the forming of the British North American Act and remarked:

"The history of that is not altogether pleasant to reflect upon in some of its phases. It is not all that we thought of it in the days of jubilee. The province of New Brunswick, for instance, was adverse to Confederation, and it was only by the use of influences and expedients that cannot be justified in the converts to responsible government that a verdict in its favor was returned a year later. It has been said that 'the Constitution had a rough time of it.' But Sir John Macdonald said that it must be done and the people would get used to it. So measures undertaken by men who were not squeamish carried it through.

"But it was done and we are all thankful for it, and it has been remarkably successful. We can congratulate ourselves on the difficulties from which Confederation was evolved. They were a challenge to the insight of the Fathers of Confederation. It was the first necessary step in the evolution of a nation."

Hudson Bay Company Regnant.

Professor Martin referred to the generations when the flag of the Hudson Bay Company, with "H.B.C." on a red field and the Union Jack in the corner, flew over one-quarter of the continent; to the control of the natural resources of the provinces, assumed by the Government; to the financing and building of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and said: "But these three things; the British North American Act, the westward expansion and the building of the C.P.R., were only the means to an end in the upbuilding of a nation.

"The real work of building a Canadian nation was to be deferred to a later period and is peculiarly the task of this generation."

Speaking of the monster grain crop of the past year, when one hundred and fifty million bushels of grain were harvested in the West, he said that there were three phases to this problem: 1st, the keeping down of the costs of production. "And a great many people in the West say you can't do that without keeping down the tariff"; 2nd, the keeping down of the costs of transportation; "And there you come in conflict with the railways," and, 3rd, the procuring of markets.

"I don't think we have any such thing in Canada as a national public opinion. It is an easy thing to form in Great Britain or countries like Belgium, with their dense populations. In England, the London Times, for instance, is read in Devon on the same day. And the Manchester Guardian is read in the Highlands. But, in Canada, how many of us read newspapers printed outside of Ontario or even outside of our own cities?"

The speaker referred to his own class of 192 students at the University, where he discoveerd that only 6 or 7 of these were in the habit of reading newspapers printed outside of the province of Ontario, and 4 or 5 of those read the Montreal Gazette only.

"Very few of us have any contacts other than those in our own communities. In twenty minutes, it could be made possible, if they were available, to read the editorials of the principal papers of Canada, from Halifax to Vancouver.

"Now, what is the answer to these conflicting interests? We should set our faces resolutely to recognize one thing; that perhaps in our lifetime many of these interests will never be reconciled. But we can approach them in a more generous spirit and the whole national life of the country can thus be raised.

"It has been said that magnamity in politics is seldom its greatest virtue, but I think there are unmistakable signs of a growing national spirit and a greater generosity in public affairs."

Illustrating this, the speaker mentioned the wonderful spirit in which every line of the Duncan report was implemented, and also referred to the manner in which the western provinces regarded with equanimity and absence of complaint the necessity for Governmental control, for so many years, of their natural resources, when a great Federal purpose and disability in revenue compelled their transfer for a time.

"I regard the way which the Government in power and the Opposition responded last year to the settlement of that point, as worthy of the best traditions of our country.

"What really constitutes a nation is not the extent of its territory nor is population, but the spirit which animates it in the discipline of that nation."

His audience accorded the professor a standing vote of thanks, after the president, Miss Hamilton, had voiced their appreciation of the address.

AFRAID TO FACE COURT IN CANADA THUG CONFESSED

O'Brien and Lass Fighting Extradition From New York to Toronto.

OLD TERM TO SERVE.

(Special to The Examiner—Copyright, 1930)

TORONTO, Nov. 6—In fear of a long term in a Canadian penitentiary and the possibility of lashes "Two-gun" Babe O'Brien, of Detroit and "Sunny" Lass, alias Sam Levy, of Toronto, are going to fight extradition from New York to this city. After being sought for six weeks by the Toronto police on warrants charging them with holding up the bookkeeper of the Durable Waterproof Co. on September 19, and robbing him of $1,021. The pair were trapped in a bedroom in West 34th Street, New York, last Saturday by Detective-Sergeants Walter McConnell and Archie McCathie, and New York detectives.

O'Brien who is said by the police made it quite plain that he fears Canadian courts, judges and prisons. The way he talked raised some suspicion that he might be the notorious Pat Norton on whose head there is a $5,000 reward for bank robbery and murder following the hold up at Melbourne, Ont. in 1921, but he is not Norton.

Prefers American Prison

"I'll do life down here in the States rather than go back to Canada and take a chance of being strung up or get life and a lot of lashes," O'Brien told New York police when being questioned. "The people up in Canada are too tough on us American citizens. I want to go right back and finish my unexpired time in Michigan, from where I escaped."

McConnell and McCathie have returned to Toronto from New York. It is expected that it may take two or three weeks to present the evidence to the New York courts to bring back O'Brien and Lass.

Detective-Sergt. McConnell was given certain direct information as to O'Brien and Lass being in New York, and Inspector of Detectives Murray at the direction of Chief Draper sent McConnell to New York. It was first stated the gunmen were arrested in the Pennsylvania station, but it is now known they were caught in a room in West 34th Street. When the detectives rapped Lass answered and unlocked the door. The detectives with their revolvers drawn ordered the men to put up their hands. Questioned as to where their weapons were, Lass said they had none, but the police seized his clothes and found a loaded revolver in a pocket.

Had Safe-Breaking Outfit

In the room the officers found a complete safe-breaking outfit of a type used by the old safe-crackers, consisting of several crowbars, cross-arms and a "can-opener" device to be attached to the end to make holes in the back of safes. O'Brien admitted that the tools were his and said they were made in Canada. He had learned the trade of tool-making while working as a black-smith in the Michigan prison.

"We were going to do several jobs in New York City cracking safes," explained O'Brien, "and dig up enough money to sail to Paris, where Lass has an uncle." The New York police who examined the equipment stated it is the best set of safe-breaking tools they ever saw.

The police also found a bag of "dum-dum" bullets. The lead tips had been split four ways with a penknife. Bullets prepared in that fashion tear large holes where they hit the body, police pointed out. They also found a pawn ticket which brought the recovery of a high-speed hand-drill and twelve steel bits for boring.

The pair have retained lawyers to fight their return to Toronto. Lass, who says he was born in Poland, is about thirty years of age. He has been known to Canadian police since he was twelve years of age, and is married to the daughter of a well-known resident of Toronto.

QUOTA ADOPTION SEEMS PROBABLE

Imperial Conference Committee to Report on System Next Monday.

DAIRY PRODUCTS OUT.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 6 (C.P.)—The special Imperial Conference Committee which has been investigating the expansion of intra-Empire trade by the inauguration by Britain of a quota system, import boards or a system of bulk purchase, completed its report last night. It will be presented to the heads of delegations on Monday.

The report, it is understood, recognizes the practicability of a quota as applied to wheat and flour, but does not make specific recommendations that the quota be applied to recommendations, not being within the authority of the committee.

Quotas are not regarded as practicable in the cases of dairy products, canned fruits and canned fish.

Are You Letting the Chance of Securing $100 a Month Slip By?

There will always be people who will prefer to let the future take care of itself. They think they will get along somehow. True, they see people who have become dependent on friends or relatives for a living and having a very rough time of it.

But they think such an unpleasant fate couldn't happen to them. Of course not! And yet, what are they doing to prevent it?

Very few people can put by sufficient money for emergencies. Something they "want" always comes along to wipe out their savings Money that is easily got at is almost never kept.

There must be some way so that their savings can be protected, even from the saver, and there should be also a provision for financial help in case of an emergency.

Just such a helpful and workable plan for providing you with a safe sure income has been devised by the Canada Life. It will create an immediate income for your dependents should you die before the time comes when you plan to retire. But the real thought is to make you independent of friends or relatives, or the whim of an employer, when you get on in years and your earning power begins to lessen.

It means an effort, of course for the person who undertakes to be independent, but it is better to realize the facts about this vital matter now before it is too late. Our plan is already helping thousands of others along the road to safety and comfort in later life.

If you are a thrifty, forward-looking Canadian citizen, determined to look to no one but yourself for your support, we suggest you fill out and mail the coupon below. It will bring information by mail without any obligation on your part.

THIS COUPON WILL BRING BOOKLET BY MAIL.

COUNTY AND CITY TEACHERS MEET IN CONVENTION IN NORMAL SCHOOL

Others Went to Windsor and Detroit Where They Will Inspect Schools.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Quite a number of the local teachers went to Windsor this week to survey the schools there and in Detroit.

A joint convention of Peterborough County and City Public and Separate School teachers is being held in the Assembly Hall of the Normal School. The President of the county teachers, J. H. Breckenridge, occupied the chair this morning.

The first part of the morning was occupied in routine business such as reading the minutes and hearing the financial statement. The reports were adopted.

The fee for membership to the county teachers was fixed at fifty cents. This fee is refunded if the teachers take either "The School" or "The Canadian Teacher."

Mr. Breckenridge in delivering his address spoke on the "Effects of the Rural School in the Progress of Canada." Rural teachers receive less salary but do more real work than urban teachers. The latter are more closely supervised and have to keep up to a high standard but the former, if conscientious have more scope for activity. The great reward of a teacher is a knowledge of work well done. The country, with its trees, flowers, animals, and other attractions of nature, is the best place in which to live.

"Education is the process of becoming acquainted with things of Nature and adapting them to our own uses and development" is one author's definition. Nature has a vast fund of things to be studied and examined.

Money is not the great end of education. Education cannot be reckoned in terms of money. A pupil, really educated, may not have great means of amassing wealth. Character is vastly of greater importance than accumulation of money. The country school has great opportunities to develop real character.

We are living in a time of luxury in pleasures, entertainments, transportation, and home conditions. Our advances in all forms of comfort have been marked in the last few years.

County Schools Progressed

County schools have progressed. Buildings, libraries, teachers themselves are vastly better than they were years ago.

Every country needs an educated people. Hosts of persons can earn good a living without much education. The love of trees, flowers, sunsets, is more desirable than the love of dollar bills. Those who work for money only live really very narrow ives as a fact. Uneducated people have not as much pleasure as educated ones after all.

The progress of our nation depends upon our public schools. Let us give children the better things—honor, truth and right.

Adopt Resolution.

Miss Kay gave a report of the Ontario Educational Association. A resolution was adopted in Toronto last Easter that public schools do not open until after Labor Day the same as High Schools and Collegiate Institutes do. The superannuation scheme of the teachers of Ontario has been very successful financially. Many such schemes in other countries have often become insolvent

Dr. James L. Hughes at the convention said 'Education was a conscious growth of the divine." He deprecated the use of corporal punishment as he said it did not develop the best qualities of character which should be the chief aim of education.

Miss Wiman gave a report on some of the features of the Ontario Educational Association. Teachers are judged by pupils from various stand points according to one speaker. They must be attractive in appearance, have good academic standing, and ability to impart knowledge efficiently.

Mr. Ferrier, of the Industrial School, gave some of his experiences with underprivileged boys. Those who came under his care are nearly all addicted to cigarettes; a large percentage of them are petty thieves. Their parents did not watch how their leisure time was spent and did not become companions to them. The boys thus grew up in a bad and vicious environment.

Dr. Putnam advocated travel for boys. This had been done to great advantage in the British Isles. It gave them an information and a breadth not obtainable in school.

At the O.E.A. a resolution was discussed advocating that pupils editions of the Public School arithmetic have no answers. Cumulative sick leave was advocated also. An interesting discussion took place there of the teaching of temperance. It was felt by many that the removal of temptation was the first condition necessary. The value of home work was also discussed. In rural schools little seemed necessary, and in urban schools there was a danger of its being overstressed.

Miss Blanche Clegg added much to the morning's pleasure by a well-rendered solo. She was accompanied by Miss Mabel Clarry. To the enthusiastic applause Miss Clegg responded generously with a delightful encore.

An interesting feature of the morning's program was the telling of stories by three teachers. Miss Sarah Hosie told a thrilling story of the stealing of a count's son by a gipsy. The story cannot be reproduced here, unfortunately. It was most interesting.

Miss Victoria Robinson told of the use she made of stories especially for small children. Her stories were intended for them particularly, and pointed a distinct moral. She had them illustrated by crayon sketches of her own which must have certainly made them more easily understood and realistic. Valuable information may be given to pupils by means of stories.

Miss Ora Dunford told a story of a little boy who by self-sacrifice had actually done much good. Stories such as Miss Dunford's must certainly have a good moral effect.

SOCIETY PLANS YEARLY EVENT

Good Attendance at Regular Meeting of George Street Church L. A.

REPORTS READ.

There was a splendid attendance at the November meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of George Street United Church yesterday afternoon, held in the boardroom of the Sunday school hall.

The president, Mrs. W. P. Hetherington, presided, and opened the meeting with prayer. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss McCamus, and Mrs. R. Parnell led in prayer.

After Mrs. G. C. Staples, the secretary, had given her report, and Mrs. Oke the financial statement, the reports of the standing committees were received.

Mrs. Hagerman and her corps of workers, for the sick and visiting committee, reported ninety-three calls made since last meeting. Mrs. B. Shortly reported for the cupboard committee, Mrs. I. Mark for the social, Mrs. Yelland for the parsonage, Miss Higgins for lookout committee, and, in the absence of Miss Morrow, Mrs. Staples read her report for the flower committee. Miss Mary Elliott, secretary of the Christmas fair committee, gave the report of this important annual event of George Street activities, which will be held in the Sunday school auditorium on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 27 and 28, with a fowl supper served each evening. The convenors of the different booths have their work nearly completed, and the prospects are that it will be one of the best bazaars and suppers ever staged in George Street Church, which is noted for this annual event. Mrs. J. Stubbs made a plea for assistance for her booth of home-made cooking and the members were urged to receive the canvassers for the supper graciously.

Election of Officers.

Mrs. Hetherington announced that the election of officers would be held at the December meeting, and a nominating committee composed of Mrs. B. Shortly, Mrs. J. Stubbs and Mrs. Fisher were appointed.

Announcement was made of a play entitled "Mary Ann," under the auspices of the C.G.I.T. girls, to be held on Friday, Nov. 14, announcements to appear in The Examiner later.

Dr. J. E. Middleton was the speaker of the afternoon, giving a report of the convention of the United Church held in London, Ont., recently, where he went as a delegate from the Peterborough presbyterial.

Mr. Middleton said he came back from the convention impressed more and more with the fact that we have a great church. There were gathered there four hundred people, representatives from all parts of Canada, West Indies and Bermuda, representing different presbyteries. The convention lasted ten days and two meals were served each day by the ladies of the different United Churches of the city. Here I met so many men I had heard of but never saw before, and I came home impressed with the feeling of a great brotherhood. This convention was attended by prominent leaders from England, Scotland and Ireland, and they told us Canada had blazed the way in respect to Church Union and that the eyes of the world were upon our church in Canada. Some called it an experiment in Canada, but the moderator soon replied, "It is no experiment, but a real live working church."

Mr. Middleton also called attention to the new United Church hymn book, called "Hymnody," which will be issued about the first of the year. They have been working on this book for five years and it represents a very fine collection of hymns, many of them old Welsh hymns. He referred gloriously to the excellent service given by Rev. Harold Young in the arranging of the new hymn book.

A hearty vote of thanks was voiced by Mrs. C. E. Smith, seconded by Mrs. B. Shortly, to Mr. Middleton for his excellent address, and extended to him by Mrs. Hetherington.

The meeting closed by singing the Mizpah benediction.

The present membership of the Socialist Party in Great Britain is now about 2,100,000, whereas in 1920 it was 4,359,000.

Tiger Cubs Defeat Panthers for Group Title

TIGERS MEET BEACHERS ON THANKSGIVING

Hamilton Club Has No Trouble in Subduing O.R.F.U. Twin City Entry.

ELLIOTT INJURED.

"Pop" Leadley Will Take Part in Tigers Game Against Wheelers.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6 (C.P.) — Now that the Western group championship of the Ontario Rugby Football Union senior series has been decided, football fans will divert their attention to-day to sizing up the probable chances of the respective teams engaged in the other two Eastern Canada major league unions.

Hamilton Tiger Cubs had little difficulty clinching the Western section title when they defeated Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers yesterday 12 to 3, and qualified to meet the classy Balmy Beach Twelve at Toronto on Thanksgiving Day in the O.R.F.U. final.

The Beaches have already won the Eastern crown, but will play their final scheduled fixture against Camp Borden here under the flood lights at Ulster Stadium Friday night. This contest should prove in the nature of a constitutional for Teddy Reeve and company.

Major interest locally centered about tickets for Saturday's clash here between Queen's University and the undefeated Intercollegiate Union leaders, University of Toronto. Even though the seating capacity has been enlarged to accommodate more than 20,000 enthusiasts, the Stadium is not likely to prove big enough to care for the thousands searching for the coveted ducats.

The annual visit of the Tricolor is considered more or less of a blue ribbon event and particularly on this occasion, as the 1930-31 destiny of the college championship hinges on the result. Victory for the Blue and White-garbed warriors of Coach Les. Blackwell will give them the title regardless of the outcome of their game with University of Western Ontario at London, on November 15, but a defeat will mean practically another crown for Queen's, who are but a point behind Varsity in the standing. The Tricolor will play McGill University in the final scheduled fixture.

The appearanec of "Pep" Leadley, peerless drop-kicking half-back, cheered the hearts of Coach Mike Rodden and Tiger supporters when the Dominion champions last night commenced training for their important tilt with Montreal A.A.A. at Tigertown. It is reported Leadley will be used only as a relief player and only long enough in that capacity to qualify him for the play-offs which the Bengals seem confident of reaching, despite their weakened condition.

Alex Denman, husky lineman, who has been out of the game, will turn out for to-day's practice and will likely start as a regular against the Winged Wheelers.

Argos at Ottawa

While Ottawa Senators have yet to win a match in the Big Four race, Toronto Argonauts, who journey to the Capital this week, are not taking any chances with the youthful Senator twelve, the latter showed marked improvement against Hamilton last week and expecting they will continue to display improved football the Scullers have been training faithfully for the tussle which means plenty to them. Tigers are expected to beat Montreal, so to keep pace with the champions, Argos must win to make their home game with Tigers the deciding one of the Interprovincial race.

McGill, who have yet to win a game in the Intercollegiate, expect to enter the win column against the Western Mustangs. The Montrealers surprised the football world last Saturday by holding Varsity to a tie and as Western has played smart football against Queen's and Varsity in addition to beating the Red Men at London, indications point to a tight struggle before the victor is decided.

O.H.A. BULLETIN.

Entries for the S.P.A. senior and junior series are coming in rapidly. Peterborough Hockey Club and St. Andrew's College being the latest received for play in the junior competition. Entries close with W. A. Hewitt, O.H.A. Secretary, Daily Star, on Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Toronto clubs may receive player certificates at the Mail and Empire sports department after 7 o'clock tonight, provided fees are paid.

The Executive Committee will hold its final meeting of the year in the Daily Star building, fourth floor, Friday, Nov. 14, at 8 p.m., to prepare for the annual meeting in the Royal York Hotel, Saturday, Nov. 15, at 10 a.m.

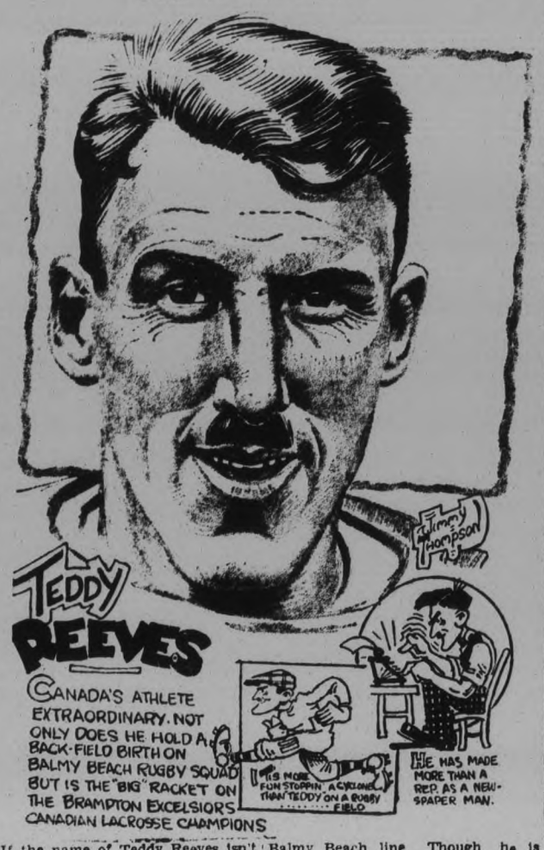
Aurora will have an intermediate team as well as a junior entry in the O.H.A. this season.

The Belleville A.A.'. has made application to enter teams in the senior B intermediate and junior series.

AUSTRALIAN WHEAT CROP.

MELBOURNE, Australia, November 6. — F. M. Forde, Minister without portfolio, to-day estimated this year's wheat yield in Australia at about 210,000,000 bushels, of which 160,000,000 bushels would be available for export.

ONE OF THE BEST



If the name of Teddy Reeves isn't right up at the top when the dopesters star talking about Canadian all-star athletes there's a mistake somewhere. Teddy played a leading part in the winning of the lacrosse title for the Brampton Excelsiors this year. Now that rugby is going strong it does not seem strange to hear the fans yelling "come on Teddy" with all the power of their lungs when he's fighting with the Balmy Beach line. Though he is slow on the start it is a regular thing for him to plough through for yards against even the best opposition. When he is not playing at something or other Teddy is writing about it and he has become famous at that game too. Then in his spare time he devotes himself to the training of other athletes who do not in the least suffer from the time he spends on them.

Hockey Exhibitions Produce Plenty of Goals; Should Be No Scarcity of Markers This Year

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—If the exhibition games of the last couple of nights can be taken as an indication, there will not be any great scarcity of goals in professional hockey this season. For a long time the smallness of the scores was a deplorable feature of the professional games. These goalless ties and 1 to 0 scores rob fans of many thrills and are far from being appreciated by the cash customers. At Fort Erie Tuesday night the Ottawa Senators and Buffalo Bisons produced five goals, Ottawa winning by 5 to 3. Last night at Montreal Canadiens trounced Providence Rhode Island Reds by 8 to 4, and at London Toronto Maple Leafs beat London by 6 to 2. Twelve goals in one game and eight n another — none can complain of lack of scoring there. Of course, the games referred to have been contests in which major league teams have opposed representatives of minor leagues. On the other hand, the minor league players have not been kept off the score sheet. The fact that the contests were exhibitions may have prompted the players to take more chances than in a league fixture, but it must also be remembered that the men are not in midseason form. Anyhow, these preseason scores are encouraging.

Police Capture Pair After Chase To Ohio

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6. (CP)—Believed to have participated in a series of robberies from one end of the province to the other a few months ago, Allen Archer 32, and his wife Claira Archer, have been arrested in Ashtabula, Ohio, and brought back here to face trial.

Provincial Police declare there are at least 37 charges of housebreaking facing Archer. His wife is held on a charge of receiving stolen property.

According to police, Archer operated in conjunction with Harry Coulter, alias Lee, who is now serving 14 years imprisonment for his part in the robberies and for escaping from Napanee jail.

O'Leary Signs As Coach For the Chicago Cubs

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—(A.P.)—The Cubs yesterday signed Charles O'Leary and Ray Schalk as coaches for 1930.

Schalk was with the Cubs as a coach during the 1929 campaign, while O'Leary coached the New York Yankees. The employment of O'Leary was something akin to a coaching trade, as Jimmy Burke, another Cub coach this year, joined the Ovens. Guests present were the

Leafs Beat Tecumsehs in Exhibition Tilt

TORONTO SQUAD CUTS LOOSE IN FINAL PERIOD

Charlie Conacher Nets Three Counters for the Winners.

CLANCY PLEASES.

Tecumsehs Impress London Fans as Being Real Contenders For International Title.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 6.— Toronto Maple Leafs, National Hockey League entry, defeated the London Tecumsehs of the international loop, by 6 to 2 in the opening exhibition game of the season played before 2,000 spectators at the London Arena last night. For two periods Roy Brothers's Tecumsehs gave the major league stars a real argument, but in the last period, the Leafs cut loose and scored three goals within seven minutes.

Charlie Conacher, youthful wing player for the Leafs, scored three goals, while Harold Cotton, Joe Primeau and "Ace" Bailey, netted the other three counters. Archie Briden and Leo Queneville were the goal scorers for the Tecumsehs.

It was a strenuous game of hockey, despite the fact that it was merely an exhibition. A total of 23 penalties were handed out and many of these were for infringements of the new rules. The players frequently packed the defense, while they were also tempted to catch the puck in the air.

London Goalkeeper Hurt

The Tecumsehs impressed the London hockey fans who were in attendance, and should be real contenders in the International Hockey League this season. Both forward lines have developed considerable team play and London was handicapped by having but two defense players, as Clem Loughlin has not yet reported.

Borden Norfolk, London goalkeeper, was injured in the first period when one of Charlie Conacher's bulletlike drives crashed on his cheekbone. He dropped to the ice and Alex Wood, substitute goalkeeper for the Chicago Black Hawks, played the remainder of the game in the London nets. Benny Grant for the Leafs turned in a clever performance, clearing a total of 43 shots.

Clancy Pleases

Toronto Maple Leafs have a spectacular N.H.L. club, while he did not break into the scoring column, turned in a colorful performance. He received a rude body jolt when Alvin Groh unexpectedly stepped into him in the third period. The Leafs' "kid" forward line of Conacher, Conacher, Jackson and Primeau worked smoothly and were always a source of worry. The regular line of Bailey, Blair and Cotton was also effective, while "King" Clancy and "Happy" Day form a "brick wall" defense.

QUEEN'S SECONDS WIN 15-7 DECISION

Defeat U. of T. in Final Intermediate Group Contest.

KINGSTON, Nov. 6.—In the last scheduled game of the central group of the inter-collegiate intermediate series Queen's defeated University of Toronto here yesterday afternoon by 15 to, 7, loose handling of the ball figuring in practically all the scores.

Queen's secured three points on a placement kick by Teskey less than two minutes after the start, following a Toronto fumble. In the second quarter, Teskey kicked to the deadline, and after Kostuick broke for a run of 50 yards, Alexander was shoved over for a touchdown on the third down, Teskey converting Smith's kick for a point made the half-time score 10 to 1.

In the third quarter Teskey kicked for a point after a Toronto fumble, and a little later Teskey went through for yards and Garvie galloped for 25, Teskey then scoring his second placement kick. In the last quarter the visitors' onside kick went for a single point, and a little later Teskey's kick was blocked, and Smith fell on the ball behind the Queen's goal-line. A terrific punt by McNichol gave Queen's their last point.

Flying Frenchmen Outscore Providence

MONTREAL, Nov. 6.—In a fast exhibition game last night Canadiens defeated Providence, title-holder of the Canadian-American League, by 8 goals to 4. The match brought out mid-season speed on the part of the world champions, as Morenz, Joliat, Sylvio Mantha and Pete Lepine flashed their best wares and the youngsters of the squad did their best to prove merit sufficient to hold places on the team.

While Providence worked hard, with Gaudreault, Hart Leseur and Carson outstanding, they could not cope with the attack thrown against them.

DUNCAN PLANS MUCH PLAYING FOR FORWARDS

Leaf Management Depending on Clancy to Add Defensive Power and Extra Punch.

BAILEY ON FIRST.

Former Local O.H.A. Player to Take Up His Old Position on the Wing.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 6.—(CP)—Speed and more speed is the keynote of the makeup of the Toronto Maple Leafs now playing on an exhibition tour preparing themselves for the National hockey league season opening.

Managing director Conny Smythe, who has this year signed over the coaching duties to the big smiling defense star, Art Duncan made one of the surprise deals of the trading season when he swapped two players and $35,000 in cash for Frank "King" Clancy, Dynamic defenseman formerly with Ottawa Senators. Purchase of Clancy will not only strengthen the rear-guard but will also provide the Leafs with additional speed.

Rated one of the best defensemen of all time, Clancy will team on the defense with Clarence "Happy" Day, who has been with the Leafs since turning professional. The pair will form one of the fastest guards in the league.

Just who will do the net minding duties for the locals is an uncertainty yet. If, however, youthful Benny Grant, the Owen Sound boy who played with Minneapolis of the American Association last season, lives up to the expectations of Smythe, it is likely he will be retained in place of Lorne Chabot, the latter has been with the Leafs since New York Rangers traded him for John Ross Roach and plenty of cash.

Coach Duncan plans to form two forward lines only, this season as he is a firm believer in giving his players plenty to do. The first string line will be composed of Andy Blair at centre with "Ace" Bailey and Harold Cotton flanking him. Blair, who experienced an off-season last year and who has been bothered during training by defective teeth, has shown a return to his old form in pre-season exhibition games, much to the pleasure of club officials Bailey, the leading N.H.L. scorer two years ago has given indications he will be hard on the opposing goalkeepers by the force and accuracy of his sniping. Cotton, a consistent winger at all times rounds out a snappy looking trio.

The secondary line should prove just as good as the so-called first stringers. Youthful, big and fast, Charlie Conacher, Harvey Jackson and Joe Primeau, styled the Marlboro "Kids". Gained valuable experience during the 1929-30 hockey grind and already predictions are being made they will prove the standout line of the league.

Conacher was operated on last spring for removal of a kidney, but loss of the organ has improved his ability. Judging by his progress since the team took to the ice, he weighs almost 200 pounds. Just a couple of pounds less than his more illustrious brother, Lionel, of the Montreal Maroons.

Tricky Centre Man.

Primeau, tricky little centre, has also taken on weight during the summer months, an asset he was badly in need of. He was one of the Leafs best play-makers last year.

Only two utility players will be carried by the Leafs, if present plans of Coach Duncan are carried through. The Leaf mentor did not try out many recruits during the training session here and at Parry Sound, despite the loss of Art Smith and Eric Pettinger in the deal for Clancy. Smith an aggressive defense player has been replaced by "Red" Horner, another Marlboro product, who will do all the relief work on the defense "Shrimp" McPherson, who has played in various minor professional league's since deserting the "Simon Pures" here some years ago, has practically assured himself a place on the team and will likely be used as relief performer on both front lines. McPherson starred in the American Association during the past season at centre ice, but he is also a capable wing performer.

RONNIE HEADLEY INJURED IN BOUT

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 6. (CP)—Falling from the ring in the eight round of his bout with Joe Marsh of Auburn, N.Y., here last night, Ronnie Headley, Ottawa, welterweight, was critically injured. The fight was awarded to Marsh when physicians refused to allow Headley to continue and the Ottawan was rushed to hospital for X-ray examination to determine whether his neck is broken.

Doctors were unable to determine the extent of Headley's injuries. A loose second rope failed to hold Headley as Marsh crowded him and the Ottawan toppled backward striking his neck on the edge of the ring floor and falling to the tanbark of the coliseum five feet below. Referee Lou Marsh of Toronto gave Headley a minute to recover and resume the bout, but when physicians said it would be dangerous for him to continue, Marsh had no alternative but to award the bout to his namesake.

Hamilton Petition Asks Women's Return

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 6 (C.P.). — Petitions seeking the return to Canada of Mrs. Alice Ainsworth and Miss Alice Barton, two local women deported to England recently because they were epileptic sufferers and public charges at an Ontario institution, are being circulated here, Alderman Tom Lewington has announced.

The petitioners further ask amendments be made to the prevailing laws to prevent a recurrence of similar cases.

FINAL PLAY FOR LEGON'S SQUAD TO-DAY

Boys Go Through Heavy Drilling in Preparation For Saturday's Title Battle.

FOR NEAL TROPHY.

P.C.I. Gives Promise They Will Give Eastern Champions Real Battle For Supremacy.

In preparation for their play-off fixture with Belleville Collegiate here this Saturday, the local Collegiate Garnet and Gray team were given their final scrimmage for the week, this afternoon.

For the past three days the boys have been put through heavy drills and no casualties have been reported. Coach Legon is sparing nothing that hi team may be right in the fight from the first whistle and is counting heavily on the aggregation to retain the Neal trophy, emblematic of the Central Ontario championship, and which has been won by P.C.I. for the last two years.

The newcomers, brought up from the Intermediate team, have been filling in nicely at their positions and the entire squad gives promise that they will give the Eastern champions a real struggle for supremacy.

Strong Kicker.

For many years P.C.I. teams have felt the need of a kicker, and the inefficiency in this department in the past has cost them dearly.

This year, however, coach Legon feels that this assignment is in most capable hands. Vern Armstrong has been carrying the kicking burden for the greater part of the season and is booting them higher and farther in every contest. He is without question, the most successful booter the "Petes" have had for some years and will undoubtedly be of increasing value to his team, as they enter the Ontario playdowns where a single point may spell victory or defeat for them.

The local boys have shown a remarkable defensive system this fall and throughout the six games of the schedule have had only 23 points scored against them or an average of 4 points per game. Very few teams, if any, can win games on 4 points and this speaks highly for the coaching the team has received and assures the local supporters that Belleville will have no easy time piling through the local front line.

Hugh Waddell, at inside, has been a tower of strength in breaking up the opposition attacks, and few plays get through his territory.

Ab. Lord, middle wing man: Howie Macdonald, centre player and Jack Clayton, inside, also prove mighty stumbling blocks for their opponents' line plungers to overcome. However, if the plunger is given a hole through the line, he is looked after by Wilf. Preston and Vern Armstrong, on the seconday defence.

Both these boys are high class tacklers and know how to step in and get their men before he has travelled far.

Speedy Youngsters.

The boys are a particularly speedy lot and Joe Dunkerley, Ab. Lord, "Army" Armstrong, Wib Ward, Walter Dinneson and Gordie Young, keep the opposition on their toes watching them.

Don Mackey and Floyd Wagar are two of the lightest players on the line-up and despite this seemingly great handicap, they show to great advantage with their classy tackling.

Grant Breckenridge and Oscar Sloane, are two other clever line men who play their positions well and are smart ground gainers.

The half line positions will be filled by the well known pair, Gordie Young and Jack Richardson, both fast and clever ball carriers with Doug. Fraser looking after the relief work on this division.

Rugby fans can show their appreciation of the team and of the Collegiate officials who make the fielding of the team possible by turning out in large numbers to see the boys in action at James Stevenson Park, Saturday afternoon.

The local collegiate athletic society is the only body fostering rugby in the city and is deserving of the wholehearted support of the many followers of the fall pastime.

BURCH SIGNS WITH AMERKS

Veteran Centre Comes to Terms and Will Play in Opening Game.

IN GOOD CONDITION.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—Word was received yesterday at the New York American's headquarters from Galt, Ont., where the star-spangled troupe is in training for the opening game next Tuesday that Billy Burch, who became a holdout last week had accepted Gerard's terms and signed a contract. The Americans' mentor is highly elated in bringing Burch to terms, for he declares that the veteran centre man is in the pink of condition. He has taken off twenty pounds and Gerard predicts that Burch will have one of the best years since he has been playing hockey.

Gerard has been working Burch on the front line with Patterson and Himes, and Galt hockey critics say that it is one of the best trios that they have seen in hockey. All three pack a wicked shot. They are hard checkers and should aid Gerard considerably. It has not been definitely decided whether this will be the Americans frontline when the season gets underway, but the American's manager is more than pleased the way they shape up and it would not be surprising to see them lineup when the whistle blows in Boston next Tuesday.

Jack Murray of Brockville, Ont., has been trying out for goal, and though in need of lot of experience, Gerard is undecided whether he will carry him or not. Murray shows promise of reaching the big show, and for this season, the star-spangled chief is undecided whether to part with him or not.

Liquid Refreshment Permits Cancelled

LINDSAY, Nov. 6 (Special to The Examiner).—Some of the local laborers who signed the unemployment list at the town hall and who have also been the possessors of liquor permits, have been in a quandary during the past few days. When they found that their supply of liquid refreshments had been cut off, they commenced to debate seriously with themselves, with the result that a few of them actually visited the town buildings and asked to have their names erased from the list. They were informed that while this could not be done, they would not be given civic employment.

PROFESSIONAL RANKS CAPTURE MANY WESTERN CANADA STARS

Regina, Particularly, Loses Many Members of Championship Teams.

IN GREAT DEMAND.

(Special to the Examiner—Copyright 1930)

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 6—With three members of last year's Dominion hockey champions, the Regina Pats, jumping into professional company this fall, some interesting facts relative to this province's contribution to commercialized hockey are available.

Thrice within the last six years has Regina annexed Canadian junior laurel wreath, and each Memorial Cup team has contributed liberally to the pro. ranks. As a result, this year there will be no fewer than 14 young athletes chasing pucks in pro. company who first earned their spurs with one of Regina's championship aggregations.

From the Pats of 1925 have come half this number. The Monarchs of 1928 have chipped in with four, while the Pats of last winter are responsible for three more. The grand total of 14 represents more than two lineups on the ice.

Ten players were carried by Al. Ritchie on his 1925 roster. Jack Cunning and Bert Dowie are retired, while Jack Cranstoun is playing amateur hockey at the coast. All the others are pros now. Johnny Gottselig and Frank Ingram are with the Chicago N.H.L. club; Sil. Acaster, Ken. Doraty, and Stan. Fuller are with St. Louis. Cleveland and Chicago, respectively, in the American League. Jack Crapper is to perform in the east this year, while Ike Morrison's plans are undecided. Fuller and Crapper are just commencing their pro careers.

Of Howie Milne's Monarch's of 1928, who numbered just nine men, Harold March is with the Chicago N.H.L. club, Carl Bergel is with Duluth in the American League; Johnny Achtzener is slated for the International circuit, and "Swede" Williamson belongs to the Coast loop. Len Dowie and "Hop" Shaw are playing with the senior Vics here, and Ab. Holt is lined up with the Aces. "Chuck" Farrow did not play much last year, and Jimmy Langford toiled for a team in the Vancouver Commercial League.

From the lengthy roster carried by Ritchie last year when he steered the Pats to another Dominion title, "Gosh" Pettinger, Dave Gilhooly and Eddie Wiseman are all becoming professionals. Ken. Campbell, Lorne Stephens, Art Dowie and Ralph Redding will remain in junior harness; Joe Dutkowski, Den Rae and Yates Acaster are trying out with the senior Aces; Buzz Bell may play for Weyburn, and Ken Moore will wear senior livery in Winnipeg.

Pettinger is claimed by two clubs—the New York Rangers and Vancouver Lions. "Gil" is the property of Detroit in the American League, and young Wiseman, who was found over age half way through last season, becomes a member of the Chicago team in the same circuit.

Brothers Threatens Brydson Injunction

LONDON, Ont, November 6 (C.P.). — Manager Roy Brothers of London Tecumsehs, International League hockey team announced yesterday that he will take out an injunction in several states, where the outlaw American League will operate, to prevent Gordon Brydson, holdout right winger of the local club, from playing with the Chicago Shamrocks of the American League. Brydson is reported to have signed a contract with the Shamrocks yesterday.

The Brydson case recalls that of Herbie Lewis, now a member of Detroit N. H. L. team. Lewis once jumped his contract with Duluth, an outlaw team, to go to Montreal Maroons. Duluth promptly got out an injunction, which was upheld, and Lewis was soon back in Duluth.

Former Tennis Star Dies In Assam, India

BISHNATH, Assam, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Hamish Munro, the former Evelyn Colyer, British tennis player, died yesterday.

Mrs. Munro was married in February, 1929, to Hamish Munro, a tea planter here. She gave birth to twins two weeks ago.

As Miss Colyer she represented Great Britain versus the United States at Wimbledon in 1924 and with P. D. B. Spence won the hard court and covered courts mixed championships.

Miss Colyer, a daughter of Sir Frank Colyer, and regarded as one of the best of Great Britain's women tennis players, met her husband in Switzerland early in 1929, and five weeks later was married to him at Christ Church, Streatham, England. She then went to Assam, India, with him where he had a plantation.

South End Boys' Loop Will Be Re-organized

Many of the city's budding star puckchasers will be pepped up to learn that Bill Kay intends to have the South End Boys' Hockey League running on all s xiagain this winter Last year this league had more than a dozen teams operating in three leagues: juvenile, junior and midget. It supplied great hockey competition for more than 150 of the city's coming hockey players.

The league will be re-organized at a meeting to be held in the Raybestos plant some evening next week, Bill said yesterday. The same system and rules will be followed as prevailed last season. Team leaders had better get their clans assembled and decided at once whether they are going to enter this flourishing boys' league. Representatives of teams will be invited to the organization meeting.

Witnesses Arrested On Perjury Charges

GODERICH, Ont., Nov. 6.—John Staples of Wroxeter and Alex Clark of Walton, were arrested yesterday at the conclusion of the criminal negligence case against William T. Grieves, Seaforth, who was found guilty by the jury.

The charges preferred against Staples and Clark, witnesses at the trial, followed their testimony exonerating Grieves from accusations of intoxication while driving a car. They were committed to county jail without bail.

GALT, Ont., November 6 (C.P.). — Manager Eddie Gerard of the New York Americans announced to-day that Joe Spring had been given his outright release, and Eddie Bouchard of the New Haven Eagles has also been made a free agent. He will likely join the Buffalo Bisons. Gerard also confirmed the report that negotiations were on with Montreal Maroons for Lionel Conacher to join Dunc Munso's team.

Bandmaster May Take Residence in Town

LINDSAY, November 6. (Special to The Examiner).—At last night's session of the town council, Mayor Stewart made a statement relative to the appointment of Rupert Gliddon of Peterborough, as bandmaster of the Citizens' Band. Mr. Gliddon, the Mayor said, intended taking up his residence in Lindsay. Besides leading the senior band, he would also take over the junior organization.

Suspected Fire Bug Being Held By Police

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Novmeber 6.—(C.P.). — Suspected of having been responsible for several recent outbreaks of fire in the townships of Front of Yonge and Front of Escott, Harold Dikey, aged 25, living near Rockport, was arrested to-day by the Provincial Police and brought here for questioning and examination. Dickey is said to have informed the police that he never kept track of the number of barns that he had burned. His arrest followed destruction by fire near Mallorytown of the farm house and barns belonging to William Donovan, which had closely followed the loss by fire of barns belonging to Leonard Donovan, Escott Township, with nine head of cattle. Believed to be of unsound mind, Dickey will undergo examination by doctors and will probably be committed to the Ontario Hospital. Not long ago he appeared in Police Court here charged with having thrown stones through the windows of a church in the vicinity of Mallorytown and Rockport.

VARGAS PLANS WIDE REFORMS

Will Re-organize Army and Navy From Standpoint of National Defense.

OFFENDERS PARDONED.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, S.A., Nov. 6. (A.P.)—Dr. Getulio Vargas, serving his first day as President of Brazil, yesterday published the program of his administration, which, it was stressed, is of a provisional and an interim character only.

17 Articles in Program

The program contains 17 articles, the more important of which provide for amnesty of all political offenders, social, education and sanitary reforms; creation of a Government consultative body; organization of a Commission to determine responsibility of officials of the deposed Government for expenditure of public moneys.

Reorganization of the army and navy from the standpoint of national defense; reform of the electoral system; judiciary reforms; after electoral reforms have been effected, calling of national elections for a National Assembly to draw up a new constitution, guaranteeing individual liberties and State autonomy against encroachment of the Central Government.

Rigorous Economy

Rigorous economy in all public service, and revision of the Customs system with elimination of "artificial protective" tariffs.

General Tassa Fragoso, head of the Military Junta which ousted Dr. Washington Luis as President ten days ago, handed the reins of government over to Dr. Vargas yesterday afternoon in a second floor reception room of Cattete Palace. Members of the Junta and a few spectators witnessed the ceremony which took only about 15 minutes.

"My mother was visiting in Detroit a year ago and she was in very poor health. My sister-in-law got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped her more than anything she had taken. She advised me to take it too and I did. My back used to ache and I suffered so with pain at times that I could not work. I feel like a new woman and can do my housekeeping and work in the store. I will answer letters."—Mrs. T. V. Hill.

MRS. WILLIE LAFLEUR
Route 3, Hemmingford, Quebec
"I was nervous. No appetite and all rundown. Most every day I had to lie down for two or three hours. I saw one of the booklets advertising Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I went to my druggist and bought a bottle. My nerves are lots better and I am now on my feet again doing all my own work around the farm. The Compound has certainly done me good and can help others."—Mrs. Willie Lafleur.

SEYMOUR COUNCIL REGULAR MEETING of Fair Grounds. tural Society For Levelling of Fair Griunds.

CAMPBELLFORD, November 6.—(By Examiner Staff Correspondent.)—The regular meeting of the Seymour Township Council was held on Saturday, November 1, the date of meeting from the first Monday in the month being changed at the request of the reeve. All members were present with Reeve VanVolkenburg, in the chair.

After the reading and passing of the minutes of the last meeting, Dr. S. L. O'Hara and Bert Third waited on the council on behalf of the Seymour Agricultural Society, requesting the loan of the power grader for the purpose of completing the levelling of the fair grounds. On motion this request was granted.

The Department of Highways audit was presented to the council by T. H. Reeve, showing the amount of disallowance. After discussion i was left to Mr. Rowe, the reeve and the clerk to look the amounts over and report.

Accounts to the amount of $2,674.77 were presented and passed and on motion the council adjourned.

Motorcyclist Dies After Crash In Ditch

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov 6. (CP)—Edward Friend, 35, of Tillsonburg, Ontario, died early to-day in the General Hospital as the result of injuries received when his motorcycle crashed into the ditch just east of Oakville last night.

The slippery condition of the pavement and the thick mist which hung over the roadway were given as the cause of the tragedy. Friend was gliding west along a bend east of Oakville when his machine skidded into the ditch. The unconscious motor-cyclist was discovered shortly after by traffic officers and was rushed to the Hamilton hospital.

An inquest will be held.

GET YOUR MONEY'S WORTH in milk dishes

IT IS NOT how much milk you use in cooking, but how rich milk. Borden's St. Charles Milk is doubly rich, being pure country milk with most of the natural water content removed. Drop for drop it adds more real nourishment than ordinary milk and it ensures creamier, smoother, tastier results. It comes in two handy sizes 16 oz. and 6 oz.; keeps perfectly in the unopened tin and can be bought at any grocery.

Hospital In Brandon Unfit For Animals

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 6—"Patients confined in the Brandon Mental Hospital are living under conditions unfit for animals," declared M. Le Bougdais, Director, Division of Education, Canadian National Committee on Mental Hygiene in an address here.

Mr. Le Bougdais declared Brandon, with one exception, the worst mental hospital in Canada. He said that due to overcrowding many of the most seriously afflicted are confined to cells without windows or proper ventilation. The institution has only proper accommodation for 800 patients, but has 1,050 patients.

KEEN CONTESTS AT FIELD DAY

Annual Event Held in Grounds of St. Peter's High School.

SOFTBALL GAME.

The annual field day for the high school pupils of St. Peter's school was held yesterday afternoon on the school grounds, and, despite a cold raw wind, keen competition and much enthusiasm was exhibited by the contestants.

A feature of the program was a softball game between the Tigers, captained by G. Young, and the All-Stars, piloted by Frank Morocco. The game was a nip-and-tuck struggle from start to finish, featured by clever fielding and effective pitching which kept the bases clear and resulted in a low score, the Tigers winning 5-4.

Jack Primeau, playing at short for the winners, gave the spectators a thrill when he made a running catch of a hot line drive to retire the side in the seventh inning. Leo Begley, behind the bat for the Tigers, also played a prominent part in staging the win. The line-up:

Tigers.—Leo Begley, c; W. McCarthy, 1b; G. Young, p; F. Scollard, 3b; K. Devlin, 2b; J. Lebarr, cf; M. O'Leary, rf; G. Duffus, lf; J. Primeau, ss.

All-Stars.—F. Marocco, 1b; C. Galvin, c; Rev. Dr. Masterson, p; H. Gainey, 2b; C. Sullivan, ss; J. Sweetman, 3b; P. Ayotte, lf; F. O'Connor, cf; G. Picard, rf.

The meet was run on the point system, three, two and one point being awarded to each individual placing first, second or third respectively. The class whose pupils collect the highest total of points will be awarded the school shield for one year. The chilly weather necessitated the postponing of several of the boys' events which will be run off as soon as the weather permits.

The following is a list of the winners:

Girls' Events.

Book race: 1st, Marjorie Hallihan; 2nd, Vedra Bartley; 3rd, Mary De Forge.

Potato race: 1st, Dorothy Ryan and Patricia McGrath, tied; 2nd, Marjorie Hallihan.

Tarzan hunted with the apes as in days gone by. They found his superior reason guided them to the best food sources, that his cunning rope ensnared toothsome game they seldom tasted, and they came to look up to him as they had in the past after he had became king. So it was before they left the ampitheatre they had once more chosen him as their leader.

Before Tarzan had returned to the tribe, a certain young bull had, according to custom, fared forth to win a fair lady from some neighboring community. He had just returned with his bride. Among his adventures he told of seeing a great tribe of strange-looking apes. "They were all hairy-faced bulls but one, and that one was a she!

"Lighter in color even than this stranger," and he chucked a thumb at Tarzan. At once the ape-man was all attention. He asked questions faster than the slow-witted anthropoid could answer. "Yes, the bulls were short and ugly, wearing yellow rings on their arms and legs. Dressed in the skins of Numa and Sheeta. They carried sticks and knives.

"They were waddling rapidly along upon their crooked legs. Now and then one would go upon all fours like Bolgani, the gorilla. The 'she' was small and slender and very white. They dragged her along—sometimes by an arm—sometimes by the long hair that grew upon her head. Always they kicked and beat her. Oh, but it was great fun to watch them."

were hurt, "lay for quite a time in the dark. The mine turned hot and the warm air rushed through. Other men near us were trapped but managed to get out.

"Finally I got up and tried to get out to three different grounds, for Obler and myself were acquainted with the workings quite well. First we tried the air shaft of the old workings, but the after-damp blocked our path.

"We came back where we started and tried to escape to the No. 7 west entry. Our third attempt was made through the old room which we found was squeezed together. Finally we emerged through a trap door.

"The black damp was so bad that we saturated our handkerchiefs with water in our pails and covered our faces with them as a precaution against the gas."

TOBERT ROSE SOUGHT.

Police Chief Newhall Has Important Information For the Man.

Information is desired by Chief Constable Newhall concerning the whereabouts of Robert Rose, a farm worker who formerly worked for Fred E. Wilson, Springville. Rose was born in Hull, England, and the information which the Chief has to give him is of the utmost importance. Anyone knowing the whereabout of Rose is asked to communicate with the Chief of Police, Peterborough.

DIED

ROGERS.—The death occurred on Monday, Nov. 3, of Harry Rogers, at his home in Belleville. He was second son of Anita Simmons Rogers and George Norman Rogers of Buffalo. He leaves two brothers, Alan and Jack at home, and his grandmother, Mrs. J. A. Simmons of Frankford. A quiet funeral service will be held on Friday, Nov. 7, at 1.30 p.m. Interment in Frankford Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM

LANE.—In memory of Russell Lane, who passed away Nov. 6th, 1928.

Who do we mourn departing friends,
Or shake at death's alarms?
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends,
To call them to His arms.

—Ever remembered by his father Wm. F. Lane and sisters.

WEDDING BELLS

QUINN—RASHOTTE.

TWEED, Nov. 6.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—A quiet wedding took place at St. Carthagha Church on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, when Miss Stella Rashotte, of Tweed, was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Quinn, of Lonsdales, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Dean O'Riordan.

O'BRIEN—COUGHLIN.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place in St. Joseph's church, Douro, on Tuesday, November 4 at 8.30 a.m., when Mary Agnes Coughlin, daughter of Mr. Martin Coughlin and the late Mrs. Coughlin, became the bride of Thomas Stephen O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Brien, both of Douro. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. J. McGuire, the pastor.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a gown of brown georgette and chiffon velvet. She wore a small brown velvet hat, shoes and hose to match and carried a bouquet of Premier roses and maidenhair fern. Her only ornament was a beautiful necklace, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Kathleen Coughlin, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, looking lovely in a dress of eggshell satin with brocaded velvet hat, shoes and hose to match and bouquet of pink baby 'mums.

Later a reception was held at the home of the bride's father, where dinner was served to more than sixty guests. The reception room was attractvely decorated for the occasion with roses, baby 'mums, ferns and streamers of pale pink and white.

A very enjoyable evening was spent in dancing, after which Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien left by motor for a short honeymoon, the bride travelling in a dress of Bermuda green, semi-fitted black broadcloth coat with cape, shawl, collar and cuffs of muskrat, hat, shoes and hose to match. On their return they will reside in Douro.

The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts.

The bridegroom's gift to the bridesmaid was a bracelet of antique gold and to the best man engraved gold cuff links.

Unemployed Battle With Hamilton Police

CLASH FOLLOWS STREET PARADE MANY ARRESTED

SPEAKERS INCENSE MOB.

Hundreds of Constables Guard Cells to Prevent Release of Leaders

HAMILTON, Ont., November 7 (C.P.). — Demonstrating unemployed men and police clashed on the Haymarket today and a strong fight ensued. Finally the police restored order and made many arrests.

The crowd was estimated at between 400 and 500, and the trouble started when they attempted a parade against police orders. A determined line of police barred the street, and a general melee ensued.

A meeting on the Haymarket commenced at 10.30. Mrs. Annie Buller of Toronto and William Resely, chairman of the Unemployment Association, were speakers, Mrs. Buller delivering an attack against capitalism. The crowd was asked whether they would demonstrate in defiance of the police order, and a forest of hands shot in the air.

The parade got under way with the men hastening towards the centre of the city. They found the way blocked by police at John and Jackson Streets.

Policeman Hit on Head.

Protests arose from the ranks of the unemployed, and some person struck a policeman over the head with a stick of a banner.

In a moment all was confusion, and the crowd closed with the police, the officers showed admirable restraint, and did not use their batons, but used their fists freely. Shrill cries of pain were heard and many persons were knocked down and trampled on.

The police rounded up those whom they believed to be the ringleaders, commandeered a passing truck, and removed them to the police station.

The crowd followed after, and arrived at Central Station to find literally hundreds of police drawn up around the building ready to receive any kind of an attack. The ardor of the crowd departed very rapidly, and soon began to dwindle in numbers. The prisoners were safely locked in the cells, in the detention room.

FIRST BIG SNOW STRIKES ONTARIO

London and Hamilton Traffic Tied Up—Ploughs Work All Night.

BITTER COLD FOLLOWS.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 7 (C.P.). — With traffic badly hampered in many centres and snowploughs working throughout the night, Ontario is to-day recovering from its first real snowstorm of the season.

The storm did not come unexpectedly, however, as the weatherman had predicted the flurry, but few expected the record-breaking November fall which came accompanied by a biting north-west wind.

Near London, November records for all time were broken when 14 inches fell, and emergency calls were issued for the first time this year. While motor traffic met with difficulty, trains were not interfered with to any extent, and maintained their normal schedule.

The storm struck Hamilton in the form of a mid-winter blizzard, which lasted but a few minutes, but left a blanket of snow covering the city. The mercury dropped with the storm to several points below freezing, and many guileless motorists were caught with frozen motors.

Many other places throughout the Province reported a visit from the snow king, but in most cases only a small amount fell.

FOUR HUNTERS MISSING

KENORA, Nov. 7 (C.P.)—Carrying provisions sufficient for one day, four Kenora men who left early Monday for Hay Island, Lake of the Woods, on a hunting trip had not been reported to-day and anxiety was felt for their safety. The quartet, Joseph Chapleau, Frank Basovi, John Danik, and Joseph Danik, intended to return Monday night. They had an outboard motor boat. Search will be instituted by Provincial Police.

United Counties Road Commission

Hart of Murray township, chairman of the commission; Deputy-Reeve R. J. McKnight of Cavan township, representative of Durham county; and Reeve Chas. Quinn, Cramahe township, (right) representative of Northumberland county. This commission with George Greer of Cobourg, county road superintendent, has been in charge of the united counties' road building program this year, including the paved road from Trenton to Wooler; also from Norham to the Campbellford-Brighton road; and from Cobourg north to Baltimore. Warden W. H. Nelson is an ex-officio member of the commission.

GRUESOME FIND BAFFLES POLICE

LYING ON HUGE ROCK.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 6. — The police to-day were finding it difficult to identify the decomposed remains of a man found on Isle Perrot, near Montreal. The body fully clothed but with the head severed, was discovered by two youngsters yesterday. The man was lying on a huge rock with the feet on the upper part of the stone.

The head had apparently sloped downwards, which accounted for it having become detached with the process of decay. It was found a short distance away. The man's left hand clutched a revolver, the hand lying across the chest. Examination of the body by a physician revealed no apparent sign of violence. The doctor expressed the opinion that it had laid there for nearly a year. When the clothing was removed from the remains it was revealed that the flesh had decayed. Only the bones remained.

The revolver in the man's hand was rusted. It was a .32 calibre, nickle-plated weapon. Two of the five bullets in the magazine showed signs that they had been struck by the hammer but were not discharged, while a third, which had been fired, was also in the revolver.

Families Homeless In Felicien Fire

CHICOUTIMI, Que. Nov. 7. (By the Canadian Press)—Nine families were rendered homeless and damage amounting to $50,000, caused by a fire which broke out at St. Felicien, Que., during last night. The Chateau De St. Felicien was first destroyed. The flames quickly spread to nearby houses, despite efforts of firemen to control them.

SWEATED LABOR CHARGES INVENTED BENNETT SAYS OF ACCUSATIONS

COMPARED COSTS.

LONDON, Nov. 7 (By George Hambleton, C. P. Staff Correspondent).—Returning to London from Sheffield to-day, Premier R. B. Bennett of Canada again denied having charged Lancashire with sweated labor. What he had done, he said, was to compare costs of production of cotton in Canada with the production costs in Great Britain, but he made no accusation of sweated labor conditions, he said.

Premier Bennett's alleged statement was supposed to have been made at a private meeting of the Empire Parliamentary Association here on Wednesday. The Manchester Guardian reported Premier Bennett as follows:

"He instanced what he called the dumping of Lancashire goods into Canada. Two manufacturers, he said, complained to the Government that the wages paid in Lancashire were only half the wages paid in Canada. Therefore, they were unable to compete with what was described as sweated labor of that kind."

Report Pure Invention

In Sheffield yesterday, where he received the freedom of the city and spoke at the Cutlers' Feast, Premier Bennett declared this report was a pure invention. To-day, The Guardian correspondent quotes Rev. R. M. Kedward, Liberal Member of Parliament for Ashford, Kent, as saying he was prepared to vouch for the accuracy of the report. In its news column The Guardian further states that:

"Premier Bennett's speech and its implications of Lancashire's cheap labor conditions are much resented in Lancashire and officials of both the employers' and operatives' organizations were yesterday highly critical. Whether the word 'sweated' was Premier Bennett's own or not, they pointed out the use of the word was very unfortunate because the whole of the context of the report was such as to lead readers to believe Premier Bennett considered its use justified."

Steamer Off Florida Sends For Assistance

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 7. — The coastguard cutter Yamacraw was en route today from the assistance of the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company steamer Upshur, reported disabled 10 miles off Jupiter Light, Florida.

The Yamacraw, which at the time was off Charleston, S. C. was dispatched to the Upshur's assistance after a call for immediate aid had been received from the steamer by the Savannah naval radio station.

The message received by the radio station said the ships engines were disabled and beyond repair.

The Upshur is 251 feet in length and of 2,559 tons displacement.

AIRLINER NOT FIT FOR CERTIFICATE INSPECTOR SAYS

Claims He Would Not Have Passed R-101 on Air Worthiness.

BOLTS TORE GAS BAGS.

Documents Show Major Construction Faults Found Before Section Added.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 7 (C.P.)—The declaration that he would not have granted a certificate of air-worthiness to the R-101 for the India flight in the condition she was in at the time she started, was made by M. McWade in charge of the Inspection Department at Cardington, at to-day's inquiry into the giant airship's loss.

Faults Found

Documents indicating that major construction faults had been discovered in the dirigible R-101 before she was sliced in two for insertion of a 75-foot section were introduced.

One of them was a memorandum by Colonel V. C. Richmond, designer of the craft who perished in the crash of October 5. In it he noted that holes in the gas bags caused serious loss of lifting power.

Sir John Simon, head of the Board of Inquiry, said the documents had been on file at the Cardington airship headquarters for some time, and he could not understand why they had not been produced before.

Colonel Richmond's memorandum was filed last July after the ship had handled heavily in a trial flight. He indicated that the loss of lift amounted to about one ton for each square inch of hole in twelve hours. In his opinion, the memorandum stated, this was somewhat startling, and indicated the great importance of guarding against such holes.

Bags Rubbed on Girders

The second document was a memorandum from the Department of Inspections. It noted that modifications in the dirigible's wiring system had brought the gas bags up against the longitudinal girders where the bags rubbed against nuts and bolts. Such points of fouling, it was stated, occurred at hundreds of points throughout the ship, and the use of padding had proved unsatisfactory.

"Until this matter is taken in hand," the memorandum read, "we cannot recommend any extension of the flying permit."

Sir John was visibly disturbed at these documents and asserted that he would make it his business to discover why they had not been produced before.

EX-CONSTABLE LOSES APPEAL

FISHING PARTY CLIMAX.

BARRIE, Ont., Nov. 7.—The appeal of ex-constable W. Reid of Richmond Hill against a $1000 fine on charge of being intoxicated when his arrest climaxed a fishing party at Collingwood on Sept. third was dismissed by Judge E. A. Wismer in judges chambers here today, following the hearing of evidence by Collingwood Constables.

He also corrected a statement that "magistrates should be removed from office', which had no reference to Magistrate W. Hogg of Collingwood who tried the case, "What was said", said His Honor, "was that in a case where a Magistrate willfully makes up an incorrect record such Magistrate should be removed from office. Argument for the defense endeavored to show that Collingwoods' record was incorrect.

Thomas Portland, Collingwood Chief of Police admitted he had told Reid to shut up, but "it was before the court opened. When I came into the office the accused was walking up and down shouting 'Lord help the people of Collingwood for this' said Chief Portland, "I did tell him to shut up. He was intoxicated and was the stormiest one in the crowd."

FORMER MOUNTIE GIVEN 10 YEARS IN DAUPHIN COURT

Joseph Pirt Sentenced to Stoney Mountain Penitentiary By Judge MacDonald.

SHOT S. DAKOTA WOMAN.

Defense Counsel Asks That Client Be Treated as Temporarily Insane.

DAUPHIN, Man., Nov. 7.—(CP)—Sentence of ten years in Stony Mountain Penitentiary was imposed on Joseph Pirt, former Royal Canadian Mounted Police Constable convicted of manslaughter at the Fall Assizes before Mr. Justice D. A. MacDonald today.

Charged with the murder of Mrs. Sophie Light, of Ipswich, South Dakota, at an inter-Provincial picnic held at Roblin near here September 1, Pirt was convicted of manslaughter, the jury, after 80 minutes deliberation, reducing the charge from the capital count.

Verdict After 2-Day Trial

The verdict was returned after a 2-day hearing during which witnesses testified that Pirt was under the influence of liquor at the time the South Dakota woman was shot to death. No defense witnesses were called. In his plea, J. D. Suffied, K. C., chief defense counsel, asked that the former constable be treated as temporarily insane.

FINN GOES INSANE IN COUNTY GAOL

Other Prisoners Were Awakened Early This Morning By Mans Actions.

COMMITTED MONDAY.

A prisoner, Heikki Hunnankko, a Finn, become insane early this morning in the county goal. Other prisoners were awakened by the man's unearthly shrieks and their clamour soon brought Colonel Dalton Johnston, the jailor, into the cells.

Hunnankko tore up the covering on his bed, and again and again butted his head against the bars in his mad frenzy. Struggling, he was removed to a smaller cell, separate from other prisoners. He was handcuffed so that he could not injure himself.

The big Finn acted strangely last Monday when he appeared before Magistrate Langley on a charge of housebreaking to which he pleaded guilty. He cannot speak English and has been in Canada only a few months.

California Express Robbed by Bandits

OAKLAND, Calif., Nov. 7. (CP) An eastbound Southern Pacific passenger train was held up and robbed by five men, to-day at Nobel, a small town north of Berkley. Reports received here said the mail car and baggage car were rifled of $40,000 to $55,000 in cash consigned to the American Trust Co. branch in Pittsburg, Calif.

The robbers used a large sedan in which two machine guns were mounted. One man carried a shotgun and all were armed with automatics Authorities over the East Bay region were notified

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE IS PLANNED BY THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Hope to Bring Membership Up to 300 by End of March.

TEAMS ARE FORMED.

Believing that in numbers there is service, the local Chamber of Commerce last night held the inaugural meeting in a campaign to increase its membership. Thirty-eight staunch members of the Chamber will form during the next three months the phalanx of the drive. The campaign as outlined will not be of a whirlwind nature, but consist of steady, progressive effort on the part of workers to bring the membership of the local Chamber up to 300 by the end of March.

In addressing the executive and membership in the Downeyflake Tea Rooms after luncheon, James Dutton, president of the Chamber, expressed complete satisfaction at the splendid team work that has existed among its members. He stressed the importance of having a membership sufficiently large in the Chamber to accomplish its purpose. Dealing with the Chamber's work, he said it occupied an unique position in any city. While much fine work is accomplished by service clubs and women's organizations, the Chamber of Commerce operating by charter carries things through for the civic benefit that otherwise would not be accomplished.

He said that every task must have some plan of accomplishment, and pointed out that things don't just happen. Illustrating, he stated that the development of good roads in the last twenty-five years had not been started by governments, but by the makers of road building machinery.

James Hamilton Chairman

The chairman of the membership drive is James Hamilton, with C. S. Cummer and J. R. Marshall as vice-chairman. Frank G. Stinson, secretary, outlined the campaign. While the Chamber is at present in a healthy condition, he said, with 180 paid up memberships it should have 300 and at one time previously had

Opens New Highway

HON. GEORGE S. HENRY

Minister of Highways and acting premier of Ontario who last night opened the new Trenton-Wooler highway.

Collegiate Student Found In Hamilton

An over-powering desire to get away from the boredom of school life yesterday caused Clarence Barnes, 16, a student at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, to runaway. He told his school chums that he must get away from it all and at 10:30 in the morning he left the school. He walked out on the highway and hitch-hiked his way to Hamilton.

His anxious parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Barnes, 5 Cottesmore Avenue notified police of boy's disappearance and last night a description of the missing lad was broadcast over Toronto radio stations. Early this morning police in Hamilton picked him up and notified the parents that he was safe.

The boy has long been known to be of a nervous temperament, although he is a good scholar.

NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM SWITCHED ON BY THE ACTING PREMIER OF ONTARIO WOOLER-TRENTON ROAD OPENED

Council of United Counties Congratulated on Its Road Program.

APPEAL MADE TO DRIVERS.

Members of Counties Council, M.P.P.'s and Other Notables Present.

(By Staff Reporter.)

WOOLER, Nov. 7.—The hunters' moon, big and brilliant and cold, shed its silver radiance in vain over this section of East Northumberland Thursday evening at 6 o'clock as the Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister of Highways and acting Premier of Ontario, formally switched on the Hydro-Electric power of Wooler's new lighting system, and then cut a blue silk ceremonial ribbon symbolising the opening of the paved road from Wooler to Trenton which was recently completed by the Raynor Construction Company of Toronto under a contract with the council of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham.

Hon Mr. Henry clipped the ribbon into short souvenir lengths and gave the first one to Warden W. H. Nelson of Warkworth under whose administration this year some fifteen miles of paved county roads have been constructed in Northumberland. The Minister briefly addressed the crowd of villagers and guests, and then, preceded by the Trenton Citizens' Band playing "Colonel Bogey", led the company down the paved road to the United church where supper was served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church.

The Wooler-Trenton county highway is a stretch of 8¾ miles linking the Murray township village with the lakeshore provincial highway. It is a thoroughly modern improved permanent road, and its inclusion in the 1930 program of the united counties no doubt represents the outstanding accomplishment of the Murray representatives to the counties council, Reeve N. R. Hart and Deputy-reeve W. H. Morrow.

In his brief address at the opening outdoor ceremony in the centre of the village, brief because of the biting November atmosphere, Hon. Mr. Henry complimented the counties council upon their enterprising policy of road improvement, and congratulated the people of Wooler and the ratepayers of Murray township upon their new traffic connection with the main provincial highway and the easy access which it gave to all the other sections and cities of Ontario.

Most of the members of the counties council were present at last night's celebration, together with members of the Ontario and Dominion parliaments, and municipal representatives of towns, villages and townships of Northumberland.

Tribute To Mr. Henry.

In calling upon Mr. Henry to cut the ribbon which was figuratively closing the new Wooler-Trenton paved road, Warden Nelson acknowledged the co-operation which the council of Northumberland and Durham had always received from the Minister of Highways during the seven years of his administration of the Department.

"Mr. Henry had always given our deputations a patient and favorable hearing," Warden Nelson said. "It is due to his co-operation that we have this road completed tonight, and we appreciate all the assistance we have received from him."

People Desire Good Roads

"This is for me a happy function", Hon. Mr. Henry said, prefacing the official opening formality. "I am very pleased to participate in the opening of this improved road. In the development of the road system of our province, one thing that stands out pre-eminently is the desire of the smaller communities to be connected with the main traffic highways and to have paved roads in the towns and villages. I congratulate the people of Wooler upon securing this new connection with the main highway that runs through Trenton along the lake shore. It opens for them a new outlet to the rest of the province.

Our highways are changing the lives of the people of this province. It is difficult for us to realize what this change is because we are so close to it. We are living in the time during which this change is taking place, but we can realize it better if we look back fifteen years ago and compare the conditions then with those of the present. Automobiles were not in general use, and there was a decided antagonism to them, especially in our rural municipalities. Gradually, however, as the motor car became more efficient, it came more into general use. Today we are second only to the United States in the number of automobiles according to population. And we in

Unionville Bank Robbers Arrested

PAIR DRAW GUNS IN BARRIE GARAGE AS POLICE ENTER

Alarm Goes Out as Citizen Sees $1,000 Dropped at Stayner Cafe.

CAR BROKE DOWN.

BARRIE, Ont., November 7 (C.P.). — James Kirkland, 35, and Jack Derwent, 25, both of Toronto, were captured here last night after allegedly robbing the branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Unionville of $6,000 earlier in the day.

$5,000 Loot in Pockets.

The police claim they found $5,000 of the money taken from the bank concealed on the men, and that on the road to this town, near Stayner, where their car is said to have broken down, a package containing $1,000 was found by a small girl where one of the thugs had apparently dropped it.

The tip as to where the men might be found was secured by the police when they discovered two men had telephoned a garage asking for assistance at Stayner where their machine was out of order. They were towed here by the garagemen, and the big blue machine they are alleged to have used in the hold-up was immediately recognized by police, who had little difficulty tracing their progress from Stayner.

In the County Jail to which the men were taken, a statement was made by Kirkland, leader of the enterprise, it is said.

"We entered the bank at about five minutes to three," he is purported to have stated. "We were in there only about five minutes. The money we got we put in our pockets. I figure we could have done better if we had taken our club bag which was left in the car. When we got into the car again we took back roads and drove away from the town as fast as we could. We did not know where we were until Stayner was reached."

Bills Fall From Pocket

Feeling safe from immediate pursuit the men entered a restaurant there and ordered supper. While they were consuming the meal, a package of bills slipped from Kirkland's pocket. Reaching down quickly Kirkland grabbed it and stuffed it into his pocket, but not before Edward Lindsay, seated at a nearby table, had noticed the incident and acted by paying his bill and going out to inform the police.

In the meantime, Kirkland, afraid someone had seen the package of bills fall and to put pursuers off the track loudly announced the men were on their way to Bracebridge.

Starting out from Stayner they drove down the main street to Highway No. 26, but they made another error, this time unknowingly dropping another $1,000 package which lay on the street after their departure. Little Elizabeth Gartian, daughter of Roger Gartian of Stayner, picked up the money and showed it to passing citizens, who took it to the Stayner branch of the Bank of Toronto, and another hot clue was provided the police by the bank officials.

Headed for Tall Timber

"We intended to follow the highway to Toronto, where we were going to stay the night," Kirkland said. "We were going to head north for the tall timbers the next day, to lie quiet for the winter."

Constable W. A. Robinson, Collingwood, who received Lindsay's information concerning the dropped package in the restaurant, checked up on the various license numbers until he found it was that of a Toronto marker and the net was set.

ROBBERY EFFORT ENDS IN PRISON

CITIZENS LEND AID.

TORONTO, Ont., November 7 (C.P.). — A desperate grapple in a taxicab with the engine of the car still running, culminated in Leonard Draper, the taxiacb driver overpowering Louis Lalonde, 18, with the assistance of Mr. and Mrs. Sewell Burgess. Lalonde was arrested on a charge of attempted robbery.

According to Draper, Lalonde attempted to rob him, using the unusual weapon—chloroform, in his attack. The taxi driver, however, was no meek subject, and a battle royal ensued. Draper managed after strenuous effort to get Lalonde into the back seat, where he fell on top of him. His cries attracted the attention of Mr. and Mrs. Burgess, the latter shutting off the engine of the car, while the former aided in subduing Lalonde.

Police arrived later and took Lalonde into custody.

Laborites Win Out On Education Bill

LONDON Eng., Nov. 7 (CP)—Premier Ramsay MacDonald's Labor Government last night won its second victory within a week, carrying by a majority of 67 votes, the second reading of its Education Bill.

The bill, which raises the school-leaving age from 14 years to 15, was carried by 294 votes to 227. The carrying of the second reading was proposed by Sir Charles Trevelyan, President of the Board of Education, while Lord Eustace Perry led the Conservative opposition.

BALDWIN FAVORS EMPIRE POLICY

Conservative Leader Makes It Plain Party Will Adopt Empire Development.

IN ELECTION FIGHT

LONDON, Nov. 7 (C.P.)—In his latest statement of policy of the Conservative Party, Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, whose leadership was affirmed the other day by a vote of 462 to 116, makes it clear that the old idea of a referendum of food taxes has been dropped by the Conservative Party. "When we go to the polls at the next election it will be with a programme to which the electors will be asked to give their final and definite assent," his statement says.

"Although the details of an Imperial policy, as the Prime Minister of Canada has stated, can only be worked out through joint consulation between the technicians and experts of the respective countries, we as a party, can and do accept the principle of Imperial Preference contained in his proposals, and I have already said that we are determined to extend its scope to the utmost limit we can achieve. So important is it to arrive at a practical workable plan that in our opinion no method which offers a favorable prospect of achieving that purpose ought to be ruled out beforehand. Our idea is that the circumstances in regard to each article, which is to be the subject of a preference, should be examined on their merits in co-operation with the Dominions concerned, and the remedy to be adopted should be the one which, after investigation, seems best adapted to further our common aim.

"In the case of wheat, we have already stated our intention, as part of our domestic agricultural policy, to induce a system under which a definite proportion of the flour used to make the bread baked in this country shall be made from home-grown wheat. This proportion will be fixed from time to time in such a way that all the wheat of the requisite quality produced in this country will be utilized. We have adopted this method in preference to a tariff on foreign wheat, because no tariff which we could recommend would be sufficient in itself to solve the problem of the wheat producer in this country. But by combining a guaranteed price for wheat with the legislation to which I have referred, we shall be able to give the home farmer not only a guaranteed market for his produce, but a market at a price which will make it worth his while to grow it. Having provided that a fixed proportion of the British loaf shall be made of home-grown wheat it would be a natural extension of the plan to give an effective preference to the Empire in the shape of a further proportion allocated and secured to the Empire farmer, and it may be pointed out that this system, while directly serving the interests of wheat growers both in the Empire, and in our own country, would provide us with a completely effective antidote which tariffs alone would not supply to the dumping of Russian or bounty-fed wheat from foreign countries. It has, moreover, the additional advantage that it can be worked through the normal trade channels and avoids import boards or bulk purchase by the State to which we are unalterably opposed.

FARMERS OBJECT TO PARLEY ACTION

Ask Gov't if Agricultural Policy is to be Formed Without Consulting Them.

U.F.O. GETS NO REPLY.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 7. (CP)—Joining in the protests made to the Government at Ottawa against the exclusion of representatives of farmers' associations in the coming conference called to formulate a national agricultural policy, the United Farmers of Ontario have sent a message to Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, asking if it is possible such a conference has been called without consulting the farmers themselves.

The message reads: "Is it possible that a conference has been called to formulate a national agricultural policy without consulting the farmers themselves through their own organizations"?

J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the U.F.O., declared the first intimation a conference was even proposed, came to the United Farmers in the newspapers. No answer to the wire sent by the U.F.O. has been received he added.

NEW TAXI LAW STIRS TROUBLE OVER TORONTO

NO MORE 50c. FARES.

Drivers Must Be Finger-printed and All Cabs Have Meters.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 7. (CP)—A by-law embodying drastic regulations effecting taxi-drivers and which Mayor Bert S. Wemp, Chairman of the local police commission had refused to sign, has been signed by Judge Emerson Coatsworth, member of the Commission. In addition the by-law which goes into effect on January 1 next, bears the signature of Brig. Gen. D. C. Draper, Chief Constable.

Fare Meters Necessary

The new regulations specify all cabs must be equipped with fare meters, although the City Council some months ago refused to make taxi-meters compulsory as requested by the Police Department.

While the by-law embodies such restrictions as requiring private citizens to give full particulars to companies from whom they rent a "drive-yourself" automobile, the section which has aroused indignation among the taxi-drivers themselves reals as follows:

"Every owner who acts as a driver and every driver shall furnish annually two suitable photographs of himself, one to be placed on his license and the other to be placed on record in the cab department, where his fingerprints will also be recorded. He will also furnish two character references from former employers covering a period of at least three years and one reference from a minister of the gospel."

Taxi-drivers and owners first heard of the new regulations on receipt of copies of the by-law just off the presses. It has been learned the new regulations were adopted last June.

Start Organization.

So fully aroused are the taxi men that organization has started of an association to defend what they believe to be their rights. They claim general adoption of the meter will mean abolishment of the '50 cent taxi' which operates within certain areas, and that the city limit to limit ride for a dollar will become a thing of the past. Taxi meters cost from $150 to $200 each, and are not manufactured in Canada, they claim.

Mayor Wemp declared this morning he had not signed the by-law because he considered it too arbitrary, but that his colleagues on the Commission, Judge Coatsworth and Judge Morson, had outvoted him. He further stated he had kept the by-law in his office for two days thinking it over, but finally notified the other commissioners that although it was his place as chairman to sign it, he could not conscientiously do so. Finally, he added the by-law had been signed by Judge Coatsworth as acting chairman.

WOLVES DESTROY WOOL INDUSTRY

Alex Horn of Lindsay Urges Bounty on Pelts Should Be Raised By Government.

WOLF COAT FOR WOMEN.

LINDSAY, Nov. 7. (Special to The Examiner).—Alex Horn, proprietor of Horn Bros., Woollen Mills, is urging upon the citizens of Lindsay the advisability of memorializing the government to raise the bounty on wolves slain in the north country. Mr. Horn has been buying wool on a large scale for a great many years, and views with alarm the decline of the wool industry in this section of the country owing largely to the destruction of sheep by wolves. Hundreds of thousands of pounds of wool, he states was produced annually in the northern part of Victoria County. Haliburton, too, was an important area, but to-day there is only one village in all the northern country, reaching from Midland to Ottawa that has a carding mill. This is situated at Minden. This profitable industry, Mr. Horn points out, has been almost totally destroyed by the steadily increasing packs of wolves in the northland. He further advises the wearing by woman of a long wolf skin coat in order to make the wearing of wolf skin popular.

Stock Exchanges Closed On Thanksgiving Day

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 7 (C.P.) — All Canadian stock exchanges will be closed on Monday, Nov. 10, in observance of the Thanksgiving Day holiday, and the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange and the Montreal Stock Exchange will also be closed on Saturday, Nov. 8.

A decision was reached by the Toronto Stock Exchange yesterday to hold the usual session of the exchange on Saturday morning.

CONDITIONS IN NORTHERN ONTARIO DESCRIBED TO SCHOOL TEACHERS

Leo W. Copp, New Inspector for Peterborough County, Address Teachers.

DRIFTING POPULATION

Mr. Downey, at the afternoon session of the Teachers' Institute, introduced Leo W. Copp, the new inspector of Peterborough County. Mr. Copp is a product of the Peterborough schools — Public, High and Normal. He taught here for a time, then attended Queen's University, and was appointed an inspector in Northern Ontario. Recently he was appointed an inspector in the place of Mr. Lees, who resigned.

Mr. Copp expressed his great pleasure at being back in Peterborough. He complimented the teachers who had laid the basis of his education here, and hoped that he might have the success of his predecessor in his inspectorate.

Mr. Copp described conditions as he had experienced them in Northern Ontario. A vast wealth lies there, as the Toronto and Northern Ontario Railway turned over to the Government this year more than $800,000. In the last four years the Ferguson Highway has been built through virgin forest and new lands. Before this the only means of entrance was by railway. The Great Clay Belt goes actually to Moose Factory from the Height of Land. Some of the rivers there have a rapid descent, and are being used for power. The land is heavy clay, and in most places is very deep. The country is covered with spruce and balsam swamp. Humus lies to the depth of three or four feet. There is excellent farming land, but it must be cleared first.

Succeeded Dr. Bannister.

Dr. Bannister was Mr. Copp's predecessor in Northern Ontario. Schools there are of a better type than they are around here. They are new and so are better. Centres grow rapidly; land is cheap, and attracts settlers. New sections are blocked out and a school section is the first organization in that locality.

Finnish and Nordic children are very numerous. Some schools have no pupils of English-speaking parents. Many schools are not well equipped and demand originality on the part of teachers. In some localities the population is altogether French. The pupils do remarkably well and some of them are already trained teachers. They usually do not care to go back to the locality from which they came.

Drifting Population.

There is a drifting population in the north. The settlers with children come later. The teachers are truly missionaries. They do infinite good under trying conditions. It is difficult to get equipment, even seats and benches are home-made. Boarding places are difficult to get at all. Teachers who made good are real heroes when one considers the discouragements they have in the pioneer stages. Big boats do not come to th mainland on James Bay, as the water is too shallow.

Community singing, led by Mr. Steer and Miss Johnston, was a feature of the afternoon's program.

Gives Picture Study

Miss M. G. N. Irving of the Hamilton Normal school represented the Department of Education at the convention. She took up a "Picture Story Lesson with Senior Third Class". Pupils from a public school were taken on an imaginary trip to an art gallery such as one in London, England.

BAD EXPLOSION WRECKS STOVE

Mr. and Mrs. R. Maybee of Campbellford Narrowly Escape When Range Blows Up.

Scattered Parts Over Room.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 7 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—Exploding with terrific force and shaking the whole house, the kitchen range in the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Maybee, Rear street, Campbellford, scattered parts of the stove all over the room, smashing windows and chinaware. The blast occurred shortly before noon on Thursday. Mrs. S. Maybee was severely bruised about the leg and thigh besides having her clothes practically torn from her.

It has not been determined what caused the accident, but it is thought that the water feed to the stove was not in perfect condition, although the system was only installed last year. Mr. Maybee had only recently lit the fire with some dry wood and was returning from the cellar after closing off the water for the lawn service, when the explosion took place.

Mrs. Maybee when the explosion took place was standing in front of the stove upon which she had a pair of curling tongs, and they were thrown to the ceiling with such force that the impression of them was left on the plaster.

Both bottom panes of glass in the window were broken and pieces of the range were scattered all over the room. The whole side of the stove was blown out and the two front doors torn away from their hinges. The side draft door of the stove was lifted across the room and fell on to the draining board of the sink, breaking a sealer and some dishes.

Mr. Maybee narrowly escaped being killed, for the chair in which he was sitting a short while before the explosion had a piece of the arm cut away by a piece of the flying steel.

Mrs. Maybee, who was taken to the home of a neighbor, besides being severly bruised, is badly shaken up and is under the care of the doctor.

STEAMSHIP LINES WORK TOGETHER

Six Leading British Companies Co-operate on North Atlantic.

EFFECTIVE AT ONCE.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 7 (C.P.) — With a view to eliminating unprofitable competition during the winter months, six of the largest British steamship lines operating in the North Atlantic have worked out a system of co-operative operation which is being made effective immediately.

The Cunard, White Star, Red Star, Canadian Pacific, Anchor and Atlantic Transport Lines are the companies affected by the arrangement, which is somewhat similar to that worked out several months ago by the Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd Lines of Germany.

Fashionable Models! Exclusive British Fabrics! Season's Newest Colorings Tailored to individual measure!

Never before did $24 buy such OVERCOATS as these!

MORE than two and a half million men have learned that Tip Top Tailors give more style, quality, fit and satisfaction at $24 in individually tailored clothes than any other tailors in Canada.

These greater values are due to enormous purchasing power; to more than twenty years of experience in tailoring high-grade clothes; and to the iron-clad policy of passing back to our customers in the form of greater values, all savings made possible by these economies.

Tip Top OVERCOATS are outstanding examples of this greater value. This Season you have wider choice of style and fabric — finer woollens — improved tailoring and fit—at the same old price of $24. To convince you, we can make no stronger statement than to say, "Compare yourself." We gladly abide by your decision!

SHADOWS DUE TO PROPAGANDA

Former Governor Grigg Says Trouble Caused By Ignorant Criticism Abroad.

OVER KENYA.

NAIROBI, Kenya, Nov. 7—By the Canadian Press—Two shadows mar the inter racial relations of the people of Kenya Colony, both produced outside of Kenya, according to Sir Edward Grigg, former governor of Kenya. One is the non-co-operation movement among the Indians and the other is the so-called native unrest. As to the former, Sir Edward expressed the hope, before sailing for England recently, that it would soon be abolished as he was certain that any gesture of friendliness from the Indians would be more than reciprocated by the Europeans. The shadow of native unrest, in Sir Edward's opinion, has arisen from propaganda and criticism of Kenya from ignorant sources outside of the Colony but he is confident that happy relations are being established again, and this shadow being dissipated.

At a farewell reception given to the retiring governor here, Sir Edward reviewed his five-year term of office. His strongest impressions, he said, were the utter fascination and natural charm of Kenya itself and the happiness of interracial relations despite adverse propaganda. Kenya was essentially a happy-hearted country and this characteristic should never be changed, Sir Edward added.

"From what you read about Kenya,' said the retiring Governor, "you might suppose that force and oppression and misery are daily stalking through the land. I have never, anywhere in my experience, seen happier relations between races living next to each other."

Reverting to the propaganda calculated to upset the friendly relations between the races in Kenya Sir Edward said that wherever he was or in whatever sphere he was engaged he would strive to prevent people outside of Kenya from marring happy relations by propagating the absurd doctrine that it was impossible to be pro-white without being anti black and vice versa. He was convinced that the future of Kenya was secure if all who represented the British race kept up the standards of their civilization and saw that their children maintained them. "In particular I say, I look after your schools," he advised. "Do that, and the happiness of all the races in this part of Africa will be secure."

FANCY DRESS PARTY HELD AT MILLBROOK

Junior W.A. Members Gather in Parish Hall of Saint Thomas' Church.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 7.—(Examiner Correspondent.—The Hallowe'en season was prolonged over the week end for a jolly gathering in the Parish Hall of Saint Thomas' Anglican Church on Monday, from five to seven p.m., when the younger group of the Junior W. A., ages five to nine, held a fancy dress party, and enjoyed a social time together.

Mrs. H. W. Jordan, assistant superintendent of the Junior W. A., had charge of the program, and from her experience and training in Kindergarten work, was able to provide games and songs suitable to the ages represented, and the time devoted to entertainment passed all too quickly, the novelty being a feature that added to its delight.

The superintendent, Mrs. J. W. Hilton, with her assisting committee, Ruth Richards, Loreen Handley, and Maud Raper, had the refreshments as their particular responsibility, and the lunch served was delicious in quality, with the quantity quite up to the demands of healthy appetites.

Prizes were given for costumes, the winners of the award for the best fancy costumes being Emma Peers, and Wanda Bristow, Maud and Mary Raper carried off the honors for the best comic attire.

The senior group of the Junior organization had its Hallowe'en party last Thursday evening in the Parish Hall, and both occasions were marked by undoubted success.

OBITUARY

MRS. D. O. BULL.

FENELLA, Nov. 7.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—The funeral service of the late Mrs. D. O. Bull, was held on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the home of her son, Arthur Bull, Mill Valley. Mrs. Bull, who was formerly Miss Thirza Taylor, of Roseneath and who lived the greater part of her life in the vicinity of Roseneath, is survived by five sons and one daughter, George and Arthur of Mill Valley Valley, Edward, Charles and John, of Regina, and Mrs. A. Noble, of Oshawa. Since the death of her husband, some years ago, she has resided with her son, Arthur, at Mill Valley, about six miles south of Fenella. Mrs. Bull had reached the advanced age of eighty seven years and had been in failing health for some time before her death. She was a lady of fine sterling character, and one of nature's own christian gentlewomen. The service was conducted by Rev. J. J. David, of Baltimore, who spoke words of comfort to the bereaved. The pallbearers were three sons, of the deceased, George, Arthur and Edward, and three grandsons, Harold and Elmer Bull and William Noble. Interment was in Centreton cemetery.

Cobourg Unit Wins Military Honors

COBOURG, November 7 (Special to The Examiner). — Although the 22nd Medium Battery, under Major C. T. Peterson, underwent extensive reorganization as to personnel after winning in 1929 the Governor-General's Cup and the Dominion Artillery Association trophy, the premier artillery honors in Canada, the Battery took second place this year in the Personal Efficiency and fourth place in General Efficiency at the Petawawa Encampment, it is announced in Draft Militia Orders received here from Ottawa. Congratulations are being extended to the officers and men of the unit by local officials.

67 CONFIRMED IN COBOURG CHURCH

Largest Class in History of St. Michael's Catholic Parish.

COBOURG, Nov. 7.—(Special to The Examiner).—The largest class in the history of the parish was confirmed at St. Michael's Roman Catholic church here Wednesday night by Rt. Rev. Denis O'Connor, Bishop of Peterborough. This was the first episcopal visit to Cobourg of His Lordship since his consecration.

The class included 57 children and ten adults, the former the pupils of St. Michael's Convent School and the Cobourg Collegiate Institute.

The children who were confirmed were in a two-day retreat prior to the solemn ceremony which was held in the evening.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor Kelly, parish priest, and Rev. Father Butler, assisted in the Confirmation Mass which was largely attended by the relatives and friends of those taking part.

Children who received the rite of confirmation were as follows:

Frances Fardella, Mary Cullen, Annie Marie Primeau., Patricia Barr, Grace McIntee, Catharine Cooke, Gertrude Hogan, Mary Grace Kennedy, Catharine McNama, Lena Fardella, Helen Cullen, Catharine Gordon, Frances Brewster, Teresa Peters, Margaret Reid, Beatrice Gerin, Irene La Riviere, Dorcas Carruthers, Brenice Quinn, Dorothy Guy, Anne Talbot, Margaret Bulger, Doreen Quinn, Margaret Curtin.

Wins First Prize AS SKINNIEST MAN

It's just as dangerous to be too thin as too fat—and there's just one logical way to put on flesh where flesh is needed.

No man wants a prize for being the skinniest man in town—not even a purse of gold.

For years McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets have been helping people who are willing to be helped to gain needed flesh and while doing so gain in vigor, strength and physical attractiveness.

It's a great tonic tablet is McCoy's—small—sugar coated—easy to take. You can get a box of 60 tablets for 60 cents—a fair enough price. Take them for 28 days and if you don't gain at least 5 pounds get your money back from McDermid & Jury, McDermid's, Bond's, Lynch, and Payne's, or any drug store anywhere. Just ask for McCoy's.

Unemployment Office Is Established At Cobourg

COBOURG, Nov. 7.—(Special to The Examiner).—Civic bureau for the unemployed is to be established in the office of A. W. Young, town clerk, and there all unemployed are asked to register, as are those individuals who have work to offer. It is decided by the town council. The action is being taken as a precaution against transient unemployed being employed on relief work while local jobless are left without work.

"Skinny" Mother of 8 Children Gains 10 Lbs. in 4 Weeks

MONT JOLI, P.Q.—"Was skinny, weak, run-down, looking after 8 children," says Mrs. Eloi Gagnon, Jr. "Tried Ironized Yeast. Gained 10 lbs. in 4 weeks. New strength."

Don't be "skinny", weak, nervous. New Ironized Yeast adds 5 to 15 lbs. in 3 weeks. Ugly hollows fill, bony limbs round out. Blemished skin clears. Constipation, indigestion, "nerves" go overnight. New pep first day. Rich, red blood.

Ironized Yeast is two great tonics in one. Weight-building brewer's Yeast plus strengthening, blood-enriching Iron. Many times more effective than unmedicated yeast. Results in half the time.

Joking Speedster Meets His Match

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—A speedster recently arraigned in the local Recorder's court and condemned to pay a fine of $15.30 for having violated the motor vehicle law, thought the joke would be on the law after all and came to the cashier with a cargo of coins representing the total amount of the fine. One by one, he piled 1,530 coppers on the cashier's desk, some of them new, others dating as far back as Papineau's time.

But it proved that the law had provided for culprits in a jocular mood. The beaming motorist was informed the cashier could not accept more than twenty-five cents in coins, so the fine eventually was paid in crisp paper bills and a nickel and the remaining 1,505 coppers were dragged away by the somewhat downcast owner.

Students Bury Beret In Colorful Ceremony

MONTREAL, Nov. 7.—A traditional rite closely woven into the colorful college life of French-Canadian students at the University of Montreal was observed recently when the beret, black velvet tam o' shanter of the university, was ceremoniously buried in a public park.

There were no dolorous faces at the unusual funeral. It was an evening of laughing and gay song, a moving mass of yelling French-Canadian undergraduates, grotesque floats and masquerading revellers. In the presence of Mayor Houde and church and civic dignitaries, the president of the students' association read his funeral oration. The beret, traditional headgear for all students in the spring and summer, then disappeared for another year, blazing up in a brazier of flaming coals.

The city co-operated. A laughing, singing throng of students wound through the streets, dashing to this side and that, engulfing the crowd and carrying them along. Weird floats and grotesque figures bobbed along in their wake. There were Indians in war paint, bearded and buckskinned couriers-de-bois, bluff soldiers of 1650, and silk stockinged seigneurs in satin and brocade. Motorcycle police and mounted constables moved with the merrymakers, directing mundane traffic to one side.

Nowhere else on the continent could there be such a scene. The simple, laughter-loving soul of the French-Canadian came to the surface. Crowd and students were as one. They sang school songs and the old French chansons. There were booming drums and the blare of brass instruments, pretty girls singing and shouting from curb and window. At the park around the bonfire, in the glare of torches, was a treat dear to the French-Canadian, the vibrant tones of expert orators.

Even the mayor spoke. For that night he was just "Camillien" to his race. Next day he was again His Honor Camillien Houde, Mayor of Montreal.

HALL'S BRIDGE.

Mrs. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Irwin, Mr. John Elliott, Mr. Nelson Windover and Mr. John Stabler, were recent visitors to Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pearson, visited Peterborough on Monday.

Mrs. J. Freeburn and sister, Mrs. Sage, are the guests of Mrs. Tretheway, of Peterborough, this week.

Mr. E. Pearson has gone to Mr. W. H. Pearson's camp for the deer hunt. Mr. Knox and Mr. Ross Allen will join the party next week.

Mr. J. H. Northey, of the 16 line, is having a new residence built and expects it to be completed by Christmas.

Mr. N. Nicholls accompanied by Mr. Walter McIlmoyle has gone north to his camp for the deer hunt.

The members of the Catchacoma Hunt Club are assembling at their lodge once again, being accompanied as in former years by Mr. D. Montgomery, of Buckhorn.

The members of the Young Ladies' Class of the Union Church of Line 16, arranged a Hallowe'en Old Time Party on Thursday evening when music and games were enjoyed, following which supper was served.

Contracted Bad Cold Believed Getting Pneumonia

Miss Marguerite Croft, R.N., Chester Basin, N.S., writes:—"Last winter I contracted a very bad cold. Nothing I tried gave me any relief from the severe pains in my chest, and I believed I was getting pneumonia. My father told me one night he had a new cough medicine for me to try. Before I had taken a half bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup the pain was greatly relieved. I took two bottles and my cold had disappeared."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, November 7.—Receipts at the Union Stock Yards yesterday were: 25 cattle, no calves, 11 hogs, 38 sheep and lambs.

There were 600 cattle, common killers, and stores over from Wednesday added to the offering at the yard. Buyers showed very little interest in the offering and only 50 head went to the scales up to 11 o'clock. A few fair quality steers and heifers sold at $5.50 to $6.35 per cwt., and some butcher cows at $4.00 to $5.00 cwt.

It is not likely that a clean-up of the supply will be effected by closing time. Monday, Thanksgiving Day, will be a holiday at the Yards.

No calves were offered. The few good lambs sold at $8 cwt. or unchanged from Wednesday's decline. Bids on hogs are unchanged at $9.50 f.o.b. and $10.50 to $10.75 w.o.c. for bacon.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Indications of unlooked for rapid disappearance of world supplies of wheat did a good deal to bring about upturns yesterday in prices of all grains. The wheat market was further stimulated by disturbing reports that rust was spreading in Argentina. Corn and oats as well as wheat gave evidence of being in a sold-out condition resulting from heavy liquidating sales of late.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled but near the day's top level, ¾c to 1 3-8c a bushel higher than Wednesday's finish. Corn closed 1 1-8c to 2 1-8c advanced, oats ¾c to 1 1-8c. up, and provisions varying from 12c decline to a rise of 2c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, November 7. — Gains of ⅝c to ¾c were recorded on yesterday's wheat market. Near the opening strong export demand showed values up 1½c, but this advance was not held because of the selling near the close.

Around 1,000,000 bushels of grain were exported from Canada overnight, the largest shipment for a number of days, this export movement and firmness at Chicago, Buenos Aires, and Liverpool resulting in a bullish feeling here.

Cash wheat and coarse grains also moved upward slightly. Oats and barley were the active coarse grains, scoring fractional advances. Cash wheat values closed unchanged to ¼c higher than Wednesday's quotations.

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, Nov. 7.—There was a wonderful demand for new-laid eggs on the local market yesterday, but the trouble was that receipts were almost "nil" as far as wholesalers were concerned, and were "nil" among brokers. Wholesalers have had great trouble in securing fresh supplies lately and have been working on storage grades and short held to meet the retail demand. Some wholesalers stated that country shippers were sending in eggs that have been held in salt, etc., and they pay according to quality of these receipts. There has been difficulty lately in getting wholesalers to quote on new laid eggs, as the supply obtainable was not worth while.

Nevertheless, various firms were quoting country shippers for ungraded eggs, delivered, cases returned, at 48c to 50c for extras, 44c to 46c for firsts, 27c to 29c for seconds and cracks, and 35c to 37c for pullet extras. These prices were higher for firsts and seconds, and steady with Wednesday's quotation on extras.

Prices

Brokers were offering some fresh eggs, but not very many, and the prices were 53c to 54c for extras, 46c to 48c for firsts, and 30c for seconds, graded, in free cases. Quotations to retailers for new-laid eggs were 57c for extras, in cartons, 55c for extras loose, 48c for firsts loose, and 37c for seconds loose. Short held supplies were offered at 52c for extras in cartons, 50c for extras loose, 44c for firsts loose, and 35c for seconds loose.

Poultry

New poultry price lists were issued yesterday and there was only one change noticeable. Fatted hens, over 5 lbs. each, were up 1c per pound at 18c alive and 21c dressed. All other prics for fatted hens, spring chickens, broilers, ducklings, etc., were unchanged.

Butter

According to a report from Ottawa the Government will act in regard to importations of Australian butter. According to word received a 15 per cent. lump duty will be imposed at current prices for Australian butter; this is 5 1/10 cents per pound plus the usual rate fixed by the Australian treaty. Actual imports to date have been negligible, but there are now 400,000 pounds en route to Vancouver and Halifax, and the price laid down at Canadian ports will be 24c per pound. This is 10c per pound lower than the current price of butter in Australia, which means a clear case of dumping.

Prices

Local butter prices were steady yesterday at 30c to 30½c for No. 1, and 29c to 29½c for No. 2. Trade was fair to slow, which has been the "tune" for some time.

Cheese

Cheese prices were unchanged at 15¼c to 15½c for new, large, colored, paraffined, Government graded.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Nov. 7—Potatoes were 5c a bag lower on the produce market here yesterday. New Brunswick Green Mountains were quoted at 85c an 80-lb. bag, while Prince Edward Island Cobblers were 85c, and P.E.I. Mountains, 90c per 90-lb. bag.

The butter market was ¼c higher, with Eastern Townships No. 1 pasteurized creamery butter, in carlots, quoted at 29½c to 29¾c a pound. To retailers, solids were 32c and prints 33c, and receipts totalled 106 boxes.

On the cheese market Ontario was 13¾c to 13¾a pound, and the asking price was 14c. Quebec sold at 13½c, with receipts totalling 4,007 boxes.

Prices on the egg market were unchanged. Receipts were 846 cases.

FEDERATION FOR BLIND IN SESSION.

HAMILTON, Ont., November 6 (C.P.). — On behalf of the Federation, Philip E. Layton, Montreal, officially welcomed delegates to the fifth annual convention of the Canadian Federation for the Blind which opened in this city to-day. A telegram was read from Jessie MacLellan of Winnipeg reporting that an encouraging letter as to pensions for the blind had been received from Premier Bennett.

FALL PLOUGHING WELL UNDER WAY

Lack of Rain in Bailieboro District Proving Considerable Hardship.

MANY WELLS DRY.

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 7.—(Examiner Correspondence.)— The fall ploughing is well on its way toward being completed in the district. The farmers owing to the long fall with the continued fine weather have had ample time to get their odd chores and work done up and are in fair circumstances to receive old King Winter with his cold blasts.

Although the weather has been excellent, the one sad thing about the fall has been the long continued dry spell. Since the latter part of June there has not been a real heavy rainfall. Occasional showers have fallen to moisten the soil sufficiently for ploughing purposes, but no great quantity of rain has fallen to saturate the land and fill up the wells and cisterns.

At the present time a large percentage of the wells are dry. This is a very serious proposition not only from a water shortage standpoint to the household needs but a large percentage of the farmers depend entirely upon their wells to water their stock. A shortage of water during the winter months makes additional labour for the busy farmers who have to drive their stock great distances to obtain water, or draw it to them from creeks or lake.

Able to Kill Twitch.

The great asset that the dry season has been to the farmers, has been the fact that they have been able to kill the twitch grass and destructive weeds in their land. The major portion of farmers have taken advantage of the dry weather and cultivated their soil to such an extent that they have almost cleaned their land from such nuisances as have for the past number of years been steadily gaining.

The fall wheat and seeds have a good top which seems to be in a rugged condition to withstand the wintery blasts.

The weather has been so mild up to date that few farmers have yet had to house their stock, thus a considerable quantity of fodder has been saved.

Believed Firebug Working In Colborne

COBOURG, Nov. 7.—(Special to The Examiner).—Mystery fires at Colborne during the past ten days have aroused suspicion that a firebug is at work there.

Two weeks ago the rectory of Trinity Anglican church was destroyed by fire, and at two o'clock Monday morning a frame butcher shop in the heart of the business district was found ablaze. The building was a total loss and the fire department had to work hard to save adjoining buildings.

Belching

... Gas on the Stomach embarrassing and disgusting

"I'll never ask him to dinner again"

PARTIES never seemed to lag when Kennedy was one of the guests, but in spite of his charm he spent many weary evenings alone.

For Kennedy was a victim of gas discomfort. When dinner ended Kennedy's good time ended. When food came, gas came and with it embarrassment to him and to his hostess.

He had tried practically everything when he heard about Tanlac. Soon after he started to take it gas disappeared. Pain and discomfort ceased. He slept soundly once more. He could eat everything and anything.

If you are troubled with gas, if you are nervous, without appetite, tired and rundown and cannot sleep, you need Tanlac. For 20 years, Tanlac has brought relief to the millions of men and women suffering with belching, gas, pain after eating, loss of appetite and other digestive troubles. You, too, can trust this pure, good remedy—made from nature's own roots, barks and herbs. Get a bottle of this marvellous medicine at your druggist's today—your money will be promptly refunded if you are not satisfied.

ACCIDENTS AND COMPENSATION.

The accidents reported to the Workmen's Compensation Board on Ontario during October numbered 6,758, as compared with 8,057 for the same month last year. The fatal accidents, numbering 44, were the same for both years.

This year's accident record to date shows 59,866 reported accidents, a decrease of 13,944 from the number for the same period last year.

The total benefits awarded during October amounted to $658,080.46, of which $548,857.41 was for compensation and $109,223.05 for medical aid, as compared with $735,736.62 awarded during October last year.

The number of accidents reported to date this year corresponds very closely to the number for the same period of 1927.

BUY CANADIAN.

Hon. Mr. Taschereau's advice to the people of this country, voiced at the opening of the second Produced-in-Canada Exhibition in Montreal the other night, was to "buy Canadian."

That is a catchy slogan that should be remembered.

It is announced that some $37,000,000 in unemployment relief work is being expended throughout the country, and that is a most excellent thing, for it should provide jobs for those who need work the most.

Beneficial as will this program prove, however, its good results would be as nothing compared to what would be brought about if Canadians generally did as the Premier of Quebec advised and bought Canadian.

Increase the volume of Canadian production by increasing the sale of Canadian merchandise, and immediately there will be more jobs opened up for Canadian workers.

It is time that we quit talking about buying Canadian goods and began instead to really buy them, and to insist upon the home-produced article.

There is not enough action in this produced-in-Canada campaign, simply because we seem satisfied merely to shout slogans without any real effort to put them into effect.

Not long ago a made-in-Canada fair was held not a thousand miles away from here and some of the prizes offered were marked "Made in the U.S.A."

Just carelessness, of course—the same kind of carelessness that keeps us from consistently buying Canadian goods and thus providing jobs for Canadian workers.

THE WHEAT QUOTA PLAN.

Although the Imperial Economic Conference has failed in its larger aspect as regard the development of Empire trade, the favorable report of the conference committee appointed to study the wheat quota plan justifies the hope that Canadian grain growers will be able to get some advantage therefrom if the report meets with the approval of the conference at its next plenary session.

Under this plan the Empire wheat-producing countries, chiefly Canada and Australia, will be assured of supplying a fixed portion of the British market requirements.

Details of the quota scheme are left to the conference to decide, but there are several phases of the situation that are interesting.

One is that while there would be a guaranteed minimum for Empire wheat under the quota plan, this would not represent the full sale of Empire wheat, inasmuch as the Dominions would have the chance of competing with the rest of the world for the balance of the British market requirements.

On the other hand, it is not considered feasible to do anything more than to fix an Empire quota, the committee finding that it would be administratively impracticable to fix a quota for each Dominion.

That means, of course, that no particular Dominion would have any guaranteed share of the British market; the wheat-growing Dominions, in fact, will have to compete among themselves for a share of the guaranteed Empire quota.

THE WOLF MENACE.

Stories from several different sections of the Province report activities by wolf packs, and it is probable that Ontario hunters who have invaded the deer-hunting districts this week will find the four-footed venison-seekers have interfered considerably with the success of the annual hunt.

The same story is told from Quebec, where it is said wolves are increasing, especially in the Gatineau and Lievre country, and the blame for the whole trouble is being laid at the door of the Ontario Government on the ground that the bounty paid by the Queen's Park authorities is not high enough to stimulate interest in wolf-hunting and thus lead to the extermination of the menace.

Quebec, it is said, is willing to pay a higher bounty, but so long as Ontario refuses to adopt that policy no action can be taken by the sister Province, inasmuch as an increase in the Quebec bounty would lead to the smuggling of Ontario wolf pelts over the provincial boundary line to claim the higher reward.

It looks as if it would be good business for the Governments of the two Provinces to get their heads together and decide upon an aggressive policy against the pest of wolves, at the same time putting into effect a bounty system that would make wolf-hunting worth while.

The Ottawa Journal hits the nail on the head when it says:

> "If all the wolves in Ontario were killed off in a year at a bounty of $50 a head, the financial call would mean little to the Ontario treasury. Sometimes alleged economy is rotten economy. A small bounty on dead wolves looks to us to be rotten economy."

There seems to be very little unemployment among persons who make a business of relieving something—San Diego Union.

POPPY DAY.

To-morrow is Poppy Day; remember your duty to the memory of the dead and your responsibility toward the living ex-soldier and buy and wear a poppy.

These flowers are manufactured by war veterans.

Your donation, therefore, helps to keep these workers employed; it also helps the Canadian Legion to relieve cases of distress among the families of the men who fought for Canada in the Great War.

And the wearing of the poppy over Armistice Day is a tribute to the memory of the unreturning brave in which every citizen should participate.

WORLD-WIDE UNREST.

An experienced writer on international affairs and one who is usually credited with being a keen observer, William Philip Simms, in a recent article undertook to make a survey of the conditions of discontent and unrest that are abroad in the world. As a result of his observations he presents the following summary, which be gleaned from every-day news dispatches:

"Unrest stirs practically all of South America. Peru and Argentina are putting their houses in order after sudden revolutions. Brazil is in the midst of a desperate civil war. Communists are ready to march on the capital of Bolivia. Venezuela is ready for a revolt. Chile barely nipped a revolutionary plot in the bud. In Europe, the situation is little better. Spain and Portugal are smouldering with insurrectionary fires. In Poland, Pilsudski is striving to stamp out new flames of discontent. Hungary prepares to proclaim youthful Prince Otto as its king, and Jugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia are ready to invade her if she does. The Balkans are full of dire rumors and portents. Russia is making ready for war. Germany, swept by a Fascist wave, debates the repudiation of the Versailles treaty, while France makes ready to fight if such a thing does indeed happen. In India the revolt gets more widespread instead of less. Civil war continues to ravage China. Egypt is still unsettled. Palestine is full of disorder. Persia and Turkey are snarling at one another across the border, while the Kurds raid both lands impartially."

This certainly looks like a formidable list and indicates, beyond question, that the world is in a condition of serious turmoil and unrest, a goodly measure of which is political and social. When one begins to analyse the causes underlying all these disturbances, they are found to be traceable for the most part to the new spirit of freedom, independence and aspirations for better things inspired by the World War. That terrible conflict arose, in the first place, out of a controversy between Austria and Serbia, but before its conclusion it resolved itself into a world-wide struggle for greater political freedom, and the right of subject peoples to determine their own destiny, and their own forms of government. While the conditions in China and India are to be deplored, there is no doubt whatever that, apart from petty jealousies, they are the uprisings of people who are striving for the consummation of better forms of national life. There is reason to believe that the sum total of these disturbances, which concern three-fourths of the population of the earth, will be the ennoblement of civilization throughout the world, although the accompanying conditions may be harassing for the present.—Brantford Expositor.

BOOK WEEK.

This is Canadian book week, now an established institution. Both in prose and verse this country has a body of achievement of which it may be proud, and which justifies the dedication of one week in the year to the pleasant duty of directing public attention in a special way to the merits and claims of Canadian literature. It is the opinion of many critics that Canadian poetry stands above Canadian prose in accomplishment, as it does in international recognition. Whether this be true or not, it is the concensus that the best work in recent years has gone into Canadian fiction, though new poets are coming to the front and promise to sustain a high tradition. Canadian novelists have had mines of romance in the French regime, the pioneer era in the eastern English Provinces, and the life of the prairies and the western frontier, now shifting to the north. Our fiction is now beginning to find a background in the present, in the comparatively staple social conditions of our older and settled parts of the country. It is interpreting largely the Canada of to-day. The most gifted Canadian novelist, Mazo de la Roche, does this, she does not deal with typical Canadians, her characters belonging to an Anglo-Canadian family with somewhat erotic traits.

Canadian writers need all the encouragement their countrymen can give them. The Canadian reading public is small compared with that of the United States, and Canadians have not the same facilities for promoting book sales, the same highly organized and expensive publicity machinery, as across the line. Canadian authors get no official aid except in Quebec, where $10,000 a year is distributed among provincial authors by the Quebec Government. Mr. W. Arthur Deacon, the Canadian critic, refers to Roberts and Carman, who left Canada 40 years ago, because it afforded no living at all for writers. While there has been a marked improvement, the rewards of literature are still meagre. Mr. Deacon declares that the injustice done to Carman living, contrasted with the $25,000 being spent upon a monument for Carman dead, is likely to be repeated in the case of three distinguished senior authors unless help is forthcoming at once. Yet Canadians are a highly literate people, and read fully as much relatively as their neighbors. They read floods of non-Canadian books no more meritorious than Canadian books which find less favor even at home. Canadian book week is a campaign of public education in literary patriotism.—St. Catharines Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

There are to be no more deportations without a careful and complete investigation, it is announced. Recent publicity has had its effect.

The Canadian Congress of Labor has decided to enter the field of Dominion politics, a policy that to an outsider seems to offer no prospects of success.

Communists have caused a riot in Sudbury. Now, there is a real chance for some beneficial deportation proceedings to be launched.

Federal Cabinet Ministers have to pay for their own Christmas cards this year. Is there any logical reason why they shouldn't have always done so?

Safety razor manufacturers have merged in the United States. Competition was keen.—Edmonton Journal.

THE SILVER HAWK

By

WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

But Aurore's reluctance did not spring from any cowardice. She reasoned: "He would never come here again. He'd send that partner of his—Kansas—to take care of me." She could not bear to think of living alone there without the prospect of Jim Dorn's company, or of cutting herself off from him and never seeing him again. She would say, "I hope he won't visit me again for three or four weeks"; but while she sat there on the rock she frequently turned her head to look at the south pass, where she expecte him to appear out of the clouds when he did come.

Aurore could remember almost the exact words in which he had told her about his life; and that set her to thinking she was altogether a worthless creature compared to Jim Dorn. She thought: "I had every chance, and now see what I've come to; while Jim—Jim didn't have a chance in the world. He was robbed of everything when he was a baby three years old." Last night she had lain awake, watching a star through her window, and remembered about that big man his father and the wild-flower garden and the blue-eyed girl who told him elfin stories, and that autumn day at the first fall of snow; and Aurore had cried a bit about that.

Dorn had spoken carelessly of his early hardships, but she knew what it meant for a boy in his 'teens to work and live with the rough men of a timber crew, and live all winter in a lonely trapping shack. It had been terribly bleak and hard, but it had built character. She could imagine him going Out, purposive, with no softness or idleness about him, and joining that picked body of men who flew, and becoming one of them and one of the best of them.

Those early years had built character, but Aurore knew they had been too bleak and too hard. She could see the effects of them on Jim Dorn. At times she did not think of him as a man who could lift her with one arm, but as a person who needed her care. In her thoughts of him at such times there was a good deal of maternal tenderness. She wished: "I'd like to take him and see if I could make him happier and make amends for those early years. But instead of that, I've got to . . ." and she went back to her fight with herself whether or not to tell him, and she had made no decision when Dorn came.

She first heard a singing whine which seemed to come from nowhere and which grew steadily louder until, high above the glacier, she saw the Silver Hawk wing in between two heavy white clouds and then sail out into the unbroken blue above her.

As the airplane came spiralling down toward the island, Aurore stood up and waved. At three thousand feet the machine levelled off and flew in circles; and after a few moments of wonder Aurore understood that Dorn had seen her, in bathing suit, and was giving her opportunity to change clothes if she wanted to. She hesitated a little till she remembered he had said something about fetching a bathing outfit, and guessed he had brought it this time and might like to go swimming.

Hurrying across the island, she got a blanket at the cabin by the way of dressing robe, and ran on to the cove. Dorn dropped down, taxied close in, and paddled ashore with a pack.

As they shook hands Aurore saw Dorn's quick, disciplined glance at her throat and loozened hair, and noticed how he made himself look then at her eyes. He stooped and unbuckled the pack to show her what he had brought. She thought: "He knew I didn't need them so soon. They're an excuse—unless his work took him up near here." She saw his bathing suit and said: "If you'll go up to the cabin, Jim, I'll wait for you."

She watched till he had entered the door; then turning, she looked at the Silver Hawk, wondering just why Jim Dorn had come; and finally, slipping the blanket from her shoulders, she swam out to the airplane. Standing on a pontoon, she peeped into the cockpit. She saw some new brackets which Dorn had lately fixed against the sides for some purpose, but his big aerial camera was not there.

"He wasn't mapping. He came two-hundred miles — a 400-mile trip—for an hour with me." She repeated the words, "For an hour with me," and her eyes were frightened. There on the pontoon of his plane Aurore came to her decision. "I've got to tell him—before he leaves. I've got to—got to . . ."

She glanced fearfully at the cabin under the great pines, and she experienced a sudden wild impulse to run away and hide.

Aurore could swim like a young otter and floated so easily that Dorn half believed she could curl up on the water and go to sleep like an otter; and she dived so far that Dorn, with an eye always alert on her, would hold his breath waiting for her to break surface. In a straightway race she could lead him, her arms flashing overhead, for fifty or sixty yards, but then his sturdy breast-stroke overhauled her, and in a hundred yards she invariably called off the race.

The lake water was too chill for comfort, and a cloud came over the sun. Dorn said, "Shall we go in? I noticed a storm coming. If you'll let me be the first to change clothes . . . I've got a chore I must do."

In the cabin he dressed quickly, and taking the rifle he had left with Aurore, he paddled around to one of the tiny islets. A band of grizzly caribou, tame as all unhunted wilderness animals are tame, had been staring fixedly at Aurore and him from a thicket of devil scrub. He shot a yearling, and brought back the choice portions.

He was looking out for Aurore in case of some "accident" to himself.

From the damp, felt-lined box where she kept her tackle, Aurore selected trout lures to match the colour of shad and mayfly she had seen on the water that morning, and for half an hour she and Dorn fished in a drifting canoe. Rather, Aurore fished. Standing in the prow of the clumsy craft, she whipped the water in and out of the flag lanes, placing her fly to the inch, while Dorn was content to use landing net and watch her and wonder at her magic power over his blue devils and his worries.

On their way back to the cove he doubly anchored the Silver Hawk and covered the cockpit with canvas.

Twilight came an hour early when, over the western range, huge inky masses reared up, streaked with incessant white flashes. A mantle of purple shadow fell across the lake. As Dorn and Aurore walked up the path under the pines, the golden-crowned sparrows were singing their evening song—five low silvery notes of an exquisite, unforgettable cadence.

The supper Aurore prepared was a treat to Dorn, who was about burned out on his own cooking. She knew how to plank trout on cedar slabs. Across on the mainland she had gathered six-inch shoots of the creeping raspberry, succulent as asparagus. Somewhere she had found a bed of bracken fern, whose root-bulbs were quite like potatoes. There was white bread baked in ashes, and a tart of Arctic cranberries, and coffee with cream in tablet form.

Afterward they drew chairs up to the fireplace and Dorn blanketed one for Aurore. She had shaken her hair out loose after their swim and tied it at the back with cord ribbon from one of the packages. He thought it made her look younger, more girlish. As one wants to stroke the satiny breast of a waxwing, he wanted to reach out and run his hand over the silken waves of it. Her lips were slightly parted, her eyelashes heavy and brooding; and she would not look at him.

While the storm lashed the pine-tops and the rain came down in wave-like inundations, they listened to the terrific thunder-crashes that struck against the mountain slopes and rolled bellowing across the lake; and they had little to say until the worst of the storm had passed and the rain settled into a steady downpour.

Though he had been out of touch with his native province for many years, Dorn had heard the name and knew the reputation of the famous engineer. A man of broad interests, he had risen out of his profession and become leader of a powerful reform party. Guiding spirit in a dozen huge enterprises, he had stood like a rock in a torrent, blocking political graft and exposing scandals and waste; and he had won the trust and the love of that tribunal whom the politician calls "my dear people."

"Roger McNain was my father, Jim," she said quietly.

Her revelation came as a surprise; Dorn had never connected her name with McNain, the engineer and scientist and fighter. But he scarcely gave it a second thought then, for he knew Aurore had not told him that for its own sake, but as preparation for something to come.

"He was more than a father," she went on. "More than just the cause of my being. Everywhere on all his work he took me with him. I never went to school a day till I was seventeen. He wouldn't let anybody else educate me, but tried to make me his own personal handiwork. I think he disliked the idea of turning his child over to strangers to be taught. He made me study books, and study hard, but he also guided me into the knowledge a person gets out of doors.

"He was a builder, Jim. And I think he tried, with the patience and loving care of an artist, to make me his best piece of work. But there's a danger—looking back now I can see it—a danger in what he tried. If he had lived, he might have completed his work. But he died. He'd been my whole world; I was lost and had no one to turn to. I wasn't altogether to blame for what—what I fell into later. I was young and pliable. My mother meant to do well, according to her ideals . . ."

"Your mother?" Dorn echoed. "I thought—you didn't mention her—I thought she was dead."

"She's still living. In Victoria. But I hardly saw her once a season during those seventeen years. She didn't like the bush, she never went with Dad on his locations; her life was in the city—clubs and social affairs. It was Dad and me for it. They didn't separate, because Dad abhorred divorce, and Mother—it's cruel to say, but it's the truth—Mother needed the money he made. So they kept up appearances.

"I went to live with her after he died. She didn't like the way he'd fashioned me. In her eyes I was a young barbarian. Looking back on it, I can see she tried to take down piece by piece what he'd built, and put it together again—according to her ideals. The consequences for me . . . Jim, it's a terrible power a parent has; a power to shipwreck or to build beautifully; and, Jim, I—I was shipwrecked."

She flung out the words in a passionate, heartstricken cry. Dorn was lost in a blind swirl of questions. What did she mean by saying her life had been wrecked? What had happened to her in those four dark, unfathomable years since her father died? What was her relationship with Carter-Snowdon and why was he hounding her as though his life depended upon capturing her?

Aurore spoke again, steadying her voice with visible effort: "Here at this lake, Jim, where Dad and I spent five summers, I think I've found myself. That night Dad Bergelot brought me over to your tent, I was lost and blind and merely groping toward the right thing, the honest and courageous thing."

There Aurore paused again, and Dorn knew that still she had not told him everything she intended, but was fighting desperately for the courage to go on. In desire to comfort, to reassure her, Dorn leaned closer and took her hand, but Aurore's clasp was cold and unresponsive, and she would not look at him but kept her eyes averted.

"I didn't mean to come to you that first night, Jim. I wanted Dad Bergelot to find old Luke; I knew Luke would bring me north. But he said your airplane was a quicker, safer way to escape. I was frightened at the thought of coming to a stranger, for I'd be in his power; but Dad Bergelot persuaded me. He said you were . . . he didn't use the word 'Victorian,' but that is what he meant. And I've found you so, Jim—in the noblest meaning of the word. You do have ideals that aren't common or even fashionable just now, I believe, I know, you'd play any game square. If you'd ever come to love a girl and your sense of honour said you couldn't have her, you'd never turn to any ignoble way."

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

A Thought

LIFE'S CHALLENGE.

You have met with another rebuff; Miss Fortune has flicked you again. Already she's barracked you more than enough, her venom is hard to explain. Life seems to have broken its pledge, and Fate has been certainly scurvy. No wonder you are feeling a little on edge, a little off-color and nervy.

But this, of course, is not the end—indeed it is just a beginning. An early defeat is a challenge, to put you in fettle for winning. It is intended to galvanize nerve, to bring your resources to focus. The disasters we have can be harnessed to serve as incitements to spur and provoke us. It's simply grotesque and absurd that you should be finally quelled. Why, surely the gall of your anger is stirred that such a belief should be held.

You are going to show the world that you are made of a soldier stuff; that the haughty defiance you have hitherto hurled at calamity was not just bluff. You will speedily be on your feet. You are under no magical curse. Success when it comes will be all the more sweet because of this recent reverse.

What To-day Means To You

"SCORPIO"

If November 7th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. and from 11 p.m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 11 a.m. to noon, and from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m.

A drab day, viewed from the point of accomplishments, is predicted for this date. It will be a period of contemplation and dreaming more than action. A quarrelsome time for lovers and domestic unhappiness. Worry and disappointment in connection with intimate personal ties.

The child born on this November 7th will be shrewd and cunning, and will have its own way "by hook or crook." It will do things impulsively, will be easily discouraged and sensitive. It will have mechanical skill.

You have a bright pilosophy of life, you look out for things to appreciate, and see twice as much as he who is looking out for things to grumble at. The underlying structures of your character are solid, and your granite-like reputations are not created by fantastic and unprincipled self-advertising. Your actions prove the honesty, and decency of your nature, as well as the bigness of your heart. You make no promises you cannot fulfil to the utmost in letter and spirit.

Life to you is an adventure, and when the thrill has gone out of an effort (business or pleasure), when you know you can do no better, your interest lags, and you are ready to take on new problems to unravel. You are never anxious to give your active mind a vacation. Indolence and you are not on speaking terms. As a man, you have money sense, and you cannot only make it, but you can keep it. You are not a "tight wad," but you want full receipt for value given. You never try to put on a show, and your tastes are sensible and simple.

As a woman, you know how to apply business principles within the home, and you will make a true help-mate to your husband. Service is the keynote of your life. Both men and women have very discreet tongues, and make safe confidants. You make very delightful friends and relentless enemies.

Mount Pleasant W. I. Holds Social Evening

MOUNT PLEASANT, Nov. 6.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—The members of the Mount Pleasant branch of the Women's Institute held their first social event of the season on Hallowe'en in the form of a party held in the Women's Institute Hall.

Mrs. Garnet Shield, in her usual capable manner, presided for the program which was both entertaining and educative. Mrs. Melville Jones and Mrs. Alex Tully, treasurer and secretary respectively, proved spooky doorkeepers in their ghostly costumes.

There was a fish pond where old an young tested their luck and the candy booth was well patronized. The Fortune Telling Booth provided interest for everyone. Games were played and the serving of refreshments concluded the evening.

Farmers' telephone lines are just being installed in Ireland.

SNOBBERY RAMPANT AMONG MUSICIANS

Sir John Reith Appeals For Use of Old Hymns as Well as "Highbrow" Music.

LONDON, Nov. 7 (By The Canadian Press).—"Musical snobs" is the term applied to many musical people who are impatient of any sort of music that is not "highbrow" by Sir John Reith, director-general of the British Broadcasting Corporation. Sir John has been criticized frequently for his defence of the "highbrow" tendency in the wireless programmes, but in a recent interview he presented a very different side of his character.

Addressing a conference of the newly formed Society of Music Lovers in Cardiff, recently, Sir John said that to him there was more soul-stirring music in the works of "Rock of Ages," and "Jesu, Lover of My Soul," than in much of the highbrow compositions which most musicians loved. He thought there was too much snobbery among musicians. Music was intended to be one of the straightest avenues of approach to the creative mind, and he asked for tolerance of the likes and dislikes of other people.

MARMORA

Mrs. Alex McFaul is in Toronto attending the funeral of her brother-in-law the late James Warner.

A dance was held on Friday evening at the home of Mr. C. Baker.

Mr. W. Nugent, of Belleville, was in town on Tuesday.

Canon W. G. Swayne, rector of Bath and Canon Missioner of the Diocese of Ontario, addressed the executive council of Marmora Parish at a special meeting held in the White Hall on Tuesday.

Rev. A. B. Caldwell and Rev. F. H. Howard, attended the Ministerial meeting held in Havelock on Monday.

WHAT IS TEMPERANCE?

To The Editor of The Examiner:
Dear Sir:

Re your editorial of Tuesday, I agree with "One Who is Interested" in that alcohol, even a little of it, lessens a man's power of doing useful work. Total abstainers do more work in a given time than drinkers even if they never get drunk.

"Temperance in general is the virtue by which man makes use of temporal good things only insofar as they help him to attain those which are eternal. It is one of the four fundamental or cardinal virtues, which are the cornerstones of a Christian life and the foundation of all moral virtues. Temperance in a more restricted sense is commonly understood to mean moderation in the use of food and drink. More particularly still the word is used to designate the practice of that virtue with regard to intoxicating drink. Our work should be for those societies who practise and cultivate temperance in this latter sense for temperance is a Christian virtue and the true Christian knows that virtue must proceed from the heart of man.

It is a disposition of the soul, not a thing written merely on the statutes of a country and enforced by a policeman. The regeneration of human society in any of its weaknesses while it may be encouraged and safeguarded by external enforcements, must always remain a work essentially founded on the understanding and the desire of moral goodness. This understanding and desire must be first planted and fostered in the human heart on the solid foundations of true religion. We cannot discard the teachings of Christ; banish him from the class room; making a mockery of God's authority over family life and its sacred obligations; pass laws with disregard to the rights of God; make the state the supreme arbiter and dispenser of all things, both Caesar's and God's and expect when once the foundation of all virtues has been undermined or swept away, that there is going to exist in society something that can be the result only of inward goodness and character; certainly not of fanaticism and a lawlessness bred of fanatic legislation. In many countries the evils of intemperance have long been a problem. We must pray that the spirit which animates our Christian temperance societies may become more general; that Christians the world over may work together for the establishment of temperance over individual lives; over the family and over the State. It is only when men are temperate that the evils of modern society can be remedied effectually and the peace of Christ established."

OXYGEN RUSHED TO SAVE WOMAN

Special Train Bearing Oxygen From Toronto to Ottawa.

TO SAVE MRS. HEENAN.

TORONTO, Ont., November 7 (C. P.). — Somewhere between this city and Ottawa a C.N.R. train bearing a special oxygen tank and operator is speeding toward the Capital in an attempt to save the life of Mrs. Peter Heenan, wife of the former Minister of Labor, who is seriously ill in hospital.

Mrs. Heenan, it is understood, is suffering from a complication of double pneumonia and diabetes.

The tank and operator secured through the special offices of Dr. J. Gilchrist of Christie Street Hospital and Professor R. Guest of the University of Toronto, was placed on a train to-day and is being rushed with the utmost despatch by the Canadian National Railways in order that this may arrive in the Capital by eight o'clock to-night.

November Investment Offerings:—

4.55% to 6.58%.

We have also prepared a special report on a company that has demonstrated its ability to make substantial profits under present depressed conditions. The common stock of this company, at current prices, gives a yield of about 8%, and should be especially interesting to the investor.

A copy of our November circular will be furnished upon request.

FOLLOWS FATHER'S FOOTSTEPS

Many race followers declare that they have never witnessed a "perfect" start in a horse race. Yet here is George Cassidy (following the footsteps of his father, the late Mars Cassidy) getting a "baker's dozen" of two year old maidens off right on their toes as the barrier is sprung on the Sumach purse, first race at Empire City. Venezia, Catrone up, who had last post position, won the event from Nick Carter (No. 6). Annie Frances finished third.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND BRIEFS

A SPECIAL SERVICE TO THE EXAMINER

TORONTO, Nov. 7 (Special to The Examiner).—In spite of records during the last fiscal year in earnings, tonnage and recovery, first market reaction to the Teck Hughes annual report was a somewhat easier tendency. Some disappointment was expressed regarding the total of just over $10,000,000 shown for ore reserves, though the management points out this includes only broken ore and ore blocked out on three sides. These reserves are stated to be sufficient for over two years' milling and from limited work on the lower levels numerous indications of possible new ore and substantial increases to partly developed ore were obtained.

The capital stock outstanding of Teck Hughes for the fourth consecutive year, shows an increase of 10,000 shares, according to the balance-sheet. During the discussion at the meeting of shareholders last fall it was brought out that an official holds an option on company's stock and has been the recipient of these shares each year.

Ontario and Quebec are not alone in having new finds to report this year. New discoveries of gold in a mineral district about 35 miles east of Flin Flon are causing a considerable flurry in Northern Manitoba despite strenuous efforts on the part of finders to keep development under cover. The area is known as Copper Lake and two years ago when prospecting was in its prime in the section, received considerable attention.

It is learned in The Pas that several claims which lapsed at Copper Lake recently have been restaked with an eastern syndicate presumably behind the move. One new group of 18 claims already has been consolidated also.

Favorable Samples.

Some of the samples brought to town in past few days have assayed $100 and better to the ton in gold, with values in copper as well. The dimensions of the strike have not been ascertained.

George Miller, president of Canusa Mining Co., who recently returned from the property, reports very favorable developments on the 300 level. Considerable shearing was found in face of the south crosscut and heavy mineralization was encountered. Diamond drilling has been started on this level to the south, a horizontal hole being drilled to intersect the stable vein.

In addition, J. D. Tolman, Canusa mine manager, is now sinking a winze on the high grade showing on surface of shaft vein to locate the fault which occurred above the ninety-foot level. After this is located, connection will be made at the 300 level. Diamond drilling will be continued to cut the vein at the 400 level. Financing of the property by American interests should be completed in the near future, it is stated.

WELCOMES CANADIAN CATTLE.

BIRKENHEAD, England, Nov. 7.—(C.P. Cable).—A welcome for Canadian cattle at this port was promised by Mayor T. McLellan to-day, when the meat trade section of the national union of distributive workers, of which he is national organizer, made him a presentation. They could confidently expect to receive a considerable proportion of the 15,000 cattle available for export before the end of the year, he said.

NEW YORK LIST BREAKS AGAIN TO-DAY FOLLOWING RESPITE

Rail Shares Drop Sharply, Several Promising Issues Reach New Lows.

2 TO 7 POINT LOSSES.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 7.— The stock market burrowed still further into new low price stratt to-day, after yesterday's brief respite from selling pressure.

Rail shares broke sharply, several prominent issues recording the lowest levels in past few years, and weakness spread throughout the list. The pressure against the utility shares showed no sign of lifting and the leading industrials, after resisting the trend for a time, dropped through their recent resistance points.

Other monetary accommodations, however, were easy. The demand for commercial paper exceeded the supply, and a little short term paper moved as low as 2½ per cent.

The weekly brokers' loan showed a further drop of $58,000,000, making a total deflation since mid-September of 768,000,000. It was notable, however, that security loans of New York banks to non-broker borrowers increased in the same seven-day period by $33,000,000, making a total expansion since September 17 of $131,000,000. Some observers interpret increases in these loans as indicating accumulation of stocks by strong buyers. The increase, however, has been rather too small to be conclusive.

Four Kenora Hunters Missing Week In Bush

Kenora, Ont., Nov. 7.— (C.P.) — Provincial police to-day are searching for four Kenora hunters who have been unreported since leaving here Monday. Fear for the safety of the men is expressed by relatives and friends and the aid of the Provincial constables was sought.

Carrying only one day's provisions, the hunters, Joseph Chapleau, Frank Basovnil, John Danik and Joseph Danik left for the huntng grounds in an outboard motor boat. Relatives had expected their return by Tuesday night at the latest.

Their desination was Hay Island on the Lake of the Woods and it was for there the police officers, accompanied by friends of the missing men, started to-day.

BRAZILIAN AND NICKEL SHOW HIGHER PRICE OVER THURSDAY

Quotations Irregular on Toronto Exchange To-day in Slow Trading.

NO DEFINITE TREND.

TORONTO, Nov. 7 (CP).—Price changes were irregular on Toronto stock exchange this morning. Trading again was slow. Interlisted issues opened unchanged and sold off fractionally but, as yesterday, the movement was so narrow that it was incorrect to indicate a trend.

Brazilian and International Nickel, while down from their opening, were still slightly above last night. Oils showed small losses, and Bell Telephone, Ford of Canada, Goodyear Common, Walkers eased. C.P.R., off ½ point at the end of the first hour, was subjected to heavier pressure along about midday and gave way further. Massey-Harris was firm at 15¾ in light trading. Steel of Canada came out better at 40 and moved up another point to 41.

VIPOND SELLS POINT HIGHER

Hollinger and Wright Hargreaves Among Gold Issues to Show Firmness.

SUDBURY UNDER FIRE.

TORONTO, Nov. 7 (CP).—Some of yesterday's weak spots were repeaters on the mining market in the forenoon to-day, but major part of the board held steady.

Teck Hughes reacted to publication of the annual report for the last fiscal period with a loss of 20 to $5.75. Hollinger firmed 10 to $6 and Premier Vipond and Wright-Hargreaves all sold a point higher. Howey and Kirkland Lake Gold continued easy.

International Nickel and Noranda both showed fractional recoveries and Hudson Bay regained 5 to $3.90. Sudbury Basin remained under fire, however, price dropping another 10 to 50, and Falconbridge was off 5 to $1.35. Other base metal issues were holding.

Chemical Research declined to a new low for the year of $2.50, off another quarter. Home Oil, Ajax and Mayland were up a point or so each.

MARKET SIDELIGHTS.

Discussing the Toronto exchange market, a local broker voiced the opinion that prices are likely to remain constant at present levels and that it would take a sharp break of from five to ten points in the leaders on Wall Street to force liquidation locally and cause a noticeable reaction. The local market, he states, is oversold; fluctuations in New York, unless of a major character, will not cause more than fractional sways here, and those in interlisted issues. A sudden downward movement in New York might, however, necessitate brokers asking additional margin and thus force liquidation.

Despite the fact that practically all Canadian stock market exchanges will be closed Saturday preceding the Thanksgiving Day holiday, the committee of the Toronto stock exchange has decided to keep the local market open for business. Stock exchanges have come to pay such an important part in every day that they are in the nature of a public institution and the committee took the attitude that responsibility to the public demanded the market be kept open.

Profits Not Equal 1929.

Standard Statistics Co., of New York, in a current analysis on the position of Dominion Stores Ltd., say it is doubtful that full returns for the year will quite equal to $2.12 per share reported for 1929, although a material decline is not anticipated. Despite declining commodity prices and general curtailed purchasing power, earnings have experienced only moderate curtailment, compared with a year ago. Current position is sound, with cash items totalling $1,250,000 and the company's policy of closing non-profitable units augments long term outlook, and is tending to reduce operating expenses this year. Standard statistics speak of unfavorable sales comparison with a year ago but an official of the company in speaking to the writer a short time ago stated the company to-day was enjoying a larger sales volume than at this time a year ago, serving more customers and that the decline in dollar value was more or less due to the drop in commodity prices. In discussing earnings for 1930 he would not make an estimate but held the opinion that the net results would only show a slight decrease from those of the preceding year.

$10 D. P. Dividend.

Shareholders of Dominion Power and Transmission company to-day are in receipt of an official notice of the payment of $10 to be made on account of capital announced by President W. E. Phin about a week ago. This makes the second payment so far in connection with the winding up of the company, following the sale of the business and assets to the Hydro-Electric Commission. The first payment was $50 and the second will be made November 17, making a total of $60 a share to date. In an official letter sent out advising of the first payment it was estimated the common holders would receive approximately $70 per share.

An extension of time to Dec. 1st has been granted to the stockholders of Canadian Brewing Corporation to exchange their certificates for those of the Brewing Corporation of Canada. The original offer, which provided for the exchange of one share of preferred stock, no par value, and one share of common stock of Brewing Corporation for each two shares of ordinary stock of Canadian Brewing expired September 22 last. In notifying shareholders of the extension of time it is stated over 90 per cent. of the outstanding shares of Canadian Brewing Corporation have already been exchanged for shares of Brewing Corporation and that December 1, 1930, will be the last date upon which the exchange will be permitted. Since the offer was first made to Canadian Brewing, Brewing Corporation of Canada have made an offer to the stockholders of Carling Breweries of one preferred share and five common shares of Brewing Corporation for ten Carling shares. This latter offer will expire November 29.

Winnipeg Review

The wheat market was fairly active yesterday with a better class of business passing. Export and seaboard houses were in the market, and sales overnight and again yesterday morning were estimated at around one million bushels. There was also considerable short covering, while at the same time offerings were not liberal until prices were 1½ above the previous close, at which level there seems to be plenty of wheat for sale and top levels were difficult to hold, despite the fact that Chicago closed strong. Liverpool closed ⅛ to 5-8 higher and was due 1½ lower, and Buenos Aires was 2 cents higher, which would seem to indicate a thtthe rust appearance was somewhat more serious than the trade generally had anticipated.

In the cash market there was a fair demand for most grades, shippers and millers being in the market at card prices but there was no tendency to increase bids despite the fact that offerings were not pressing. There was little change in the flour situation and mills report only a small business passing from time to time. The market has declined the past six days and was due for an upturn, but there is very little, if anything, in the situation to warrant any material upturn in prices, as the market is probably technically weaker for the short covering to-day. Winnipeg features closed ¾ to ⅞ higher, holding about half the earlier bulge.

Coarse Grains.—These markets were all stronger yesterday, but business volume was only small. There was very little for sale in the pit and supplies appear to be in fairly strong hands, but the demand is very limited and the cash markets are quiet with only an odd car changing hands. Oats closed 1 cent higher. Barley 3-8 to 5-8 higher. Rye 1¾ to 1⅞ higher.

Liverpool cables due ⅜ to ¾ higher.

FIRM MAKES ASSIGNMENT

Action Authorized at Meeting of D. S. Paterson and Company Shareholders.

HEADS CONVICTED.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 7.—"As a result of recent court proceedings", D. S. Paterson and Company, stock brokers, have decided to make a voluntary assignment. This action was authorized at a meeting of shareholders yesterday and proceedings were commenced in the bankruptcy court at Osgoode Hall today.

D. S. Paterson and Austin Campbell, officials of the company, last week were convicted on charges of conspiracy, while Edgar McLean, the General Manager was acquitted on similar counts. Paterson and Campbell have still to face a charge of "bucketing."

It was pointed out by Mr. Justice Raney that arrangements were completed last September whereby Arthur E. Moysey and Co., Ltd., since taken over by R. E. Jackland and Co. Ltd., assumed liabilities of the Paterson customers as of Sept. 17, 1930. Subsequently further business was transacted for the company for customers on a cash basis and these customers accounts all have been taken over by Morrison Southgate and Co. Ltd., he said.

"The remaining liabilities of the company" says Mr. Paterson, consisting of small account, owing to general creditors, will be taken care of as soon as assets can be realized, and it is anticipated that all creditors will be paid in full.

A statement prepared for filing by the company with the official receiver discloses the fact that apart from the liability of the company on leaseholds and for taxes, the total amount owing to the creditors is less than $15,000. It is impossible to state accurately the position of the firm as some of the company's books are still under seizure by the Crown.

Lyric Radio Shows Many New Features

Lyric Radio has made another distinctive advance in the industry by producing a miniature receiver with features usually associated only with the larger sets—Screen-grid tubes, tone control and so forth.

The product of Mohawk Radio Limited, of Toronto, the newest design is known as the "Studio Model." It is in an attractive cabinet, 21 inches wide and 18 inches high, and is proving most popular all over Canada.

LAW TO CONTROL

The address, delivered in a logical and conclusive manner, plumbed the depth of the importance and relationship of color, stated Mr. Conquergood, the color of light comes under the head of physics; the color of pigmentation, dealt with by chemistry and the third and most important, the law of visual colour. Why we see color. How we see color and why certain colors are pleasing.

Demonstrates Points

The speaker elucidated various points with the aid of demonstrations with an array of apparatus he had with him, and in the darkened room treated his audience to some astounding optical illusions created by the combination of color.

In stressing the important effect which color plays in our every day life, Mr. Conquergood, asked why is this room lighted as it is, with the subdued sunshine effect? It is to create that cheery and comfortable effect. If I were to flood the room in red and keep you people here for a certain length of time I could send you all away in fighting mood.

Another incident he related in this connection, was that of a young woman, happily married who was apparently afflicted in some way. Her disposition was being soured; the home relations were strained. On medical advice the husband had the dining room walls stripped of its red coating of wallpaper, had it recovered with a more soothing tint, and the domestic relationships between husband and wife were once more on a sound footing.

In his study of this subject, Mr. Conquergood has made a study of optics in connection with color and gave several Kiwanians a color test at the conclusion of his talk.

President Carl Browne tendered a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker who was accompanied by his son Norman, for an address which had been greatly appreciated by all present.

Kiwanians were once again reminded of the fact that in three weeks' time their annual elections will take place. The president urged them all to give the matter their careful thought and attention.

Charter Night is scheduled for Friday night next, when the ladies will take an important part in the proceedings. For this function the services of the Orillia Kiwanis Quartette have been engaged, and a large attendance is expected.

STIRLING CHURCH CELEBRATES SEVENTY-FOURTH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. S. Davis, of Smith Falls, Has Charge of Special Services.

GOOD ADDRESSES.

STIRLING, Nov. 7.—(Examiner correspondence.)—The seventy-fourth anniversary of St. Andrew's Church was celebrated on Sunday, the services being conducted by the Rev. S. Davis, of Smiths Falls.

In the morning the speaker discussed the history of the Church—past, present and future. God is in all history, guiding and guaranteeing final success. Whenever the darkness of this earth has seemed impenetrable, suddenly there has come a direct divine message through the superstition and gloom.

In the evening the theme was "Relative Values". The human soul in this modern age has new temptations, but the Christ who satisfied the needs of generations still speaks to us. The greatest tragedy of human history has a deep meaning and the cross of yesterday abides to-day.

Special music was supplied by the choir, assisted by Angus Todd, of Seymour. The church was beautifully decorated with 'mums, given in memory of the church pioneers by Mrs. A. Hammond.

On Monday evening a dinner was served followed by a good program, when addresses were given by local ministers and by Rev. D. Mackenzie, of Burnbrae.

Presentation Made.

Prior to Mrs. M. Sine's departure for for Peterborough, the ladies of the W. I. gathered at the home of Mrs. A. Shaw and after an hour spent in games and contests read an address to Mrs. Sine, and presented her with a life membership certificate, as well as a beautiful mahogany sewing stand.

Although taken by surprise, Mrs. Sine responded, thanking the ladies and expressed her regret at severing her connections, although only for a time.

Delbert Freeburn Is Granted Adjournment

LAKEFIELD, November 7 (Special to The Examiner). — On the application of the Crown, His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke, at the sitting of the Third Division County Court, granted an adjournment to the next sittings, of the appeal of Delbert Freeburn, convicted under the Inland Revenue Excise Act.

John R. Corkery, Crown prosecutor, asked for an adjournment on the grounds that Norman Sommerville, K.C., of Toronto, whose services have been secured to assist Mr. Corkery, was unable to appear.

Hon. G. P. Gordon, K.C., acting for A. L. Elliott, counsel for the appellant, who was away on other business, did not oppose the adjournment. Delbert Freeburn was admitted to bail in the sum of $1,000.

JUDGE GIVES UP TWO PRISONERS

Norton and Harris Wanted For Murder and Theft in Ontario.

EXTRADITION PENDING.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 6 (C.P.)—Two men wanted by the Canadian authorities were surrendered to-day by Magistrate Barney Mogillsky, in Jefferson Market Court, to Deputy United States Marshals Runge and Berman, pending Federal action on the extradition papers.

The men are Elmer J. Giller, alias Jack "Babe" O'Brien, alias Patrick Norton, 30 years old, of 4,820 Concord Avenue, Detroit, Mich., and Sydney Harris, alias Samuel Levy, 28, of 70 Vananley street, Toronto, Ont.

Wanted for Shooting

O'Brien is wanted for killing a bank teller in October, 1921, in a hold-up at Melbourne, Ontario, and Harris is wanted for acting in concert with O'Brien in a Toronto robbery on September 19 last. Giller is also alleged to have escaped July 15 last from the Detroit House of Correction where he was serving a term for robbery.

Magistrate Mogillsky dismissed charges of possessing burglar's tools and a revolver against the two men when Edward Lockwood, counsel for the British Consulate here, showed copies of the Canadian warrants.

These charges had been made by detectives of the Safe and Theft Squad, who arrested the pair here last Saturday.

SCHOOL HOUSE IS THE SCENE OF JOLLY HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Parents and Friends of Pupils Gather at S. S. No. 1, Burleigh.

ENTERTAINING PROGRAM.

HAULTAIN, Nov. 7.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—A jolly Hallowe'en frolic was held in S.S. No. 1 Burleigh, on Friday evening, when a large number of parents and friends of the pupils gathered to spend an enjoyable evening.

The room was tastefully decorated for the occasion and the various booths were well patronized.

Rev. W. H. Taylor acted as chairman for the program which consisted of the following numbers: Opening chorus by school children; chairman's address; recitation, Gerald Shewen, dialogue, "The Census Taker", Wilbert Lean and Stewart Miller; solo, Zelda Crowe; recitation, Roy Booth; dialogue, "The City Cousins", Gilbert Northy, Billy Bronson, Fred Shewen and Jack Matthews; duet, Mary Tedford and Zelda Crowe; recitation, Charles Shewen; reading, Mrs. William Matthews; solo, Mary Tedford; recitation, Catherine Reid; monologue, George Booth; nursery rhymes, school children; dialogue, "Two kinds of Jacks" Isabell Lean and Katherine Reid; dialogue, "Cora's Callers" Edward Bronson, Gilbert Northey, Wilbert Lean, Stewart Miller and George Booth; duet, Betty Matthews and Catherine Reid; recitation, Jack Matthews; reading, Mrs. William Matthews; duet, Isabell and Raymond Lean; dialogue, school children; recitation, Warne Northey; chorus, "The Flag", school children; recitation, Fred Shewen; dialogue, "Harry's Pockets" Jack Matthews and George Booth; solo, Raymond Lean; dialogue, "The Sudden Discovery" Dave Reid: Wilbert Lean and Edward Bronson; trio with harp, Gilbert Northey Wilbert and Raymond Lean; recitation, Alvin Booth; solo on harp, Gilbert Northey; resitation, Raymond Lean; Good-bye six boys.

A grand march of those in costume was held, Mrs. John Booth and Mrs. Albert Reid acting as judges. The prize for the best costume was won by Miss Tillie Church, dressed as a clown.

Miss Florence Tedford, teacher at this school, was responsible for the entertainment and a great deal of credit is due her. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $28 and will be used to provide hot lunches at the school during the winter months.

Alberta Coal Gains In Manitoba Market

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 7.—(By the Canadian Press)—Sale of Alberta industrial coal in the province of Manitoba has increased considerably of late and this is attributed to the subvention of $1 per ton which was granted on June 15, last. Since that date the shipments of coal to the Manitoba market has reached the figure of approximately 100,000 tons, and F. G. Neate, secretary of the Dominion Fuel Board, estimates that at this rate between 300,000 and 400,000 tons may be marketed within the year of the subvention. "What we should aim to do is to push the American industrial coal out of the Manitoba market, Mr. Neate said in an interview here recently. This amounted to about 100,000 tons a year.

Under the subvention, Mr. Neate said, the Alberta coal mine operators appeared to be pleased with the increased sale of coal to Manitoba, and some of them had obtained a bigger market in the province than they had anticipated. Substantial increases were being looked for in the immediate future. The federal subvention will be in effect until June 15, next, but a year's extension has been granted on the special freight rate of $6.75 per ton to the Ontario market.

Alberta mine operators are seeking a subvention on railway coal shipped from the province of Alberta to points east of Kenora, which, if granted, would possibly open a market for about 400,000 tons of coal from Alberta. This matter is now under consideration. It is understood the view of the operators are being obtained, after which the question will be taken up with the railway companies. However, according to Mr. Neate, the whole question is one of government policy to be decided after reports have been received by the federal authorities from the operators and railways.

The Ontario market for Alberta coal was opening gradually and slowly, Mr. Neate said, there being stiff competition, especially in the line of coke, which was being produced at plants in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec at the rate of about 700,000 or 800,000 tons a year.

Finland is demanding cheaper films.

Australian Duties May Affect Canada

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 6. (CP)—Tariff experts of the Department of Trade and Commerce are awaiting a detailed cable from the Canadian Trade Commissioner in Australia before expressing views as to what extent the new customs duties in that country will affect Canadian trade. Any lessening in the difference of the British preference as compared with general rates may react against Canadian commerce. However, the items set forth in cables do not include those in which Canada is a heavy exported to the Commonwealth.

FLOWERED SILKS

Still flowered silks, reminiscent of Grandmother's best dress, make many new party frocks. They usually are cut princess, with full, long skirts with even hems.

The Weakening Agony of Piles (Haemorrhoids) Ended

Thousands Bless This Famous Herbal Ointment

Piles or haemorrhoids cause excruciating pain and often serious loss of blood. The famous Zam-Buk ointment is wonderfully soothing to the swollen veins and itching parts. Zam-Buk derives its healing and mildly astringent influence from herbal extracts of special value in this weakening and agonizing complaint. Zam-Buk has a wonderful record of success.

THE BEST OF PROOF

Mrs. A. L. Garber, of 2545 Ohio Avenue, Southgate, California, a nurse, writes as follows:—"My husband suffered from Piles for years, but a year ago they reached an acute stage and he could neither sleep nor attend his work. He had medical advice, tried all sorts of baths, hot packs, enemas and ointments which cost him hundreds of dollars without obtaining any relief. Finally a friend gave him a box of Zam-Buk; after application for one day he obtained a good night's rest. He continued the treatment and by the time he had finished a second box he was completely relieved of this agonizing ailment and able to resume his work."

Mrs. F. Barrett, Pioneer, Alberta, writes:—"We have used Zam-Buk ever since I was a young girl and I have never known it fail. My husband, who has been troubled with itching piles for years, says the soothing relief Zam-Buk brought was wonderful."

The unparalleled success of Zam-Buk lies in its originas and varuable formula. Zam-Buk is compounded from certain herbal extracts of an extraordinarily healing, soothing and antiseptic nature. Zam-Buk soon stops all pain and itching. It gets at the root of such troubles as eczema, salt rheum, bad legs, ulcers, scalp disease, poisoned sores, etc., and is also a fine ever-ready first-aid for injuries. Zam-Buk Ointment 50c. box, Zam-Buk Medicinal Soap 25c. cake.

HAULTAIN MAN BITTEN BY PIG

MASQUERADE PARTY

APSLEY, Nov. 7. (Examiner Correspondence)—Sam Wilson, of Haultain, had a painful and unusual accident on Tuesday afternoon when his left hand was badly bitten by a pig. Mr. Wilson had opened the sliding door of the pen to let the animal out when it seized his hand.

The hand was badly lacerated and chewed, necessitating surgical treatment by Dr. Shepherd.

Masquerade Held.

The annual Hallowe'en masquerade party was held in the Parish Hall on Friday evening, a large number of those present being in costume.

Dancing was the chief amusement of the evening, music being provided by John Coones and Don Newberry. Prizes for the prettiest costumes were awarded to the following: Mr. Scott, Mrs. T. Lean and Miss Orrell acting as judges: ladies costume, Eva Tucker, dressed as a gypsy; second prize, Cicely Spence, whose costume represented a sunrise; prizes for the men went to George Kilborn, as a tramp and for juveniles to little Ruby McColl, dressed as a little girl of 1850. Special mention is made of Miss Green's costume representing "Safety Firs"t, and being composed of a black dress, liberally ornamented in fantastic patterns with safety pins.

NEW LIGHTING SYSTEM SWITCHED ON BY THE ACTING PREMIER OF ONTARIO

Ontario have the highest percentage of cars in Canada. That is an indication of our standard of living and of the character of our people.

I am pleased to cut this tape which symbolizes the opening of this road to public traffic. It is a connecting link with the King's Highway, and gives the people of this section of the county direct connection with the main traffic roads of the province."

Among those present were: Hon. Mr. Henry; R. M. Smith, deputy-Minister of Highways; A. A. Smith, chief engineer of the Department; F. J. McArthur, M.P.P., Cobourg; T. P. Lancaster, M.P.P., Havelock; W. H. Ireland, M.P.P., South Hastings; Fred Bowen, M.P., for Durham; Mayor W. A. Fraser, M.P., Trenton; Mayor M. J. Elliott, Bowmanville; Mayor C. H. Davidson, Campbellford; M. E. Maybee, ex-M.P.; Major J. F. B. Belford; Mrs. Edith Kerr Macdonald, deputy-reeve of Cobourg; John McCubbin Warkworth, ex-Warden; A. M. Fellowes, district engineer; Reeve J. M. Bygott, Campbellford; Robt. Innis, deputy-reeve of Seymour; Reeve George Hooton and Deputy-reeve R. J. McKnight, Cavan; Deputy-reeve C. H. Curtis, Percy township; Reeve Frank Rickard, Newcastle; Dr. J. H. Hess, V.S., Hastings; Orme Gamsby, Orono; J. O. Ball, Peterborough; George Green, Cobourg, superintendent of county roads; John Phillips, Warkworth; Reeve Goodfellow, Brighton township; Reeve Jay Mills, Brighton village; G. A. Wood, conductor of the Trenton Band; Chas Quinn, reeve of Cramahe; Reeve N. R. Hart and Deputy-Reeve W. H. Morrow of Murray township.

George Raynor of the Raynor Construction Company was host to most of those who attended the dinner. About two hundred men and women enjoyed the cooking of the ladies of Wooler United Church.

Warden Nelson was chairman of the after dinner program which included vocal solos by Miss Reddick of Toronto, accompanied by Mrs. Rowe of Wooler, and two songs by Orme Gamsby, one of which was his own composition entitled "I'm Strong For Orono."

Hon. Mr. Henry's Address

Mr. Henry said he had recently completed an inspection of the roads in Northern Ontario and in his own jurisdiction of Eastern Ontario, mentioning some of the problems which are confronting his department. His tour of inspection was made with the idea of seeing just what the various counties and townships are doing for the improvement of their roads.

"Our ambition and desire to be in the lead in road and highway construction in this Province costs us a lot of money," he remarked, mentioning that in 1928 the expenditure was $22,000,000, while last year was $1,000,000 more than that, and a further increase could be expected this year.

"I sometimes wonder where the highway problem is going to lead. Candidly I do not know. This road Wooler to Trenton will advertise the necessity for improved roads all over the district and your municipality will find they will be pressed to do something to maintain the standard."

He spoke of the varying conditions of road construction, and added that no type of road is specially suited to any district. The surface of the road is considered with its relation to the amount of traffic which it is expected to carry and many other considerations. That is the reason you find varying widths of road and various types of surfaces, he said. He was pleased to find that the municipalities are meeting all the pressure which is being brought to bear upon them, from the ratepayers, and thought that the type and construction of many of the county roads is now of a very high standard.

An Appeal To Drivers.

With the increase of traffic and the improvements of the roads, he pointed, have arisen serious dangers from the reckless or negligible driving of automobiles and Mr. Henry uttered a solemn appeal for drivers to regard the safety rules which are laid down for their protection and for the safeguard of others.

Traffic is growing from year to year and normally the more traffic we have the more accidents we may expect. Why should this be, he asked. "Let us use just a little more brake on the car. Drive slower and if you have a distance to go, start out earlier and be satisfied to get there a little later.

"You cannot turn at a right angle at high speed," he warned in drawing attention to many of the "do nots" for motorists.

"I sometimes wonder if I am responsible for some of the speeding. That is certainly not my intention or the intention of the department in constructing the highways, which are all built with the idea of eliminating fatalities on the road.

In conclusion Mr. Henry once again congratulated officials of the township of Murray and the County Council and engineers on the completion of the road, saying this is a red letter day in Wooler—the day on which you turn on the Hydro Electric light and operate the main trunk road to Trenton.

Fred McArthur.

"If I was seeking for the subject of an address", said F. J. McArthur, who in common with the rest of the subsidiary speakers was only allowed three minutes on his feet, "I should say "I told you so." You have heard all about it in the press and over the radio that this Government was going to build roads and great Provincial Highways and they have done it."

Percy Lancaster, M.P.P., Peterborough East, congratulated the warden on the fine program which culminated in the opening of the high way from Wooler to Trenton, and also complimented the neighboring County of Hastings who "unlike some other county I know (voice: Peterborough) have gone ahead with a good road building program without waiting for the Government to do everything.

He hoped that Peterborough would in the near future develop a program of her own and that "we may extend an invitation to you people to come to the official opening of some of our highways.

Mayor Fraser.

Mayor Fraser, Trenton: "In regard to some of the remarks made by Mr. McArthur, I wish to say that I am not going to attempt to inject politics into my few words, because I feel that I was invited here as the Mayor of Trenton, and in no other capacity. I congratulate the people of Wooler and Murray township and Mr. Raynor on the construction of the road to Trenton. The town of Trenton was glad to pay part of the cost of this road. Good roads are the best asset we have in this district, and we in Trenton look forward to receiving our Wooler friends at all times."

George Greer.

George Greer, County road superintendent, in the course of a short address thanked the people concerned for their co-operation. All along the route of the road he said, the farmers had given little pieces of land where it was needed to widen the corners and to improve the width of the road.

As to whether we will have to put on traffic "cops" rests entirely with you people," he stated in calling attention to serious speeding which is being indulged in on the county roads. "You people are not playing fair as far as county road speed goes, he exclaimed.

MISS VERNA PAYNE HONORED BY LODGE

Presentation Made at Northern Light Lodge, L.O.B.A., Meeting.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 7 (Examiner Correspondence)—Members of the Northern Light Lodge L.O.B.A. held a meeting on Wednesday evening when the feature of the evening was the presentation of a beautiful linen tablecloth by the mistress of the Lodge to Miss Verna Payne, whose marriage takes place this week.

Miss Nicholls expressed the good wishes of the members of the lodge to which Miss Payne gracefully replied. Miss Payne has served in the dual role of chaplain and organist of the lodge and her departure will leave a gap which will be difficult to fill.

Junior Institute.

The members of the Junior Institute will meet on Wednesday, Nov. 12, at the home of Mrs. Stanley Richardson, Prospect street, when Miss Edith M. Hopkins, who is a popular favorite with the girls, will give an address.

Celebrate Hallowe'en.

Hallowe'en was celebrated in the Lakefield Public School by costume parties held in all the rooms, followed by refreshments. Discipline was relaxed considerably and King Carnival reigned, older and younger children alike enjoying the fun.

To Hold Sale.

A sale of home cooking will be held at the meeting of the Women's Institute to be held on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 12, in the town hall. There are three quilts ready to be quilted and a social afternoon will be spent.

Sponsor Contest.

The Women's Institute is sponsoring an essay contest which is open to boys and girls of sixteen years of age and under, open to all children in the village and school sections served by the Lakefield Institute. The essays must be the work of the pupils and must not be more than 1200 words in length, written on foolscap paper with ink and on only one side of the paper, the subject to be "An Empire Builder," and the contest will close on January 30.

Miscellaneous Shower.

On Monday evening more than sixty members of St. John's Church gathered at the Parish hall, under the auspices of the choir, to present Miss Verna Payne with a miscellaneous shower in honor of her approaching marriage.

Among the many gifts received was a basket of vegetables, which was the cause of much laughter, the basket being so prettily decorated and each article wrapped separately.

Mrs. J. W. Todd, on behalf of the choir, presented Miss Payne with a white gold bracelet as a memento of her association with the choir. Miss Payne replied in a pleasing manner, thanking her friends for their kind remembrances and good wishes, following which refreshments were served.

Society Reorganized.

The Young People's Society of Knox United Church held a reorganization meeting on Monday evening, when the following officers were elected: President, Miss Marion Payne; vice-president, Christian Fellowship, Harold Mullen; vice-president, missionary, Miss Helen Burgess; vice-president, literary, Miss Mary Tanner; vice-president, citizenship, Wallace Hendren; secretary, Frank Payne; treasurer, Miss Elsie Kidd; organist, Miss Reba Preston.

Hallowe'en Party.

The annual Hallowe'en party held for the children of Regent Street Church was a happy event. Rev. S. A. and Mrs. Kemp inaugurated this annual event for the younger children and have been assisted by some of the ladies of the congregation. This is the sixth annual Hallowe'en party and surpassed all others in point of excellence. The evening was spent in games, refreshments being served at the close of the entertainment. The school was prettily decorated for the occasion in appropriate Hallowe'en colors.

OBITUARY

ARTHUR HILL

(Examiner Correspondence)

MADOC, Nov. 7.—Many people of Madoc, both relatives and friends attended the funeral of the late Mr. Arthur Hill, in Belleville yesterday.

Suddenly stricken with a stroke on Pidgeon Island in Lake Ontario, near Kingston on Saturday morning, Arthur Hill, 189 Foster Avenue, Belleville, died a few hours later before the members of his family reached him.

The late Arthur Hill was Assistant Superintendent of the Dominion Government Fish Hatchery east of Belleville and two weeks ago he was despatched to superintend duties in connection with the department. He was in apparent good health and only on Saturday morning two letters were received by members of his family informing them that he would be home to spend Thanksgiving. In the afternoon a telegram informed them that he was taken suddenly ill, Pidgeon Island is several miles from the City of Kingston and it was some hours before he could be moved to the General Hospital in a motor boat.

The late Arthur Hill was of a quiet, modest disposition, respected by all who knew him. He was popular with his colleagues at the hatchery where he had been employed for the past sixteen years.

He was born in Madoc, 59 years ago, a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hill, both of whom are living. He spent his early years on the farm of his father and was well known in Hastings County.

The late Arthur Hill was prominent in Church Life and was an elder in John Street United Church, Belleville. He was also a member of Madoc Lodge I.O.O.F. He leaves a widow and two daughters, Miss Frances and Miss Marjorie, at home. Two sisters, Mrs. C. Martin of Detroit, and Mrs. M. Young of Belleville survive, besides three brothers, George and Frederick of Madoc and Kenneth S. Hill of the Belleville Collegiate staff. His father and mother reside in Madoc.

THEN HE KNEW HE WAS SAVED

Miles from anywhere — and a car that refused to work. And Dorothy was expecting him home before night. She would be sure to imagine he had been killed.

Jim was as upset as a man can be until he saw the telephone line running into the farm-house on the hill. Then he knew he was saved. A few minutes later he was explaining to Dorothy and three minutes after that, he had a garage man on his way to the rescue from the next town.

Instead of hours of trouble and worry he was only a bit delayed. And his two calls hardly cost him the price of a movie.

In an emergency, turn to the telephone. Out-of-town calls are not only simple, dependable and inexpensive, but they are quicker now than ever before. And any telephone — in the furthest backwoods — will connect you with anyone, almost anywhere.

Evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls now begin at 7 p.m. Night rates begin at 8.30 p.m. Just give "Long Distance" the number you want—it speeds up the service. If you don't know the distant number, "Information" will look it up for you.

NEW MUSICIANS TO PETERBORO GIVE RECITAL

David R. Howat and Dean Miner Give Splendid Program.

ABLE VIOLINIST.

Mrs. H. F. Doig and Mrs. Howat Assist in Evening Program.

(By Jeanette)

The premier bow of two new musicians to the city was made at George street United Church last night, when David R. Howat, newly-appointed organist at the church, and his brother-in-law, Deane Miner gave an organ and violin recital, assisted by the choir, heard in Mendelssohn's graceful and melodious cantata "Hear My Prayer."

The recital was satisfying and very artistic. Of a pleasing length, only one and one half hours, sufficing to see its beginning and ending, it was listened to with intense appreciation by the audience, who applauded every number.

The main performance of the evening was that of the violinist, Deane Miner, who proved himself to be a musician of ability and charm. He plays the king of instruments with ease and skill, drawing from it a warm, sweet sympathetic tone, and displaying in his selections a high degree of virtuosity.

His premier selection was the Romance Andalusa of Sarasate a bewitching thing fashioned like a serenade. The romantic muse of sunny Spain had its picturization in swiftly smooth, languorously pulsating music that held a haunting reminiscence of old favorite strains and whose delicate double-stopping, finished with a sustained birdlike harmonic.

Its companion was likewise splendidly played: a Scherzo Tarantelle by Wieniawski. Opening with swift tempo and a dancing half bow, it progressed to a full-bowed melody that quickened to light cadenzas of delicate harmonics and finished with swiftly-moving arpeggios.

Mr. Miner's first number was bright-toned, flowing music, sostenuto, with a legato bow in Sjogren's opus 19 (Allegro vivace).

He played a dainty trio of favorite number that opened with the Londonderry Air, that farewell of an Irish clan to their hereditary chieftain, Cucallain, with its haunting, vibrant melody heard in turn in the first, the third and the fifth positions, and its finale a variant double-stopping and an echoing harmonic note.

This group also included a bit of bravura instrumentation in a dainty Minuet and a Caprice in A minor, its fast, sautille bow, unceasing, fascinating, hovering mainly over the high-pitched E string.

David R. Howat, organist, had two noteworthy numbers. The first was Caesar Franck's Third Chorale. In its development were unexpected melodic intervals embroidering the main theme that worked up to a massive finale of forte strength and volume.

Three Rhapsodies based on old Breton melodies followed, dainty compositions in the modern manner, by Saint-Saens. The first commenced with a triolet of bugle notes and was brilliant and dashing in atmosphere. The second, with its pianissimo opening cascaded to a crescendo of treble tone, and the third was a mild, peaceful bit, with vagrant, flute-like background.

One of the most attractive portions of a very interesting program was Mendelssohn's Cantata, "Hear My Prayer" rendered by the choir, directed by Mr. Howat, with Mrs. Howat at the piano, in a very finished and artistic manner. They sang this noble composition with charming effect, with a restrained volume of smooth, expressive tone that had its highlights in beautifully shaded pianissimo passages.

Mrs. H. F. Doig gave an excellent solo performance, taking the lead with her vibrating strong voice, sweet and smooth, its high cadences ringing out in the lovely strains of the solo passages and making a fine impression in the vibrancy of the famous aria, "O for the Wings of a Dove."

The accompaniments of the evening were finely and sympathetically played by Mrs. Howat. Bouquets of flowers were presented to Mrs. Howat and Mrs. Doig.

At the close of the performance, Mr. Howat expressed the appreciation of the musicians for the generous applause accorded their efforts.

SIXTH PETERBOROUGH BOY SCOUTS.

Tuesday evening the Sixth Peterborough Boy Scout meeting took the form of a jolly social night. Thirty boys in diversified costumes of witch, tramp, clown, etc., romped around the spacious headquarters, full of life and fun. Numerous games were played during the evening, including ducking for apples, blind pirate, etc. The Crow patrol, under Patrol Leader James Sweetman, put on a very fine play. Gerard LeBarr and Donald MacPherson played the leading parts.

About 9.30 the Scouts sat down to a very appetizing table. Ice cream, pumpkin pies, candy and other dainties soon disappeared as only boys can make them.

During the evening the troop committee visited the Scouts' room. This committee is composed of Mr. J. O. Bowen as chairman, Dr. M. J. Roche and Mr. Wm. MacPherson. Each of the above gentlemen spoke a few words of encouragement to the boys, and Mr. Bowen gave out a very fine program that he has arranged for the Scouts. Mr. Ray Bennett, another visitor of the evening, said a few words, and also on behalf of the parents who had Scouts at this year's summer camp, presented Scoutmaster Ernie Wolff with a beautiful pen and pencil set.

Scoutmaster Wolff, in a few words, thanked the parents for the generous gift, and assured them that he had the interest of every boy at heart. The success of the Sixth Troop, said the Scoutmaster, was due in a very large measure to the co-operation given by the boys and parents, together with eager assistance from the troop committee.

The Scouts then gave their troop yell for the visitors, and the meeting closed in the usual Scout manner.

The boys of the Sixth Troop are reminded that it is the wish of the Scout authorities that they parade with the War Veterans on Sunday, November the 9th, as a remembrance to those who established peace by their heroic efforts.

The next meeting of this troop will be held on Tuesday evening, November 11th, at 7.30 o'clock.

"IN FLANDERS FIELDS WHERE POPPIES GROW"

Buy a poppy Saturday, November 8th.

In memory of our boys who made the supreme sacrifice we ask all citizens of Peterborough to wear the sacred emblem.

"God made trial of them" and found them worthy of himself. These words, he said, spoke of a test, and a responsibility and a privilege that came, and comes sometimes to humanity. This we commit indelibly to our memory, also when commemorating our Armistice parade on Sunday.

"God made trial of them." They accepted that fact without a murmur. They drank the cup we did not drink—the cup where the wine was red. The comrades we have in mind are the men who were set on trial, and who had a great responsibility, and who had now a great privilege. "God made trial of them" but he did not bring on the war. Devilry and man did that.

Quite apart from the circumstances of the war, God had a message to give to the soul of man, and it is "up to me too" was what they said when the call came and was answered by thousands of men and many women of our dear Canada. What a trial it was!

Some people are apt to forget the war and some are now growing up in ignorance of what war meant. Those men who had gone had dominion over all people, and it was those who exercised sway over the minds of men.

If they could speak to us—and they did speak to us—they would say—the most glorious thing in their life was to be near the Great White Comrade who laid down his life for all men, friend and foe.

And as we are again about to commemorate the gallant men and women who laid down their lives in war—though they have passed into the Great Beyond — they are still speaking to those who chose to, listen. If Canada listens to the Noble Army of the Dead. If the great Army of those living and those yet unborn is determined to march in step with them towards the ideals for which they died—then the glorious destiny of our country will be assured for all time.

A Force for Peace.

As there was no greater memorial that they could raise to those who have gone than the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League.

We want no long faces and weak hearts. We want stout hearts and courage and co-operation to face woes when called upon.

It is not of war we are thinking but Peace. If there is one movement of more values to the peace of the world than the League of Nations it is the British Empire Service League that is a force throughout the whole of the British Empire, that is establishing by its precepts a feeling of peace.

And may I say how important it is with more distress in view during the winter months among those who fought in the war that the Poppy Day appeal should continue its course of increasing financial success. We earnestly ask every person to wear the poppy. It is a small act of thanks giving that the public are privileged to offer to the memory of those who sacrificed all.

Just one last point to the hundreds who use autos. Have the poppy displayed on your car and help this worthy cause.

Yours sincerely,
J. Abraham,
President.

New $20,000 Bridge For Fenelon Falls

LINDSAY, Nov. 7 (Special to The Examiner).—T. H. Stinson, K.C., M.P., who has been interesting himself in securing appropriations for work in the northern part of the riding of Victoria and Haliburton, has secured a new bridge costing $20,000 for the village of Fenelon Falls. Work will start on the structure at once. The new bridge will replace the narrow one which crosses the canal on the main street of the village.

Mr. Stinson has also been instrumental in securing a grant for road work in the County of Haliburton.

MASEFIELD FAVORS BROADCAST POEMS

Poet Laureate Believes New School of Poetry May Be Opened With Wireless.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Nov. 7—(C.P.)—A plea for co-operation between the poets and the British Broadcasting Corporation was made by John Masefield, poet laureate, in a recent lecture at the festival of the Scottish association for the Speaking of Verse.

Broadcasting, said Mr. Masefield, could be a great asset in the dissemination of poetry. To him it seemed a joy to speak to people 5,000 miles away, and to feel that people whom he could not see might be listening to poetry, and hearing sentiments expressed which might let them go to their beds with feelings of joyfulness and happiness. He believed that if the broadcasting people would work with the poets they could have one of the most remarkable schools of poetry that they had had for centuries.

In reference to modern poetry, Dr. Masefield said that much of it was the product of the industrial age in which they lived. It was, in some respects, a protest against the idea of an unreal world. Poets had to face realities, and he would rather have poetry which was ugly, but which reflected the industrial age, than poetry which expressed something beautiful, but which was unreal. Lord Murray, who presided, said that it was a long time since a Poet Laureate had spoken in Edinburgh, and they were deeply indebted to Mr. Masefield for the practical help he had given in the cultivation of poetry in Scotland.

Mr. Masefield has received many honors since he succeeded the late Dr. Bridges as Poet Laureate but he values few higher than that accorded by the city of Hereford, which conferred its freedom on him a few days ago. He was the first non-resident of the city so honored since it was conferred on Nelson in 1802 after his return from the Battle of the Nile. Among the spectators of the ceremony were G. D. Masefield, the poet's brother, who practices as a solicitor at Ledbury.

Declaring that he was linked to the county of Herefordshire by the ties of beauty—ties deeper than he could explain — the Poet Laureate continued:

"When I was a little child I looked upon these sights and upon this beautiful landscape, and I felt that they were the shadow of Paradise, and that just beyond there was Paradise. And then for many years I brooded upon these things, hoping that by some miracle of poetry I might get beyond into the reality of Heaven, of which these things are only the shadows. I have not done that, of course. I have not even begun to do it, but in giving me this freedom you recognize that I have tried."

The certificate of the freedom was handed to Doctor Masefield by J. S. Arkwright, author of the hymn "The Supreme Sacrifice" and the holder of the ancient office of Chief Steward of Hereford.

REDS CELEBRATE ON 'OCTOBER DAY'

Thirteenth Anniversary of Proletariat Urprising Featured By Procession.

STALIN CENTRAL FIGURE.

(By Victor G. C. Eubank, A. P. Staff Correspondent.)

MOSCOW, Russia, Nov. 7.—One of the greatest processions of Soviet history marched past Communist and Government leaders in Red Square this forenoon in a parade celebrating the thirteenth anniversary of October Day, the date on which the proletariat uprising had its beginning.

The parade began early this morning with infantry leading. Following them were tanks, artillery, cavalry and numerous military bands. Civilians marched past by the thousands carrying red banners on which were inscribed boasts of Communist successes and execrations of capitalism.

The reviewers, led by Joseph Stalin, Secretary General of the Communist Party, which is the real ruler of Russia, Michael Kalinin, President of the Central Executive Committee, Rykov, who is Premier and head of the Soviet Cabinet, and other important figures such as Ordjcnikidez, Rudzutak, Molotov, Kaganovitch, and Kuibishev stood at the corner of Lenin's new tomb during the inspection.

POOL HAS PLAN TO PAY DEFICIT

Suggest Banks Carry 1929 Account With Gov't Guarantee.

Ask Overpaid Farmers' Aid.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 7 (C.P.) — Directors of the Manitoba Wheat Pool outlined to delegates in annual session a plan to pay off the organizations deficit on the 1929 crop. Unanimously approved by the delegates, but as yet unsponsored by the Government or the creditor banks, the plan suggests that the banks continue to carry the 1929 account in the usual way for a period of years, guaranteed by the Government.

Explanation of the proposed plan indicates that the sum of $890,000 would be available for repayment to the banks on Aug. 1, 1931, and $905,000 annually thereafter. The directors' statement suggested that, by following out the plan "for the next few years we hope to have the whole debt repaid." Length of time necessary for repayment is unstated, as the total debt cannot be determined until unsold stocks of 1929 grain are disposed of.

Farmers who were "overpaid" on the 1929 crop will be called on to aid in paying off the losses, according to the directors' proposal.

HASTINGS HUNTERS FOLLOW THE HOUNDS

HASTINGS, Nov. 7.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The population of the village has decreased considerable the last few days, when the town sportsmen heard the call of the hounds in pursuit of the elusive buck.

The Hastings Hunt Club left on Monday morning by truck for Crooked Lake. The party have been going to the same place for the last 30 years or more. They have erected a cabin and have everything modern. The following members of the club left on Monday: Messrs. George Lynch, Jack Riogan, Anthony Ryan, Dan Armstrong and Ed. Fleming. Mr. Fleming has perhaps made more trips to the north than any other hunter in the district.

Henry Scriver and Messrs. Gordon Scriver, Arthur Fleming, Fergus McCarthy, and Wesley Draper left on Wednesday morning for their camp near Crowe's Landing.

St. Andrew's Y.P.S.

The first meeting of the season of the Young People's Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church was held on Monday evening in the schoolroom of the church.

Mrs. Charles Dodd was the leader and the following program was rendered:

Hymn No. 761; prayer, Rev. Dr. Thomson; scripture reading, Pearl McMillen; a little talk, Mr. C. Knight; solo, Miss Lily Dodd; instrumental, Miss Madeline Dodd; solo, Mr. W. Flatman; reading, Miss Marjorie Dodd.

The meeting was brought to a close by hymn No. 752 and the repeating of benediction. The next meeting will be held on Monday, November 10, under the auspices of the devotional committee.

Cobourg Exercises On Friday Evening

Principal Bannister of Peterborough Normal School Will Present Matriculation Diplomas.

COBOURG, Nov. 7.—(Special to The Examiner).—Principal Bannister of Peterborough Normal School will present graduation diplomas to matriculation students, and Fred J. McArthur, M.L.A. for Northumberland, will present commercial diplomas at the Cobourg Collegiate Institute commencement exercises which will be held on Friday evening of this week at eight o'clock.

A surprise award is scheduled for the evening as well as certificates to ten matriculation graduates and to 25 commercial course graduates and special medals and prizes to a lengthy list of students.

Athletic prizes will be presented to the boys and girls respectively by Mrs. E. K. Macdonald, Reeve of Cobourg, and by Judge L. V. O'Connor. W. H. Hopper will confer medals donated by him for oratorical prizes, and Miss Grace Boggs will present the new sewing prizes. Upper, middle and lower school certificates will be presented by Mayor A. R. Wilmott, Henry Fullerton and Dr. E. W. Hayden.

During the afternoon an exhibition rugby game will be staged between the Cobourg and Port Hope teams, and while the game is in progress, the girls of the school will serve tea to their mothers and friends.

Radiologists Will Meet At Los Angeles

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 7 (C.P.)—Eminent radiologists of Canada and England are on the programme of the 16th annual convention of the Radiological society of North America which will be held in Los Angeles, California, Dec. 1 to 5, at which time the society will attempt to dispose of problems left unsolved by last year's convention held here.

Dr. Gordon F. Richards, noted radiologist of this city, and first vice-president of the society, said a special train would travel from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, picking up the society members, 100 of whom will participate in the programme.

The programme holds the name of Dr. J. L. Sparks of London, England, who will accompany Dr. Richards on the special train. Among other important things on the programme Dr. Richards said, will be discussions which it is expected will result in definite announcement of the society's attitude toward such matters as alleged cancer cures, legislation pertaining to certain phases of public health, and reduction of the cost of X-ray equipment and radium.

Dr. Robert J. May of Cleveland, Ohio, is president of the society, and Dr. L. S. Trostler of Chicago is secretary treasurer. Dr. Joseph Colt Bloodgood of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, one of the foremost cancer specialists in the United States, will conduct a "visual clinic" at the convention. Doctor Bloodgood has requested Canadian members of the society who have encountered cases of bone cancer or tumor in which definite malignancy has been proved, to register the case with him, so that conditions presented in them may form part of the convention discussion.

SCHOOL TEACHERS HONOUR RICHARD LEES

EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT ABLY OUTLINED

Progress Made By Education in Past 50 Years is Outlined.

FAR REACHING CHANGES.

School Teachers Unite to Do Honor to Richard Lees, Retired Inspector.

On Thursday evening the teachers met in the banqueting hall of Murray Street Baptist Church to do honor to Mr. Richard Lees, M.A., who resigned from the position of inspector of Peterborough county last summer. Mr. Breckenridge, the president, presided at the banquet.

Miss Alma Blanchard, accompanied by Miss Musa Cox, sang two solos to the delight of the audience and generously responded with an encore which was equally well enjoyed. A vote of thanks was tendered to Miss Blanchard for her great addition to the evening's pleasure.

A vote of thanks was also tendered to the ladies of the church for the excellent dinner provided by them.

Mr. Lees when called upon to address the audience, said that a successful after-dinner speech consisted in having nothing for a subject and then saying nothing about it. He experienced difficulty in selecting a subject, but decided to discuss the changes of education during the last fifty years. Mr. Lees then read the following address.

A contrast of educational conditions in the Province of Ontario now with those that prevailed half a century ago, presents some interesting features and may teach some lessons of importance. In making such a comparison, however, it should first be pointed out that it was at a date some years prior that some of the most important changes in the history of our provincial educational system took place.

The present system of school inspection had then been substituted for the old plan of township superintendents. The old-fashioned grammar schools had been considerably changed in character and had come to be known as high schools. Previous to that change there had been grammar schools and common schools, which by the change became high schools and public schools respectively. The former were greatly changed both as to the curriculum of studies and the provision for their maintenance. The vexed and long-drawn-out controversy as to whether or not our schools ought to be "Free" had been fought to a finish and the principle of state supported or free schools, had prevailed against that of a system of schools supported wholly by those who made use of them.

It was just about the time our review starts, or a little more than fifty years ago, that the Entrance Examination was instituted and became a part of our educational routine. About the same time the County Model schools came into being and it became compulsory for everyone aspiring to the position of a teacher to have some professional training and simultaneously attendance at a normal school became necessary for a Second Class Certificate. Provision had been made at the same time or a later for the professional training of teachers for secondary schools.

These things had all been accomplished but in 1880 a comparatively small number of the teachers in the schools of the province had attended any training school and if we were to go back five years beyond that date, we would find the number much smaller still. At that time the normal schools, of which there were only two, taught the academic as well as the professional course, for Second Class Certificates. It was only after attendance became compulsory that they became purely professional training schools. Indeed the bulk of their time and energy was devoted to the academic work. The high schools had not then become preparatory schools for teachers but devoted themselves chiefly to the preparation of students for the universities and professional courses as medicine, etc.

This brief and hurried outline gives some idea of conditions and the degree of progress that had been made at the beginning of our period of review. It might be well to add, however, that but a short time previous, Education had become a department of the government and had been placed in charge of a responsible Minister of the Crown, the old Council of Public Instruction having been discontinued.

It will be seen that some very important and far reaching changes had just taken place and others were pending. In short, it was a period of transition, and changes continued to follow, in more or less rapid succession from that day to this, when some are still pending and perhaps overdue. This will probably always be the case, for one can easily imagine that an educational system that ceased to change would soon cease to live if it had not already done so. It would become, like other dead things, a menace and an offence.

I remember, on one occasion listening to Hon. G. W. Ross who was then premier and at the head of the Educational affairs of the province, making an address at the opening of a new school. In his eloquent and masterly fashion, he was enlarging on what he was wont to regard as the almost perfect character of the educational system of the province, when a man standing beside me, who was anything but friendly to the Ross Administration said, "If the system is so near perfection, why, in Heaven's name, does he not leave it alone and not keep everlastingly tinkering at it?" As you readily realize, that criticism was simply stupid. When the political friends of this man came into office, not many years later they made more changes in one year than the previous administration had made in five. No one blamed them. The changes were due.

Now for some of the important changes that have taken place during the period we have under consideration. To begin with, mention might properly be made of increased closeness of relation between the Department of Education and the people. When Education became a department of government, many predicted that the change would lead to disaster, that Education would become a part of the political machine, to be buffeted about like a football by the politicians and manipulated for party advantage. I am of opinion that this has not happened to any great extent. During the Ross administration, against which many serious charges were made, I do not remember ever hearing the accusation made that the Department of Education had been manipulated for party advantage. The same can truthfully be said of the governments that followed under Whitney, Hearst and Drury. While there were, doubtless minor matters where there was a possibility of a party advantage, the business was given the proper turn, the probability is that matters of vital importance were dealt with from a higher standpoint. Of the present administration, you know for yourselves. On the whole, it can, I think, be safely asserted that the change has been in the interests of educational progress and that the politicians have realized that this was a matter too vital to the life of the province to be dragged in the mire of political intrigue. What then has been the net result of the change? Probably this, that education has become a matter of more general interest, that the people have wielded a greater influence, whether for good or ill in determining the course of events.

When schools became free, when the education of the people became the business of the state, that is of the people themselves, it seemed only natural that it should be in the control of the people and in the hands of the responsible representatives of the people.

And yet one wonders often if this has really been the result. Is it not true that in this matter, as in every other branch of government, it is custom, prejudice and desire for personal advantage that govern? To what extent do the electors of the province approach questions of education with intelligent and thoughtful consideration? Perhaps one might go further and ask to what extent are they capable of giving such consideration to this or other public questions. It might not be amiss indeed to ask ourselves to what extent are the schools traning the coming citizens of the province to do this sort of thinking. Are the children of to-day, when they become voting citizens, any more likely to overcome their prejudices and preconceived notions and exercise their franchise on a basis of reason, than their fathers and mothers are? It might not do any harm for all of us to sit down and do some serious thinking along these lines. To what extent should the teacher be a leader in the movement for educational progress? To what extent

BLAST VICTIMS ARE LAID TO REST PROBE STARTED

Federal, State and County Officials Each Seeking Cause of Mine Tragedy.

TOLL IS 79.

Scores of Hushed Funeral Processions Held in Millfield To-day.

MILLFIELD, O., November 7 (C.P.). — Millfield to-day laid its dead back in the earth that killed them, while officials began their investigations to determine the cause of the mine explosion which claimed at least 79 lives.

Wide Probe.

Federal, State, and County officials each sought to learn what caused the blast in the No. 6 Mine of the Sunday Creek Coal Company and the release of gas which filled the underground tunnels on Wednesday afternoon. Their actual inspections, however probably will not be started before late to-day or to-morrow, when the last traces of the fatal fumes are expected to be cleared from the depths of the mine.

Scores of hushed funeral processions were the only evidences of the disaster to-day. The feverish activity of the last two days, the constant work of rescue crews, the patrols of the National Guard the dispensing of coffee and blankets, and the tension of the waiting crowds had given way. The Guardsmen withdrew last night together with most of the Red Cross, Salvation Army, and other relief workers as their tasks were ended.

Toll May Grow.

There still was a possibility that the toll would be increased to-day. Some of the 20 injured miners were not expected to live and it was feared a few more bodies that might never be recovered remained in the mine. All of those recovered had been identified and claimed last night by their relatives, who were permitted to pass through the three makeshift morgues late yesterday.

More Deer Than Sheep In Wolford Township

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Nov. 7 (C.P.). —That deer in Wolford Township are more plentiful than sheep, was the statement made here by J. H. Boyd, fish and game overseer for Grenville County.

There has been a close season on deer for the past four or five years in Grenville County, but the ban was lifted to permit shooting from Nov. 5 to 20 this year on complaints from farmers of the district that deer have done considerable damage to crops. One farmer reported a five-acre field of buckwheat destroyed.

Armistice Service Is Planned At St. Paul's

In commemoration of Armistice Day, a service of a special nature will be held Sunday evening at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, in which the Caledonian Pipe Band and Lieutenant W. H. Peryer will take part. The impressive roll call of the names of all the men of the church who paid the supreme sacrifice will be made, and its end, two minutes' silence will be observed. The Pipe Band will play the "Lament." "The Last Post" and "Reveille" will be sounded by Lieutenant Peryer, and at the conclusion of the service the Pipe Band will play "The Retreat." Jack Smith will sing "After the Dawning."

"Angels in Strange Places" is the title of the message Rev. Wm. Allan will give in his sermon. The choir will also render special music at the service.

AGNES DEPLORES TRADE BARRIERS; URGES ABOLITION

Miss MacPhail Prophesies U.S. Will Join League of Nations.

At Women's Peace League.

Claims Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act Not Bettered Canadian Relations.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 7.—Canada's first woman member of parliament, Miss Agnes McPhail, who represents the riding of South-east Grey in Ontario, in an address before the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, deplored the existence of trade barriers, especially between Canada and the United States, and urged, as a forerunner of world peace, the abolition of economic barriers.

Sees U. S. in League.

Miss McPhail, a delegate to the League of Nations in 1929, expressed her hope for disarmament among nations and prophesied that the United States would some time join the League for a similar grouping of world powers.

Miss McPhail spoke of a "smoldering dislike" of the United States among people of the Dominion, and she said this feeling had not been improved by the recent Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act. She pointed out that trade between the two countries had dropped $25,000,000 in the month of September.

Speaking of the League of Nations, Miss MacPhail said: "We haven't a society for nations; only a society of some of them. We must have the co-operation of all nations in order to stop war. Perhaps the League of Nations is not to be the agency, but we must build up somethin permanent. My own idea is that we have got to wait for the United States to come in. We cannot get much farther until you, the greatest financial power in the world, come in."

Kellogg Pact Valuable.

The Kellogg pact, she said, was valuable as stating in simple language the desire of nations to end war, but that a practical machinery must be set up, and quickly, because, she contended, unrest and hostile feelings were seething in Germany, France and Great Britain.

POPPY DAY NOV. 8.

Campbellford Legion Will Make Annual Drive For Relief Funds.

Dear Anne,—

How are you Anne these dull days? Your articles are of much interest each day, and one on mending articles with sealing wax appealed to me. Have you ever tried repairing furniture with chewing gum? It is good for dents or missing pieces of trimming and can be varnished over. I have a lot of hints I must write about when I am able to send to you. Just now I want to answer Water Lily's letter.

Your kindly counsel Water Lily has done me a world of good and your message of Peace was just what my soul required. I got up out of bed one day saying to myself, "Let not your heart be troubled," and it heartened me for another day of pain. I cannot give too much particulars of my illness dear friend without my identity become known.

When we are ill, we sometimes seem to get farther away from God, instead of drawing closer to Him and that was the condition I was in. So much terrible pain, seemed to have come like a cloud between me and my Heavenly Father. But your letter came like a benediction to me, and helped in restoring my faith which had become wavery. Now I wonder if you will misunderstand me when I say that I think we would be better to remain shadow friends? Not because I would not like you, but because you might not like me. I, too, am past 40, and am only the wife of a working man. I used to mingle in society but gave it up, as it seemed too shallow. So it is not because of age or station in life that I suggest this, but simply that your letters appeal to me, and mine to you; and the spoken word with others round to hear might spoil it all. If you do not agree with this, just write to Anne and she has my permission to give you my name and address and I shall welcome you gladly.

I am glad to say there is a slight improvement in my health, and I can now sit up.

Now I would like to address a few words to all the other neighbors. Each day Anne writes an interesting article for our benefit giving menues, hints talks on entertaining, clothes and a host of other subjects. When any of you read of anything which appeals to you why not write a note to Anne and tell her so. Give her a little encouragement. She writes to please us, not to please herself, and a little word of praise is needed by her as well as us.

And now I've written a longer letter than I meant to. When I read your letter Water Lily I was tempted and then I remembered I was different and that you might not like me if you met me. Think it over before deciding.

Now I'll close with a question. Are any of the neighbors psychic or prophetic? In other words can you foretell or read characters? I'm afraid Anne will use the scissors on this, as she did on my other letter. Thank you again Water Lily and you Anne, for having to wade through this! Sincere good wishes Anne.

Ad Nauseam.

So glad to hear from you Ad Nauseam with an encouraging report. The days aren't very bright are they, for convalescents, but we'll hope the sun will come out brightly soon. I'm sure Water Lily will be delighted to know her letter was able to cheer you, and if she desires your name and address I will forward it to her with your permission.

A Bedtime Story

by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE LITTLE GIRL.

Out in the yard, back of the house, not far from the woods, a little girl was playing with her dolls. She had three dolls, a big one, a small one and a middle sized one, just like the three bears. Only, of course, the bears that Goldilocks played with were much larger than even the biggest of this little girl's dolls.

"Now you are all dressed, dollies, you must sit in the house until company comes," said the little girl. Just as you often do, she was pretending that her dolls were alive.

An open box, which stood on one end, was the "house" which the little girl used for her dolls. On one end of the box was printed the word Fish. This wasn't the name of any of the dolls—not even the family name. But once the box had held tins of codfish, so that's why the word was on the box. But the little girl pretended this was very stylish, to have the name FISH on her dolls' house. And, for all I know it was.

The company will come, Big Doll.

Having made some stylish hats of brown autumn leaves for her dolls, the little girl put them in the box house, with FISH on it, and then she sat down on a log (for she was close to the woods) and looked at her little family.

"The company will soon come to visit you, Big Doll, Little Doll and Middle Sized Doll," said the little girl. "Keep quiet and don't muss your dresses nor crumple your brown leaf hats and maybe I'll give you a surprise party after the company goes."

So the three dolls kept very quiet, and the little girl looked at them in their FISH box house, for, one side being open, she could easily watch them.

All of a sudden, as the little girl was looking at her three dolls the "company" came, but it wasn't the kind of company she expected. In fact, the little girl didn't know who might come for company. It was only pretend, or make believe, anyhow, this expected company. But the dolls were real enough.

However, the "company" which suddenly ran in the FISH box house was Susie Littletail, a small rabbit girl. Susie had been scrabbling around in the dried leaves, and, all of a quickness, she heard a rustling sound.

"Oh, maybe it's a snake!" cried Susie, and, being much afraid of snakes, she ran as fast as she could, not watching where she went. So Susie ran right slam bang into the FISH box house of the dolls. She knocked the box over, it fell down on top of her, and there Susie was caught with three dolls, underneath the box.

"Oh! Oh!" cried Susie, so surprised that her heart beat very fast.

"Mama! Mama!" spoke one of the dolls (the largest) for she had a little phonograph inside her and when Susie knocked the box over this jiggled the spring on the phonograph and it started the doll talking.

"Oh, my goodness!" cried the little girl, jumping off the log where she had been sitting. 'What funny company for my dolls! A real, live rabbit!" Yes, indeed, Susie Littletail was alive and quite real.

The little girl was so surprised and delighted at having a real rabbit jump into the FISH box doll house that she did know not what to do. Susie wished the little girl would lift the box and let her out.

"For I don't like it here!" thought Susie. Of course, she was too polite to say this aloud for she did not want the big doll, nor yet the little doll nor yet the middle sized doll to know this.

"Oh, how jolly!" cried the little girl. "I didn't expect a rabbit for company. I'll run and tell Mother!"

So, leaving poor Susie caught under the overturned box with the three dolls, the little girl ran to tell her mother.

Now it happened that Sammie, who was Susie's brother, had been with her in the woods. He saw his sister start to run when the leaves rustled and Susie thought it was a snake (though it wasn't) and Sammie saw Susie caught under the falling box.

"Oh, my goodness!" cried Sammie. "I must go tell Uncle Wiggily."

Sammie found the old rabbit gentleman twinkling his pink nose on the bungalow steps. Breathing fast, Sammie told what had happened.

"The little girl ran to her house after Susie was caught under the box," said Sammie. "I guess she's gone to get a cage for Susie."

"Oh, that must never happen!" said Uncle Wiggily quickly. "I know that little girl. She is good and kind to animals. She would never put a little rabbit in a cage. I'll go with you, Sammie, and we will get Susie out of the box."

So the old gentleman bunny and the little boy bunny started off through the woods.

SUNSET is a Concentrated Dye

In the little cake of Sunset you'll find a concentrated quality dye that does a lot of dyeing. Sunset is not the ordinary aniline dye in an envelope—Sunset has in it the best quality, fast dye and lots of it.

But Sunset goes farther; it is a combination, all-purpose dye—dyes all fabrics in one dye bath. And not only dyes them perfectly—but dyes them the same shade at one and the same time. Cleans the fabrics too in the same operation.

Sunset in every one of its 22 standard colours gives a true, even colour that rivals the work of professional dyers at one-tenth the cost!

Sunset is easy to use, is clean, never spoils utensils or stains the hands—no fuss—no bother—so simple that it is just fun to use it.

If you have never used Sunset you do not realize how good a modern dye can be.

Get Sunset at your dealers; but be sure it's Sunset Soap Dye—that's the sure way to protect yourself from failure—15c a cake.

Ask the dealer to show you the Sunset Colour Card.

If he cannot supply Sunset Dyes send 15c per cake to—

The Schoolmaster.

William F. Duggan, feature writer on the editorial staff of the Border Cities star and formerly connected with the Peterborough Examiner writes the following story laid in the district of Ivanhoe.

One of the most unique characters which ever impinged itself on the consciousness of the peaceful citizens of Ivanhoe was undoubtedly personified by Mr. X, who for six months carried the important title of "teacher" in the one-room brick schoolhouse. During the short term of his career there he managed to institute drastic changes which still exert their influence not only in the school but in the entire section which supported it. The name of Mr. X. is recalled to this day with mingled feelings.

He made his epochal entry into the community in 1912 after the preceding teacher had resigned her position for the greater responsibilities of matrimony. Teachers were scarce in those days and his pedagogical record was not scanned too scrupulously. In his application, the only one which the board had to consider, he stated that he was a teacher and was immediately retained on that basis.

He came in the springtime, just as the departing mantle of snow was revealing in its true light the conglomeration of rocks and scattered tufts of vegetation which served as a schoolyard. He was displeased at the sight, called a special meeting of Board and requested the members to get busy and pull out the rocks in order that he might plant a garden. The thing was unheard of and the Board turned a deaf ear to his proposal.

"All right," he said, "but remember this, we are going to have a garden and those rocks are going to come out."

I was just a minor entity in the community at that time, quite probably still am, and possibly the impressions I received were out of proportion. I can still recall, however, a vivid mental picture of the man.

He was very tall, well over six feet in height, possessed but one arm, there being just a short stub of the left one remaining below the elbow. His nose jutted out in beaklike fashion and his eyes gleamed in a most purposeful manner he boarded at my home during the brief months of his regime and I remember that among his possessions were a .22 calibre rifle which he let me shoot on two or three occasions, and a jointed bamboo fishing pole which he left with me when his terms of office expired. Those concessions still loom large in his favor.

Now, about this garden. When Mr. X. saw that no help was forthcoming from the school Board it took him not more than a day to get the larger boys of the senior classes organized. Two days after that queues of children could be observed wending their way along the quiet country lanes struggling under the burden of crowbars and shovels commandered either with consent of by stealth from fathers' tool sheds.

For the next two weeks, recesses and noon hours were given over to labors which would have daunted Hercules. Crowbars were piled diligently on the large limestone rocks which appeared, on investigation, to extend into the bowels of the earth. The work continued lustily, however, till the more prominent boulders were lying exposed on the surface beside the large craters where they had been embedded. A farmer was cajoled to lend his team and a stone boat for a couple of hours and the monsters were dragged to a nearby rock pile.

Then the work of reconstruction started. The same farmer, fired with the enthusiasm that dominated Mr. X, brought his team and a plow to the scene and prepared the land for seeding. Classes which were not receiving tuition were delegated to work at the garden in their spare time and a watchful eye peering out of the window saw that the boys were industriously employed.

The garden was planted, each pupil being allotted a small plot with instructions to nurture plants tender-

Mr. X. superintended all operations and his vigilance could be indicated in no better way than by the fact that when neighborhood crows, learning of the choice corn that had been entrusted to the hitherto barren school yard, descended in force, Mr. X. picked up his .22 which he brought for the occasion, held it pistol fashion with his one arm, and fired through one of the school windows. The children, anxious to view the slaughter of a malefactor, leaped up to gaze through other windows, but no coal-black feathered vandal appeared to have suffered.

"That was just to scare them," blandly explained Mr. X.

Well I do recall the Friday afternoon concerts which he instituted as a feature. These were no cut and dried programs of recitations but real vaudeville shows with the pupils turning cartwheels and other evolutions for the edification of those less athletically inclined. Of course, there had to be some features of a more refined nature, so, regularly, once each week, I was called up to sing "Annie Laurie" which I did with fair success, although faltering slightly on the high notes with which that particular number abounds.

So that I should not have my nature developed in a one-sided manner, he also had me perform each week in a boxing contest with a boy considerably bigger than myself. In those days I was troubled with frequent bleedings of the nose, a condition which received impetus through the duration of these Friday afternoon "concerts."

That Mr. X. had a forceful system of tutelage may be indicated by the following example of his methods. It was during a class in arithmetic and the group was standing, toeing a chalk mark, in the front of the room. Mr. X. whacked a section of the blackboard with his combination pointer and chastening implement and shot a question at one of the members, a very sturdy youth, addicted to "smartness." The young man in question stated that he could not see the board. He was told to move closer and on again advancing a claim to imperfect vision, Mr. X. causally reached for "smarty's" collar, lifted him a distance of two feet clear of the floor and jammed his nose against the hard slate. "Now, can you see it," he asked in dulcet tones. The eyesight of all the pupils achieved a miraculous improvement, dating from that day.

At the end of six months, Mr. X. departed when it was discovered that John Barleycorn was one of his many friends. Some of the burghers said he was the best teacher the school ever had. Others said he was the worst. He was certainly the most notorious.

GAMES AND INTELLIGENCE.

Our psychologists tell us that the brain power of an individual cannot be increased; he is born with a normal intelligence, 100 per cent, a sub-normal 90 per cent, or above normal 110 per cent.

They tell us that nothing we can do will increase this degree of intelligence.

However, I want to point out that if you will not only let your children play, but will see that they do play, that whether or not you increase their intelligente, you will certainly make available the 90, 100, or 110 per cent of intelligence they do have.

An individual with 90 per cent intelligence, who is taking his place in the family and community life, is certainly exercising a greater influence on life than the one of 110per cent who may have the intelligence, but has not those other qualities of qualifications that make a real man.

And so a boy who plays or exercises makes the blood making organs do more and better work, the circulation of this good blood is increased, and the brain is nourished by this better blood and more of it. JHe will thus be better mentally and physically for this exercise.

But what about the other things that will make him an all round man?

He will have to meet other man in mental or perhaps physical combat when he becomes a man. As Professor Gallerani, Italy, points out "the knowledge of one's own strength, the rapid sizing up of any situation, the actual sizing up of an opponent's strength and ability, are all given a tremendous stimulus by play or athletics."

Being able to come to "attention", or be attentive to everything about you in a game, is the first and foremost thing that is learned in games. To not do the right thing at the right time is something that you can scarcely forgive yourself. You not only have to act quickly but you have to think quickly, a combination of brain and muscle that makes for complete development.

So don't worry about your youngster's intelligence. See that he plays football and other games that make him have to take his place, and play his part, whether he likes it or not. He not only looks after his own 'rights', but he learns to respect the other fellow's rights also.

And the same applies to girl's games; the group games that are now so helpful and popular.

Mrs. A. Stewart and Miss Silver Colbourne are guests at the Arts and Letters Club dance on Belmont tonight.

Mrs. W. McKee Burnham and her sister, daughter Marguerite with Mrs. Gray and Miss Montgomery of Millbrook were in town yesterday for Mrs. Allan F. Gray's reception and tea at home on Prince street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham, George street, entertained at dinner last week for the latter's mother, Mrs. Rubenstein of Toronto. Other guests present from Toronto included Mr. and Mrs. Rosen with their daughter and son, and Mrs. Winebury.

Mrs. Allan F. Gray, formerly Miss Kathleen Lancashire of Millbrook, held her post-nuptial reception yesterday afternoon at her home at 239 Prince street. The bride, who wore her lovely wedding gown of pale blue taffeta, with yoke and shadow hem of net, was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. Joseph Lancashire of Millbrook, wearing a gown of figured crepe and a black hat. The rooms were very attractive with softly shaded lights and quantities of chrysanthemums in bowls and vases, in autumn tints of mauve and yellow. The same pretty mums of the raggedy edge type were in a silver basket that centered the table, draped with runner and doilies in cutwork. Yellow tapers were lighted in junior holders, on the tea-table and side tables. Mrs. Joseph Detcher was at the door and the guests were ushered into the tea room by Mrs. J. E. Allen of Millbrook. Tea was poured by Mrs. F. A. Gray and assistants were Mrs. W. Kennedy and Miss Ella Elson of Millbrook and Mrs. Herbert Young of this city.

On Wednesday evening the young men of St. John's A.Y.P.A. entertained the girls of the club at a jolly Hallowe'en party. The lower rooms of the Parish House were illuminated by subdued orange lights and decorated with evergreen branches and orange and black streamers surmounted by witches and black cats. Hallowe'en games and pranks added merriment to an evening of dancing for which a variety of excellent music was provided by radio. The refreshments which were served later were appropriate to the season.

Here's a marvelous dress for autumn for town wear. And best of all, it's a stunning dress for later that will easily slip under a winter coat.

The curved seaming reduces any bulk about the hips.

The bolero bodice is cut on very becoming lines. It is given an entirely new aspect through the cowl neckline that ends in a scarf at the back.

Style No. 921 is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust.

Black canton crepe with white crepe is very chic and dignified or if preferred the cowl neckline may be made of self-material.

Transparent velvet, crepy patterned or plain woolen, crepe satin and crepe marocain are delightful suggestions for this model.

Size 36 requires 3¼ yards 54-inch with 5-8 yard 39-inch contrasting.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Youth is called the Springtime of life. And, to continue the analogy, old age is like the Autumn of life before the dead of Winter!

• • • • • • •

As Spring and Autumn in nature, both are beautiful in their own way, so youth and old age can each have its own special charm.

• • • • • • •

Those who are on the shady side of maturity should realize this and learn to grow old as gracefully as Summer mellows and glows into Autumn. They can have loveliness of character imprinted on their countenance to equal the beauty that radiates from youthful faces.

• • • • • • •

There are many men and women who become more attractive with added years. They, the men and women who have learned the secret of living.

• • • • • • •

Old age should be dignified without being unyielding. Such dignity is like the grandeur of the forests with the branches brilliant with Autumn tinted leaves bending and swaying in the breezes but not breaking in gusts of wind!

• • • • • • •

So the minds of old people should be effected by the breath of current opinions. These should shake their ideas, give them something to quicken their minds and alter their views, provided the new is found better than the old.

• • • • • • •

But they are not to break down the forces of character that have brought them through the battles of life stronger and better by the winning of them.

• • • • • • •

There is a difference due old persons by youth to honor such strength of character and it is the aged who instinctively call out the good and generous appreciation of the young.

• • • • • • •

When the children are young they should learn to treat any aged member of a family with respect. As they grow up they will not have to be prompted to pay homage to the grandmother or grandfather who has grown old gracefully. They will find in them individualities to love and to merit the youthful courtesies.

• • • • • • •

A grandmother or a grandfather may be a blessing in a home. It is well for their children to realize that it is only by the tact that life has taught them that they know how to fit into the family as lesser members, not as the ruling powers.

• • • • • • •

Many aged persons have to live with their children, and their grandchildren. If they have grown old gracefully, if they have warmth of character like the glowing brilliance of autumn foliage, they will find that youth responds to it.

• • • • • • •

Each will appreciate the fine traits in the other. It is worth striving for, this beauty of old age!

THE DAYMING OPTIMIST

By Alice Michaelis

IF YOU LOVE ENOUGH

If you love enough
You can always find
Patience to endure;
Power to be kind;
You can understand
How the world seems
To another's eyes;
You can dream his dreams.

If you love enough
You will learn to see
What a sacred thing
Someone's trust can be.
Through all changeful ways
That your life may take
You can keep your days
Clean for someone's sake.

If you love enough
Doubts and fears will cease,
And through perfect faith
You will enter peace.

ROUGHAGE IN DIET NEEDED IN REDUCING

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Eliminates Danger

Are you one of those who are reducing by diet? If so, there is one important thing you should know—diets that do not include roughage cause constipation, often with serious consequences. Guard against it!

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains the roughage needed to insure regular elimination. It is guaranteed to relieve both temporary and recurring constipation or your money will be refunded. Two tablespoons daily—in serious cases, with each meal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is not fattening. But it does add valuable iron to the blood which helps prevent anemia (another dieting danger) and bring a glowing, healthy color to the complexion.

You can enjoy Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in many delightful ways. As a ready-to-eat cereal with milk, honey, sprinkled over cereals and salads, in soups and soaked in fruit juices. It is appetizing in cooked food. Your grocer has Kellogg's ALL-BRAN in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

GERMAN U-BOAT WARFARE HAS AFTERMATH IN CLAIMS

Widow Seeks Reparation as Result of Drowning of Sailor Son.

TELL WAR HORRORS.

(Special to The Examiner. Copyright 1930.)

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—(CNS)—War widows, sailor survivors and others who suffered as a direct result of the great war have petitioned before the royal commission for the investigation of illegal warfare claims for the return of sequestrated property. Commissioner L. M. McDougall, K.C., assisted by Deputy Commissioner Major H. Spencer Ralph, is conducting the inquiry which ran Monday and Tuesday of this week.

Deprived of the support of their sons who were lost in the sinking of the SS. California during the war, Mrs. Mary Alexander, of Toronto, widow, presented her claim for $2,000 before the commission.

The mother was one of a number of whom it was stated that they were solely dependent on her son, George Alexander, who was drowned at 540 per month on the ship on which it was torpedoed. She related to the commissioner some tale of a ill time of toil.

Long hours of working at time for war-time wages. The owner of the California was paid $1,500. Members of the commission pointed out that a further claim of $600 for the loss of her son's effects could be made.

Her case will be considered and recommendation made to parliament.

A Sailor's Story.

Claiming to have been permanently disabled by malnutrition and enforced labor in German coal mines, Philip Campbell, a sailor, gave testimony to support the claim for what what the other members of the crew got.

He was a fireman aboard the SS. Georgia which was captured by the Germans and sunk off Cape Race, Dec. 10, 1916, with loss of only one life. The crew were taken to Germany.

Campbell told the commissioner that he had signed on the ship's crew under the alias John Keegan. He had established his identity before British authorities, but they had refused his claim for "500 to 520 pounds," on the grounds that he had set up domicile in Canada.

"Were you paid for your work?" the commissioner asked. "We would get six marks one week, three the next, nothing at all next week," Campbell said. "At other times we got pieces of paper, which we saved. When we took a pile of them to the bank we only got about four pounds for the lot."

Mrs. Sarah H. Turner of Sudbury is claiming $7,500 for the loss of personal effects and injuries to her children in the sinking of the Hesterian during the war. She and her children were taken off the ship in lifeboats. She gave a thrilling account of the terror that reigned aboard the ship, sobbing as she described the incident.

Claiming $300 for loss of personal effects when the Hesterian was torpedoed, A. E. Jekins of Toronto gave testimony. His sister was drowned when the ship went down.

Drinkers Make Kicks About New Permits

Special to The Examiner. Copyright 1930.

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—(CNS)—Sir Henry Drayton, chairman of the board, admits that there had been many kicks and protests about the new liquor permits. Some are verbal and some come in writing. Some paper have even denounced the innovation as paternalism.

"Of course," smiled Sir Henry, if it comes to that the whole law is paternal. So we won't worry over that.

"The main ground of protest is that the totalling of each page is a 'nuisance' because it takes so much time, and block-leaders when there is a line in a liquor store. In that case, says Sir Henry, the vendor need not hold a man up if he comes to the bottom of the page. That purchaser will be back soon again. His name can be added up and checked when the next one is waiting behind him.

SECOND ANNIVERSARY SERVICE AT CODRINGTON UNITED CHURCH

Rev. E. Smith of Warkworth Preaches at Afternoon and Evening Services.

ANNUAL FOWL SUPPER

NORHAM, Nov. 7.—(Examiner Correspondence)—The second anniversary of the United Church at Codrington was held on Sunday, when Rev. E. Smith, of Warkworth, preached in the afternoon and evening, giving splendid addresses.

His text in the afternoon was "What must I do to be saved?" and at the evening service, "Behold I stand at the door and knock." Music for the occasion was provided by a quintette from Colborne, assisted by the local choir.

Fowl Supper.

On Monday evening a splendid fowl supper was provided by the ladies of the church, Potter's orchestra of Oak Heights contributing special music during the supper hour, afterwards assisting with the program.

Rev. D. R. Clare, of Norham, and pastor of the church, acted as chairman for the following program: Quintette, Mesdames Colton and Wilson, Miss Clark and Messrs. Wilson and Moore; chairman's address; solo, Mr. Story, Campbellford; orchestra selection; reading, Miss Brooks, Brighton; duet, Miss Clark and Mrs. Colton, of Colborne; solo, Mr. Story; orchestra selection; reading, Miss Brooks; quartette, Mesdames Colton and Wilson and Messrs. Wilson and Moore.

The proceeds of the anniversary amounted to about two hundred dollars.

Masquerade Held.

An enjoyable evening was spent in the Myersburg Church Hall on Friday evening when the annual masquerade social was held. After judging the costumes, Mrs. Jones contributed two interesting recitations. The booth of home-made candy was well patronized, while the fortune teller was eagerly sought after. A splendid lunch was served by the members of the Ladies' Aid.

GIRL GUIDE WORK IS ABLY OUTLINED

Catholic Women's League Expects to Organize Several Companies.

At the regular meeting of the Catholic Women's League, held on Wednesday evening in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, with an attendance of nearly one hundred ladies, it was decided to hold a shower in aid of St. Vincent's Orphanage and the House of Providence, on Tuesday next.

The members were asked to return tickets for the silver tea service to the treasurer Miss Emma Corkery, by December 3rd.

The meeting, which was presided overy by Mrs. M. L. Henry, was featured by an address on the organization and work of the Girl Guides, given by Mrs. T. J. Spratt of Lindsay. The rules and regulations of the Girl Guides, along Catholic standards, were well outlined. Mrs. Spratt said that the movement, although young in Canada, was spread throughout the world, with a total membership of over half a million. The London sub-division has the honor of having the largest unit of Catholic Girl Guides in Canada.

The next speaker was Mrs. Claude Rogers, local Divisional Commissioner of Girl Guides. Mrs. Rogers who was accompanied by Lieutenant Ruth Sutton and Guide Beverley Rogers, dwelt on the aims and ideals of the organization, as well as the recreation element, and stressing the holidaying at Fettercairn Camp.

The president, Mrs. Henry, then addressed the meeting, assuring the girls present that companies will be formed at an early date.

The League is sponsoring the famous motion picture, "Song of my Heart" which features John McCormack, and the members are selling tickets for the production, which will be at the Regent Theatre during the last week of this month.

At the close of the business session, Mrs. J. Dwyer sang and Miss Eleanor Grisdale gave an instrumental selection.

GARRISON BANQUET IS SET FOR TUESDAY

Judge E. C. S. Huycke Will Be Guest Speaker at Banquet.

In commemoration of the twelfth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice, officers of Peterborough Garrison, will hold their annual Armistice banquet in the Peterborough Rangers officer's mess on the evening of Tuesday, November 11th.

Officers present will include those from the R.C.A. No. 3 Coy. C.M.G.C., Peterborough Rangers, 3rd Prince of Wales' Dragoons and from regiments throughout the immediate district.

It is fully expected that Colonel Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O., D.O.C., M.D. No. 3, will be present along with a number of other staff officers.

The speaker of the evening will be His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke. Invitations have also been extended to Archdeacon J. C. Davidson, chaplain of M.D. 2 and to all other padres of the local units. Serving officers and ex-officers are cordially invited to attend this important function, and are reminded that tickets may be obtained from any member of the Rangers officer's mess or from Captain G. Monkman, President of the Mess.

EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

...could the school be an instrument in training the children who are now in the schools but who will in a few years be in the polling booth and determining the policy of this country, not education alone, but in everything pertaining to the public weal, so that when that day comes they may be able to rise above the prejudices and petty considerations that hold their fathers in bondage and think themselves through to a reasonable standpoint on public matters. How many of us are sure that we can do that for ourselves, and if not, how are we going to teach it to others?

Whatever conclusion your thinking leads you to in regard to the responsibility of the school and the teacher in this important matter, it has to be admitted that there is ample room for advance. Recent efforts of the Minister of Education to introduce important changes of a progressive character and the reception they have met with have amply demonstrated the need for broader thinking and clearer vision.

In the second place, shall we look briefly at changes that have taken place in the schools themselves. Many of these can only be mentioned and passed over without comment. Of buildings, for instance. As you go here and there in the province and note the change in the character of the school buildings as compared with those of three or four decades ago, you cannot help but be impressed with the marvellous advance that has been made in that regard. I wonder how many of the school buildings of Peterborough County date back beyond fifty years and how many of those show any regard to modern ideas of lighting, heating and sanitation. Yet I venture to say that when they were opened they were considered the last word in school architecture. Here again, we might profitably stop and consider. Are our newer buildings so very much better than the old ones? For my part I think they are in many respects, but the real question is whether or not they are as much better as they should be and if not why.

It is in the urban communities though that marked progress has been made in this regard. Contrast the school buildings of the City of Peterborough, for example, with those some of us can remember, not so very many years ago. What has taken place here is but a sample of what has been going on in all the progressive urban communities of the province.

So much for buildings, what of equipment. When I came to Peterborough County, there were no libraries in the schools. While there is still room for vast improvement along that line, a beginning has at least been made. How many of you would now care to teach without a library, even if your library is not what it ought to be and you probably do not succeed in making the most of what you have? Please remember here what has been said, that standing still means deadness and if things are not what they should be, part of the teacher's job is to make them so. That is the only road to progress.

Perhaps, though, the most marked manifestation of progress is to be found in a consideration of what the schools try to teach as compared with a former day, when the three R's constituted the bulk of the course of study. A little history and geography with some spelling were also taught, but there was no literature, no art, no composition, of any account, no music unless the teacher had a gift in that direction when there might be a little singing, no hygiene, no nature study, no physical training no agriculture, no manual training. Pupils of that day should have been good readers, competent arithmeticians, and expert penmen. Were they? You may and sometimes do come across some old fellow who has vague dreams of the glorious old days when he was a boy at school and of the prodigies of learning the youngsters of his day were compared with those of to-day. I am convinced, however, from my own knowledge, and from some investigations I have been able to make that these things are only dreams.

I have very vivid recollections of my own days of rural school teaching and of the heart-break that reading used to be to me. I have listened to a good deal of poor reading in the past 25 years, but doubt if any of it was quite as bad as some of the product of my own teaching. In short, I came then to a conclusion I have never since found any reason to abandon, that children can learn to read only by reading. While teaching will assist, no amount of the most expert teaching will make good readers of pupils who do not practise the art beyond what they get from the exercises in the school readers.

Much the same applies to the other R's though I really am of opinion that better results were obtained in the teaching of arithmetic in former days than at present. But that was not owing to the abbreviated curriculum but rather to study greater stress laid on that subject in the course of study and perhaps also in the training of the teachers. As for writing, it was, in many cases about as bad as it could be and so it continues.

To sum up this phase of the question, there seems to be absolutely no doubt but that the subjects that are traditionally looked upon as essential to a public school course, are just as well taught now as they were fifty years ago, and in addition, there is the added interest and educational advantage that comes from the other subjects of the course, such as art nature study, hygiene, agriculture, etc., to say nothing of the newer and more interesting methods of presenting such subjects as history and geography.

While we are concerned chiefly with the primary or public school side of the question, it may not be amiss to turn our thoughts for a little to the secondary or high school side. There, what striked one first, is the tremendous increase in the numbers of those who are now participating in the benefits of a secondary education as compared with a period even less than fifty years ago. When you take into account the continuation schools, of which there are now about 200 with an attendance of something like 9,000 students, and the vocational schools with more than 23,000 in attendance, and consider that these schools have all come into being within the last twenty-five or thirty years, you can realize something of the growth of the demand for secondary school education. This is especially manifest when we learn that, in addition, the number of high schools and collegiate institutes has doubled in the same period and the attendance at some of them has doubled more than once.

Much the same thing has been taking place at the universities and professional schools. Indeed, this is recognized as being the outstanding feature of recent educational development, not only with us, but throughout the Dominion and in the United States to, perhaps, even a greater extent than with us. A couple of years ago, one of the leading magazines of that country published a series of articles by leading educators, financiers, and business men in which this question was discussed from various standpoints. Several of the writers took the ground that the desire for secondary and higher education was a fad that had run to excess, that it was not wise or needful, that more of the wealth and energy of the nation was being spent on it than the nation could afford, and that a halt would have to be called in the near future. What effect the present financial depression may have on this tendency, I am not able to say, but so far as our own schools and colleges are concerned the effect is thus far not noticeable. At any rate, the fact remains that whatever advantage there may be in an education that goes beyond the primary school, that advantage is now being enjoyed by a multitude of young people away beyond the wildest dreams of half a century ago.

The vocational school is so outstanding a feature of recent development that it is deserving of more than a mere passing notice. A whole evening could easily be devoted to it alone. It is indeed the most outstanding factor in the progress of educational evolution of the present day. It is the outgrowth of industrial conditions. Changes in industry made impossible the former method of training tradesmen. It may safely be said that these changes made useless in many industries, the knowledge and skill acquired by the old apprenticeship method. Artisans who had been trained under the former system found themselves, in many cases, ill prepared for newer industrial conditions. The result was a demand for something that would meet more adequately the new conditions and so, much that had been taught in the shop came to be taught in the schools and this movement has now been carried to so great an extent that the revolution in the school is almost as great in the industrial world.

A third topic, and one that perhaps comes more nearly to the present gathering than either of the others in a financial way at least, is the question of how the teacher has been affected by the changing conditions we have been considering. In this connection, several questions immediately suggest themselves. Has the character of the teaching kept pace with the progress in other matters, or was that something that had more nearly reached a standard and so was not capable of so decided improvement? Have teaching methods and the influence of the teachers on the character and quality of the output of the schools made as great an advance as has been made in buildings and equipment? If not, why? Are there any valid reasons why they should not have done so? Has the lot of the teacher improved? If so, in what ways? Is there room for still further improvement and if so, along what lines and how?

It is said to be always easier to ask questions than to answer them though teachers do not always find it so. Some of the questions asked above, I am not going to attempt to answer. Some of them may not be capable of being answered by definite or positive statements, but may suggest profitable lines of thought. Let us hope so at least.

I think I am safe in saying that throughout all my teaching experience, the impressions I carried away from that teacher and his school, influenced my work more than all the books on methods and management I studied and all the normal training I received.

I make reference to this, not to imply that I think there has been no progress in the character of the work as the teachers. As has been hinted it would be possible to hang alongside of this picture one of a very different character. But then, I could pretty nearly duplicate the latter from my own experience as an inspector, while it would be hard, if not impossible, to duplicate the former.

Nor do I cite this example in the hop that any here will be able to attain to that standard. That could not be done by one in ten thousand. Mu purpose is rather to emphasi e the fact, if it needs emphasis, that the teacher is the school. Buildings, equipment, comforts, conveniences are only accessories. They help and that greatly, and therefore should not be overlooked, but the teacher is the life and the soul of the institution and can make a school without them.

Has the teacher's lot improved? If financial recognition is the barometer by which that is gauged, yes. If the difference and respect paid to the teacher by the parents and children of the community, perhaps. The man to whom I made reference in the preceding paragraph never was paid more than $500 in that school. A salary of $1000 in even the best urban schools was then something of a marvel. When I began my work as inspector here, the highest salary paid in the county in a rural school was $500. That was at Warsaw, where there was only one teacher at that time. In my own teaching days, I reached a salary of $1200 as head of a department in one of the leading collegiate institutes of the province. No assistant in the school received more and the principal got only $1600. With these few scattered facts, you can easily make your own comparison with present-day conditions. While it has to be remembered that changed conditions have made a larger salary necessary, the cost of the things that have to be provided for out of a salary has not risen in the same proportion. The salaries of to-day are lettern than in days gone by and the remuneration of the teacher is more in accord with what should be expected by those who are called on to play so important a part in the destiny of the state as the education of its young.

And now, what of the future? Let us not be content with past achievement, encouraging as that may be, feeling assuredly that the limit has not been reached. There is no disputing the fact that vast sums are now being spent on education, much too great in the opinion of many people. It is up to the teachers to see that the nation gets full value for all its outlay in that field. Should we not ask ourselves some pertinent questions? Are the people, as a whole, more cultured, in the true sense than formerly? Will the girls and boys now in our schools make better citizens than their parents have been? Do national affairs receive more intelligent and thoughtful attention than in past days? Are national, provincial, municipal, and school affairs managed with greater skill and more regard for the public weal? Are more books being sold? Are the books sold and read of a higher character? Has the standard of our amusements improved? Are the school, the church, and the other agencies making for the uplift of the people looked on with greater regard and held in higher esteem? Are the boys and girls that we meet on the streets and roads and that jostle us at the fairs and movies, more polite, courteous, respectful, and differential to their elders than their fathers and mothers were? Are the standards of morality among our young people higher than they used to be?

These are all questions we might well ponder and while I am not claiming that the school is to blame if there has been failure in any of thees respects, yet there arises the question of where improvement is to come from, if not from the school. It does seem fitting that for those who occupy the position of leadership that teachers ought to assume we should at least ask ourselves such questions and canvas very carefully the proportion of responsibility that is ours. Surely our ideal is to render the largest public service possible and if so we should be ever on the lookout for new and more useful lines of endeavour.

In the elder days of Art,
Builders wrought with greatest care,
Each minute and unseen part,
For the gods see everywhere.

Let us do our work as well,
Both the unseen and the seen,
Make the house where gods may dwell,
Beautiful! entire, and clean.

One item of progress that has been overlooked and might well have been mentioned is the greatly increased opportunity for self-improvement, especially in the form of the numerous and attractive summer schools. They provide, not only splendid opportunity for advancement in your chosen work, but also in their social aspects, their association of kindred minds, their inspiration and their broader outlook. Avail yourselves of these privileges, where ver possible, and be not satisfied till you have done the best of which you are capable, not only in service to the community in which your lot happens to be cast, but in preparation for higher service in any sphere that may present itself. It has been said that a cork never performs its function effectively unless it is a little bigger than the opening it is intended to fill. And so it is with the worker in any field of human endeavour. If your service is going to be thoroughly effecient, you must be a little bigger than your job.

In closing, may I point out that most of you are still young. Life with its opportunities, privileges and responsibilities lies ahead of you. It will not long be so. Do you realize that life for most of you will be just what you make of it? The greatest teacher of all said on one occasion "When thou wast young, thou girdest thyself, and walkest whether thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whether thou wouldest not."

And so it is. To the young all things are possible. You have but to determine on a definite objective and pursue it with resolution and determination and the reward will be yours. Let the prize be worth while. Let your ideals be high. Why struggle for that which is not worth while? Why strive for that which becomes but ashes in the attainment? If you find that the way is difficult, the pathway steep and rugged, remember that nothing worth while was ever attained without effort. And remember, above all, that there is one whose help can always be had for the seeking, whose judgment is never at fault, One who is all-wise and all-powerful and whose love and sympathy are infinite.

Address is Read.

At this stage Mr. Downey read Mr. Lees the following address:

Dear Mr. Lees:

The teachers and ex-teachers of Peterborough County wish to rejoice with you in the splendid work you have done for the cause of Education during your busy lifetime, particularly in this section of Ontario. Your influence, covering your life as a teacher and as a Public School Inspector, is unmeasurable and reaches far beyond the confines of Canada.

You attended Public and High School in Huron County and later graduated from Queen's University with your Master of Arts.

You have had a wide and varied experience as a teacher and as a school inspector. You began teaching in Huron County. In due time you moved to Norwood where the oracles in formus you used your powers of persuasion to induce a charming young lady, Miss Emma Waters, to lay aside her chosen profession as a teacher to become your helpmate through life. Soon afterwards you moved to Lindsay where you taught in the Model School and also in the High School. Your next position was in Brampton where you taught Science and a short time afterwards we learn that you were teaching Science in St. Thomas Collegiate Institute. Twenty-five years ago you moved to Peterborough to assume the important duties and heavy responsibilities of a Public School Inspector. It is, perhaps, in this position that you are best known and will be remembered longest.

Twenty-five years ago, when you became an Inspector, the automobile was scarcely known. You had, however, several ways of getting about, viz., the horse and buggy, the bicycle, and Mr. Lees, himself, on foot. Many and many a trip you have made on that bicycle over very bad roads to the various little "Red School Houses." Latterly the roads have been improved somewhat and your luxurious Buick has superseded your bicycle.

What have you done for Education? What have you not done? You have done your duty as an Educational Official of this County and of the Department of Education. You have given attention to the innumerable reports required of you. You have interpreted the school law, the regulations, and the courses of study. You have built new schools and repaired old ones. You have urged the necessity of school libraries and better equipment upon tardy trustees. You have carried inspiration to thousands and thousands of boys and girls through your magnetic personality and your zeal for education. You have made good teachers out of countless poor ones, and better teachers out of hosts of good ones. You have been a pioneer in the cause of Consolidation of Schools, and you are now about to undertake the task of completing this work. You have been a builder indeed—a workman who need not be ashamed. You have been a valued and valuable citizen. You have been a devoted husband, father, friend, and counsellor. You have been a faithful, zealous, conscientious Christian. You have been endowed with many talents and you have used them all in the service of humanity. What a rich heritage is yours! What a legacy you are leaving to humanity!

"Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life for which the first was made."

After the address, Mr. Breckenridge presented Mr. Lees with a purse of gold from the teachers.

Mr. Lees, in responding, felt that he was flattered by the address presented as he could not find himself in the picture that was supposed to be his. He said that he had enjoyed his association with teachers very much. He remarked that teachers were never wrong but they made mistakes. Most of the teachers do try to do their best and mistakes were more often due to inexperience than to other causes. Mr. Lees told of some of his reminiscences. Teachers often do not receive sympathy enough from parents and trustees. If they received more there would be fewer troubles in schools. Mr. Lees thanked the teachers. He had always received great kindness and consideration from them. He advised teachers to continue to magnify their office. Don't be overcome by discouragements. You may not seem to be appreciated; you may not receive credit that is due you. We labor and others enter into our labors. Mr. Lees closed by wishing the teachers God-speed in their work.

Mr. Copp, on behalf of the teachers, presented Mrs. Lees with a bouquet of chrysanthemums.

The banquet closed with the singing of God Save the King.

LONDON SKATING VOGUE BRINGS IN NEWER STYLES FOR WOMEN

ON FETCHING DESIGNS

By BETTY TWIST

(Special to The Examiner—Copyright, 1930)

LONDON, Nov. 7—Skating is London's latest sport, and everyone is trying it. Mammoth ice rinks are being erected, fashionable ladies are transferring their patronage from balls to ice carnivals, and in the first official list of the engagements of the Duchess of York is the announcement that this month she will attend a carnival at the Westminster Ice Club, when Princess Marie Louise will present the prizes.

If some of us are still wondering whether the attractions of the sport are worth the pains of the novice, no doubts will remain in our minds when we see the intriguing skating ensembles the stores are displaying. Here we have styles that combine that trimness of line, so dear to English women, with vividness of coloring and quaintness of decoration which no feminine heart can resist, there are touches of the dashing Cossack and of the debonair Zouave which appeal to our imagination.

Jersey fabrics, wool crepes and similar soft woolen materials, tricots are all used for the new costumes, and for coloring the autumn tints make the best bases. There are rich browns, deep reds and the more vivid blue tones, while every shade of green is fashionable, and black and white are not outside the scheme. One attractive model was in the new raisin shade of wool, the flared skirt with the slimming V line in front was fitted to a tight bodice and hip yoke of vel crepe in the same color worked with a self spot.

Utility Costume

A rounded jacket, cut away to show the bodice, fastened high at the neck with a narrow band of white ermine, while the sleeves, inlet with vel crepe, had the same narrow bands of fur at wrist, elbow and forearm. Two high pockets edged with fur completed the decoration of the jacket.

A skating frock that had the advantage of being wearable at dinner or lunch, as well as an the rink, was in bottle green wool crepe, the fullness cleverly worked into the seams to give the straight hip-fitting line and the flare at the hem. Broad tucks sewn straight on the bodice, gives the appearance of a diagonal yoke, and diagonally on the skirt, were the only decorations, with the exception of a jagged collar of crepe de chine cut at different lengths.

Shorts—But Disguised

For the complete enthusiast, there are a couple of skating costumes which show the combined frock and shorts. The first, in natural colored wool mohair disguised the shorts beneath a wide wrap-over flap. The second was in softest tricot of cherry red. The bodice, tight to the hips, with a demure Peter Pan collar, is fitted on to a full skirt with dart dart seams at the side fastened with rows of buttons. Buttons, too, fasten the tight knee band of the perfectly tailored knickers which are thus revealed.

The button vogue suits the skating kit, and in this neat costume they also appeal down the front of the bodice and on the little flap pockets placed, two high up on the bodice and two at the hip line.

Caps of wool, bright woolly scarfs, berets of fur and muffs of round, chubby proportions are the correct accessories for the lady who goes a-skating.

HUGE CAR FLOAT RUNS AGROUND

Barge Containing 16 Freight Cars Breaks Away From Tug.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Nov. 7 (C.P.)—Blown from its course by a strong northwest wind, the steel car float Ogdensburg, recently placed in service between Prescott and Ogdensburg by the Canadian Pacific and New York Central Railways is ashore in 4½ feet of water off the New York State shore half a mile below the grain elevator at Ogdensburg. On it are 16 freight cars which were in process of being ferried across the St. Lawrence when the Diesel operated tub Prescott-ont failed in its efforts to hold the float true to its course. A marine wrecking concern is endeavoring to lighten the car float, accepted only a few days ago from its builders, so that it may be moved from its present position. The float was swept from its course on the second attempt made by the tug to cross the river and reach dock at Prescott.

BROOKHART HAS DEMOCRATIC VIEW

Iowa Republican Will Support Opposition if Program Satisfactory.

WASHINGTON, November 7 (C.P.)—Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, said to-day he would support the Democratic organization of the new Senate if that party would sponsor a legislative program which he considers satisfactory.

He said if the election just held was to amount to anything the Democrats and Progressives should demand the resignation of Secretary Mellon and of Ogden Nills, Under-Secretary of the Treasury.

"If the Democratic victories do not mean twee-deedle-dum," Brookhart said, "I for one will not let organization of Senate stand in their way and will gladly give them the organization to get results.

"I will not do this as a political move, but will gladly do it to correct the evils of Mellonism which have brought us to our present conditions."

Major Leaguers Prepare for Crucial Games

FRANK TURVILLE AWARDED THE JEFF RUSSELL TROPHY FOR BEST SPORTSMANSHIP

Picked From Selection of Two Players From Each Team in Interprovincial Union.

TIGERS CONFIDENT.

Johnny Fitzpatrick Returns to Varsity Line-up For Important Clash With Tri-color.

TORONTO, Ont., November 7 (C.P.). — Announcement of starting line-ups and departure of teams for visiting battlefields, marked to-day's activities amongst Eastern Canada's major league football squads. Several of them are playing to-morrow in games that are the most "crucial" of the season.

Of course the University of Toronto-Queen's tussle is generally rated as the headliner of Saturday's program. Apparently evenly matched, the opposing gridiron warriors are expected to provide more than 20,000 fans at Varsity Stadium with an exciting exhibition of the fall pastime. The crowd will also likely see settled the college championship for another year.

Coach Les Blackwell has announced his starting line-up, which reveals that Johnny Fitzpatrick, of springtime fame, has recovered sufficiently from pre-season injuries to start in the important clash with the Tricollor. He will team up on the halfline with Jack Sinclair, punting ace. Johnny Keith, aggressive playing captain, will resume his position at snap. He was absent last week through injuries and his great allround playing was sadly missed by the Varsity team against McGill University.

Awarding of the Jeff Russell Memorial Trophy to Frank Turville, Argonauts' brilliant punter, was the chief topic of conversation amongst Interprovincial Union fans to-day. The Argo captain was selected from two players nominated by each of the four teams in the Union as the best playing and best sportsman in the Big Four this season. "Red" Wilson, hard hitting lineman of the Argos, won the award last year.

Argos leave to-day for Ottawa, where they meet the youthful Senator twelve on a frost-bound gridiron there to-morrow.

The Hamilton Tigers, fairly bubbling over with confidence that another Big Four championship is within their grasp, held their final workout last night for the game against Montreal A.A.A., the team that held them to a tie score two weeks ago. The Winged Wheelers will be minus the services of their star snapback, "Red" Tellier, who has been ordered not to play on account of an attack on an official in the game against Argos at Toronto last Saturday. Otherwise the Montreal team will be at full strength, but not strong enough in the opinion of the Hamilton supporters and others, to down the mighty Tigers.

While Ray Boadway may be unable to play against Montreal, "Pep" Leadley, the half-back will don the uniform to help out his old teammates and incidentally qualify for the play-offs if the Yellow and Black reach that far. Alexander Denman, husky wing line player, will also return to the gridiron's wars.

JOINS MAROONS

Montreal, Que., Nov. 7.—(CP)—The signing of Lional Conacher by the Maroon hockey club has brought the roster of the Montreal outfit to the regulation 17 players allowed under National hockey league rules, the big defenseman, whose athletic career started as a football star with Toronto teams, and continued through the position as manager and defense star with the Pittsburg Pirates and New York Americans, will probably report here to-day. Conacher was purchased outright, but the cash involved was not announced.

The hefty defenseman should add considerable weight to the Maroon defense, which previous to Conacher's signing, was the weak spot of the team.

HOCKEY BRIEFS

FALCONS TROUNCE OLYMPICS

DETROIT, Nov. 7. (CP)—Detroit Falcons stampeded their minor league companion club, the Olympics, last night, and handed them a crushing 10 to 2 defeat to make it two straight in the pre-season series.

The Falcons scored five goals in the first period. Early in the second the Olympics found the Falcon net for the first time, and added their second, and last, at near halftime in the same period.

From the goal out, the Falcons out-classed the minor leaguers with players promoted from last year's Olympics starring in many of the rushes. Filmore, Creighton and McInenly of last year's International League entry scored for the major leaguers. Creighton solving the Olympic defense twice.

HAWKS READY FOR LONDON

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 7.—Vic Des Jardines, Doc Rommes and Frank Ingram have been selected as the starting forward line of the Chicago Black Hawks for to-night's game against the London Tecumsehs of the International Professional Hockey League, Manager Bill Tobin made the announcement following yesterday's workout. The exhibition game will complete the Black Hawks' preseason training season in this city. Taffy Abel and Marvin Wentworth will be on the defense with Chuck Gardiner in the nets.

Leonard Pays $33,000 For 3 Ottawa Players

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7—Benny Leonard, owner of the Quakers, Philadelphia's representatives in the National Hockey League, last night announced the purchase of three players from the Ottawa Club. They are: Allan Shields, a husky defense man; Sid Howe, a right-winger, and Wally Kilrae, a left-winger. Leonard said he paid more than $35,000 for the three players.

DOUG. BRENNAN TO LEAD LIONS

Havelock Player Has Proven Backbone of Coast Club for Two Seasons.

IS FAST SKATER

VANCOUVER, Nov. 7—Doug. Brennan, brilliant defense star of the Lions is a fast skater, whose weight makes him very difficult to stop. Brennan has been the idol of the Coast fans for the past two years, and has proved to be the backbone of the team on more than one occasion. This popular star will captain the squad for another season.

Guy Patrick, stepping into his retired brother Frank's position as manager, gave the post of assistant coach to Doug. Brennan. It is expected that his popularity with his team-mates, and the experience he has gained of the coaching methods of the elder Patrick, will be especially valuable to him in his new position as captain and assistant coach.

LEVINSKY RECEIVES UNPOPULAR VERDICT

Fans Roar Their Disapproval When Slattery Declared Loser.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7—King Levinsky, the terrific punching Maxwell Street fish peddler, whose right hand blasts have brought him into prominence as a light heavyweight in the last six months, finished up winner of a 10-round decision over Jimmy Slattery last night. The verdict was decidedly unpopular, however, with the crowd of 16,500 who paid $45,800 to witness the tilt.

The bout was a slashing affair with the speedy and clever Buffalo boxer, once world's light heavyweight champion, flashing a marvelous exhibition of boxing. The decision provoked the most violent demonstration of disapproval seen in Chicago since boxing was revived.

AUSTRALIANS AGAIN REJECT WHEAT POOL

Victoria and New South Wales Farmers to Register Approval of Compulsory Pool.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 7—(C.P.)—In a poll in which only 63.8 per cent of those who were furnished with ballot papers returned formal votes, the farmers of Victoria have rejected a proposal that there should be a compulsory wheat pool this year if the Marketing of Primary Products Bill now before the Legislative Council was passed. The poll was held concurrently with the poll in New South Wales, at which the proposal was also rejected.

The Marketing Bill provides that 60 per cent. of the farmers furnished with ballot-papers must return formal votes before the poll can be regarded as valid, and a majority of at least 60 per cent of the formal votes counted must be recorded in favor of the poll before it can be established. Although the votes recorded in favor of the pool represent 56.06 per cent of the formal votes, they represent only 35.8 per cent of the ballot-papers distributed to farmers.

Compared with the poll which was held in May, 1928, the proportion of farmers who voted in favor of the pool has increased. In 1928, 5,430 farmers voted for the pool and 5,923 voted against it. These figures represent 48 per cent in favor of the pool and 52 per cent against it. The number of formal votes recorded recently was only 14 fewer than the number in the 1928 poll. The larger number of ballot-papers distributed in 1928 is explained by the fact that a person who planted or received the produce of a minimum of 20 acres was entitled to vote, whereas the minimum requirement has since been increased to 40 acres.

CLANCY CLEARING HIS OWN GOAL

The above photograph shows a scene at the practice of the Maple Leafs at Arena Gardens, Toronto. The cameraman has caught "King" Clancy in a characteristic move as he clears his goal after Lorne Chabot has fallen in attack on the net. On the right are seen Harold Cotton and Andy Blair leading the attack on the goal. The players have been going at it hot and heavy and the practices are lively affairs.

Leafs and Bulldogs Practice in Windsor

WINDSOR, Nov. 7.—Professional hockey fans of the Border Cities got their first peek at the 1930-31 Windsor Club of the International Hockey League for 1930-31, when Manager Herb Mitchell led his team through their paces here yesterday before the big crowd of sideliners. Only two members of the squad, "Batt" Phillips and Roy Hinsperger, were missing. Phillips and Hinsperger will arrive here to-day, in time for the exhibition game against Conny Smythe's Toronto Maple Leafs.

Clint Benedict, the former National League goaltending star, who brings to Windsor a record of 17 years' service in major ranks, and little "Abbie" Cox, were in the nets for yesterday's workout. It was Cox's first appearance at the Arena since he was badly injured here last season in a game against Detroit Olympics, when Bobby Connors collided with him. Cox spent eight weeks in the hospital. He has fully recovered.

Former Greyhound Star To Join N.Y. Americans

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 6.—Roy "Gloomy" Lessard, former Greyhound star, has left for Minneapolis, where he will join the New York Americans, the club in which George McNamara, coach of the Greyhounds when they won the Allan Cup, is interested. Lessard is accompanied by Gerald Munroe and the men were passed through the U.S. immigration authorities after being bonded by their teams.

Cases of Garnet Campbell and Arvi Maki, two other Canadian Sault players, are still pending.

Maki tried to cross the border in October to go to Buffalo, but his case was sent to Washington. Later he went to Buffalo and the office there referred him back to the Sault.

Cubs Secure Baecht In Big Baseball Deal

CHICAGO, Nov. 7. — Four years ago, Rogers Hornsby all but chased Ed Baecht out of Sportsman's Park in St. Louis, when the youngster boldly announced he was a good pitcher looking for work. Yesterday the Cubs, now managed by the "Rajah," were happy to obtain him in one of the biggest deals of baseball.

Seven players and a large, but unnamed amount of cash were sent to the Los Angeles Club of the Pacific Coast League for Baecht, now one of the stars of the minors.

In the deal, catcher Johnny Schulte, infielder Eddie Farrel, pitcher A Shealy, and another pitcher to be announced later, will be turned over to the Angels at once while three more will be sent on option.

HARRISONS WIN IN FIRST HALF

G. Dormer's Homer is Feature of Cement-Sugar Bowl Game.

GROCERS WIN 17-3.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 7 (Examiner Correspondence).—On Tuesday evening the last game in the first half of the Softball League was played and Harrison's are the winners of the first half, winning from Selwyn in a fast, keen game. The first game of the evening was between the Cementos and the Sugar Bowl, who have both played in hard luck in the first half, but will be in first class form in the second half. Their battery, Elliott and White, are first class and with the team solid behind them there is a good chance in the second half. G. Dormer's home run in the first was a feature of the game. The line-up for the first game was as follows:—

Sugar Bowl.—Simmons, p; Mahood, c; Hardill, 1b; Gillespie, 2b; Bradshaw, 3b; H. Nicholls, ss; G. Dormer, ss; Dallin, rf; McWilliams, lf.

The umpires were: R. C. Chittick at the plate, and W. Elliott at bases.

The score by innings was:
Cementos .. ..0100022—5
Sugar Bowl .. ..330000x—6

One-Sided Affair

The second game was more one-sided, as Harrison's, despite the loss of their batteries and the temporary absence of Pat Calladine, their first-base man, were as usual full of ginger, while Selwyn was plainly out of form. It was simply an off night. The crowd which was particularly good rooted impartially and the game was a good one, better than the score indicates.

The line-up was as follows:—

Selwyn.—Fitzgerald, p; Nicholls, c; Graham, 1b;; Darling, 2b; A. Wilson, 3b; M. Wilson, ss; Oliver, ss; Elliott, f; Shearer, f.

The umpires were: at the plate, H. White; at bases, L. Sabatino for the first half and B. Wannamaker for the second.

The score by innings was:—
Harrisons .. ..0451106—17
Selwyn .. ..0201000— 3

Iraq Ruler Desires Britain's Good Will

BAGDAD, Nov. 7 (C.P.).—King Feisal of Iraq (Mesopotamia) in an interview here referred to his visit to England as one not only of great interest but also of the happiest results. He expressed the belief that the co-operation of Great Britain and Iraq would thereby be strengthened and would increase in the future. His Majesty said that since the early days of the King's intimate relations with Great Britain his affection for the British nation has grown in depth and sincerity, and the support and encouragement he has always received will be a guarantee for the maintenance of good will and bring happiness and prosperity to Iraq.

The country is suffering from the world crisis, King Feisal said, but he looked to better days. Such a crisis served as a lesson for the future, demanding additional effort and endeavor. He was particularly desirous of augmenting the agricultural wealth of the country, but Iraq was isolated and had no accumulated capital; her riches were dormant in the soil.

Referring to the political situation, his Majesty stated that Parliamentary Oppositions serve a good educational purpose. His personal task was to seek a happy medium between exaggerated reaction and excessive haste in the reconstruction of the country. He spoke highly of the services rendered to the Iraq Government by the British authorities and advisers, and finally reiterated his satisfaction at having this opportunity to express his sympathy and good will towards Great Britain.

An artist tells a wonderful story in pictures and visitors go there to try to discover the story. She referred to Landseer's fondness for drawing dogs. Dogs instinctively liked Landseer.

Miss Irving then took up a picture with the class to see what could be discovered in it. It represented a dog sitting close to a casket. The contents of the room suggested the house of a shepherd. The dog was a collie. The pattern on a blanket in the room was a sort of check. In the room was a tam o'shanter. All of these indicated a Scottish shepherd's home. The furniture seemed to be homemade, the walls were bare, the floor seemed to be made of earth. All of these facts let us know much of the shepherd's conditions of living. He may have been lonely perhaps but he was happy with his dog and his sheep, and in his life on the hills. The shepherd had died. On his casket was a blanket and on it a spray of leaves found in Scotland. The dog's expression and attitude showed sadness. The dog was a faithful friend of his master. From the picture could be deduced a story as real as if it had been told in words. The teachers and children found the development of the story from the picture most interesting.

Mr. Downey gave an address on "Some Observations."

Rural teachers often shift from place to place. Many are ambitious to enter urban schools. Many of the best go and changes are frequent. Greater opportunity means greater responsibility but that is the way of progress.

Plan Work First

Good teachers should plan their work and then work their plan. In some schools a sort of day-book is kept of what is to be done each day.

Be guided by the course of study laid down by the Education department.

Mistakes are still made in registers. Too many reports sent to inspectors are quite incorrect. Why should teachers be so inaccurate. Keep your registers up-to-date so that there will be less work to be done on them at the very end of the year.

Pupils should not be late and teachers should be there to receive them. Start on time; be at school early. It helps in discipline and has a restraining influence on mischevious boys.

Use the manuals in your work. Buy good books; avoid trash in building up your school library. Don't buy from agents who are not authorized by the inspector to sell.

Some teachers help pupils too much in examinations. Pupils ought to be able to think out things for themselves and become independent. They will not be so puzzled when final examinations come.

Teachers should be good housekeepers. Dirty slovenly desks are an abomination, children copy teachers; set a good example yourself.

Teachers, be enthusiastic; have a sense of humor, be prompt, control yourself and the pupils, modulate your voice. Discipline is a wholesome growth and must be studied and developed. Exercise control at the start; keep your brakes on at the beginning and then you may slacken a little as you find you may.

Australian Tariff Hits Writing Paper

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 6.—(CP)—Increases in the primage or additional duty of 1½ per cent on all imports and ten per cent on writing and typewriting paper announced yesterday in the Australian parliament are the chief features of the new antipodean custom duties as affecting Canada, the rise in the tariff by Australia, however, is not of serious consequence to the Dominion. This opinion was expressed today by tariff experts in the capital following a study of cabled press dispatches containing the new tariff rates.

Jack Sharkey Offers To Meet Stribling In Aid Of The Unemployed Of New York

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—Jack Sharkey, American heavy weight champion, has agreed to meet W. L. ("Young") Stribling, Georgia sensation, in a 15-round bout without compensation "to relieve the suffering of the unemployed and their dependents," Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, announced here today. Buckley said Sharkey authorized him to send a telegram to Damon Runyon, manager of the New York American's Christmas basket fund show, that he would fight Stribling, and that he (Sharkey) wanted his share of the purse used to buy food and other necessities for the unemployed and their dependents.

The telegram, according to Buckley said that Sharkey would be prepared to meet Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion of the world in the "milk fund" show if Sharkey met and defeated the youthful Georgia boxer.

FOUR YOUNGSTERS FROM WEST WILL FILL REGULAR POSITIONS WITH CANADIENS THIS SEASON

Bud Cook, Brother of Famous Ranger Brothers Certain to Make Place.

GAGNON ON FRONT LINE

Canucks Have Not Traded or Disposed of Any of Last Year's Members.

MONTREAL, Nov. 7 (CP).—A good hockey team is never a fixed quantity or quality. Although Montreal Canadiends of the National hockey league were good enough last spring to go through an amazingly tough post-season playoff schedule, Manager Cecil Hart has strengthened his hand for the 1930-31 season. To take the Stanley cup last march, and with it the world's professional hockey title, Canadiens battled the sturdy Chicago Blackhawks, the flashing New York Rangers and the record-breaking Boston Bruins into submission.

Bud Cook to Make Place.

Cecil Hart will offer for the approval of the supporters of the club four youngsters, all of proven merit in other leagues. In addition, other newcomers have tried out with the team but probably will go to a minor outfit for further seasoning. Of the four likely to make the team, three come from the far west. Bud Cook, brother of the famous Bill and Bun of the Rangers, and reported to have just as good hockey in his brain and legs, seems certain to make a place. The Ciroux brothers, also from the west, have shown up well in pre-season activities. Johnny Gagnon, who burned up the Canadian-American league last year as right winger for Providence, will probably get the call as right winger to aid the first string forward line of Howie Morenz and Aurele Joliat.

Unlike most other teams, Canadiens have not traded, sold or otherwise disposed of any of its members of last year's squad. The goal-tending berth will again be in the capable hands of George Hainsworth. In front of him will be the potent defence of Silvio Mantha, Marty Burke, Albert Leduc and Bert McCaffery.

BACON METHOD ABLY EXPLAINED

Dr. Bannister Welcomes Teachers Who Are Attending Convention.

PROMISES HELP.

Dr. Bannister, at this morning's session of the Teachers' Convention, expressed his delight in seeing and meeting so many ex-students of the Normal School. He welcomed the teachers and hoped that they would come again in the future. He was pleased with the few addresses he had been privileged to hear. He offered the assistance of the Normal School staff to teachers desirous of obtaining a first class certificate, and gave some instructions to would-be candidates.

The Beacon Method

Miss Wilson of the Prince of Wales School gave a paper on "The Beacon Method," which, she said, was an American one, but very valuable and seemed to have no corresponding plan that is Canadian or British.

The purpose of the method is to help pupils to read quickly and phonetically. Reading and phonics go side by side in it. For the first few weeks at school emphasize phonics. The reading is done from charts. Isolated words must be drilled upon. Cards with single words on each may be arranged by the pupil into sentences. The vocabularly on the charts fits in with the primer. Children have certain physical obstacles. They cannot follow the lines easily. They are inclined to point out the words. Just saying the words is not reading. Various devices to overcome these deficits must be used.

Do not teach nursery rhymes as reading lessons. Teach them as memory gems.

Some educationists disapprove of phonics as a means of teaching reading. Phonics is the backbone of our language. Why should it not be used?

The order of the phonetical development in the Beacon method is good. The letters and vowel sounds are well graded and arranged. The course is very thorough.

The Beacon phonetic method is different from others. Cards with stories on them are an important part of the course. Sounds of the simpler consonants come early. The pupils blend the vowel and consonant sounds and the work is nicely graded from the easier to the more difficult.

The eye follows from left to right and words should be built up from the first consonant rather than from the last one of a syllable, which is the method generally used.

Rev. D. Wren Gives Thanksgiving Talk

The Rev. D. Wren, pastor of Trinity United Church, gave an interesting Thanksgiving address at the regular meeting of Trinity Women's Association, held this week.

The Bible reading was given by Mrs. J. K. Moore, and a collection was taken up in aid of the Well Babies' Clinic.

The grandmothers were guests of the society and the oldest and youngest of the guests were presented with bouquets of lovely yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. W. F. Butcher and Miss T. Mather acted as tea hostesses.

District Runners In Y.M.C.A. Races

Racing fans are promised a treat on Thanksgiving Day, when runners from Peterborough and the surrounding district will compete in the Y.M.C.A. road races. Entries have been received from Lindsay, and four local teams have signified their intention of competing in the senior six-mile relay race. A flock of entries have also been made in the junior race.

The races will get underway from the "Y" at 10.30 in the morning.

EIGHT TEAMS FORM NEW HOCKEY LOOP

American League is Outlaw Circuit as Far as N.H.L. is Concerned.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7 (CP).—Eight teams comprise the newly organized American League of professional hockey clubs which has just released its playing schedule for the 1930-31 season.

Buffalo, New York and Chicago are new additions to the league, formerly known as the American Association. The latter formerly operated under the supervision of Frank Calder, president of the National hockey league, but a dispute arose over the player draft, territorial rights and other matters, and the association broke away from the parent organization and formed a new circuit.

As far as the N.H.L. is concerned, the American league is an outlaw circuit and all players signing up with clubs in that league are barred from signing up with teams in the N.H.L., or any other hockey organization linked with the major circuit, such as the Canadian-American, Pacific Coast and International leagues.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT

The Regent Theatre of this city has been awarded a mark of special distinction for the effort it is making to give the citizens the best possible form of motion picture entertainment.

The Exhibitors Herald-World, largest motion picture trade publication, has undertaken the task of calling the attention of the public to those theatres in Canada and the United States which are endeavoring to present talking pictures with the best reproduction. The purpose of this is twofold. One is to encourage theatre owners to give their communities prestige. The other is to advance the motion picture itself to even higher standards than have been achieved with the introduction of sound. It is obvious that with the increased importance of the mechanical factor due to the intricacy of the equipment for presenting talking pictures in the theatres the responsibility of the owner is increased correspondingly, a fact which the public is very likely not to recognize.

The leading citizens of any community recognize the importance of its theatres in the business life of that community, and the Exhibitors Herald-World is in receipt of countless communications calling attention to the fact that business has been drawn to their cities by the excellence of presentation of entertainment or, conversely, has been lost to neighboring towns through faulty exhibition of motion pictures.

The mark of honor to the Regent Theatre represents a distinct asset to the community at large. The granting of this award follows upon thorough investigation by the proper authorities.

The Northern Electric Sound System used in the Regent Theatre is the best equipment that money can buy. The greatest movie theatres in the country use the same sound system as the Regent offers its patrons. Every word, every tone, every sound can be plainly and distinctly heard.

The Regent Theatre appreciates this award of merit for its sound equipment and is gratified at this recognition from the Exhibitors Herald-World.

Clothing Donations Thankfully Received

The Examiner wishes to acknowledge with much gratitude the kindness of many citizens who have contributed parcels to its Relief Fund. Special mention should be made of Mrs. S. Levine, Mrs. L. Loftus, Mrs. B. Rogow, Mrs. P. Black, and Mrs. A. Swartz, all of whom contributed parcels of much-needed clothing.

About a week ago, a request for two cook stoves was made and two were received and placed at once. Two more are now needed, in homes where the cold weather finds a number of children and their parents without stoves on which to cook food.

Another family where nine children are in the home needs double bedsprings, some bed clothes, quilts and blankets. Anyone having stoves or these bed accessories is asked to telephone The Examiner, and they will be called for.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Nov. 7 (A.P.)—The DO-X, Germany's 12-motored seaplane, took off at 12.15 p.m. to-day on a brief exhibition flight to Rotterdam and the Hague. The ship will fly to Calshot, England, to-morrow on the next lap of its trans-Atlantic flight to New York.

SASKATCHEWAN SEEKING THREE WESTERN TITLES

Regina Roughriders Battle Calgary Tigers For Senior Supremacy.

INJURIES WEAKEN TEAMS.

While Saskatoon Hilltops and Manitoba Native Sons Meet For Junior Honors.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 7 (CP).—Saskatchewan, heading for the only three rugby titles on the Prairies in open circulation, will send invading squads into Alberta and Manitoba during the coming week-end to make the necessary pickups.

While University of Saskatchewan holds the Western Intercollegiate crown, Roughriders of Regina battle Calgary Tigers at the Foothills City Monday for senior supremacy on the Prairies and Saskatoon Hilltops and Winnipeg Native Sons meet here Saturday to decide junior honors. Hilltops, if they beat the Manitoba team, will become eligible to challenge eastern champions and travel into Ontario and Quebec in an attempt to bring back the title St. Thomas won from Moose Jaw last fall.

But Regina's tussle with Calgary is only a medium of advancement for both teams. The winners will go into British Columbia for a three-game series with the Coast champions.

With the exception of Jersey Campbell, star snap-back, who was injured last Saturday while Roughriders were beating Winnipeg St. John's, Al Ritchie's Reginans will be at full strength at Calgary. Ritchie will take his full squad westward in the hope that they will go on to Vancouver.

Early season injuries to Freddy Hess star punter, and Fritz Sandstrom quarter-back, weakened the Tiger drive to the Alberta title, but the team Regina must face Saturday is fighting for its fifth straight victory and Calgary supporters believe it will achieve.

Jakie Forbes Stars But Amerks Win 2-1

GALT, Nov. 7.—As a farewell to Galt, the New York Americans and New Haven Eagles played an exhibition game here last night before a crowd of 1,500, the N.H.L. team winning by 2-1. All of the goals were scored in the final period. While the opening canto was tame, the other two brought more action with considerable bumping indulged in. It proved a very fair exhibition with public sympathy with the Eagles.

"Jumping Kakie" Forbes was the outstanding performer of the night, giving a sensational exhibition and only his phenomenal saves prevented the Amerks winning by a larger margin. The former Toronto amateur pair, Pringle and Ayres, with the Eagles, proved the huskiest defence pair on the ice and they gave a good account of themselves.

On the Eagles' front line, Jack Keating, the former St. John amateur, was a standout. He was fast and tricky. He has signed an American contract but has been farmed out to the Eagles. Convey and Burmister also were good.

37 CLASS "B" PROFESSIONALS ARE REINSTATED BY THE A.A.U.

Three Applicants From Ontario Succeed at Vancouver Meeting.

CONVENTION OPENS.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 7.—The famous McAdam case, which originated in Winnipeg last summer when Sammy McAdam, professional hockey player, took part in an "amateur" soccer game, professionalizing those who played with or against him, was brought to a conclusion at the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, which opened here yesterday. Twenty amateur athletes, mostly hockey players, suspended by the national amateur authorities and listed as class "B" professionals for playing with or against McAdam, were reinstated at a late session of the convention yesterday. The registration committee, under the chairmanship of J. S. Hamilton, Regina, dealt with the individual cases at a lengthy conclave before yesterday afternoon's convention session.

The committee recommended immediate reinstatement of all athletes concerned in the McAdam case, and of 17 other athletes listed as class "B" professionals. All recommendations were subsequently passed by the convention without comment.

The committee has not yet considered reinstatement of class "A" professionals whose applications are on hand. These will likely come up to-day.

Those reinstated included 11 baseball players and one boxer in Alberta, 18 hockey players and two baseball players in Manitoba. Others were: Nova Scotia, Maurice McDonald, boxer; Ontario, W. Wright and Lou Lister, baseball players, and C. Puch, soccer player; Quebec, Joseph Naesmith, soccer player.

Featuring his opening address with the flat statement that it was unconstitutional to provisionally reinstate an athlete to amateur standing pending action by the Canadian body, Prof. T. R. Louden, of Toronto, president, opened the annual meeting. About forty delegates were in attendance when the convention got down to work. Minutes of the previous meeting and the president's report were quickly adopted, while committees were reported to deal with various phases of Canadian amateur sport.

President Louden intimated that it had been suggested at various times that certain athletes applying for reinstatement be allowed to take part in amateur sport until definite action on their prospective cases had been taken by the governing body of the Dominion. He emphatically declared that such action was unconstitutional.

Touching on the Olympic committee, the president said that that body could not function properly as at present constituted. It is not probable that action regarding the committee will be taken at a subsequent session of the convention. Prof. Louden also referred to the past year in amateur sport in Canada as having been a banner one, instancing the British Empire games at Hamilton as the leading feature.

VARIETY OF COSTUMES SEEN AT LIFFORD LINE GATHERING

GOOD MUSICAL PROGRAM

FUN AND FROLIC.

LIFFORD, Nov. 7. (Examiner Correspondence.)—The Women's Guild of St. Mary's Anglican Church, Lifford Line, held a most successful Hallowe'en social evening in the hall here on Friday evening, when a large crowd of young and old gathered from neighboring centres to enjoy the fun and frolic so cleverly arranged.

The Rev. Mr. Feirbeller, of Bethany, pastor of St. Mary's church, acted as chairman for the evening. In his opening remarks he kindly thanked all present for their patronage and drew their attention to the attractive booth of home-made candy presided over by Miss Mae McFill and Jane Mills, as well as the Fish Pond, with Misses Isobel Sisson and Muriel Hannah in charge. These special features carried on a lively business throughout the evening, their Hallowe'en decorations harmonizing with the color scheme carried out in the entire interior of the building.

The stately ghost whose greeting was so friendly to the in-coming guests, appeared at intervals, causing considerable amusement especially among the younger folk.

Hallowe'en Chorus.

The program was opened by a Hallowe'en chorus following which was introduced the playlet "Cinderella" consisting of six acts and put on by the young people of Lifford Line directed by Miss G. Hutchison. The cast of characters was as follows: Audrey Mulligan, Cinderella: Doris Tims and Lena Mulligan, Cinderella's beauty sisters; May Mulligan, Cinderella's mother; Helen Rowan, Fairy Godmother: Vera Strachan, Prince Rupert; Mary Tims, The King; Mary White, Earl Lathavgne; and Ralph Mulligan, attendants.

Each of these characters were particularly well-chosen and carried out his and her part of this well-known fairy tale in a most commendable manner.

The six acts of this play were interspersed with a delightful varied program.

Orchestra Assists.

The eighth line five piece orchestra, with Robert Sisson, at the organ presented several numbers.

A ghost drill given by six young people, all unknown to the interested audience, contributed its share in emphasizing the "spookiness" of the evening.

The concluding number on the program was a selection by the "Kitchen orchestra" composed of ten ladies disguised in humorous Hallowe'en costumes and equipped with a kitchen utensil playing the part of a musical instrument. Those taking part in this heartily encored number were: rs. Hannah, rs.Sisson, Mrs. McGill, Mrs. Staples, rs. Peters, Mrs. Vance, Miss Hutchison, Misses Mae, McGill, Lena Mulligan and Doris Tims.

Following this program, various games were enjoyed. A jar of beans was passed, the lucky guesser of the number incontained therein to receive a free fish the Fish Pond. Earl Smith was the winner guessing four short of the correct number, of seven hundred.

The Ladies of the Guild with assistants, then served dainty and very bounteous refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, pie, cake and coffee.

The singing of 'God Save the King" brought to a close the delightful series of events. Several of the young people remained to "trip the light fantastic" to music furnished by the orchestra.

Masonic Lodge Holds Annual Ladies' Night

HASTINGS, Nov. 7.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—The annual Ladies' Night in connection with the Masonic Lodge was held on Friday evening and took the form of a Hallowe'en party.

A short program was given, consisting of comic songs by Mr Storie of Campbellford, and community singing, with short addresses by W. R. Learmouth, chairman and Rev. J. R. Pattersby, W. M. Fowlds, C. B. Plant and C. P. Doughty.

C. B. Plant who had charge of the games, introduced some novel ideas which enlivened the proceedings. T. W. Chaplan, of Lakefield, and Grant Sine, of Hastings, acted as judges and awarded the prize for the best dressed gent to Mr. Storie, of Campbellford. Mrs. Morrison, of Campbellford, being awarded the prize for the best lady in costume.

After the games, a dainty luncheon was served after which euchre was enjoyed, the winners being Mrs. J. H. Hess and Mr. Lancaster.

The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion and much credit is due to Mr Ball, of Toronto, who gave expert assistance.

Clergymen Oppose Right Of Appeal Move

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, November 4 (C.P.). — The Rev. John A. F. Gregg, Archbishop of Dublin, and the Rev. C. S. Darcy, Protestant Primate of Ireland, joined to-day in expressing strong opposition to a Free State proposal at the Imperial Conference for abolition of the right of appeal to the British Privy Council.

"We do not impute to the Free State Government," they said in a joint manifesto, "any desire to invade our rights of property or religious liberty, but the present Government will not always be in office, and Ireland is a country in which religious distinctions exercise a dominating influence with which those who do not live here can have little understanding."

PIPE REPAIRER HAS NO WORRY ABOUT BUSINESS COMPETITION

Ontario Has Only One Tobacco Pipe Repairer—An Intricate Business.

LEARNED IN VIENNA

(Special to The Examiner—Copyright, 1930)

By R. C. READE

TORONTO, Nov. 7—There is one business in Canada in which there is no competition. It is the business of repairing tobacco pipes.

Charles Dollack, a pipe surgeon, who puts crippled briars and mangled meerschaums back on their stems, laughs at competition. He is the only pipe repairer in Ontario. Consequently he has no advertising problem. All over the province people puff his handiwork. He makes his headquarters in Toronto.

"How does it happen," I asked, "that your profession is so exclusive?"

"To repair pipes," said he, "you must be able to make pipes. And pipes aren't made on this continent. France and Austria are big centres of manufacture. I made pipes in Vienna for ten years before I came to this continent, and I have been repairing pipes here for 19 years."

"If you're the only pipe salvager in Ontario you must be swamped with work. There must be a good many pipes broken every year in all Canada.

"I don't do so well as the plumbers with their pipes, but I don't do so badly," said he. "But you must remember that there are a lot of pipes that are worth only 25 or 50 cents. When they get broken it's almost as cheap to replace them as to repair them."

It was in his atelier that I talked to him. His equipment consisted of an electrically driven lathe and various fine chisels. His raw material was great twisted roots of French briar, and square blocks of amber and meerschaum.

Meerschaum From Asiatic Turkey

"We can't get briar on this continent," said he. "The best is French."

He showed me a cake of meerschaum. It wasn't exactly like a cube of gypsum. "Where do you get it?" I asked.

"From Turkish Asia. It is worth only $5 a ton from the ground. The cost comes from the treatment. Even now it is not quite ready to made into pipes. I have to soak it in water before I put it on the lathe."

He took a turn at asking questions and said: "Where do you think the amber comes from?"

"I know that," said I. "It comes from the stomach of sick whales."

He laughed. "That's ambergris, a perfume. Amber is mined by divers from a bured forest on the shores of the Baltic. It is petrified pinegum. I don't find as much use for it as formerly. Vulcanite stems are more and more replacing amber mouthpieces."

"How do you patch amber?" I asked. "Do you melt it and weld it, or do you glue fragments together?"

"You can't cement amber," he replied. "I put pegs in it."

Curved Pipe Gone

Mr. Dollack out of his wealth of knowledge of pipe smokers' idiosyncracies gave me some more pipe data. "The briars are all the rage. Meerschaums are getting fewer and a calabash is now almost unknown. I don't believe I have had one in the last year. Another thing is that curved stem has almost gone out in favor of the straight stem."

I expressed the opinion that this might be due to the decline of whiskers, but Mr. Dollack did not think so. He had never heard in the old days when whiskers were luxuriant of a man setting his face on fire because his pipe did not curve away from danger.

The great joy of Mr. Dollack's existence is the joy of keeping old friends together. "To a real pipe smoker it causes a heart-wrench to have his pipe broken. I have had them come in weeping and when I made the pipe as good as new they are very grateful to me. I doubt if the surgeons at the hospital get so much gratitude from their patients."

A $3.75 Clay Pipe

'Have you ever had any one ask you to repair a corn cob pipe?"

"Yes sir, I have," said Mr. Dollack, "and I know a man who asked me to fit an amber stem with a gold band on a clay pipe. That cost him $3.75, but when he breaks the clay he can fit in another one."

It is not only the fact that the pipe repairer must first be able to make pipes that keeps the smiling Mr. Dollack from any fear of competition.

"You have to be able to make your own tools," said he. "Here's a chuck." I had to make it myself. I couldn't get it in this country."

The chuck was a woodchuk, a wooden vice that could open and shut like a boot tree. It was clamped to the whirling wheel and in it was inserted the pipe-stem to be hollowed.

Mr. Dollack not only repairs pipes. He makes them. There is a man in Peterborough who would give up smoking if he couldn't get a Dollack pipe. He showed one to a friend from the United States and the other day Mr. Dollack got an order from Chicago for three of his pipe masterpieces.

He showed me also an opium pipe he had made purely of course, for museum purposes. It has a long briar stem with an amber tip and by reason of the aperture in the centre, looked like a flute.

I blew into it, but there was no sound. "How do you dream with it?" I asked. "You put the bowl on that hole in the centre," said he.

Charles Dollack is an artist who is happy in his work. In spite of his monopoly, he does not charge monopoly prices. All he asks from life except the mere living is that smile of gratitude on the faces of inveterate pipe smokers when he performs his miracles of resurrection and brings back their beloved pipes from the dead.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN No. 47 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

"They were going toward the morning. It was a half-moon ago." Tarzan listened no longer to the young ape's tale. Was it possible this prisoner was some woman of his own race in deadly peril? Without another word the ape-man sprang into the trees and fled like a disembodied spirit eastward in the direction of the forgotten city of Opar.

How long Janes lay in the darkness of the vault beneath the temple in the ancient city of Opar, she did not know. As her strength gradually returned, her captors watched her with increasing interest. At length came a day when they led her from her dungeon into a brilliant courtyard. She saw a stone altar in the center with dark-brown stains upon it.

They bound her ankles and wrists. A moment later she was lifted and placed across the altar's top. During the grotesque dance of the votaries that followed, she lay frozen in horror. Nor did she require the sight of the thin blade in the hands of the high priestess as it rose slowly above her, to enlighten her further as to her doom.

As the hand began to descend, Jane succumbed to the strain, and swooned. Day and night Tarzan of the Apes raced through the primeval forest toward the ruined city in which he was positive some white woman lay either a prisoner or dead. He thought of that grim altar and increased his speed. Would he be in time to rescue her? He hoped against hope. At least he could be revenged.

CHICKEN THIEVES BUSY

Chicken thieves are reported to be operating in the Havelock district and farmers are urged to take every precaution at night to guard their feathered possessions. Sometime last night the hen house of Albert Keene, near that village, was raided and the thieves escaped with five hens. Other losses have been reported from time to time in the same district.

GIVEN THREE MONTHS

Arthur Stone, 17, was sentenced by Police Magistrate Langley this morning to not less than three months and no more than one year in the Ontario Reformatory for stealing a case of salmon and a case of soap from a C.P.R. box car. John Smiles, charged with the same offence, was sentenced to one month in jail. Stone had been in court in August for shop breaking.

Delegates Are Named To Attend Convention

At a meeting of the executive of the Liberal Association last night the following delegates were appointed to attend the provincial convention in Toronto next month: J. J. Duffus, Dr. A Moir, Dr. J. J. Craig, Vincent Eastwood, Mrs. M. McNeeley, Mrs. C R. Banks; and alternates, Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, John A. Dewart, Mrs. W. Stevens, and W. P. Huycke.

Mr. Wilfrid Huycke was appointed secretary of the association and a committee was authorized to consider resolutions for presentation at the convention. About thirty members of the executive attended the meeting.

The City Leaguers were stepping in in great style last night, the Lucky Strikes showing the way by taking four from the luckless Examiner crew. The Examiner rolled a nice total of 3173, but were outdistanced by Leo Martyn's crew, who were decidedly on, setting a new city record with a total of 3,677, knocking off 1,477 in their first game.

Fred Hickey of the Lucky Strikes was not to be denied last night, taking off first honors with a mark of 885. He stuck in two games of 359 and 317 to help swell his total. Bud Weese and Walter Firth of the same team were also away above 700.

As a result of the games, there was a general shake-up in the standing. Westclox stayed out on top by taking 3 from the Bowlrites, who dropped to a tie for fourth with the Lucky Strikes. The Westclox-Bowlrites games were all close, the winners taking the pinnage by four pins, despite Bill Sweetman's 691.

Harry Ranger led his team to a decisive win over the Cogs, his 833 being no little help in their taking four points. Joe Marsden, as usual, and Bill McGee were also away up. The Rangers team total was close to 3,400.

The Big Five had their troubles taking three points from Harold Delahaye's Canadiens, all of the games being very close, but Art Thomas and his gang now find themselves tied with the Rangers on the second rung of the ladder.

Tommy Holyman set a nice pace for his Belmonts to follow, dusting off the pins to the tune of 718, and helped his team to win 3 points from the Brintons.

Thanksgiving

What a host of things every one has to be thankful for—the best country in the world to live in; a high level of living conditions; improving business; first class recreational facilities; plenty to eat, drink and wear. So much more than people of other lands.

Let us indeed give thanks!

Borland's Drug Store, in gratitude to the many customers who have made their business successful, have recently begun giving profit sharing coupons with each purchase. Many people are taking advantage of this chance to get extra value—"something instead of nothing."

..And now TO-NIGHT and TO-MORROW, as a practical Thanksgiving gesture BORLAND'S are giving DOUBLE COUPONS—Just think —2 profit sharing coupons instead of one. And in addition ONE CUT GLASS TUMBLER TO EACH CUSTOMER SPENDING $1.00 OR MORE. (Only one to a family.)

..Tonight, and tomorrow—and always —do your Drug Store shopping at Borland's where you get good merchandise — everything you need — friendly service—at popular prices. Don't forget BORLAND'S DRUG STORE, 228 Charlotte. Only 4 doors from Aylmer or Phone 274 for fast delivery.

ENGLAND ELECTS MAYORS MONDAY

POLITICS PLAY NO PART.

LONDON, November 8 (C.P. Cable). — Monday is the day when the new Lord Mayors and Mayors throughout England and Wales are elected. In most cities and towns the election is by acclamation, as the choice of Chief Magistrate for the year is left with each of the principal political parties in turn, even though one of the parties may have but a small representation on the Council.

Political considerations, however, never enter into the selection of a Lord Mayor of London. He is elected on Micahelmas Day, is sworn into office on November 8, and on the following day—in this case it is Monday—accompanied by the varied retinue which comprises the Lord Mayor's show, goes to the Royal Courts of Justice to make the final declarations before the Lord Justice.

Crew Are Rescued On Disabled Ship

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The crew of the four-masted schooner Dunham Wheeler, in distress of Cape Canaversal, Florida, was taken off the vessel today, according to a message picked up by the West Palm Beach, Fla., station of the Mackay Radio Company. The message said: "Steamship Aztec arrived along side schooner Dunham Wheeler at seven forty a.m. and at eight twenty picked up all the crew and proceeded on voyage."

The schooner sent out an SOS call early today and the fruit steamer Aztec, bound from the West Indies to New York, changed its course to go to the schooner, 46 miles away. The Dunham Wheeler, bound for Jacksonville, had lost five sails in heavy weather.

SERIOUS CHARGE FACING DRIVER IN FATAL CRASH

Albert Ayling Remanded in Brantford Court By Acting Magistrate Buckard.

BAIL SET AT $5,000.

Inquest Opened Immediately Into Smash That Took Two Lives.

BRANTFORD, Ont., November 8 (C.P.). — Charged with criminal negligence in connection with the deaths in a motor crash to-day of his sister and another passenger, Albert Ayling, of Detroit, Mich., was remanded by Acting Magistrate W. G. Buskard, in Police Court to-day. Bail was set at $5,000.

Ayling appeared in court a few hours after his sister, Mrs. Jennie Ayling Harey, 22, of Detroit, and D. Ward Richardson, also of that city, died en route to hospital from injuries received when their car, driven by Ayling, somersaulted into a ditch as the driver applied the brakes to avoid colliding with a truck and trailer.

An inquest was opened immediately following the accident.

STOBIE, FORLONG TRIAL NEAR END

Judge Has No Desire to Keep Jury Over Thanksgiving Week-end.

JUDGMENT LIKELY TO-DAY.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 8. — "The trial of Malcolm Stobie, Charles J. Forlong and Gordon Draper will be terminated Saturday, if the court has to sit till midnight," Mr. Justice Jeffrey announced yesterday when the defence declined to call any witnesses.

His Lordship did not wish to keep the jury on the case over the Thanksgiving week-end and counsel were asked to be prepared to go ahead with their addresses at nine o'clock this morning. Three defense counsel and the crown will address the jury before His Lordship's charge.

At the termination of the Crown's case yesterday, the defence moved to have the case taken from the jury on grounds of insufficient evidence. Joseph Singer, counsel for Draper, contended his client had only been mentioned three times specifically during the hearing, so his case should not go to the jury.

Gun Catches On Bush Hunter Shot In Arm

COCHRANE, Ont., Nov. 8.—Fred Oomen, Dutch settler residing 17 miles northwest of here, got the contents of a double barrelled shot gun in the arm when it was accidently discharged as he was climbing over a windfall while rabbit hunting. He evidently jerked it when it became caught in the brush. When a telephone call to Cochrane failed to locate a doctor, neighbors, after administering first aid, transported the wounded man by canoe and wagon to the hospital here.

One charge entered the arm above the elbow while the other entered the wrist. Doctors believe his arm will be saved.

FOUR GANGS BUSY DIGGING DRAINS MORE EMPLOYED

Eighty-two Unemployed Men Were Taken on by Board of Works Yesterday.

WORKING WEEKS ABOUT.

City is Trying to Give Every Unemployed Married Man Work.

Eighty-two more of Peterborough's unemployed married men were added yesterday to the city's payroll in connection with the unemployment relief scheme which is being supported by grants from the Dominion and Provincial governments making fifty per cent. of the cost.

The men went gladly to work with pick and shovel digging storm drains. A big program of storm drain laying has been mapped out by the Board of Works department and four gangs are now busy in various sections of the city. Storm drains are being laid on the north end of Armour Road and on Prince street. The Downey street creek is getting due attention also. Workmen are making rapid progress in walling the creek in and laying a cement course for it for several hundred feet north of McDonnel street, the point where it usually flooded in its spring rampage. This drain will have its outlet in the river and be continued along Harvey street to McDonnel street and up along Dickson street.

Working Week About

Some 130 men in all were working for the city yesterday and Alderman Harry Huffman, chairman of the Board of Works, stated that the number will be further increased so that all the unemployed married men will benefit. About twenty workmen, who had been employed with the city all summer, were laid off for a week to make room for some of the new men. These men will return to work next week, since the plan is to work all the men, except the key ones, in alternate weekly shifts.

No married man in the city is now being handed direct relief. The names of men formerly on the list of Art Metherall, city relief officer, were handed over to the City Engineer and now all these men are working for the city. They are getting forty cents an hour and helping to make the city flood proof.

Showing Good Ability

Mr. Huffman expressed full approval of the ability the new workmen were showing. Some of them have never handled a pick or shovel, but all seemed to be diligently at work when The Examiner made a tour of inspection yesterday. Rapid work is being made of the Prince street drain and early next week it will be completed when the men will move up to Princess street and lay a similar drain there.

The Board of Works' chief expressed the sincere hope that winter will hold off for at least six weeks longer so that the work may be continued along. "We want to give every married man in Peterborough an opportunity to earn a living for his family," he said.

In order to increase the employment for local men the city will also maintain a crew of five men making tile. Formerly the city made tile in the summer only, but part of a building on King street has been rented and the equipment will be moved in there so that the work can continue throughout the winter.

TWENTY ITALIANS HELD IN PRISON

Round-up Follows Suspected Implication in Anti-Fascist Plot.

ROME, Nov. 8. — Twenty men, many of them prominent scholars, professors and former officials, were in jail in Italy and adjacent exile islands to-day as a result of a round up of persons suspected of participating in an international plot against the Fascist government.

The men arrested included Bortolo Bellotti, former Minister of Commerce in the Bonomi Administeration prior to the advent of the "black shirts," and Prof. Giuseppe Rensi of Genoa University.

Professor Rensi, it was learned, was held in a jail at Genoa, where he will be kept for trial before a special military tribunal for the defence of the state—the highest tribunal of its sort, and often the most rigorous.

The 20 men were arrested charged with "criminal actions against the State."

They March Again With Us!

ONCE MORE they come our way,
And through the years how quickly we forget
Until at last we come upon their day,
To yield again one moment of regret.

To know old memories of tent and field
As haunting ghosts of vanished autumn pass,
Where they have found their peace beneath the shield
Of God's eternal coverlet of grass.

One at a time they come,
Old mates forgotten from the sombre hunt,
Where can hear far off the rolling drum,
Of cannon thunder on the battle front;

Old mates with shining eyes and welcome hand,
Who've come again from distant fields and streams,
Where they have lingered in an alien land
As we came home and left them to their dreams.

WEMP IN ARMS ON NEW TAXI LAW SET FOR TORONTO

Mayor Legally Advised Police Commission Exceeded Authority.

CABMEN TO ASK INJUNCTION.

Council May Limit Board's Power—Suggest Draper's Salary Be Halted.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 8. — The Police Commission "has absolutely no power" to compel installation of meters on taxicabs according to the legal opinion which we usually accept", declared Mayor Bert S. Wemp, in an interview concerning the commission's by-law ordering taxicab owners to instal meters and all drivers to have their fingerprints taken when applying for their 1931 licenses.

Will Bring Matter Up

The Mayor further declared he would bring the whole matter of taxicab regulations before the next regular meeting of the Police Commission on Nov 13. His Worship is Chairman of the Board.

Controller Claude Pearce, expressing amazement by the extent to which the commission seeks to use what it construes as its statutory powers, stated it was a matter of public urgency that the authority of the commissioners be promptly and effectively curtailed. To this end, he said, he will move at the next Board of Control meeting the city apply for legislation to make the approval of Council necessary to the enforcement of any police by-law

After discovering that only the Police Commission could discharge members of the force, Alderman Charles A. Ward announced that he was tired of the continued difficulty met by the Works Committee in its efforts to have its recommendations carried out by the police and that he would move to have City council suspend payment of Chief D. C. Draper's salary.

Taximen Seek Injunction

Taximen, up in arms over the new regulations, plan through their association to seek an injunction against the finger-printing regulations, while "drive-yourself" automobile operators have already announced their intention of applying for an injunction to stop application of the new regulations to them.

Settlers Are Moving To Cochrane District

NORTH BAY, nt., Nov. 8.—During the past 12 months some six hundred settlers have taken up land in the district which is under the Crown land agent of Cochrane. This area includes 16 townships along the C.N.R. from the Quebec boundary west to Fauquier. The greater number of these settlers are in an area within a radius of 18 miles of Cochrane.

This is said to be the largest number of settlers which has come to the district since it was thrown open for homesteading. Europeans have outnumbered Canadians but quite a number of native born have come from the west particularly Manitoba.

In a recent fire at Roubaix, France nearly 5,000 bales of wool were destroyed.

Lad of 6 at Play Shoots Girl Chum

CHICAGO, Nov. 8 (C.P.)—It was moving day yesterday for the Harold Geserick family. Harold Geserick Jr., 6, was having the time of his life rumaging through old toys and taking them to his chum, Betty Jane Pine, next door. Betty caught the spirit of moving day, too, and rustled up some old forgotten toys, including a magnet. But Harold was not to be outdone. He hurried home, found a shiny object put out by his grandmother preparatory to packing. Betty was waiting at the kitchen window as Harold held it up.

Then there was a flash and Betty fell over dead, pierced by a pistol bullet.

CANADIANS SEEK MARKET IN JAPAN

Delegation Entertained at Nagoya Outlines List of Products toExchange.

WEST WOULD SELL WHEAT.

NAGOYA, Japan, Nov. 8 (C.P.)—Members of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce Trade Mission to Japan held special conferences with Japanese business men here yesterday relating to the wheat and lumber business of Canada and with the object of removing difficulties in the way of increased Canadian exports.

Guests of Governor

The Canadian visitors were dinner guests of the Governor, Mayor, and President of the local Chamber of Commerce. Japanese speakers welcomed the delegates and emphasized that Nagoya received almost one-third of Canada's exports to Japan. John M. Imrie of Edmonton, chairman of the Canadian mission, briefly replied for the visitors.

Members of the Mission were entertained at a civic luncheon earlier in the day, during which H. G. Oldaker of Vancouver, spoke on behalf of the Canadians.

At the conference, Max Steinkopf, Winnipeg, delivered an address on "What has Western Canada to offer in trade to the Orient?"

"Japan and China," he continued, "require our wheat. The products they send us in return are such that we cannot produce., largely silk and silk byproducts; oranges, spices, tea and the like. Such imports compete with no Canadian industry, nor are they likely to. Our most optimistic citizen is not likely to try to coax the illusive silkworm north of '49'."

Lord Thomson's Will Is Being Probated

LONDON, Nov. 8 (C.P.). — Lord Thomson, the Air Minister who was killed in the crash of the dirigible R-101, recognized the possibility that he might never return from the voyage to India, which ended in the tragedy near Beauvais, France, on October 5.

In a will filed to-day he left all he owned to his brother, Col. Roger Gordon Thomson, "in the event of my death during the flight of the R-101 to India and return." The document, hastily scribbled on a single sheet of paper, was dated October 3, less than forty-eight hours before the dirigible crashed. The estate was estimated at about 1,727 pounds sterling, about $8,685.

OVALTINE PLANT IS BEING RUSHED TO COMPLETION

Peterborough Has Already Become Company's Shipping Base.

EMPLOY 35 TO 40.

Greatest Part of Equipment is Being Manufactured in Canada.

Ovaltine is being shipped from Peterborough to all parts of Canada. Although the A. Wander Company's new plant here is still undergoing its finishing touches and no Ovaltine is being manufactured, yet this city has already become the company's shipping base.

Shipments of Ovaltine out of Peterborough commenced at the first of the week, when C. J. Glaspel, general manager, came here bringing with him a small staff. Now all the company's Canadian business is being carried on with Peterborough as headquarters.

"Yes, we are here and glad to be here" was Mr. Glaspel's first remark yesterday to The Examiner in a short interview. The manager of Peterborough's newest industry spoke with a smile of satisfaction. He impresses one with his personality of happy optimism and energy. His words were punctuated with the clatter of the hammers meeting steel, with the zipp of saws and the slither of files. Workmen were busy in the office putting up its fixtures, building partitions and hanging doors. The same air of bustle and skilled activity pervades the whole plant, and will for a month more as the plant is speedily fitted with machinery for manufacturing.

Pleased With City

"We are pleased with Peterborough," continued Mr. Glaspel. "We were pleased with it when we first saw it, and selected it as the site for our plant, after having visited cities and towns from Kingston to London and from the Niagara Peninsula to Orillia. "We chose Peterborough because it seemed to have everything we wanted for our particular industry, and we haven't been disappointed.

The new Ovaltine plant rears itself four storeys in the air, a beauty of brick and masonry into which has gone the perfection of the builder's art. Its exterior suggests a library, school or other public building rather than a factory. Its builders aimed at making it the most beautiful manufacturing plant in Canada and they seem to have attained their goal.

The plant contains 50,000 square feet of floor space without counting the boiler room and garage. The clear, cold water so necessary in the manufacture of Ovaltine, is supplied by a well dug beneath the plant. This well in a 48-hour test gave 300 gallons a minute, which is ample for the plant's needs, said Mr. Glaspel. The well is electrically operated and the flow of water is automatically controlled.

BRITISH PREMIER DENIES RUMOR THAT SPLIT IN CABINET IS LOOMING

States There is No Disagreement Over Proposed Unemployment Remedies.

SNOWDEN TO QUIT, HINTED.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(C.P. Cable.) — Premier Ramsay MacDonald to-day officially denied a report the Labor Cabinet was split over certain features of the proposed unemployment remedies. In a statment from No. 10 Downing street, he referred to published reports of the alleged disagreement and declared the idea the Cabinet was divided on this issue was quite untrue.

The report had mentioned Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, as declining to agree to development of a loan for financing unempoyment relief and national construction. This is a main feature of the recent Liberal memorandum on unemployment, submitted to the Government and the House of Commons. The reports suggested the possibility of Mr. Snowden resigning in which case Rt. Hon. Wedgwood Benn, Secretary for India, and Rt. Hon. A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, would go with him, according to the report.

Mr. Alexander was queried to-day about the report and he declared: 'I know nothing about this alleged crisis and I feel certain my colleagues know nothing about it."

6 North Bay Burglars Sentenced To Prison

NORTH BAY, Ont., Nov. 8.— An epidemic of thieving which has worried the residents of Calvert township since September was checked with the arrest and conviction of six men by Provincial Constable McCord. Magistrate Tucker imposed sentences from thirty days to six months with hard labor. Money, gasoline and tools were listed among the stolen goods. Asked by the bench if he had anything to say, one of the prisoners stated he was "not working and could not face the existing situation even if he got 20 years for it." Another attributed his part in the thievng to desperate circumstances.

NORTH BAY HAS $200,000 RELIEF SCHEME.

NORTH BAY, Ont., November 8 (C.P.). — Money from the Government's Unemployment Relief Fund to assist in the carrying out of a program of public works which will entail an expenditure of $200,000 will be sought by this city.

A special meeting of the City Council approved the program drawn up by a committee of Council and the Government will be asked to endorse expenditures for the proposed work.

Hamilton Militia Ready For Attack Upon Armouries

Quantity of Arms and Ammunition Taken From Storage Shed in Hamilton and is Feared to be Work of "Reds"—Appeal is Made to Provincial Police.

STOLEN WEAPONS HAVE AN INTERESTING HISTORY BOUGHT AS SUPPLIES FOR HOME GUARD DURING WAR

Parades of All Unemployed Are Banned By Chief of Police—Communists Have Been Giving Considerable Trouble in Certain Sections of Ontario.

HAMILTON, Ont., November 8 (Special and C.P.). — Theft of a quantity of arms and ammunition from the storage sheds of the Frid Construction Company, Main Street West, was made known by Chief Coulter this morning. It is feared that the thefts may have been the work of the Red elements, and an appeal has been sent from Hamilton to the Provincial Police and Royal Canadian Mounted Police Departments all over the Province.

The missing arms include ten Snyder rifles of pre-war style, 500 rounds of ammunition suitable for the rifles, 30 to 40 bayonets to fit the rifles, double-edged, and about two feet in length. The ammunition is old, and it is thought might prove defective, and an attempt is feared on the part of the thieves to steal a fresh supply.

The stolen weapons have an interesting history. During the earlier days of the Great War, Sir John Gibson became interested in the idea of a Home Guard. A supply of weapons was secured to arm this proposed unit of the Militia. Later these were stored in the basement of the old Bank of Commerce building. When this building was wrecked, the war material was removed to the sheds of the Frid Company. The local Militia have been prepared all week for an attack upon the Armourles on the part of the disgruntled element. Lieut.-Colonel A. J. Taylor, V.D., officer commanding the Garrison, ordered the immediate return of all issues of rifles from individual persons and from outlying points. As to parades by the unemployed, Chief Coulter issued an emphatic order to-day.

Allowed to Meet.

"They can meet all they like, but as soon as they start to parade they will be stopped by the police," he said. "We gave them one chance to parade, and immediately they broke faith and started to march within the city's congested areas. As far as this theft is concerned, it is the first one of such a nature that has ever been reported to us, and in view of the present Red situation here, we want to be prepared."

The recent events in Hamilton follow closely in the wake of a series of Communist disturbances in various parts of the Province. On August 1 there was a near riot in Niagara Falls, when "Red" Hill, famous riverman, led a crowd of citizens which forcibly dispersed the Communist demonstration.

Arrests In Provinces.

On the same day firemen assisted police in Sudbury in disbanding a similar group of Communists, and seven were arrested in Sault Ste. Marie, and two in Toronto.

There was more or less of a lull in the trouble until October 21 in Port Arthur, when a Communist mob attacked a policeman and wrested from him a Communist prisoner he had taken, when a crowd of 200 under Communist leadership obstructed traffic and made a general disturbance.

November 3 saw trouble with the Reds in Sudbury, when a threatened demonstration did not materialise. The police force was augmented in preparation for any disturbance which might arise. On November 5 the police force, augmented by the special constables, were forced to use strong arm methods to disperse a crowd of 300 agitators marching on the City Hall.

Conference Demonstrates Danger of Attempting to Write Constitution.

(By George Hambleton, C. P. Staff Correspondent)

"I am satisfied", said Mr. Thomas speaking at a luncheon at Weymouth today, "that when the results—which are not many days distant — are known those who are frankly anxious over the prosperity and development of the British Commonwealth of Nations will not have reason to regret the results of the 1930 conference."

Mr. Thomas added the conference had demonstrated the danger of attempting to write a constitution.

Efforts are now being made to terminate the conference at the end of the coming week. The majority of the Canadian delegation propose to sail for Canada on the steamship Duchess of Bedford sailing next Friday but Premier R. B. Bennett will remain here longer.

BANK ROBBERS REMANDED.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 8.—(C.P.)—James Kirkland and Jack Darwent, arrested in Barrie Thursday night on a charge of robbing the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Unionville that afternoon and said by police to have confessed to two other bank holdups, were remanded until Nov. 14, when they appeared in county police court this morning.

Children's Bonfire Threatened Woodland

(Examiner Correspondence)

QUEENSBORO, November 8. — The neighbors living to the north of Rose's school house, which is about two miles out of Madoc, received a scare on Thursday, as upon going out after dinner they saw smoke arising from the nearby woods. A number of men rushed over to discover that several of the school children had gone into the woods at the noon hour and had built a fire, which was rapidly spreading. The blaze was soon extinguished.

VICTIMS IN DETROIT CAR HURLED AGAINST TRAILER; BOTH SUCCUMB IN AMBULANCE ON WAY TO HOSPITAL

BRANTFORD, Ont., November 8 (C.P.). — Two persons were killed early to-day when automobiles in which they were riding crashed into Ava Road Bridge on the western outskirts of this city. The dead are: Mrs. Jennie Ayling Harvey, Detroit, and Ward Richardson, Detroit. The driver, Alfred Ayling, brother of the young woman who was killed, escaped injuries, and was placed under arrest. He explained to the police that the accident occurred when he suddenly applied the brakes in an attempt to avoid hitting a truck and trailer just ahead of him. The car somersaulted and the passengers were thrown against the trailer.

The injured were dead before they reached the hospital in an ambulance.

Lass, a Toronto boy, is wanted in connection with the September 19 hold-up, as an alleged accomplice of Gillier.

NINE U.S. BILLS TO BE RUSHED

Administration Lays Plans to Avoid Special Session of New Congress.

SHORT TERM.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8 (C.P.)—The administration plans to concentrate on enactment of emergency legislation and important pending measures at the short term of the present Congress beginning December 1

Turning attention from the election, the Government heads have determined to make every effort to secure passage of the nine great annual appropriation bills by next March 4, to avoid a special session of the newly elected Congress.

Should any of these supply bills fail of passage President Hoover would be forced to convene the new Congress, the control of which remains in doubt or the Government agencies not provided for would have to suspend business at the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 1931.

The short session is for three months, but the Legislative days probably will not exceed seventy, in view of the usual two weeks of Christmas holidays and the Sundays. Night sessions of both Houses are almost inevitable to complete the business.

MIGRATION SAVE GREAT BRITAIN

Former Newfoundland Premier States Move Means Economic Salvation.

BENNETT TOO FRANK.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 8 (C.P.) — Speaking before members of a War Veterans' lodge here last night, Sir Alfred Morine, K.C., former Premier of Newfoundland, and Imperial Conference delegate in 1926, declared Great Britain's economic salvation lies in the wholesale migration of Britons from the British Isles to one of the Dominions.

Referring to the Imperial Conference now in session, Sir Alfred said it might have been diplomatically better if Premier R. B. Bennett's "brutal frankness" there had not been so "brutal." Only a minority government in Great Britain had turned down Canada's tariff preference, he proceeded; wait for the considered judgment of the British people; Great Britain is on the eve of a great economic revolution; let Canadians cooperate to "reconquer" the Mother Country into co-operative trade with the Empire.

RUSSIA SEEKING TRADE IN CANADA

Orders Totalling $10,000,000 Placed if Credit Arrangements Made.

WANT SUGAR, MACHINERY.

TORONTO, Ont., November 8 (C.P.). — Russian trade delegations to the United States in the last ten months have included Canada on their itinerary, and have been so impressed with the possibilities of a mutual trade exchange between the Dominion and the Soviet that the latter republic is prepared to place orders for at least $10,000,000 worth of goods in Canada during 193.

A representative of one of these delegations which has been touring Canada and the United States investigating various trade possibilities declared the Soviet was prepared to expend a much greater sum in Canada if suitable credit arrangements can be made. Articles manufactured in the Dominion and chiefly desired by Russia include binder twine, refined sugar, electrical equipment, and agricultural machinery.

RECKLESS FLYING CAUSE OF CRASH

Probe Finds Toronto Pilot Engaged in Acrobatic Contrary to Regulations.

WEATHER CLOUDY.

OTTAWA, November 8. — The airplane accident which cost the lives of three persons, Harry Tegart, and the Misses Jean and Catharine McColl, at Toronto, last Sunday, was "directly attributable to the dangerous and reckless flying of the pilot," according to the official report of the investigators who inquired into it. This report was issued by the Civil Air Branch of the Department of National Defence.

It says in part: "The result of the investigation by the Department of National Defense into the above-noted accident shows that a Canadian-licensed pilot, Harry Tegart, was flying an American-licensed aircraft, a Pitcairn NC -5129, without the permission of the owner of the aircraft, but with the consent of the American pilot in charge of it. Mr. Tegart was carrying passengers for a pleasure flight, and was engaged in aerobatics, contrary to air regulations. The weather was dull with clouds at approximately 1000 feet, and general rain. Of necessity flying had to be carried out at a low altitude, and aerobatics attempted at such a low altitude are considered both reckless and dangerous.

FREEZE-UP BARS RED LAKE REGION

Former Indian Chief and Son Save Two Fishermen From Drowning.

BOATS FROZEN IN.

HUDSON, Ont., Nov. 8 (C.P.) — Navigation to Red Lake is closed for the season as most of narrow spots en route are skimmed over with ice; the freeze-up came so suddenly that the northern crews were unable to get out to steel and will be forced to wait until the ice gets solid. Several boats have also been frosen in in various ports of Lac Seul. Had it not been for the quick action of an ex-Indian Chief John Ackewance and his son, two of the Dewey boys, well known fishermen of this town, would have in all proability found a watery grave, while on their way out to their fishing grounds to lift their nets. They ran into ice in Pelican Narrow, about eight miles out. They attempted to force their way through it and seemed to be making satisfactory progress for some time, till all at once the ice came right through the side of the boat. The water immediately poured in, flooding the engine and stopping it and the boat started to settled.

Revenue In Dominion Down By $49,162,955

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 8 (C.P.). — Ordinary revenue of the Dominion of Canada for seven months of the present fiscal year is $49,162,955 less than for the corresponding period a year ago, according to figures issued through the Department of Finance. The monthly statement handed out by the Department, covering revenues, expenditure, debt., etc., up to the end of last month, shows total ordinary revenue for the seven-month period of $236,618,402. For the seven months ended October 31, 1929, total revenue was $286,781,357. The statement represents only receipts and expenditures which have passed through the books of the finance department up to the end of the month.

ARMISTICE DAY TO BE OBSERVED ON SUNDAY NEXT

Special Services Will Be Conducted in Front of War Memorials.

AND IN CHURCHES.

Civic Speakers Will Address Grand Opera House Meeting at 3 P.M.

The twelfth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice will be fittingly commemorated in this city on Sunday next.

Members of the Canadian Legion and local militia units are holding special parades, while the services in all city churches will be specially suited to this solemn act of remembrance.

Legionaires and returned men and all ex-service men will fall in at 2.30 p.m. facing the Cenotaph. The Band of the Peterborough Rangers' Regiment will be drawn up on the lawn outside the Legion Hall, with the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Legion immediately in front of the Cenotaph. Militia units, Boy Scouts and Girl Guides will form up on each side of the Cenotaph facing east and west.

Following the introductory remarks by Rev. Captain Paul Costello, the band will play "Meditation," while flowers and wreaths may be placed at the base of the Cenotaph.

3 o'Clock Service

After the sounding of the Last Post and Reveille by buglers of the Rangers' Regiment, during which time the flag will be lowered and raised, the parade will re-form and march to the War Memorial on Confederation Square, where wreaths will also be deposited. Re-forming again the parade will march south on George street to the Grand Opera House, where the Armistice Service will be held at 3 p.m. The meeting will be addressed by many prominent citizens, included among whom it is expected that Colonel J. M. Miller, V.D., will be present.

The parade will be headed by the Legonaire standard bearer, followed by Peterborough Rangers' Band under Lieut. Peryer; His Worship Mayor Denne and civic officials; officers of the Canadian Legion; military units; Girl Guides; Boy Scouts; Legionaires and all returned and ex-service men, including the usual detachment from the Peterborough Fire Department.

The Salvation Army Band will meet the parade at the Grand Opera House, and will take part in the service.

Armistice Concert

It is planned to hold the annual Armistice Concert in the Grand Opera House, on Sunday evening, at 8.30 p.m., under the auspices of the Peterborough Rangers.

Rhodes Would Boost Canadian Fish Sales

OTTAWA, Ont., November 8 (C.P.). — Canadians can be induced to eat more fish, and the Minister of Fisheries, Hon. E. N. Rhodes proposes to find out how it can be done. With the immediate object of putting the fishing industry on its feet, Mr. Rhodes has arranged for an exhaustive survey of methods of marketing the catches from the Atlantic, Pacific, and Great Lakes fisheries at every stage from the fisherman to the consumer. The firm of Cockfield, Brown & Company, Limited, of Montreal, has been engaged to make the survey and report to the Government.

$100 Offered in Prizes For Competition in Store Window Dressing.

AMONG LOCAL MERCHANTS.

Produce from Ontario farms will be holding the spotlight in the show windows of Peterborough stores during the next two weeks. The window displays will include fruits and vegetables, dairy products, eggs, honey, meat and poultry—all products of Ontario farms and all will be tastefully decorated.

The window displays will be in connection with a contest for stores recently inaugurated by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, which is aimed to extend the demand in towns and cities for Ontario grown produce. By means of widespread publicity through advertising, radio boardcast, public addresses, exhibits at fairs and exhibitions, it is hoped to build a rapidly growing appreciation of the value of our Ontario grown products.

$100 in Prizes

The city retail merchants' window dressing competition is one of the main features of this program. Fifty dollars has been awarded by the Department for prizes among local stores and this has been increased to one hundred dollars by local subscription. The prizes will be as follows: first prize, $25; second, $20; third, $15; fourth, $10; fifth, $5; and five other prizes each of $5.

Mayor Denne has entered wholeheartedly into the competition and a committee has been appointed to act as judges in co-operation with J. B. Nelson, local agricultural representative. Entries close on the night of November 19, and the windows are to be ready for judging not later than November 22.

All produce used in the window display must be of Ontario origin. The judges will expect the window display to reflect the nature of goods merchandised by the store. Displays of fruit and vegetables may include canned good, but these should not be made a major feature.

The main scoring points in the contest will be the attractiveness and drawing power of the window display, but other consideration will enter the judges' decision.

WEDDING BELLS

GARDNER—GLEAN

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 8.—(Examiner Correspondence).—A quiet wedding took place at the United Church parsonage, Havelock, on Wednesday when the marriage was performed by Rev. W. R. Archer of Marion Irene, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Glenn, of West Seymour, to George Reginald youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner of Dummer.

Miss Beatrice Glenn, sister of the bride and Miss Reta Gardner, sister of the groom, witnessed the ceremony.

The bride was gowned in rose beige flat crepe, with blue coat and hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a white gold wrist watch.

The happy couple left immediately after the ceremony for a honeymoon to Peterborough, Toronto and Niagara Falls and on their return they will reside on the groom's farm in Dummer.

HOSE TRAVELLER IS FOUND IN ROOM IN GREAT MISERY

Previously Had Purchased Five Grains of Strychnine.

WANTED TO KILL CAT.

Consciousness Regained But Not Until After Long Night's Struggle.

(Examiner Correspondence)

STIRLING, Nov. 7.—An unknown man, who said his name was Patrick Haggerty and claimed to be a hose traveller from Massachusettes, early last evening attempted to committ suicide in his hotel room here by drinking strychnine.

He purchased five grains of the poison from Jack Butler, saying casually that he wanted to kill a cat. Later, he crossed to Robert Fletcher's hotel hired a room. Having purchased a soft drink he took it to his room.

Moans were heard from his room but when several persons attempted to reach him they found his door locked. The moans developed into agonizing screams as the man writhed in pain. Ira Whitton and Clarence Rollins with the aid of a ladder entered his room through a window. He was found to be in terrible agony and unable to speak.

Dr. Alger and the parish priest were called and remedies were applied which brought partial relief. Conley Ackers and Ire Whitton remained by the man's side all night.

When conscious was regained early in the morning, the man gave no reason for his action, but repeated again and again, "Why did I do it?"

He is about 30, well dressed and fine appearing. He speaks with an Irish brogue, and came from Bonar Law to Stirling.

SNOWDEN BACKS JEWISH EFFORTS

Urges Anglo Saxon Support in Letter to Toronto Hebrew Paper.

RENDERED MANY SERVICES.

TORONTO, November 8. (C.P.) — That it is the duty of Anglo-Saxon citizens of the Empire to respect the aspiration of the Jews and to support all their reasonable efforts for the maintenance of their racial and national rights, is the statement made by Right Hon. Philip Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a special message to the Jewish Standard of Toronto, just published.

The Message.

The message from the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, is significant in view of statements made by a fellow Cabinet Minister, Lord Passfield. Mr. Snowden's massage reads as follows:

"May I, through the Jewish Standard, send a message of greeting and good will to the Jews of Canada? Though loyal citizens of the British Empire, they rightly maintain pride in their own race, with its long ages of glorious and treasured traditions. The British Empire owes much to the great services in many spheres which men and women of the Jewish race have rendered to it. Jews have held with great distinction the highest political offices in the Empire, and on the ground of gratitude alone it is the duty and pleasure of the Anglo-Saxon citizens of the Empire to respect the aspirations of the Jews and to support all their reasonable efforts for the maintenance of their racial and national rights.—Philip Snowden."

DELICIOUS — YOU WILL TASTE THE DIFFERENCE — NUTRITIOUS

I could give reasons enough to fill the paper for the pleasure I find in my frequent visits to the Workshop of John Plane -- but since the paper is not mine to fill, and you might not be interested anyway, I must restrain myself and give but a few.

The first reason is that, in the Workshop, Jesus is the central figure. He is not there in a picture, but in a living, invisible Presence. Every bit of work done in the Workshop is done in the consciousness that the Master Workman is looking on, and can't be fooled by any of the so-called "tricks of the trade." None knows better than He how impossible it is for an imperfect being to produce a perfect piece of work! But, while the work we do may be far from faultless, He wants us to know that we ourselves may have the distinction of being blameless! The workman who does his very best—however imperfect his best may be—will always have praise from the Carpenter of Nazareth.

NO FRICTION.

The second reason why I love the Workshop of John Plane is because of the calm that pervades the place. But how could it be otherwise where Jesus is the central figure?

Nothing will bring us more surely to a premature grave than friction. Worry will wear out the toughest life.

The third reason why I love the Workshop of John Plane is because there I can get away from all Pharisees. The Pharisee, modern as well as ancient, has no heart and so never could have any place in his life for a little bit of sentiment. His supposedly orthodox speech is spoiled by his anti-Christian spirit!

When a man gets too good to give a compliment to a neighbor, or too pious to jolly and joke his children, he is entirely too good to associate with me, that is, if that kind of thing makes goodness.

John Plane is as far removed from that class of self-convicted religious humbug as heaven is from hell. He understands me even when he is not able to agree with me; and he draws the curtain of an almost divine silence over the things that he finds himself out of harmony with in me—except when he is alone with God.

PAY ME NOW.

Another reason why I love the Workshop of John Plane is because he pays his debts promptly and pleasantly! And it's not every church member who will do that. He tries to live up to the spirit as well as the letter of the injunction, "Owe no man anything but to love him." And I know he loves me because he has paid me some compliments while I am still alive and able to receive them.

I don't want my supposed friends and fellow-laborers in the church to wait until my funeral before they say how much they admire me. Nor do I want them to wait until they have frozen me so much, that to save my ministerial life and self-respect, I have been compelled to seek another field of labor among a more warm-hearted people.

It is too late then to go round whining out compliments and taking up subscriptions for a monument to my memory.

Give me the company of men who are big enough to pay their just debts while the one to whom they are debtors is alive and able to receive.

I have no right to lay down any prohibition law to the effect that no nice things are to be said about me when I have passed beyond the shadows.—but, even though I be unable to enforce it, I would like to draw the line against any man who has rigidly withheld his compliments during my lifetime, and at the same time has never lost an opportunity to play the part of a destructive critic when I wasn't around to defend myself. That man's compliments would make me sick, even in death!

LET ME SMELL THEM NOW.

I confess to a lack of enthusiasm when it comes to working in a garden. And I think my lack of love for such work is mostly due to the fact that when I was a lad I got all the weeding to do. Perhaps that is another reason why I have so little pleasure in the presence of a certain type of human "weed" now.

But I am very fond of flowers! Even some artificial flowers arouse my admiration! And I just want my friends and neighbors to know that flowers will never smell so sweet to me as during my struggles. If you are going to give them at all, please hand them out in the day of my disappointments. No matter how you may deck my grave their fragrance will mean nothing to me then if you have refrained from giving them when I was around to enjoy them.

OTHER REASONS.

There are many other reasons why I love the Workshop of John Plane, but I must refrain from travelling further along that line, and give you some Thanksgiving chips and shavings, picked out of the abundant supply which is always on hand where Jesus is the central figure.

A CHURCH CALENDAR.

It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto Thy name, O most High.

I will offer unto Thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving and utter the memody of Thy great goodness.

For this universe, our great home, and all that it proclaims of Thee—for the heavens that declare Thy glory, and for the mysterious beauty of dawning day and starlit night—for the quickening sunshine and the reviving rain, the bracing winds and the challenging strength of the everlasting hills—praise be to Thee, O God!

For the life that we share with all humanity—for the heritage of wisdom and of faith wrought out through the ages and now entrusted to us—for our dependence upon others and for their need of us—thanks be to Thee, O Lord!

For all pure joys that have no taint of greed and cruelty—for the deep revealing of art and the ecstacy of music—for the ministries of love in family life, and for new friendships—praise be to Thee, O God!

For hours of silence and insight when we heard Thy voice—for hours of joy that found its source in Thee—for all the high moments of cleared vision and fresh hope and deepened purpose—thanks be to Thee, O Lord!

For this age and its wide opportunity to serve—for freedom to give mind, and heart, and strength where need is greatest—for open doors to truth, and for the right to enter—praise be to Thee, O God!

For the beauty and the power of noble lives—for the insight of seers, the courage of prophets, and the patience of scholars—for all creative work toward the building of the city of God—thanks be to Thee, O Lord!

For the greatest gift of Thyself in Jesus Christ, Thy Son, the Master whom we serve, and the Teacher whom we follow, the Friend whom we love, and the Saviour through whom we find life—praise be to Thee, O God!

God of all grace and love, we have praised Thee with our lips; grant that we may also praise Thee in consecrated and faithful lives. And may the words of our mouth and the meditations of our heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, our Strength and our Redeemer. Amen.

A WINNER

I have no inheritance to leave behind me. Yet am I not sad. Though poor here, I shall be abundantly rich in Heaven. And even now I am a King's son, and heir of God, and joint heir with Jesus Christ.

The Hour Of Prayer

O Thou who sweat, as it were, great drops of blood, but who brought more than agony out of Gethsemane, teach us how to make our sufferings serve towards perfection. We easily carry only the hurt from the painful, only the sense of gloom from the night; a soured heart or a limping gait alone hint that we have been to Penuel, when our faces might shine with joy of new truth and our very crutch might point the ways of God. It costs to have a vision, but it costs too much to remember only the price. Teach us then to find in every wound a blessing and in every scar a remembrancer of grace. Amen.

LATER YEARS.

A friend of mine says that November is like the later years of a man's life—sometimes grey, sere and cloudy, and sometimes irradiated with so gracious an afterglow as to be memorably happy. Its quality, of course, depends in large measure upon that of earlier days as their mellow fruits come to our table and the friends won in them gather about our fireside. A month of memories and ripened experience, it is fitting that the feast of All Saints should usher it in, Armistice Day meet us further on, and crowning it all as with a benediction, Thanksgiving!

"O God, whose kindness manifold
Shall never cease,
Grant to our passion-troubled lives
Thy gift of peace;
Within our stormy hearts let greed
And pride be still;
Give unto us the radiant calm
Of those who do Thy will!

Our nation bless with stainless peace;
May class and clan
Choose, above selfish gains, the good
Of every man;
May righteousness and swerveless truth
Be held in awe:
Give to our land the quietness
Of those who heed Thy law!

Send peace to every tribe and race;
May justice pure,
Stronger than fleets, avail to make
All coasts secure;
Let nevermore the sunlit air
With strife be stirred;
Give to all earth the concord high
Of those who keep Thy word!"

WE WOULD SEE JESUS.

Among the many things I should return thanks for I must give a prominent place to the Workshop of John Plane. There I have spent many a hallowed, happy hour! John, you will never cease to be a prince among men so long as the central figure in your Workshop is Jesus, the Carpenter of Nazareth. To you, He is the One who lives in every problem of your life; and your faith is the connecting link that binds the power of Heaven to the poverty of earth.

The little child was right, when his mother had been marvelously restored from sickness, and the preacher said that Jesus did it! The first day that his mother came to the table, the little chap said, "Mother, let us always keep a chair at the table for Jesus to sit in when we ask the blessing."

It is too bad when everybody is welcome but Jesus!

Yours in happy fellowship,
Allan Fairbairn.

Sparks From Many Anvils

IF you want knowledge, you must toil for it; if food, you must toil for it; and if pleasure, you must toil for it. Toil is the law. Pleasure comes through toil, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When one gets to love work, his life is a happy one. —Ruskin.

HANDFULS OF PURPOSE

"And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God."—Rev. 21:2.

• • •

TO the man of vision looks forward rather to the descent of the holy city than to the ascent of the holy citizen, to an advent, not an exodus. The old earth and the old heaven, with vast immeasurable spaces between, are passed away, and are replaced by a new heaven and a new earth, one and indistinguishable, the same walls, the same gates, the same laws, the same King. Earth is become heaven, and heaven is become earth. Beauty and wealth are not wanting, but they are not private. Gold is not hammered into crowns, but into paving-blocks, having found its true place, not as the master-goal of all desire, but as the common servant of all the pure. The temple has departed with the old order; the whole city is become a place of worship. It is a transparent city where no man is ashamed; all who enter there have been washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb.

REMEMBER THIS

I ought not to pronounce judgment on a fellow creature until I know all that enters into his life; until I can measure all the forces of temptation and resistance; until I can give full weight to all the facts in the case. In other words, I am never in a position to judge another.

A cold nibachi has no glow, nor a hungry man wit.

PREFERING THE NIGHT

THERE is a reason why students prefer the night to the day for their labors. Through the day their thoughts are diverted into a thousand streams, but at night they settle into pools, which, deep and undisturbed, reflect the stars. But night labor, in time, will destroy the student; for it is marrow from his own bones with which he fills his lamp.

Two Things

IF you would have a happy family life, remember two things: in matters of principle, stand like a rock; in matters of taste, swim with the current.

"With a Full Heart, Silently"

TO trust Christ is not merely to believe with the intellect the truth about Him, but to commit our hearts to His keeping.

THE MYSTIC

HE believes intensely that more and more light is ever breaking from the Word. He believes that it should never be opened save by hands that tremble with reverence. He receives it into his arms as the aged Simeon received the Holy Child. He goes on to study it wistfully, hopefully, till death, or the Lamb of God looses the seals of the Book.

Every life that has God in it has the index to character and the key to the highest attainment.

Selected

"Another mighty angel cried with a loud voice as when a lion roareth."—Revelation 10:3.

• • •

BEHOLD, we had thought that only demons came as roaring lions, that angels were sent in the power of God to close the lion's mouths and not themselves to make the air vibrant with the clamor of the den. Surely the world is full enough of dreadful sights and sounds—why then should the messengers of the Lord assume the form of the things we fear? Why, unless to banish our fears? John reveals a table prepared in the presence of our enemies, he leads us from the angel to the seven thunders, that we in the frightsome days might trace back from the thunders to the angel and to the angel's God.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

THE wise man, personifying right, said: "All that hate me, love death." All that hate right, love death. This is a simple proposition without curves or conditions. It seems scarcely credible that any one should be so wanton a fool as deliberately to court death. Yet that is what he does who hates the right. He is suitor for the hand of death. He is courting a clammy corpse. He has for his paramour, the stark, pulseless, loathsome, putrefying inmate of the dead house. There is only one way for any man to live and that is the right way. The man who has his doubts here, would best get his doubts resolved as quickly as possible. He should be firmly determined to do right at every cost. He should make up his mind that death is preferable to dishonor.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

In spite of the fact that business has not been so generally prosperous that industry has suffered a depression and that more than the usual amount of unemployment exists, Canadians have no reason to be other than truly thankful on the occasion of the day set apart in this country for national thanksgiving.

When conditions here are compared with those existing in other parts of the globe, when the unrest and distress and suffering of other peoples are viewed in contrast with the situation in Canada, the people of the Dominion have every right to feel grateful to Providence for the mercies vouch-safed them.

From a material viewpoint, there is no occasion for Canadians to view with alarm.

Large works opening up all over the country should materially improve the employment conditions, and the money thus placed in circulation will stimulate business, create an increased demand for Canadian products and help speed up the wheels of Canadian industry.

The temporary setback is being overcome, already there are indications that the corner has been turned, and that there will be a steady improvement, moving slowly at first, but quickly gaining momentum.

THAT FINGERPRINT MEASURE.

Mayor Wemp of Toronto, who by reason of his position is a member of the Board of Police Commissioners in that city, has refused to sign a by-law passed by the commissioners to regulate the taxi-cab business in Toronto, and there is little doubt that public opinion would support his attitude in the matter.

There is much that is objectionable in the new regulations, but one clause making it compulsory for all taxi-cab drivers in applying for their 1931 licenses to file their fingerprints with the police is worse than objectionable.

"Fingerprinting" is a process reserved for criminals, and to ask citizens whose record is free of crime to submit to such an operation is an insult.

It may be that among applicants for the right to drive taxi-cabs in Toronto there are some who are undesirable who have forfeited the right to drive for hire because of misconduct.

But that does not justify casting a slur upon the whole industry.

It is the duty of the authorities to weed out the undesirables, and surely they do not require anything so drastic as compulsory "fingerprinting" to enable them to carry out that duty.

Mayor Wemp is right in refusing to sign his name to an arbitrary measure of this nature which puts chauffeurs on the same level as convicted criminals.

SAFETY FIRST.

The consistency with which Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Highways preaches the doctrine of safe driving on every possible occasion is to be commended.

Mr. Henry officiated at the formal opening of the Wooler-Trenton highway on Thursday night, and as usual he took advantage of the opportunity to emphasize some elementary principles of highway safety that, it is hoped, will be remembered not only by those who listened to the Minister's address but by motorists generally who may have read the published reports of what he said.

Motoring has become such a common-place thing that it is surprising to find that it is necessary to keep on hammering home advice as to the technique of safe driving and to constantly emphasize the folly of certain practices out of which it might reasonably be expected that sensible people would have long since educated themselves.

What Mr. Henry constantly preaches might well be described as the A.B.C.'s of motoring, the folly of attempting to take curves at high speed, the danger in leaving the line of traffic without being absolutely sure that the road ahead is clear, the foolishness of passing another car on a hill, and other similar errors of judgment that every motorist by this time should know enough to avoid.

And yet because these simple rules are violated and accidents are constantly being occasioned thereby, it is still necessary for the Minister of Highways to sound his note of warning whenever he has an opportunity to address the public.

THE WHEAT QUOTA PROPOSAL.

"Without the quota Canada would have the chance of open competition. With it Canada is cut off from the quotas (shares) of other parts of the Empire by the announcement of this policy."

So writes J. H. Burnham in an article on the proposed wheat quota plan that is so far wide of the real significance of the proposal as to suggest that Mr. Burnham must have read the dispatches from London on the run before setting down to write his communication.

The quota plan may or may not mean a great deal so far as the sale of Canadian wheat in Great Britain is concerned, but at least it does not deprive Canada of an opportunity to compete for the British market.

In the first place, it does not entail a separate quota for each Dominion as Mr. Burnham apparently assumes; the committee has expressly declared against such a policy as administratively impracticable.

All that is proposed is that a fixed proportion of the wheat requirements of the British market shall be assured the Empire.

The wheat-growing Dominions will have the chance to compete for their share of that fixed proportion, and at the same time a chance to compete with the world for the balance of the British market.

The advantage to Canada in the proposed scheme is obvious.

Under present conditions she has to compete against every other grain-growing country for the British market.

Under the wheat quota plan she would face world competition only in so far as a portion of the British requirements is concerned; for the rest of that market Canadians would merely have to compete against other wheat growing parts of the Empire.

UNEMPLOYMENT IS STILL SERIOUS.

H. C. Hudson, general superintendent of Ontario of the Employment Service in Canada, in an interview with the Canadian Press at Toronto, declares that the present unemployment crisis, contrary to the prevailing general opinion, is not so acute as was that of the last serious depression in 1921, and the unemployed man or woman faces the approaching winter with a much less depressing outlook than did those similarly placed in November nine years ago. It is to be earnestly hoped that this rather gratifying statement will not slow up the efforts that are now being made to provide work for the unemployed. Merely glancing at the headlines, which tell them that present conditions are not as bad as they were in 1921, some people might be disposed to question the wisdom and the need of the intensive campaign which has been launched to reduce the country's unemployment. It doesn't take very much to discourage some people from engaging in a worthy cause when it entails some personal sacrifice.

But the fact of the matter is the situation, while it may not be as bad as it was in 1921, is still very serious. This is admitted by Mr. Hudson, who, in concluding his interview, said: "May I remind you that the crisis is not yet passed, and request your continued co-operation." The time has not yet come for those participating in the great employment movement to rest on their oars. There is a long, hard pull before the quiet waters of national prosperity are again reached. Mr. Hudson asks for co-operation and wisely so. It is only by all the people working together, each doing what he or she can, that want and suffering will be largely curtailed this winter. If every person in a position to do so provided work or bought generously from the business places, conditions would soon begin to improve.

A man has not to be a large employer of labor or a millionaire spendthrift in order to war effectively on unemployment. Those who supply work, even on a small and intermittent scale, or those who buy in proportion to their means, not refusing to patronize the merchant because times are bad and money is tight, will in the aggregate provide a great total of work. The odd job will bring food or a little fuel to the man out of work, while the money spent in the stores will find its way back into the channels of trade, directly and indirectly benefitting many people. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE FUTURE OF THE TIMBER INDUSTRY.

The pulp and paper industry in Eastern Canada must now use each year not less than 77,400 square miles of forest land, producing at least six cords of wood per acre, to maintain present production, and it is declared that within the next year 7,000 additional square miles will be required, bringing the total of 86,400 square miles worked each year to produce the pulp and paper requirements of Canada and the United States.

The figures are authoritative and given by Ellwood Wilson, the president of the Canadian Forestry Association. They must lead to calm, deliberate thought concerning the future of the pulp and paper industry in this country, based as it is upon an adequate supply of the raw material, suitable timber.

For how many more years will the forests of Eastern Canada, annually harvested in this manner and also subjected to attack from fire and pest, be able to withstand the onslaught being made upon them with comparatively little attempt being made to plant for the future? How soon will that time arrive when limits will be exhausted and the means of conducting this great industry, in which millions of dollars are invested and in which thousands of Canadians are given employment, will have come to an end?

It must be admitted that the outlook for the Canadian forests, and thus for the Canadian pulp and paper industry, is not particularly encouraging. The number of paper mills, far from decreasing, becomes greater from year to year. Even in such a period of depression as the world is now experiencing, new mills are being placed in commission. The capacity of the newsprint industry in Canada is constantly being increased and that means a larger and larger acreage of woodlands being required annually to meet their requirements. We have already seen, upon the authority of Mr. Ellwood Wilson, that the industry now uses 77,400 square miles each year and will soon need an additional 7,000 square miles. The industry calls each year for more and more supplies. For how long will they be forthcoming?

In addition, in spite of our best efforts, hundreds of square miles of timberland are burned each year because of the forest fires, often preventable, that gain rapid headway, especially in dry seasons. Furthermore, also in spite of our best efforts, disease successfully attacks forests and causes a tremendous loss annually. And wasteful, unscientific woods operations still being conducted add perceptibly to the annual losses.

Meantime the steps which are being taken by the industry to assure a permanent supply of wood are comparatively feeble. It is true that in certain instances pulp and paper companies have arrived at a realization of what is happening and have undertaken belated efforts to grow wood for the future through reforestation and the elimination of that wastefulness that has been such a pronounced accompaniment of their operations. But in general it must be said that the industry has failed to grasp the necessity for carrying on such work. It is content to consume all available supplies in nearby limits and then to move farther north, repeating there the same process. In course of time those limits, as well, will be exhausted and then there must come a complete abandonment of operations if additional supplies are not available.

While all this is going on, there are thousands of square miles of abandoned farmlands in the older parts of the country that ought never to have been settled and that can never hope to return a profit to any person who may occupy them. They are so unproductive that nothing save timber can grow upon them. Consequently, they remain idle, useless, an encumbrance. What is being done to turn these abandoned, unwanted lands to useful purpose? Very, very little.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

THE SILVER HAWK

By

WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

Dorn stiffened, suddenly aware that here was what Aurore had meant to tell him. Here she was implying that old Bergelot's "Can never" was true.

Doggedly he fought against the conviction. He asked "Aurore, what did you mean when you said 'If I could never have her'?"

He felt the tremble of her fingers in his clasp. The fire-glow was on her face, and tangle in her hair. Her words, when she spoke again, were still beneath the surface, but the import of them was cataclysmic to Dorn, for he knew Aurore was speaking pointedly of herself and of him. She said:

"I mean, Jim, if she were something or had done something which violated your sense of honour. I mean, if a barrier stood between you and her—a barrier as immutable and deep as life." Aurore paused there while a thunder-phrase, gathering and rumbling for many moments in the heavens, sent its bolt crashing down upon a great pine on the island. When the echoes of it had died away to sullen whispers, Aurore added, with deadly calmness: 'I mean, if you could have her only by degrading yourself and her—which you would never do and which she would never allow you if you would."

Before Dorn would release her clasp, he asked one question, so there would be no chance of mistake:

"Aurore, does that barrier stand between you and me?"

And Aurore, in a whisper, answered him.

"Yes, between you and me, Jim."

In the whippoorwill dusk Aurore went with him down to the cove, along the sodden path and through the rain-wet bushes. Nothing more was spoken between them.

The harsh cry of a loon jarred Dorn's nerves. The wind flowing down from snowfields had a chill and bitter edge to it. The golden-crowned sparrows had stopped their singing; from some lone peak the crescendo mourn of a wolf quavered down upon the lake.

At the water's edge, where Dorn had upturned his canoe, Aurore asked, "Have you told Mr. Eby about me being here, Jim?"

"No."

"But you'll tell him now."

Dorn guessed her thoughts. His voice was husky; it sounded odd to his own ears:

"You mean I won't come again? That I'll send him—here? No, I won't, Aurore. When there's need of it, I'll come. I'll see after you—till you go away."

Aurore would not deny him that. She gave him her hand in good-bye and it seemed to Dorn that they clasped hands across an abysm.

CHAPTER XVIII

THE PACK TAKES PREY

An hour after dusk that evening Dorn reached home, and there in the dark of the landing Luke Illewahwacet was waiting for him with a report of that days scouting trip.

Dorn was weary from long flight and heavy-hearted from remembering what Aurore had told him beside the fireplace of her cabin, but as he listened to old Luke's alarming story, he forgot all weariness, and in a measure this present news drove out of his mind what had happened two hours ago when the rain drummed upon the cabin roof and the wind mourned through the pine-tops.

In his report old Luke said that Carter-Snowdon's camp was located two miles west of Titan Pass at Lac des Eaux Mortes. The party there consisted of Carter-Snowdon, the detective chief, an aviator, and six 'breeds. They were making a pretence of hunting and fishing.

One meti, stationed as a look-out up along the mountain, kept watch on Dorns camp and by sun-flash signals reported every move he made. Five white men, plainly operatives, were living at the chalet.

Dorn thought: "Besides all these, Carter-Snowdon has a whole corps of detectives within call if he needs them. Forty or fifty men against Luke and me." He reflected: "In any bush-work these 'breeds are going to be dangerous men. They're mountain-bred; they're bush-wise: they'll have courage in a fight." He asked: "Do you know them, Luke?"

Five of them, the Indian said, were strangers—strapping, powerful 'breeds who looked like French-Babines. The sixth was Joe Yoroslaf, a vicious bush-sneak who hung about Titan Pass and who had picked a quarrel with Kansas the night Aurore came. Yoroslaf was a quarter Bella Coola Siwash, a quarter Chinese; the rest of his blood harked back to the days of the Cossack promyshlenski (professional fur-hunters), when Russia ruled the northwest coast of America. Because he habitually played wolverine to other men's trap-lines in winter, the Indians called him "the Carcajou" or "Skunk-Bear." He never shaved. Dorn had once known another 'breed who had reason for letting no man see his features.

The big heavy biplane, Luke said, had returned a couple of hours after Dorn had shaken it off; and at the enemy camp Yoroslaf and Soft-Shoe had had a long talk, with Carter-Snowdon listening. When they finished, Carter-Snowdon had slapped his men on the back and passed out a small flask of whiskey.

That council was the news which alarmed Dorn. After he had spiked their plan to dog him in an airplane, he had been convinced that their next step would be to get him into their hands and torture him until he revealed where he had taken Aurore. But now, after this mention of Yoroslaf and the long talk, he was not so sure about that.

Yoroslaf was bush-wise as a weasel, and well acquainted with that wilderness stretching northward; and he was one of the few living men who knew about the ancient Carrier trail. Of course this did not mean that he knew anything about Aurore's being at the Lake of the Dawn, and the enemy plan after all might be a scheme to capture the white man or the Indian who did know where she was; but Dorn was suspicious of Yoroslaf and keenly uneasy. He thought:

"There's only one chance in a hundred that Yoroslaf has picked up any information, but I don't dare risk that chance. One thing I know: they've got some scheme afoot, and Carter-Snowdon with his whiskey and back-slapping is confident of it. I've got to spike it, and to do that I've got to find out what it is."

That same thought must have been running in old Luke's mind, for he said to Dorn: "S'pose I go now during dark, belly up to enemy camp, make ears long. Mebbe I hear what they wawa about."

Dorn ached to go instead. The trip bristled with peril; he felt it was his place, not Luke's, to take the gamble. And he dreaded the prospect of being alone there in the darkness of his island with nothing to busy him, with those thoughts creeping back. But sternly he decided, "I'll stay here: Luke is better in the bush than I am." He said: 'All right, Luke you go. But remember: they know you're friend of mine; they know you kumtux where Aurore is; they'd just as soon capture you, Luke, as me. You must be careful, keep out of their hands."

"Luke was papoose sixty Great Moons ago," the Indian grunted. "S'pose you be careful. Mebbe they come here while I gone, while you here alone."

"I'll sit in dark tent and listen. If you hear roar while you gone—roar like dozen thunder-crashes—then you know they tried to sneak up through bushes on me and I exploded the mine."

For his perilous trip old Luke laid rifle and narhkin aside in the brush and stripped to his girdle, with only a hunting knife as weapon. He pointed to the heavens: "When that star gets where this one is, then I be back."

He left so noiselessly that one moment Dorn was whispering final instructions and the next moment he was aware old Luke was gone.

Alone on his island after nightfall, Dorn went cautiously up to his tent, stepped inside, and by the flare of a match arranged on his table a small battery and coil; and after rolling up the tent-sides in order to hear better, he sat there in the intense dark, his fingers touching a lever and all his senses sharpened.

He knew that so long as he stayed in the tent his enemies could not capture him. Out in the bushes old Luke had strung up a cunning rattle-bang which would give him warning of their approach; and by moving that lever half an inch he could blow them clear into the lake. He did not expect them to attack him at all, for over at the station he had made a bold showing with the box of dynamite to give the enemy fair warning; and the meti look-out had undoubtedly seen him laying the mine.

So Dorn thought very little about his own safety, as he watied for Luke to return. In that hour he did not greatly care what happened to him, except that he was Aurore's sole dependence and that her safety was bound up with his own. His camp and island and the daily routine of the days ahead awere ntolerably bare and bleak after the glory of those hours with Aurore in her wildwood of stately pines. For once Dorn's habit of self-mastery failed him and he had no control over his warring emotions and made no effort to lift himself fromdespair.

Aurore's words had been final and absolute. He knew she had not spoken them lightly; he knew she had weighed every syllable of them and had driven herself to tell him against her own compassion and love. Though he speculated idly what the story of those four dark, unfathomable years could be, he no longer wished to know. She had told him she wanted to keep his respect as long as she could; that she had been some thing, had done something, which forever set her off from him. Dorn realized that ugly facts must be behind those words, and he drew back from knowing ugly facts about Aurore McNain. He carried within him a picture of Aurore innocently asleep in the brush lodge he built for her, and that was how he wanted to think of her always.

At midnight Dorn began wondering why old Luke had not returned. Several times he had heard, from across on the mainland, the weird hoot of an owl and the dismal barking of a fox; and he knew these sounds were signals passing between the enemy 'breeds scouting around through the cedars.

A little later he suddenly heard an alarm-bird calling down at the lower end of the island, and the low cluck-ending of the call was wrong. Those 'breeds had crossed from the mainland; they were on his own island; they were skulking out there in the black spruce shadows not a hundred yards away! Dorn thought of that fearful gauntlet old Luke would have to run from water-edge to tent. His words of warning, 'They'd just as soon capture, you, Luke, as me," came back to him; and it made his blood run cold to think of those French-Babines, those crafty and powerful and cruel 'breeds of the mountains, capturing old Luke and torturing information out of him, and of Carter-Snowdon flying north and getting Aurore into his power.

Dorn sat tense, listening. For half an hour no other sound came to him, till finally out on the lake he heard the sleep call of a great norther diver. That was old Luke signallying his return. Through interminable minutes Dorn waited, expecting every instant to hear the Indian fumbling at the flap-front of the tent.

But old Luke never came.

Down near the landing a long yell rose suddenly, high-pitched, inarticulate, and ending abruptly; then a thrashing of underbrush, and snarling oaths.

Dorn leaped quivering to his feet. That yell had come from old Luke's throat. He had been ambushed, attacked, he was fighting for his life against those French-Babines. That cry had been a cry of warning. Even in his extremity, in his battle against hopeless odds, old Luke had tried to warn his white friend.

Before Dorn's eyes rose the ancient oath between him and old Luke. He did have one fleeting thought of Aurore, of the terrible consequences to her if he went out and both he and the Indian were killed; but in that moment the thought had not power to hold him. To stand there in his safe tent while old Luke was being murdered was alien to his nature. Seizing his electric torch, his heavy automatic, he brushed through the flap-front and ran like a deer down the dark path.

Thirty steps from the lake edge he stopped and listened for sounds of the struggle, and heard none. More cautiously he groped on to the landing and stood there in the black silence, listening intently. No rustle or whisper from the bushes around him. Whatever had happened, it was all over now.

He listened for twenty seconds, and from that dead silence he understood: old Luke had been clubbed unconscious and taken prisoner, or else murdered. A fury seized Dorn and shook him. In savage, reckless anger he swore: "If Luke's alive I'll tear him away from them If they killed him . . ." To his lips came the sinister Cree oath, "Lokoyas eeyu-moon'—plenty blood shall run.

Whirling, he started back up the path, meaning to circle down through the spruces to the lower end of the island; there the alarm-bird had first called, there the 'breeds had landed and left their boat, and they would take old Luke there if he was a prisoner.

A few paces inland Dorn heard a rustle in the path ahead of him and stopped dead-short, realizing that those French-Babines had cut him off and were creeping upon him, a cordon of invisible enemies; and when he heard the padded sound again, closer, nearly upon him, he snapped on the electric torch for an instant and whipped up his automatic.

Eight feet ahead of him in the path he beheld the form of a man—a squat, hairy-faced 'breed, crouching like a great cat ready to spring, his eyes glistening like the heady raindrops on the bushes. Dorn shot pointblank and a yelp of pain went up with the bark of the gun. Another enemy, guided by the flash of fire, leaped upon Dorn from behind. With one hand Dorn wrenched himself free from the powerful 'breed, and crashed the pistol-butt against the man's head; and before the other metis could close in he had smashed his way out of the trap and was running up the path.

POTATO DAY

Editor Examiner,

Dear Sir,—I would like to tell you about something that the school children did in Windsor, Ontario. They had a Potato Day there and each child brought a potato. They were divided up among several charitable societies of the city.

If you could get the approval of the Board of Education and arrange with the teachers, why couldn't we have something like that in Peterborough?

There are several charitable organizations that are doing good work in the city. The potatoes could be divided equally among them. There are hundreds of school children in Peterborough and there are many poor people who are going to feel the pinch before long, especially when winter sets in, in real earnest.

Couldn't you start something along this line?

THE QUOTA SYSTEM

Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—No one who doubted Mr. Bennett's empire policy as contrasted with Mr. King's would care to say "I told you so" now that the special British Conference Committee has declared in favor of the quota which The Mail and Empire not being party-bound to any foolish policy just on that account criticizes as follows:

"If the quota may indeed be accepted as a useful temporary expedient that will prove more or less valuable to Canada pending the adoption by a new British Government of Mr. Bennett's proposal for mutual empire preference."

We may overlook The Mail and Empire's statement that Mr. Bennett had an empire preference policy because he repudiated preferences going so far as to say that Britain and Pittsburg are all one to him if Canada is not to get the work. The quota is not an agreement to purchase or any kind of a stated preference whatsoever, but merely a statement that if it suits Britain at any time to give Canada a share (quota) of patronage for wheat she will do so but and just here is what The Mail and Empire has overlooked. Without the quota Canada would have the chance of open competition. With it, Canada is cut off from the quotas (shares) of other parts of the Empire by the announcement of this policy.

The truth is that so far from being a preference it is fatal to Canada. However, Mr. Bennett is in the saddle and we hope he will find no obstacles to the progress of Canada in his path until people have had time to look the matter over and see for themselves that if we are to have an empire at all, the voluntary or open preference plan is much better than a quota one, and as the 1926 Conference said, Any other plan impossible" since Britain has investments in other countries she must not endanger.

FOWL PLENTIFUL ON FARMERS' MART

Turkeys Bring From 32 to 35 Cents Per Pound. Geese 22 to 23.

BUTTER IS 35.

Fowl was very plentiful on the farmers' market this morning. The Thanksgiving supply lasted until a very late hour, with prices dropping slightly from earlier quotations At noon, turkeys could be bought at 30c a pound, with several large birds of fourteen and fifteen pounds, in evidence. The general price for turkeys was 32 to 35c a pound. A thirteen-pound goose was offered at 25c a pound, which was the prevailing price for geese and ducks this morning. One woman had Muscovy ducks, big six-pounders, with heavy yellow fat over their breasts. Later, geese dropped to 22 and 23c a pound and chickens were 25 to 28c a pound

One vendor had roasted chickens, all complete with parsley sprigs, roasted giblets on their bosoms, and bottles of gravy to complete the repast. Averaging three pounds apiece, these roasted birds were offered at 80c apiece.

Butter was priced generally at 35c a pound and eggs were 40 to 55c a dozen.

On the open section, pork was priced at 18 and 20c a pound, for front and hind sections, and lamb was 17 and 23c.

Fresh salmon trout was 22c pound.

Potatoes ranged in price from $1 to $1.25 a bag. Honey was 14 and 15c a pound. Snow apples and russets, 40c a peck, and pears were 50c a bushel.

Late tomatoes in 11-quart baskets were 95c.

A large Plymouth Rock rooster whose clarion call could be heard all over the market was priced at $2.

QUEENS IN LEAD

Queen's stepped into a fine lead over the Toronto squad at Varsity Stadium this afternoon in the biggest rugby fixture of the season, by scoring three points on a drop kick in the first five minutes of play.

At the end of the first quarter the score was 9—0 for the invaders.

BRITISH COLUMBIA FARMER ENTERS WORLD EXHIBITION

CHICAGO, Ills., Nov. 8.—(By the Canadian Press)—To a British Columbia farmer, W. G. Gibson, of Ladner, goes the distinction of having made the first entry from that province to be received for the 1930 International Grain and Hay Show held at Chicago November 29 to December 6, in connection with the International Live Stock Exposition.

Gibson's entries which consist of samples of field peas, six-rowed barley, oats, hard red spring wheat, and field beans, will be matched with products of the fields of the farthermost parts of the world which are sent to compete in this premier crops show. Already for the 1930 event wheat samples have been received from three New South Wales wheat growers.

Gibson won one of the highest honors of the 1929 grain and Hay Show at Chicago, taking the championship on his sample of field peas, and in the hard red spring wheat class, his sample was high on the award list.

CANADIAN EXCHANGE MOVEMENT SLOWEST FOR THE ENTIRE YEAR

Volume Lessens and Prices Narrow Down—Forced Selling Spent.

.. MARKET TESTED. ..

(Special to Examiner, Copyright, 1930)

Toronto, Nov. 11.—Daily sessions on the Canadian stock exchanges are verging on the dullest of the year with a substantial contraction in volume, narrow price movements and the price average inclined to flatten out. Forced selling appears to have spent itself, for the present at least, and the markets do not have to absorb waves of liquidation that played havoc with price levels not so long ago. Of course, this situation can change rapidly and is not to be taken as proof the downward trend is over with. From now on the market will have to face further tests and the amount of selling brought out will be a better indication of what can be expected from the future. First of such tests came this week when Wall Street sold off to a new low level for a couple of years when the results of the election became known. The Dow-Jones industrial average dropped nearly six points Wednesday to almost four points below the previous bottom while the Toronto and Montreal weighted indexes only slumped a point, holding from three to four points above the extreme low for the year.

A secondary reaction on Wall Street Friday broke the averages for that market another six points to below the low of Wednesday sales there mounted rapidly while on the Canadian exchanges trading was dull and the weighted index for the active leaders on the Toronto Stock Exchange closed at the identical point it done on Thursday and still three points above bottom for 1930.

On the whole the week's price trend here continued downward although the Canadian lists failed to reflect the New York reaction to the same degree that they have in the past. Individual securities lost considerable ground, but the general list held well and the leaders, outside of interlisted securities, resisted what selling there was with small price recessions. Probably this better showing is more due to the fact selling failed to increase substantially on the decline than to improvement in buying demand. The market is spoken of in brokerage circles as "sold-out". That is to say accounts disturbed by recent developments have been liquidated and pressure from this quarter lifted. The withstanding of the Wall Street influence is taken as an indication of an improved position, but not necessarily evidence there will be no further heavy liquidation to absorb in the immediate future. Continuation of the reaction in New York may start a resumption of selling here and other conditions may crop up that will tend to release securities now held in fairly strong hands.

HAS SEVEN TUBES

With the announcement of the new Fada battery set the current 1930-31 line is prepared to offer radio service in every locality in Canada. The present line includes AC electric sets for 60 cycle, 80 to 130 volt operation, AC electric sets for 25 cycle, 90 to 130 volt operation, DC electric sets and now the Economy battery set.

The new seven tube Economy battery receiver, model 422, lists at $150, less tubes and batteries and is encased in the same handsome walnut console that has proven so popular in the AC lines, namely, model 42.

Features of the new battery set are as follows:

Selectivity—Four condenser circuit for efficient selectivity. Sensitivity—Three screen grid tubes as RF aplifiers for super-sensitivity. Push pull amplification in the last audio stage employs two of the new type power tubes in push pull, giving an undistorted output heretofore unknown in battery sets. Economy—This set uses the new two volt type tubes and the new air-cell type 600 ampere hour "A" battery which in normal usage should last one year without recharging or replacement. The new type "A" battery does not involve the use of acid. Dependable Operation—Another feature of this new battery set is that operational efficiency is maintained throughout the life of the batteries and does not diminish after a few months' use. A Logograph—This is a special dial for recording all favorite stations which need to be logged but once for the user's convenience.

This new Fada battery set gives the same radio performance as the model AC electric sets for localities where power is not available. The new "A" battery which does not require recharging will prove a distinct advantage and convenience over the old type of "wet" battery operation. The "B" current is supplied by three of the heavy dry cell batteries. Delivery of model 422 is now being made to Fada distributors and dealers.

SHERIFF SHOOTS PRISONER.

CHANDLER, Okla., Nov. 6. — A break by four prisoners from the Lincoln county jail ended to-day in the fatal shooting of James Hapgood, alleged robber, by Sheriff Ted Mears. Two of the other fleeing prisoners were recaptured.

On his first birthday, recently celebrated at Gordon Castle, near Aberdeenshire, Scotland, Lord Settrington, son of the Earl of March was presented a rocking horse and an engraved gold watch by his tenants.

THREE SWIMMERS ARE GIVEN AWARDS

Final Examination of Life-Saving Society Held on Friday.

Last evening examinations of the Royal Life Saving Society were held at the Y.W.C.A. pool. Three pupils of Miss Littlefield, swimming Instructress of the "Y" passed successfully the Award of Merit examination. This examination calls for candidates to show methods of release and rescue towing the victim twenty yards, swim 600 yards, fully dressed, using three different strokes, undress on the surface of the water, dive for heavy object, take two neat dives from low board and one balcony dive, three scientific methods of swimming. The successful candidates were Jean Fairweather, Leona Kingdon Dorothy Allen. The examiner for the test was Mr. J C McClenaghan.

The final examinations of the Life Saving Society will be held on Friday at 4.30 p.m.

Sports Hour followed the examination and a splendid demonstration was given by the pupils of the Stunt Class. The Physical Director announced the date of the coming swimming exhibition, Friday, November 14, at 8 p.m. All swimmers are requested to attend special practice on Tuesday, at 7 p.m. Swimmers' Trophies and Prizes will be on exhibition next week.

St. George's Chapel To Open Again Soon

King and Queen Will Attend Services Marking Completion of the Restoration.

King andgQueen will Attend Services Mark in Completion of the Restoration.

WINDSOR, Eng., Nov. 8—(By the Canadian Press)—On the occasion of the reopening of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Castle, two thanksgiving services for the completion of the restoration will be held. The work of restoration in the chapel has occupied 10 years, during which time great improvements have been made in the historic building. The special services will be held at 11.30 and 5 o'clock on Tuesday, November 4. These will be followed by special daily services until November 15.

The first service will be attended by the King and Queen, and the clergy taking part will include the following: Rt. Rev. Dr. Frank Theodore Woods, Bishop of Winchester, Prelate of the Order of the Garter; Rt. Rev. Dr. Thomas Banks Strong, Bishop of Oxford, Chancellor, and Very Rev. Albert Victor Baillie, Dean of Windsor.

Besides the King and Queen at the opening service there will be the Knights of the Garter and the Military Knights of Windsor, together with the various members of the Royal family, sta te and court officials.

The musical settings chosen for this service are from the works of Sir Walter Parratt, late organist of the chapel, and those specially composed by the present organist Sir Walford Davies.

To Cure Crippled Children

Salvaging children such as this one pictured above is the object aimed at by the Peterborough Rotary Club in its crippled children's clinic which will be held the last week of November. Already a large number of names of children in need of treatment has been completed and the crippled children's committee of the Rotary Club would like to be sure that every crippled child in the district will be given a chance to improve his or her condition. Citizens who know of such children should communicate with Dr. Moir, chairman of the committee or notify other Rotarians.

NATIVE ZULUS DRIVEN OUT IF THEY IMITATE EUROPEANS

Hounded From Kraals by the Lazy Aboriginals of Zululand.

SYSTEM WEAKENING

DURBAN, South Africa, Nov. 8.—(C.P.)—The fact that natives were driven out from the communities in which their kind lived in Zululand because they imitated the whites was brought out in evidence given before the Native Economic Commission at Stanger, Natal, recently and one of the witnesses stated that natives who aped the ways of the Europeans and became industrious were hounded from their kraals by lazy natives. This witness, C. A. Wheelwright, who until recently occupied the position of Chief Native Commissioner in Zululand, made some valuable observations on the general living conditions and the future development of the native race in Natal.

The tribal system in Zululand is rapidly weakening owing to the change of dynasty, according to Mr. Wheelwright. The deterrent power of the chiefs, which has maintained the system, has disappeared. To-day the chief no longer had power and the result was that natives and even children did as they pleased.

The whole fabric upon which the Zulu dynasty and the tribal systems throughout South Africa had been built and suffered through the advent of the Europeans, Mr. Wheelwright said, and he suggested that something be done to re-establish the old-time discipline and control. He expressed the opinion that the chiefs should be vested with a considerable amount of judicial power for the punishment of minor offences, assaults, petty thefts and other things of a domestic nature. Of course this could not apply to all chiefs, many of whom were not suitable for the positions which they held. In this connection he urged the raising of the type of chiefs by educating them and bringing them up to the present ways of thinking.

Dealing with native living conditions, Mr. Wheelwright expressed the view that more help should be extended by the white man in order to ensure better living conditions for natives. They should be taught to make the best out of their agricultural and pastoral methods.

Mr. Wheelwright bore out the evidence given by other witnesses that the natives, after having learned up-to-date methods from European farmers, on returning to their kraals slipped back into their old ways of indolence and carelessness. This, he said, was largely due to the fact that a progressive man was hated by his neighbors in the locations, and on occasion was actually hounded out. There were instances where such men had been accused of apeing white men with the result that life in the locations had been made impossible for them. Continuing, Mr. Wheelwright expressed the view that there had been a change in the attitude of the native towards the white man. There was a definite loss of trust. There was no longer the same faith as the native had displayed in the past.

Grock, the famous clown, whose real name is Charles Ardien Wettach, has retired from the stage after making a final appearance at the Scala Theatre in Berlin, Germany, and will make his home at San Remo, Italy, where he has a beautiful villa.

Where Two Bandits Got Over $5,000 in Cash

A pair of two-gun thugs entered the Bank of Nova Scotia at Brussels, Ont., and after leaving the staff gagged and bound in the vault, escaped with about $6,000 in cash. One customer was also imprisoned with the staff. The bandits made a clean getaway. Above are shown (1) Interior of bank at Brussels, showing teller's cage at left and vault at rear, where staff was locked by thugs. (2) Carl Card, cashier, who managed to get his hands untied in vault a few minutes after thugs had gone. (3) A. A. Lamont, bank customer, who was locked in with staff, and (4) Ledgerkeeper White of the staff.

MINERAL FIND IN ALBERTA HAS COMMERCIAL IMPORTANCE

Zonolite Discovery Will Aid Builders, Report Scientists.

PECULIAR QUALITIES.

CALGARY, Nov. 5 — Because a prospector, crawling through an old mine shaft, happened to set a miner's candle in the wall, a new mineral may shortly be added to the Dominion's array of commercial products.

E. N. Alley, well-known throughout the West, was the prospector. He was looking for molybdenum and vanadium. The flame of this candle happened to touch a projecting, mica-light substance, dark green in color. This material expanded quickly under the heat and its color commenced to change to gold. He promptly took samples and made more experiments. The mineral which weighed 144 pounds to the cubic foot in its raw state, would expand till it weighed only approximately ten.

It seemed quite obvious that a material with such unique properties would have commercial possibilities. Analyses showed that it was a silicate and insoluble in most acids. The mineral is vermiculite or, as it is more generally known, zonolite.

Little or nothing was said about the discovery. No general public announcement was made. Further research was carried on with great care and some secrecy. Now, after tests in Western laboratories and in Eastern Canadian universities, it becomes apparent that the potentialities of zonolite are in the direction of creating new building materials.

In his laboratory at the University of Toronto, Professor G. R. Anderson, has just completed experiments which demonstrate that the mineral has unusual sound absorbing qualities. Professor Anderson's report is highly technical. It states that at a tone frequency of 512, an experimental plaster which he made composed of 75% zonolite and 25% wood pulp, had a sound absorptive coefficient of .25 which, to the layman, means approximately as much as a few words in Chinese but to the scientist reveals the discovery of a new acoustic treatment.

Psychologists have been investigating noise and report it as harmful to the human organism. Theatre-managers, doing the same thing, report it harmful to the box office in this new era when films refuse to be seen and not heard. The construction industries must learn something about the new science of acoustics and how to handle noise problems. The new industrial mineral, zonolite, has potentialities in this direction.

Reports have also been received from Angus Graham, Toronto engineer and other architectural research workers in the east, after long laboratory tests on heat conductivity. Mr. Graham states that zonolite not only does not burn but does not readily transmit heat. These reports are supported by tests made by the Bureau of Standards at Washington, and much would be of great interest to the average layman.

Mr. Graham lists its possible uses as including high temperature insulation for bake ovens, dry kilns, pipes and boilers among others.

While these experiments were going on, somewhat quieter tests were going on here in manufacturing methods. A kiln was built, gas-fired. Vermiculive was ground over different size screens before going to the kiln. Results justified plans to commence commerical manufacture in Calgary.

So far, respite the Canadian aspects of the discovery and development of the new-mineral, the best deposits are located in Montana. But careful search has already revealed traces in the Dominion; prospectors are making detailed surveys of promising areas and government officials are interested in furthering these investigations. One of the Dominion's largest manufacturers of building materials has definitely committed itself to further research and has manufacture under consideration. In any case, it is intimated, manufacture will be under the auspices of existing established Canadian concerns.

Havelock

Mrs. F. Butters and daughter, Aileen, and son, Craig, were recent visitors with Havelock friends.

Miss Lehane, of Lindsay, formerly of the local Continuation school staff, is at present teaching in a Toronto school, relieving a teacher whose mother is ill.

Mrs. M. Barrett, who has been ill at her home here, is now in Peterborough, and is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Fred. Whaley.

Mrs. Edith Henderson and daughter, Verna, of Yonkers, N.Y., were recent visitors with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Youmans.

Mr. and Mrs. John Craighead and daughter, of Belleville, were Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. J. Craighead.

Mr. John Bound of the village secured a fine large black bear last week while hunting at Oak Lake.

The school at South Lake has been closed for a couple of weeks on account of the illness of the teacher.

Mr. Yuill, principal of the Havelock Public School, was out of school for a couple of days on account of illness.

Mr. Reg. Brennan left Wednesday for a hunting camp at Mink Lake, north of Maynooth. Wellington Card, of Cavan, was also in the party. Messrs. Will Forsythe, George Hubbell, Thos. Smith, and Fred Johnston left Tuesday for Beaver Creek, east of Oak Lake. Bruce Curtis, Russell Green, Arthur Russell, Jos. Ditcham and Melville Wight are in camp at Kashabog.

Bernard Smith returned last week from England, where he visited his mother, who has been very ill there. Mr. Smith had a rather rough voyage going over, and encountered bad weather off the coast of Ireland.

Duck hunters in the region north of Havelock, near Stoney Lake, are having excellent luck, according to a report brought in by one of the residents of that region. Stewart Murphy, with a party of ten hunters, had the good luck to bag eighty ducks in one morning recently, near South Lake.

Fred Hull, of Stoney Lake district, had the misfortune to lose a much prized pump-gun while guiding a party of duck hunters last week. Mr. Hull had left his gun in the boat for a short time, when one of the party fell into the water, upsetting the boat, and carrying the gun down with him, in about thirty feet of water. Efforts to retrieve the gun proved fruitless, and though Mr. Hull was reimbursed, he is still grieving over the loss of his old reliable.

OVALTINE PLANT

plant were manufactured here by the William Hamilton Company and Canadian factories are supplying practically all the plant's machinery. A malt mill and a very sensitive weighing and packaging machine had to be secured in England because they are not made in Canada, and some other machinery had to be ordered from the United States for the same reason.

It is expected that the plant will begin operation about the new year. It will employ from thirty-five to forty persons of whom about half will be women. The setting up of machinery is being carried on as quickly as possible so that manufacturing may commence at the earliest date. With a few exceptions the employees will not necessarily be skilled labor, but will be trained in the work expected of them.

H. Stegels, who has been with the A. Wander Company for ten years in England, is the plant superintendent, and W. C. Ashbury, formerly with Simpson's in Toronto, is the mechanical engineer.

DETECTIVES WILL SEARCH MONTREAL

Seek Key to Prosperity During Produced-in-Canada Week.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—"Produced-in-Canada Week" opened in Montreal on October 27, and continues until November 8. It is being held simultaneously with the National Produced-in-Canada Exhibition at the stadium and the object of the organizers is to attract more attention to produced-in-Canada goods.

Sponsors of the movement claim that Canadians should buy more produced-in-Canada merchandise, not simply because it is made in the Dominion, not from a patriotic standpoint, but because articles produced in this country compare very favorably in price and quality with those brought in from foreign countries.

Commencing on October 29, two famous characters of fiction, Sherlock Holmes and "My Dear Watson," started to search the city and environs for the "Key to Prosperity." The key is in possession of Montrealers who will be asked a question by the two detectives. Everyone interrogated will be given a slip on which to write the answer, their name and address. The answer is intimately associated with the campaign to have Canadians purchase more merchandise which is made in Canada and those who give the right answer will receive prizes.

IDENTITY OF BODY MYSTERY.

MONTREAL, Que., November 8 (C.P.). — No progress has been made in identifying the skeleton of a man found on lonely Isle Perot at the east end of Montreal Island, on Thursday. The inquest was postponed indefinitely. Identification could come only from the clothes found about the skeleton, authorities said to-day. Belief that the man may have been a former resident of Winnipeg was based on the finding in the pocket of his coat, of a card bearing the words, "Com. Club of Winnipeg."

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

Sir George Perley Endorses Poppy Day

OTTAWA, Nov. 8.—The Poppy Day appeal is endorsed by Sir George Perley, acting prime minister in the following message:

"It is fitting that on Armistice Day we should pause in our pursuits and in our pleasures to stand humbly and reverently before the memory of those who fell, and did not return. It is fitting, also, that we should remember those who fell but who did return. For them the war did not end in 1918; for some of them, indeed, the struggle back to health and happiness has been as hard and as heroic as the holding of the Ypres line or the assault on Vimy Ridge.

"On Armistice Day—Poppy Day—we can only honor the fallen, but we can help, as well as honor, the disabled. The poppies and wreaths made by disabled men in our service hospitals are made available to the public through the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, and the proceeds are used for the furtherance of the Legion's work.

"The pride of Canada is enduring: her memory is not short. And so I am confident that on Armistice Day every Canadian will secure a wreath or poppy to show that our Dominion pays this tribute as generously and gratefully on November 11, 1930, as she did on November 11, 1918."

SUFFOCATED IN COAL CHUTE.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Nov. 8.—(C.P.)—Paul Cymbal, 35, an employe of the Abitibi Power and Paper Mill at Smoothrock Falls, was suffocated in a coal chute of the mill when a slide buried him as he was about to shovel coal down. No inquest is to be held, it was decided into the death of Cymbal, who is survived by his wife.

THREE HUNDRED PEOPLE TAKE PART IN HAVELOCK DINNER

Excellent Musical Program Given at Knox Presbyterian Church Gathering.

SEVERAL ADDRESSES.

[illegible] individual support to the church, the minister stating cases being expected to bear the whole burden of the congregation. Take Jesus and the christian out of civilization and there is nothing left worth while." Secondly, he said the church is to prosper and do its work there are means must be supplied and there must be a greater sense of liberality. Also there should be a church recognition of the Sunday school and its relationship to the church and a revival in the prayer life of the church which at the present time, was stagnant. In closing Mr. Dutton expressed the wish that the year which is ahead might be one of blessing and attainment for the Havelock congregation.

The audience was again treated with a musical election on the Hawaiian guitar by the Misses Bliss, which was encored. Another solo was sung by Mrs. Potter, followed by a solo by Mrs. C. Jamieson, a member of the local choir. Next was a delightful violin solo by Master Collison, of Campbellford.

Greetings were conveyed by Mr. Anderson on behalf of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Campbellford. Also by two local ministers, Rev. W. Archer of Havelock United Church and Rev. P. C. Howard, of St. John's Anglican Church. The congregation was much indebted to Professor Newcomb of St. Andrew's Church, Campbellford, in taking charge of the organ.

Dr. Lennox expressed his deep appreciation on behalf of the congregation to the talent that had given such a magnificent program. The program closed with the National Anthem and the benediction.

VARIED PROGRAM GIVEN MEMBERS OF MUSIC CLUB

Vocal, Piano and Violin Numbers Form the Entertainment.

BIOGRAPHY OUTLINED.

Works of Grieg Occupy Attention of the Performers.

A varied program of vocal, piano and violin numbers formed the entertainment yesterday afternoon in the studio at the Conservatory of Music, provided by the Women's Music Club. Grieg was the composer whose works occupied the attention of the performers and their audience and an introduction to the program was made by Mrs. J. F. Allan, who, with Mrs. R. Gliddon, was in charge of the afternoon's entertainment and who gave a brief resume of the great Scandinavian's career, before the music of the afternoon was played.

The president of the club, Miss Mabel Clarry, made a few opening announcements, commending to the attention of the members the forthcoming appearance here, with Miss Marguerite Nuttall, vocalist of Toronto, of John Duncan, the English harpist, who will come to the city on November 25th, under the auspices of the Women's Music Club. The Christmas meeting of the club will be on December 19th.

Miss Clarry also spoke sympathetically of the illness of three of the senior members of the club: Mrs. R. Bender, Mrs. B. Gardiner and Madam Masson, the latter having suffered an accident recently.

The opening numbers were those of Mrs. Ross Williamson, singing in her appealing clear soprano voice, "In a Boat" and "Solveig's Song" from the "Peer Gynt" Suite, written by Grieg for Ibsen's dramatic poem. "Peer Gynt," and perhaps the best known of the master musician's compositions.

Miss Dorothy Sager of Tweed, the young girl with the phenomenal voice who has already been so successful after only a year's vocal study, sang with soaring, sweet powerful tones, two songs: "I Love Thee" and the declamatory composition, "Eros."

Miss Geraldine Collins had two sweetly sung, attractively rendered numbers, "The Swan" and the graceful "To a Water Lily," with its floating cadences.

Contralto solos of the afternoon were those of Miss Bertha Hill, whose warm, rich, smooth tones were heard to much advantage in two brief songs, "Album Rhyme" and "My Thoughts Are Like the Mighty Hills."

Instrumental Numbers

Still emphasizing the Grieg music, Mrs. Agnes Logan Green played a trio of lovely piano composition: "The Little Bird," "Morning," from the "Peer Gynt" Suite, and "Butterfly." They were similar in style, dainty treble cascades of notes against a murmuring bass, the "Butterfly" number like a splashing fountain with colored wings fluttering over tinkling spray. Mrs. Green played them in her own inimitable way, weaving for her listeners a frail, graceful web of lovely music that held them absorbed in its sweet delicacy. The charm and skill of this favorite musician never grows less, and is always more apparent in fragile music of this type.

The new musician of the afternoon was Deane Miner, recently arrived violinist, who has now a place on the teaching staff of the Conservatory of Music. Mr. Miner plays with a mastery of technique, a skill in difficult instrumentation and a broad, smooth, sweet tone that places his music far above the average, and he riveted the pleased attention of his hearers with his performance of an exacting and lengthy Sonata, Greig's composition in G Major, with its varied movements; the Lento doloroso, the Allegro vivace, the Allegretto tranquillo and the Allegro animato, all descriptive of the composer's Scandinavian trend.

For this Sonata, Mrs. Green provided a very adequate second at the piano, completing its attraction with her finished music. Accompaniments for the singers were also played by Mrs. Green.

Applause was sincere and generous for every number on a pleasing program.

Mrs. Allan, speaking briefly about Grieg, mentioned his Scottish ancestry. His father, who was a native of Aberdeen, went to Norway after the Battle of Culloden and there became the British Consul at Bergen. His son, Edward Greig, was born in 1843 and died in 1907. He studied at the Leipzig Conservatory and later under some of the best Scandinavian composers, being greatly influenced also by the genius of the great violinist, Ole Bull.

Greig won fame in three ways: as a conductor of magnetic personality, as a pianist and as a composer. He has been termed "the Chopin of the North" and was to Norway what Chopin was to Poland and Liszt to Hungary. His music is characterized by strength and sincerity, by originality in its harmonies and modulations. It is intensely nationalistic in character. Imagination and emotion are emphasized in the works of Grieg, as in those of Chopin.

Grieg's composition have been divided into three classes: his orchestral works and his symphonies and concertos; his smaller works that represent his own personal moods in taste and composition, and those compositions that are directly inspired by the folk songs of his native land.

At the conclusion of the program, Miss Clarry spoke briefly, thanking the musicians.

Afternoon tea was served as a close to the entertainment.

CATTLE, GRAIN, PRODUCE

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—Lack of demand drove butter prices down to new low levels this week, but with the exception of one day, trading did not improve with the reduction. Buyers were not interested in securing any size quantities and were busy working on their storage supplies. About the middle of the week two cars of butter from the best creameries in Manitoba were sold locally for 31c per pound, and son New Zealand offerings secured this price, but local dealers were hard pressed to move any Ontario butter at more than 30½c. Brokers were quoting Ontario butter at 30c to 30½c for No. 1, and 29c to 29½c for No. 2.

The immediate outlook is not too good as buyers have enough supplies to last until about the first of the year. At that time it is difficult to say what will happen. Australia has been trying to get in on the Canadian market by offering large quantities at low prices, and New Zealand is still watching the prices and the needs of this country, as she has great amounts that must be marketed.

Cream

Cream prices have held up wonderfully well in comparison with the poor butter market. Increases made a month or more ago have not been changed and country shippers have been quoted 33c for special; 32c for No. 1, and 29c for No. 2, f.o.b. country points.

Cheese

Prices to shippers for cheese, colored, paraffined, Government graded, were lower at the end of the week ½c to ¾c per pound. At the first of the week new large was quoted 15¾c to 16c, but yesterday prices were 15¼c for new large, 15½c for twins, and 15¾c for triplets. Wholesalers, however, did not reduce their prices to the trade and offered new cheese at 17c for large, 17¼c for twins, and 17½c for triplets.

Eggs

Scarcity of new-laid eggs accounted for the increase in prices to the shipper, retailer and wholesaler this week. Many local brokers and wholesalers did not receive more than a few cases of fresh eggs all week, and, of course short-held and storage supplies moved more freely to meet consumptive demands. Wholesalers were unable to get 52c for short-held extras in cartons, 50c for extras loose, 44c for firsts loose, and 35c for seconds loose. But they were asking four to five cents more than these prices for strictly fresh eggs, most of the week, and yesterday the prices for laid supplies were up again, at 58c to 60c for extras in cartons, 56c to 58c for extras loose, 50c to 53c for firsts loose, 43c for pullet extras, and 35c to 37c for seconds loose.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Forced backward by heavy selling that resulted from unsettlement of stock market quotations, all gain yesterday receded from an early advance. Striped rust, which last year caused havoc in the wheat crop of Argentina, was reported yesterday as having spread to every Province of that country, and was chiefly responsible for the transient advance of grain prices. Despite stubborn resistance to selling pressure, however, the influence of fresh breaks in values of securities practically nullified stimulating factors concerning cereals as the day's trading ended.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at the same as Thursday's finish to ¾c a bushel higher. Corn closed ⅝c off to 6c up; oats at ¼c decline to ⅝c gain, and provisions varying from 5c setback to a rise of 27c.

BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., November 8 (C.P.). — Hogs, 3,000; fairly active, mostly to packers; steady to 10 lower; bulk desirable 170-220 pounds, 9.65 to 9.75; below 160 pounds, 9.50 to 9.60; packing sows, 8.25 to 8.75.

Cattle, 300; fully steady; beef cows 5.00 to 5.50.

Calves, 600; vealers generally steady; good to choice, 12.50 to 13.00.

Sheep, 3,600; holdovers, 1,200; fat lambs active, 25 to 50 higher; lower grades strong to 25 higher; good to choice ewe and wether lambs, 8.75, mostly 9.00.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, November 8. — Increased export business had a bullish effect on the Winnipeg wheat market yesterday, sending prices 2⅝c to 2c higher at one period of trading. The advance was reduced slightly near the close, when final quotations were 1⅛c to ⅞c higher than the previous quotations.

A total of 1,000,000 bushels of grain was exported from Canada overnight, it was reported. This report and the firmness at Liverpool strengthened the local values. Pit trading was fairly active, with local buyers buying fair quantities of wheat.

Advances of 1c to 1⅛c occurred in the cash wheat market, which displayed little activity, however. Oats and barley featured the coarse grains, with fractional advances.

MISSION WORK IS REVIEWED

Mrs. James Curtis Hostess to Members of Fenella Women's Institute.

MONTHLY MEETING.

FENELLA, Nov. 8 (Examiner Correspondence).—Mrs. James Curtis opened her home to the Fenella Women's Missionary Society on Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 5, for their monthly meeting. There was a large attendance and a very interesting program, in charge of the Misses May and Mildred Barker, was given. "Historical Review of Christian Work in Japan," chapter two in study-book: "Fruits of Christian Missions in Japan," was reviewed in a series of leaflets, giving a short summary of the persecution of the Christian religion and later of the progress made by evangelists and medical missionaries. "In 1920, the world Sunday school convention was held in Tokyo and public men not connected with the church gave it their support. At the close of 1929 the new Tokyo city auditorium was packed to the doors when a great Christian gathering was held to commemorate the seventieth anniversary of the opening of Protestant missions in Japan."

Woman's work for women has proved abundantly worth while as Japanese Christian women have risen to the task of leadership and are active in all movements for reform. "Thinking peace: Isaiah—the prophet of peace," was the subject of another series of leaflets dealing in a very interesting manner with the present-day peace question. Perhaps Isaiah was the first person to have the idea that all the nations of the world might come together to learn to treat one another with fairness and justice. Since 1818 the long boundary between Canada and the United States has been without a fortress and a gun. This was the first unarmed boundary in the world. Are wars to end? That depends on what you, and I, and the rest of the world want. Let us think peace, do not think war. Let us see in every foreigner a possible friend, in every human being an actual brother, a member of the great family which embraces all races and nations and whose head is our Heavenly Father.

The above series of leaflets were read by the following ladies: Mrs. C. W. Macklin, Mrs. N. C. Leash, Mrs. Clark Jewel, Mrs. James Knox, Mrs. W. H. Sandercock, and the Misses May and Mildred Barker, Florence Macklin and Ruby Herrington. Mrs. James Knox gave a short reading, telling of the building of a new church and parsonage in Japan. The Canadian W.M.S. sent forty-two thousand yen in aid of this building fund, the Japanese to furnish the remainder of the fund necessary to complete the work.

A reading, "Love, Laugh and Lift," read by Mrs. Fred Falling, and a duet, "He Careth for Thee," by Mrs. Howard Macklin and Miss Florence Macklin, completed a very interesting program. During the minutes and business period the thankoffering and mite-boxes were received, proceeds from these amounting to $23.85. A special sick fund collection of $1.33 was taken to defray cost of flowers for sick members. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Howard Macklin on Dec. 3, with Mrs. James Knox as program leader. Mrs. Curtis, assisted by the junior members, served lunch at the close.

Goodly Sum Realized At Trent River Supper

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 9.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—Considerable discussion took place at the meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the United Church at a meeting held on Wednesday afternoon, regarding the cost of installing electricity for the church and dining hall.

P. Denyes, electrician of Campbellford, gave estimates of the expense. Some of the members were in favor of wiring for an electric stove in the kitchen, but it was decidded that after the Ladies' Aid sanctioned the installation of hydro, the matter should be referred to the Board of Managers of the Church. Mrs. J. Scott was appointed to report to the pastor, Rev. W. R. Archer, who will call a meeting of the Board of Managers.

Mrs. W. Preston has charge of the meeting and after the usual opening exercises, Mrs. John Scott, treasurer, reported the cash receipts of the fowl supper to be $150.

A vote of thanks was tendered James Paget for his generosity in putting shelves up in the kitchen, free of charge. Miss Bessie French was made an honorary member of the Society, at this meeting.

The members agreed also to pay for the insurance for the Church hall, which amounts to $11 a year.

For your new home Choose this modern roof

THE question you should settle in your mind when considering the roof on your new house is which is the most economical roof—not which is the cheapest.

While a cheap roof may cost you only a very few dollars less than a beautiful, permanent roof of Johns-Manville Shingles, it will become increasingly expensive as each year brings fresh repair bills. A J-M Roof is the best dollar value you can buy because it gives you roof protection and outstanding roof beauty at the lowest cost per year.

A roof of J-M Asbestos Shingles will never need further attention. A J-M Asphalt Shingle Roof (at lower cost) will give you sturdy protection that will free you from all repair expense for many years.

In either type of roof there is a wide range of beautiful colour combinations which are not obtainable in most other roofings.

Ask your builder or the nearest roofing material or lumber dealer to show you some of these modern, durable J-M Roofs in your neighbourhood.

RURAL SCHOOLS FAILED TO BUY PROPER BOOKS

William Morris Addresses Friday Meeting of Teachers' Convention.

ON EDUCATED MAN.

Says Only Two Per Cent. of Any Address is Original.

On Friday afternoon at the Teachers' Convention, William Morris, secretary of the Trustees and Ratepayers' Association, gave an address on the "Marks of an educatioed man."

Less than half of the rural schools in 1929 qualified for the department grant for additions to their library. That means that many schools did not add any new books that year. Many schools could get books through Mr. Morris, at a minimum cost.

Mr. Morris in dealing with his subject did not claim originality for most of his remarks. He said that only about two per cent of any address was original. He quoted and later had the teachers learn Van Dyke's beautiful lines:

"Four things that every man must do
If he would make his record time
To think without confusion clearly,
To love his fellow-man sincerely,
To act from honest motives truly,
And trust in God and heaven securely"

Upon these lines he based his remarks.

The first heading was to be open minded. People must be receptive and attentive; it is a mark of an educated man and all progress depends on it. As people change ideas so progress is made. The mind must not be open at both ends. A man must be willing to change his mind. He wants to know the truth and will weight facts and form new convictions. One is never too old to learn. Education is never finished in life. He told of a young man who went to agricultural college and on returning home criticised his father's methods. The father decided that he would go to college too since the young man's ideas when put to the test, proved more effective than his own. That old man proved himself to be open-minded. He thought without confusion clearly.

Love your fellow-man sincerely. Another mark of an educated man is that you can get along with him. He is likeable. Love is the fulfilment of all law. The real purpose of the school is to teach children to live together. The main purpose of education is not to what the intellect so that it will have more monotary value. Every professional man should render service to the public to pay for the benefits he has received from the State. Get along with others. Remember that "A soft answer turneth away wrath." Learn to live with others.

Have your life motivated by high and honest ideals. Act from honest motives truly. The public wants honesty, integrity, personality, for more than intellectual attainment. The world is run on sentiment, rather than on logic. Let us develop a type of person who will act from honest motives. Such a person is truly cultured.

Live a truly religious life. The child hears more scripture read in the school than in the home and church combined. So also he hears more prayers. There is a religious atmosphere about a school. It is good to start the morning with devotional exercises in the home. Surround the children at school with a really religious atmosphere.

Mr. Morris' address was a real inspiration.

Report of the nominating committee for the county of Peterborough, was as follows:

President, Mr. Yuill; Vice-President, Mr. George Ball; Secy.-Treas., Mrs. H. B. Jackson; Corresponding Secretary, Mr. L. Copp, I.P.S.; Executive Committee, Misses Cavanagh and Dobbin, Messrs. Downey and Breckenridge.

Votes of thanks were tendered to all those outside the county inspectorate, who had taken part in the programs of the convention.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, gave an address on The Value of Home and School Associations. The movement in Ontario is eleven years old. It aims to get co-operation between the home and the school. Children have been under various influences before they came to you. They represent the effects of heredity and environment. Each child is an individual. You should know something of the child's home and parents. You cannot visit all homes, but you may meet parents in an association. Draw the parents therefore, into the shadow of the school. The teacher is the natural one to make the advance. You have a responsibility to the parents as well as to the children. The child is a natural link between the parents and the teacher. By meeting together an enlivening interest is awakened in the child.

There is a recognized need for associations in the schools. It is now national and even international. Illustrations are most numerous of the benefits that have resulted from these associations. They are commended by inspectors and the education department and are well deserving of your serious consideration.

BUSINESS MEN LOST CONFIDENCE CLAIMS SPEAKER

Charles Cook Addresses the Friday Night Supper Club.

WAITING FOR OTHER FELLOW

Purchasing Power on Money of 90 Per Cent of People the Same.

Some of the fundamental rules governing the great game of life were expounded by Charles E. Cooke, advertising manager of the DeLaval Company, before the members of the Friday Night Supper Club, at the Y.M.C.A.

It was an interesting address, crammed with sound and inspirational advice to young men and was permeated with a refreshing spirit of optimism.

Referring to the so-called business depression, Mr. Cooke was of the emphatic opinion that any depression is only that which exists in the minds of pessimists. Statistics have proved that there is only a ten per cent. difference between good times and bad times. Business is not playing the game. There is nothing the matter with the world, nothing the matter with the country and nothing the matter with Peterborough. The purchasing power of ninety per cent. of the people is still the same as it ever was. The trouble was, he thought, that business men had lost confidence; they are afraid to spend any money, and are waiting for the other fellow to take the lead.

"Things don't just happen. Things don't just turn up; you have to go out and turn them up; then something will happen.

He mentioned an instance to drive home his contention, that business depression is but a chimera. His company has an agent in a little backwoods town. They had not heard much talk about bad times up there, being more or less out of touch with Wall Street. The consequence was that this agent has done a remarkably good business this summer while agents in the larger centres had not done so well.

On a visit to this city, the agent in question learned about the so-called depression, refused to acknowledge it; cheerfully remarked that the cows were giving just as much milk as usual and that the demand for milking machines had not slackened off any as a result, and went back and settled down to another successful period of business.

This was but one of the many humorous instances which Mr. Cooke introduced in the course of a delightful and entertaining talk.

Making a more personal appeal to his audience, the speaker reminded them that the business world has no use for a man who tackles a job and who falls down and then continues to lie where he fell. Such a man is nothing more than a yellow quitter. In life we cannot expect to rest on our oars and then to arrive anywhere; we have got to pull against the stream.

C. A. Salmonsen, president of the Friday Night Supper Club, in a few words in which he heartily concurred with Mr. Cooke's theories, tendered him a vote of thanks which had been moved by Art Prophet and seconded by Gord Dobbin.

The boys had a new song leader with them last night, in the person of Perdy Mowry, leader of Mowry-Steers Silver Collegians Orchestra. He is now a fixture, it is understood, and a valuable asset to the club.

Next Friday night the members will be addressed by V. J. McElderry, K.C., who has an interesting topic to discuss; namely, some of the highlights in the career of the late Lord Birkenhead, one of the outstanding leaders of the Conservative Party in Great Britain, who occupied the positions of Solicitor-General and later that of Lord High Chancellor.

MUSIC IN SCHOOL HIGHLY ENDORSED

Col. Snider Inspector For Durham Addresses Teachers' Convention.

COMPETITIONS HELD.

At the Friday morning's session of the Teachers' Convention. Colonel Snider, Inspector of Durham County, delivered an address on "Music in the Schools."

He said in this introduction, that it was partly his experiences in hearing music in the schools of Peterborough that had made him enthusiastic on the subject.

Every person is gifted with certain faculties. Some of these respond to a higher nature, and music is one of Who can measure the effect on after cultivates voice, language, senses. Singing helps in reading and in expression of different feelings. It cultivates the voice, trains in habits of accuracy and decision, gives an appreciation of the beautiful, and makes life worth living. It stirs the imagination and the soul and has a great revivifying quality. When troops are jaded on the march, music seems to help them forget that they are tired. Bands in an army are not just for entertainment; they are wonderfully useful in helping the morale.

A musical education actually begins at the knee of the mother through baby language. The kindergarten then contributes its share and then the regular classes carry on the work. A love of music unfolds in all children. Music stirs the hearts of men and so it is a means of access to the heart of the child. All children are interested in it, especially in singing.

Competitions Held

In Durham, competitions and musical festivals are held amongst the schools. Often professional music teachers are called in to train the children. Some teachers have gone to the summer schools in Toronto that they might become better qualified to teach a rote song a month. At that rate ten can be learned in a year and seventy to eighty in a school life. Who ca nmeasure the effect on after life?

A normal child can be taught music as easily as reading. Some can sing from the beginning. All can be taught to sing just as all can be taught to read. Some children sing in a monotone. They will improve with attention. One such child developed so well that he now appears before audiences as a soloist. One school had five of these children. Now four of them are singing full tone notes and the fifth one has greatly improved. Teachers must not be discouraged if results sometimes come slowly.

Hard to Get Funds

It is difficult to get music started in some schools. Some trustees are inclined to be miserly in granting funds. Concerts are given to help raise money. Parents, once music is started in a school, become enthusiastic and will not let it drop. It is good to invite parents to come to school and see the regular music taught. Some adults have actually requested to be permitted to take the lessons with the children.

One teacher has what is called a rhythmic band to develop time and rhythm. The instruments may not be the arthodox ones but they produce the desired results. One teacher had a harmonica band of forty-five children.

In some schools there are piano classes when one pupil plays on the instrument while others play on imitation keyboards. The practices are held after school hours.

The government will pay fifty per cent of the cost of establishing music up to thirty dollars in a single room school. For two-room schools it will pay up to forty dollars. Teachers are advised to get an elementary or supervisors certificates at the summer schools. There are special supervisors in Durham for some townships or parts of townships.

Colonel Snider closed by giving some opinions concerning music of many eminent men such as Gladstone, Principal Elliot of Harvard University, and others.

Oil companies in Venezuela are expected to resume their development plans shortly.

EDUCATING SCHOOL CHILDREN IN THE IMPROVING OF SPEECH

Miss Irving of Hamilton Speaks at Morning Session of Teachers' Association.

INTERESTING ADDRESS.

Miss Irving, of Hamilton Normal School, read some essays that pupils had written after taking up a picture study at yesterday morning's session of the Teachers' Convention.

She advised the correlation of art and other subjects, especially literature and history. Her topic of the morning was "How to Improve Our Speech." English children excel ours in literature and music, but ours are better in arithmetic. Some foreigners come here and make better progress than our children did. Why is this so? More time is given to reading in English schools. English parents read with their children the standard authors, and literary tastes were developed. England is rich in history. Pioneer life here hindered literary efforts. Materialism is now the chief deterrent to reading amongst us. People seem more interested in the making and spending of money.

Literature Is Hobby.

English literature is a hobby with some people. Why should it not be so here? Literature brings an added charm to life. Let us study it more. There are many little things that can be studied with great benefit. Good pronunciation is a mark of good breeding. It includes three processes — pronunciation, accentuation, and enunciation. Bad pronunciation is due to habit, and can be broken by will power. It is often due to rapid speech. Ruskin said if you read ten pages of a good book with accuracy, you are on the way to being a well-educated man.

Miss Irving passed out sheets containing large lists of words typifying the various vowel sounds. Often there are two pronunciations for a word, but we are expected to follow the Concise Imperial Dictionary. Observe others closely and scrutinize your own pronunciation of words. Children often do not know the actual spelling of a word, and mispronounce it through ignorance. Spelling should help pronunciation. People will, for example, pronounce umbrella as if it were umberella, athletic as if it were athaletic, and so forth. That indicates that they do not know the spelling. Putting the accent on the wrong syllable is a frequent fault. Often English and American dictionaries vary in their opinions as to accentuation of hosts of words. Correct enunciation is very important. Do not be slovenly. Enunciate distinctly. Use exercises for that purpose. Take sentences such as "Bring me some ice, not some mice," and drill upon them. Many individual words need attention. Do not pronounce "strength" as "strenth," "perhaps" as "praps," "Arctic" as "Artic," "text" as "tex," "found" as "foun," "give me" as "gimme," etc.

GENE PEARSON OUT

Where the Mutual burlesque circuit started the season playing a number of female impersonators, there is not a single one left.

The last of the Mutual "femmes" to drop out was Gene Pearson with the "Silk Stocking Revue." He was replaced Monday by Judy Butler.

Pearson will be remembered by Peterborough audiences as one of the "Dumbells" stars.

THEATRE NEWS

AMOS 'N' ANDY CHECK RIVALS

Insist on Avoiding Moran and Mack in R.K.O. Circuit.

A BUSINESS MOVE

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Upon Amos n Andy's insistence, R-K-O will not play the Moran and Mack stage act in any theatre as opposition to or competition with the Amos 'n' Andy talker, "Check and Double Check."

Amos 'n' Andy's attitude is that the playing of Moran and Mack with or ahead of their picture in any locality may result in confusion of the two blackface combinations. Amos 'n' Andy's interest comes from their percentage arrangement of the net on the Radio picture.

Another reported demand from Amos 'n' Andy is that Moran and Mack be kept out of the Palace, New York, during "Check and Double Check's" engagement at the Mayfair, where it opened October 31.

Moran and Mack's stage salary is $5,000.

OFF MUSICALS

Jeanette MacDonald in Dramatics With Fox.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 8. — Fox closed this week with Jeanette MacDonald on a two-year optional contract. Miss MacDonald's agreement to Paramount was a picture-to-picture arrangeemnt. She made four there.

The Fox contract will be about on the same basis with the exception Miss MacDonald will be spotted in straight dramatics, as this studio is declaring itself off musicals when the Gershwin-Gaynor efforts is completed There is a possibility the former musical comedy girl may be spotted in "Pygmalion" and "Caprice," two shows done in New York by the Theatre Guild, as her Fox debut.

A special clause will provide that Metro can borrow Miss MacDonald for the sound remake on "The Merry Widow" if it so wishes. She has been at Fox on "Princess and the Plumber," ostensibly loaned by Par.

HOARY HOKUM

Reviewer's Reference to New Ann Harding Film.

The following is a New York comment on Ann Harding's "The Girl of the Golden West":

Minnie, the Girl of the Golden West, created on the stage by Blanche Bates, and revived at the Met by Jeritza, finds a beautiful screen portrayer in Ann Harding, who plays the square-shootin', bar-keeping Girl without hinting that her lines are the least bit funny.

All the acting in "The Girl of the Golden West" is in keeping with the old-fashioned piece — and a grand melodrama it is. It's good old backbone of the American stage, with its rough diamonds, sterling virtue, villain who can lose like a gentleman and posses tracking crime through blinding snow.

That the hoary hokum story grips today's audiences is attested by sniffles greeting the scene wherein Minnie, unmindful of the waiting hangman and his noose, says a prayer for her departing sweetheart.

"CHARLIE CHANG" PLOT ALTERED

HOLLYWOOD, Nov 8.—Because anyone who has read a mystery story knows the solution, Fox for the first time is pinning the murder on another character, placing one of the author's mugs into the guilty role.

This is being done on "Charlie Chang Carries On," Earl Derr Biggers' mystery story to be directed by Hamilton MacFadden and starting in two or three weeks.

Fifi Dorsay is only member of cast so far.

SCREEN AND STAGE NOTES

Will Rogers has signed a new contract with the Fox Film Corporation under which he will appear in Movietone productions for two more years. The annouucement was made following previews of Mr. Rogers's third talking picture "Lightnin'." "A Connecticut Yankee," which goes into production soon, with Maureen O'Sullivan, John Garrick, Lumsden Hare, Myrna Loy and William V. Mong among the featured players, will be the star's last picture under the old agreement.

The property department of Radio Pictures is combing the railroad yards here for an aged and decrepit engine It must have rheumatic joints and bowlegged pistons, and will be particularly favored if it suffers from falling of the wheels and impaired exhalation. When found it will be given a featured role in "Hook, Line and Sinker," opposite Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey.

Film stars frequently receive strange gifts from admirers. James Gleason was recently the recipient of a beehive. An admirer in Tokyo sent Nick Stuart a lounging kimono embroidered with English lettering. A prisoner in Leavenworth once sent James Hall a leather belt made in prison. Before she went to Africa to make "Trader Horn," Edwina Booth received a large elephant gun and a portable typewriter. A fan in Havan saw Phyllis Haver on the screen in "Tenth Avenue" and sent her some very rare tropical fireflies. Live animals, ranging in species from dogs and ponies to canaries, turtles and ducks, are popular gifts.

As a tribute to his patrician art, George Arliss was chosen to preside at the exercises which marked the opening of the New Victoria Cinema Theatre in London recently. This theatre was constructed by the Gaumont-British Theatre Corporation at a cost of half a million pounds and is considered the most elaborate picutre house in Europe.

Maureen O'Sullivan has found professional use for the horsemanship she learned from her father, a retired British Army officer. Miss O'Sullivan has been riding for several years, and in her new picture, "The Princess and the Plumber," which Alexander Korda is directing for Fox Films, she is called upon to appear on horseback in an important sequence

The Fox Company has bought "Daddy Long Legs" for Janet Gaynor. It was understood that Fox planned to develop a sophisticated Janet and not have her continue with her little girl roles. She would be very good in "Daddy Long Legs," play which Ruth Chatterton scored in on the stage, which Mary Pickford immortalized on the screen and which Janet now has a chance to do right by in the talkies.

Ralph Forbes has been engaged to play opposite Marion Davies in "The Bachelor Father". C. Aubrey Smith, English import, Guinn Williams, Doris Lloyd and Nina Quartero are also cast.

Greta Garbo will start work in "Mata Hari" directly after completing "Inspiration", in which she is now engaged. Robert Montgomery has the chief role in "Inspiration", which is now in final stages of production at the Culver City studio of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the direction of Clarence Brown.

When Maurice Chevalier returns to the United States early next year he will be featured in "A Cavalier of the Streets," a romance by Michael Arlen, which has just been purchased by Paramount. Mr. Chevalier, now making a stage tour in his native land, will play the part of a gallant wayfarer of the boulevards who blackmails a woman, saves her from a scandal and falls in love with her.

Mack Sennett became comparatively sophisticated in his humor with the advent of the talking films, but in his new comedy "Don't Bite Your Dentist" he has reverted to his pie-throwing days. The pies thrown in these films are still in batter form so that they spread easily over the countenance of the victims.

Having seen "Outward Bound" in London in 1923, with the memory never erased, it was with much trepidation the Warner picture version was witnessed. But the whimsicalities of the play lost nothing in the transition to the screen. In fact it seems more adaptable for the screen than stage.

The film players look more etherial. Especially Leslie Howard. What a performance that man gives in the picture.

And what a cast to gather. Allison Skipworth, Beryl Mercer, Alec Francis, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Helen Chandler.

It's a screen masterpiece and who ever fails to see it is missing something.

Orpheum, Los Angeles, somehow got three broken-down "fresh air taxies" on the streets, with colored drivers, as ballyhoo for the Amos 'n' Andy picture, but when a bad accident occurred involving a one-legged war veteran whose remaining nether extremity was also broken, nobody around the Orph knew much about where the taxies came from. It developed, of course, that they weren't insured and the theatre as a result is in a jam

Jim McIntyre, of those two 'kids', McIntyre and Heath, says that Amos 'n' Andy can lay all their success and opportunity to the fact that he and Tom Heath are, and have been, financially impregnable. Jim says, "For a team to get anywhere in radio, they had to work for nothing or very little for a long time to get established on the air. Tom and I have always got our salary and took no cuts. We packed theatres in this country for years and had no time or inclination to fool around with broadcasting with its little or no dough. If we had had a good offer to broadcast four or five years ago, there would be no Amos 'n' Andy to-day because those boys are a sure enough copy of Tom and myself."

McIntyre and Heath have been doing a nigger act for 30 years and have developed most of what the present blackface acts use for ideas and personality.

MARQUIS HAS A JOB

And May Marry Constance Bennett, Hollywood Gossips.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 8.—Gloria Swanson has tied up under a contract with United Artists. Her present untitled as yet picture will be the final one made by her for Joe. P. Kennedy under his agreement.

Meanwhile pending the outcome of her divorce action against the Marquis deFallaise, more familiarly called Hank, her husband is continuing to act as the manager for Constance Bennett at a salary of $500 weekly. Miss Bennett is under contract to Pathe

Just now Hank is under instruction to make a French version of "The Queen's Husband" for Radio Pictures as its studio out here.

It is said if Miss Swanson secures her divorce the Marquis and Miss Bennett will marry.

WOMEN OFFENDED

Brailowsky, Pianist, Says They Are a "Calamity."

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 8.—Several local women's organizations have adopted resolutions requesting the local symphony orchestra association not to bring back Alexander Brailowsky, noted pianist, as a soloist next season.

It's all the result of a front page newspaper interview. The interview, given out by Brailowsky the day before his concert with the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra quotes the pianist as saying: "Women are not a hobby—they're a calamity."

Said Brailowsky: "I'd much rather spend my spare time with my dogs and horses than waste it gossiping with a woman."

The pianist received a very cool reception from his audience of 4,000 people, about two-thirds women

KAY FRANCIS STARS

Exotic Type of Beauty in New Film.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—Kay Francis emerges from "The Virtuous Sin" as a fine actress giving substance to serious scenes and tossing off comedy with lightness and skill. She photographs charmingly with an exotic type of beauty appropriate to the part of Marya Ivanova.

Jobyna Howland registers grand laughs with her knowledge of the comedy value in prima donna gestures She overplays, but is good fun as a would-be grand dame keeper of a Russian restaurant.

The film is melodramatic ham, excellently prepared and served with touches of delightful comedy. Despite a sloppy ending, it's swell entertainment.

FLAGPOLE SITTER BROKE

Ted La Fay, Champion, in Serious Condition.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Ted La Fay, former stunt man who has appeared at fairs and carnivals and who recently turned flagpole sitter, came down from his perch on the pole of the R-K-O-'s Golden Gate theatre after up there 76 days. He is now under the care of a physician and his condition is reported serious.

La Fay remained aloft 76 days in the hope that by breaking the flagpole sitting record he'd get a few real engagements for himself. While on the pole he received two offers, both pretty liberal, but he wanted more money. No more offers came, He received nothing from the theatre for the stunt

Now that he's down all he's got for his effort is a more or less dubious championship which doesn't seem to mean anything. His health is pretty well shot and he's broke.

MISS COLBERT ILL

Claudette Colbert has been confined to bed at her New York apartment by a slight illness. She returned with her husband, Norman Foster, two weeks ago from a six months' trip around the world.

Miss Colbert's next for Paramount with Frederic March, starting around Nov 15, is scheduled for the Long Island studio.

Foster has gone to the coast, as he's opposite Clara Bow in Par's "No Limit."

INSTITUTE MEETS

Miss Kathleen Sisson entertained the members of the Women's Institute at her home in Ida on Wednesday afternoon for the November meeting. Owing to different events in the community on the same day, the attendance was not as large as is usual.

The President, Mrs. G. Shield, presided, while Miss Kathleen Sisson, assistant secretary, filled the office of the secretary. Mrs. A. Tully, who was unable to be present.

The roll-call, "Practical Christmas Suggestions" was answered by five members who gave some very interesting suggestions in that line, such as the giving of a good book, which may be purchased in cheaper bindings to suit the average price, the making of dainty aprons to match the costume, also the fancy black and colored small silk apron, which is advocated as coming in vogue again, the hoover work aprons. Scarfs to be worn under the coat, which may be made very attractive looking from material by the yard and hemstitched and picot edge. One member also gave the suggestion "to not give an expensive gift to any one who may not be in a position to afford exchange a gift of the same value.

Several letters of correspondence was read asking for donations for various causes, this matter was left over until the next meeting.

A card of thanks was read from the family of the late Mrs. Brown, after which the president expressed the loss the Institute has sustained in the loss of a very devoted member, who has been loyal to the Institute for a number of years. Mrs. Brown always was interested in the program of the meeting, seldom failed to do her share and was faithful in attendance, being present at the last meeting.

The members were asked to contribute their recipes to the committee in charge Mrs. T. G. Morden and Mrs. E. McLean, as soon as possible, in order to have the cook book ready for the December meeting.

Mrs. Thos. Graham, Mrs. H. Rutherford and Mrs. W. H. Lowes, were a committee appointed to look after the making of material for a bale or local relief if necessary. The president extended an invitation received from the Ladies Aid of Bethel United church to the members of the Women's Institute and their husbands, to meet with them on the evening of November 19th, at the home of Mrs. Richard James.

This kind invitation was accepted by the members on motion of Mrs. Ira Lowe and Mrs. Hannah Rutherford.

Mrs. Thos. Graham and Mrs. Bert Morden were in charge of the program, the latter being absent. Mrs. Graham gave a splendid paper on one of the subjects for the meeting: "Canadian Women who write." Mrs. Rutherford gave a reading on "Thanksgiving." Mrs. Shield gave a seclction received while "listening in."

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Garnet Shield and Mrs. Ira Lowe, when a pleasant half hour was enjoyed over the tea cups.

ARTICLES OF INTEREST TO THE FARMER

RESULTS SHOW YOUNGER STEERS WILL MAKE THE CHEAPEST GAINS

Dairy Types Make Gains Chiefly in Growth of Frame—Not Profitable.

EXPERIMENTS SHOWN

There are many factors that influence the profits to be derived from steer feeding during the winter months. The steers must be of sufficiently good type that they will finish well and command top prices on the market. The age and size of steer to put in for winter feeding is another factor to be considered, as is the quantity and quality of feed supply, the housing conditions under which they are fed, and the spread between buying and selling price.

The Dominion Experimental Farm at Nappan, Nova Scotia, has been conducting feeding experiments for upwards of thirty years in an attempt to solve some of these problems. Space does not permit discussing off of the experiments carried on, but detailed information may be obtained by writing to the Superintendent.

Dairy Types Unprofitable

It has been found that dairy-type steers are not profitable feeders. While good gains may be obtained, they are due chiefly to the growth of frame and the accumulation of fat and the buyer discriminates against this type of steer, because of the low quality of meat produced. Two experiments carried on during 1928 to 1930 comparing heavy, medium and light weight steers, resulted as follows:

Average weight in fall—Heavy, 1096 lbs.; medium, 947 lbs.; Light, (Chiefly yearlings and 2-year-olds), 835 lbs.

Average daily gain per steer—Heavy, 2.08 lbs.; Medium, 1.96 lbs.; Light, (Chiefly yearlings and 2-year-olds), 2.07 lbs.

Feed cost per pound gain—Heavy, 15.43 cents; Medium, 16.78 cents; Light, (Chiefly yearlings and 2-year-olds), 14.80 cents.

Four experiments comparing heavy and light meal feeding gave the following results:

Average weight in fall—Heavy meal ration, 966 lbs; Medium meal ration, 965 pounds; Light meal ration, 977 lbs.

Average pounds meal fed per steer per day—Heavy meal ration, 8.33 lbs; Medium meal ration, 6.32 lbs.; Light meal ration, 4.24 lbs.

Average daily gain per steer—Heavy meal ration, 1.92 lbs; Medium meal ration, 1.88 lbs.; Light meal ration, 1.43 lbs.

Feed cost per pound gain—Heavy meal ration, 17.3 cents; Medium meal ration, 15.6 cents; Light meal ration, 17.2 lbs.

Younger Steers Best

The results would indicate that the younger steer, if well developed, would make the cheapest gains, and the feeding of an average of 6 to 7 pounds of meal per day, or starting at 2 pounds and finishing on 8 lbs. per day would give the most economical results.

It has been found that a spread between buying and selling price of at least 2.5 cents per pound is necessary in order to make a profit.

The steers fed at this farm are given, in addition to the meal mixture, good quality hay and turnips or silage. The latter feeds may be fed up to 40 pounds per day with good results.

Several meal mixtures have been used and the following has given good results when fed with roots or silage and good quality mixed hay: Crushed oats, 200 pounds; bran, 150 pounds; oil meal, 50 pounds and cornmeal or barley, 100 pounds. The amount of cornmeal is increased gradually until during the last month there are 250 pounds in the mixture. Barley may be substituted for cornmeal with good results.

Ten Years' Record Of the Good Hens

Ten years in operation of the Canadian Record of Performance for Poultry under the supervision of the Dominion Live Stock Branch has resulted in 51,945 banded birds having qualified for R. O. PP. certificates, having laid at least 150 eggs during the record year, while an additional 17,907 hens laying 225 eggs or more each during the record year have qualified for R.O.P. Advanced certificates. Record of Performance is a poultry grading medium open to commerical and farm flocks throughout Canada through which the real production qualities of hens is determined and established in tangible form.

FOREIGN SEED IMPORT IS HIGH

Amount for Farm Crops Bought Outside Canada is Surprising.

1,000 TONS TO END OF JUNE

It is rather surprising to most Canadians to realize that huge quantities—millions of pounds— of seeds for farm crops, much of which could be produced in Canada, are imported annually. Seed imports for the year ending June 30, 1930, totalled nearly 1,000 tons.

The Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture furnish the following information with respect to the principal seed importations into Canada for the year ending June 30, 1930:

Clovers (1,285,373 lbs.) principally from the United States; Timothy (8,361,808 lbs.) from the United States; other grasses (899,583 lbs.) from the United States, Great Britain and New Zealand; Cereals (116,752 lbs.) principally from the United States; Peas and Beans (107,222 lbs.) from the United States and Great Britain; Field Corn (2,604,840 lbs.) from the United States; Mangels and Turnips (140,437 lbs.) from Great Britain, France, Holland and the United States; Garden Peas (3,532,743 lbs.) principally from the United States; Garden Corn (1,122,392 lbs.) from the United States; Other Garden Vegetable Seeds (1,592,697 lbs.) from the United States, Great Britain, Holland, France, Denmark, Germany, Italy, New Zealand, Belgium, China and Japan.

19 YEAR MOTHER TO BE DEPORTED

Wife of Canadian Born Chinese Anxiously Awaits Final Word From Ottawa.

HAS STRANGE HISTORY.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 8. — Gee Shu Moy, 19 year old wife of Canadian-born Chinese, the mother of a five months old son, also born in Canada, and herself a resident of this country for six months, anxiously awaits word from Ottawa which will decide whether or not she shall be deported.

While sympathy was expressed for her by Mr. Justice F. B. Gregory in Supreme Court when he ordered deportation of Gee Shu Moy, yet he said, he could not find she had acquired a Canadian domicile because she originally entered the country illegally. His Lordship elicited a promise from counsel for the Immigration Department that the girl would not be deported until further representations had been made on her behalf to Ottawa. It is this final word that is now being awaited.

Bought For $100.

When 13 years of age, Gee Shu Moy was purchased for $100 in China and brought to Canada by Wong Chung Fong, who passed her off as his own daughter, stating that she had been born in British Columbia. She was landed at Victoria, B.C., in October, 1924. She lived with her foster father in Vancouver, where she worked in a restaurant, and Wong Chung Fong kept all her earnings.

The marriage of the girl in July, 1929, to Lim Fat Chung, was opposed by the foster parent, who charged her husband with abduction. The charge was dismissed in police court, but the case reached the ears of immigration officials, who brought about the present deportation proceedings.

MACHINERY CARE ESSENTIAL PART OF GOOD FARMING

Two Important Points Are Proper Lubrication and Immediate Breakage Repairs.

KEEP MAINTENANCE COSTS

Shed to House All Implements One of Very Best Investments.

Larger machines, greater numbers and higher prices have combined to increase considerably the average farm investment in machinery in recent years. It was estimated in 1929 that the average Manitoba farm had nearly $2,000 worth of implements on which the annual charge for depreciation and repairing alone, amounts to $460. An investment as costly as this, to be profitable, requires that machinery should not only operate efficiently but that the life of usefulness should be as long as possible. This cannot be expected unless good care is given.

The seventeen Illustration Stations in Manitoba and Eastern Saskatchewan, under supervision of the Dominion Experimental Farms, are a source for useful data relative to the cost of operation, the life period, and, the influence of care on machinery. The majority of operators on these stations agree that there are two main essentials contributing towards the profitable use of a machine, (a) durability of build (b) the care given. As to what care should be accorded a machine there is, however, a difference of opinion. It is generally conceded that proper lubrication and prompt repairing are necessary, but, as to housing some do not think it pays to build a shed for machinery, while others consider the implement shed a very valuable part of the farm equipment.

Granting that the importance of timely and thorough lubrication is fully recognized, and, that unless breakages are promptly repaired, they often lead to a disastrous end, the more debatable point of shelter for machinery will be discussed.

It is far too common a practice on prairie farms to leave a machine in the field where it was last used until it is again to be put into action. A high priced seed drill may be seen in a field at harvest time being cut around and left in a smother of grain and weeds. A binder may sit along a fence row to decay throughout its long season of inactivity while other implements of lesser or even greater importance find resting places which are far from suitable to their preservation. The best and most profitable place for such machinery is not even in carefully placed rows in the corner of the farmyard but in a suitable shed which need not cost much to erect.

This is the opinion of a large number of Manitoba farmers who have implement sheds and who carefully store their machinery in them for the long winter season, and who take a pride in keeping machinery thus stored in good shape. In fact, care of machinery and good farming go hand in hand for it is generally observed that the man who takes a pride in keeping his implements in good shape, in maintaining a tidy yard and farm by placing these implements in a shed especially for the winter, is a farmer who is neat and thorough in all his work. He knows that tools in poor shape cannot do good work and that the results of inefficient work are decreased cash returns.

Another factor usually overlooked, but, which affects materially the care given machinery, is the cost of maintainance and operation. Machinery accounts are so infrequently kept that farmers have little idea how expensive it is to operate a machine. So high are the running expenses for many of our recently introduced large machines that if accounts were kept showing this, there would be a greater incentive to take particular care both while the machine is in operation and while it is idle. During the last two years the Division of Illustration Stations, Brandon Experimental Farm, sent out questionaires to 200 farmers relative to the operation of harvester threshers. None of the replies carried complete cost of operating data while only 20 per cent were able to give any of these data at all.

These days when it is so essential to lower the cost of production, chiefly by the use of labor saving machinery, it is very necessary indeed to know what it costs to operate a machine and to give such careful attention as will ensure for it a longer and more profitable life.

WONDERFUL NEW MILKING PLANT HANDLES FIFTY COWS AT ONE TIME

Rotary Combine Comes as Result of Many Years' Experiment.

OPENING NOVEMBER 13.

November 13 is the official opening day of the wonderful new Walker-Gordon milking plant, which will occupy the attention of the entire dairy world.

Unquestionably this new plant is one of the most spectacular and important developments that has ever occurred in the dairy world and the opening of this plant on November 13 is being made the occasion of a great meeting of dairy leaders and authorities throughout the entire country.

Secretary Hyde, of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, will deliver an address, as will other notables, and Thomas Edison will press the button which officially starts this wonderful system in operation.

The proceedings of this meeting will be broadcast through 42 radio stations over what is known as the National Farm and Home Hour and will be heard in Peterborough over WJZ, WJR, WHAM and KDKA.

For many years they have been investigating milking machines, and several years ago came to the conclusion that certain principles incorporated in the De Laval system of milking were correct, and they asked the De Laval organization to co-operate with them in designing and building a new milking plant.

The general idea of this system was developed by Mr. Henry W. Jeffers, President of Walker-Gordon, after many years of investigation and research, and this, in brief, applies the well-known industrial principle of bringing the work to the operator instead of the operator to the work. In this case the cows are brought instead of the operators going to the cows.

De Laval Principle

The milking machine equipment was designed and perfected by De Laval engineers, and while much of this equipment is especially designed, yet the principle of milking is exactly the same as that of all De Laval Magnetic Milkers and the milking itself is exactly the same as that of the De Laval Magnetic.

This new system of milking, which is known as the Rotary Combine Milking System, consists of a revolving platform upon which are placed 50 stanchions. The platform revolves slowly, completing a revolution in 12½ minutes.

This platform is house in a beautiful new building which not only contains the milking system but a complete of offices and laboratories. The interior of the building is beautifully tiled and in the center of the platform is a large observation room, glassed in, where visitors may observe the milking operation.

At Walker-Gordon farm over 1,500 cows are maintained in individual barns of 100 each. The barns are connected by a central covered areaway, which in reality converts all the barns into one.

The cows are brought to the Rotary Combine Milker through lanes and are conducted to the revolving platform through a tiled passageway.

As the cow comes to the end of the passageway she steps onto the revolving platform and one after another does so until all the stanchions are filled.

Washed At Start

When a cow begins her ride around the platform, for the first few feet she is being washed and cleaned; next operator cleans and dries the udder, and adjoining him is another operator who does nothing but draw samples of foremilk from the cows.

At this point the teat-cups of the milker are attached to the cows and for the rest of the ride, until just before the end, the cows are being milked.

As the platform is being revolved milking continues and it is possible to see streams of milk running into the glass jars, and the exact amount of milk each cow produces is plainly visible.

As the cow nears the end of a complete revolution, the milking is then completed and the operator removes the teat-cups from the cow. The milked cow then walks off the platform through the passageway which leads down through the center of the building, and walks back to her individual stanchion in her own barn.

Just after the cow which has been milked steps off the platform her milk is released from the glass jar into an automatic weighing device from which the milk is then magnetically released and drawn through sanitary pipes into the milk bottling room.

In the meantime the platform keeps on turning and there is always a cow waiting to take the place of the one which has just vacated her position. Therefore it can be seen that milking is a continuous process. A constant stream of cows walk onto the platform and after a brief ride are completely milked and walk off. Each time the platform completes one revolution 50 cows have been milked.

Only 4.9 per cent of the insured population of Sussex county, England, is out of work.

PRINCE OF WALES SHOWING LAMB AT WINTER FAIR

Much Guessing as to What Price the Royal Entry Will Bring.

IN MARKET CLASS

Canadians Eat Less Than 6 Pounds Per Person of Lamb a Year.

H.R.H. the PPrince of Wales, Canadian rancher momentarily absent from home, has, by his entry for the Royal Winter Fair, come very near to a biblical reminiscence. In addition to half a dozen Clydesdale and Belgian horses for exhibit at the forthcoming Royal, the Prince has entered, not the "one ewe lamb," but one wether lamb in the market classes. It is one of the conditions of these classes that all animals must be sold at auction at the Fair, and already there is a good deal of wise guessing as to what a Royal lamb is worth when sold at a Royal show, and also how many lamb chops can be cut from it, where they will go, and whether they will taste differently with mint sauce from other and more plebeian lamb. Incidentally, the Prince's share in lamb production, though measuring in this case only one above zero, has an interest to all Canadians in bringing home through the Royal the fact that lamb is the one staple meat of which less than six pounds per person a year are consumed in Canada compared with over 200 pounds by our fellow subjects in Australia and New Zealand.

3,700,000 Sheep in Canada

Of course, the Prince's lamb is numerically not very important among 3,700,000 sheep and lambs in Canada to-day, though in a way it resembles the kirtle of Shenstone's "School-mistress," that was "hodden grey but it was her own." Besides it is a very modest, retiring, shrinking sort of lamb. It was, in fact, almost overlooked among the entries of horses and if it had not gone straying, as Aesop said lambs are prone to, into the wrong record book, the attention of the entry clerk of the Royal would not have been pointedly drawn to it.

Yet, just as some men "have greatness thrust upon them," the Prince's lamb is now obviously unique among our Dominion lambs in having a whole news-paragraph with the frills of Hebraic, Greek and classic English references like this devoted to it —especially a paragraph in which the paragraphist has firmly fought to the end to ignoble temptation to make any reference whatever to Mary's pesky little wooly.

Brighton Manufacturer Given Eight Year Term

COBOURG, Ont., Nov. 8. (CP)— An attempt to avert suspicion by returning to the scene of the hold-up ostensibly to lend aid was the undoing of John Bolderstone, Brighton man sentenced to 8 years and 12 lashes. Magistrate Floyd of Cobourg imposed the penalty in Brighton police court yesterday. Bolderstone was recognized by a member of Robert Ross family after he had clubbed Ross almost into insensibility with a stout club in an attempt to rob him. Ross is a Brighton manufacturer.

POTATOES ARE FINE SUBSTITUTE IN PLACE OF CORN IN LAYING MASH

Hatchability Found Superior Where Corn Replaces Potatoes.

FOUR-YEAR TEST

During the past four years experiments have been conducted at the to determine the value of potatoes as a substitute for corn. This work was begun in 1926 and covered a period each year from December 1 to May 31. In each instance, fifteen Barred Rock pullets were included in each pen at the beginning of the experiment and no birds were replaced during the period.

Group 1 was fed a standard ration of scratch grain consisting of 200 pounds cracked corn, 200 hundred pounds feed wheat, 100 pounds oats, and a mash fed in hoppers, consisting of 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds wheat middlings, 100 pounds corn meal, 100 pounds crushed oats, 20 pounds bone char, 4 pounds salt, 5 pounds charcoal. Grit, oyster shell, green feed, skim-milk and water were also supplied.

Some Scratch Grain Mixture

Group 2 was fed the same scratch grain mixture as Group 1. Instead of receiving a dry mash, as Group 1, they were fed twice a day moist mash consisting of 100 pounds wheat middlings, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds crushed oats, 15 pounds bone char, 3 pounds salt, and 5 pounds charcoal mixed with boiled potatoes. The proportion fed were two parts of potatoes (raw weight) to one part mash. Grit, oyster shell, skim-milk, green feed and water were also supplied.

Where potatoes were substitues for corn in the mash, the results over a period of four years gave an average production of 89.65 as compared with 84.13 for corn. This would indicate that potatoes are a valuable feed for egg production, but involve a little more labor than when corn is used. The hatching results were not quite so encouraging. The fertility of the eggs was highest where potatoes replaced corn, but the hatch ability was superior where corn replaced potatoes.

Market for Hay Quiet at Present

The hay market is reported to be quiet throughout Canada at present. There is practically no export movement as yet and the open autumn with good late pastures has held back the domestic demand. Seasonal demand in principal domestic markets is absorbing a relatively small quantity of hay. Lumbering, mining, and other interests are just commencing to buy their inter supply.

A large quantity of surplus hay in production districts is available for sale when the demand comes. The quality of the hay in Alberta is good due to the fine weather in which it was saved.

Current prices, per ton baled, to growers:

In Western Ontario at country points—No. 2 timothy, $12 to $13.50; No. 3 $11.50 to $12; timothy mixtures, $11.50 to $12; alfalfa, 1st cut, $11 to $14; 2nd cut, $15 to $18.

Ex-track Toronto—No. 2 timothy, $15 to $15.50; No. 3, $13.50 to $14.

Eastern Ontario in the Ottawa Valley—No. 2 timothy, $9 to $11; stock hay, $8.

MORE FERTILIZERS NOW BEING USED

Mixed and Superphosphates Used Widely by Ontario Fall Wheat Growers.

386 BRANDS FOR SALE

During 1929 Canadian farmers used five times as much fertilizer as they did in 1923. A statement issued by the Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture shows consumption in 1929 amounted to 227,000 tons. This is rather conclusive evidence that the chemical era has been definitely established in connection with the production of Canadian farm crops.

There are two principal trade seasons for fertilizer, spring and autumn. The Maritime Provinces and Quebec use large quantities of European basic slag, a by-product of the steel industry, in connection with autumn plowing, while Ontario fall wheat growers used substantial quantities of mixed fertilizers and superphosphates for sowing with winter wheat in September. The great bulk of fertilizer consumption comes in the spring, the quantity used last year having been 200,000 tons. It is coming into general use on the farms throughout Canada with the exception of the Prairie Provinces.

During 1929 there were 386 fertilizers of different formulae registered for sale in Canada, most of them coming within the class term "complete fertilizer," containing percentages of all three of the principal plant foods, nitrogen, phosphate acid and potosh.

All fertilizers for sale in Canada require to be registered with the Dominion Seed Branch in accordance with the provisions of the Fertilizers Act.

PARADE ORDER FOR LAKEFIELD LEGION

Armistice Day to be Celebrated in Manner Befitting Occasion.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 8. (Examiner Correspondence.)—Armistice Day will be celebrated this year in a manner befitting the occasion, by the Canadian Legion, cadets of both schools, the pupils of the schools and citizens of Lakefield generally.

At ten o'clock the parade will start from the school grounds, proceeding down Chippewa avenue to Strickland street and west to Queen street, down Queen street to the cenotaph where a service will be held. It is probable that the school children will march ahead, leaving the grounds ahead of the adult parade and arriving about the same time at the grounds.

This year Lakefield has a permanent and fitting war memorial and around this the celebration of the day will centre; when remembrance of the forty-three or more men whose sacrifice and service is honored by the Celtic Cross, will be brought home to each heart.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The Fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next cold and wet, and unless the mother is on her guard, the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent colds, or if it does come on suddenly their prompt use will relieve the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

CAVAN.

The following is a paper from the pen of our veteran Institute demonstrator and organizer, Mrs. Laura Rose Stephens, Ottawa.

It contains the pith of the ideal for which our Institute stands in the lives of its members.

"Our Dominant Mood."

When we talk of a person being in a mood, we usually think it is something of a vanishing disposition or indisposition. We say "She is moody today". Now a mood is not that. A mood is the persistent element of our mind. We do not think of our mind as we should; we do not guard it as we should, for what a woman thinks when she is about her work, thinks when she is at leisure, thinks after she goes to bed, influences her feelings and her actions. It is the test of her nature. Now putting this question to yourself, what is your dominant mood? What do you think about that dominates your feelings, your actions more than anything else? Wherever a woman is too cleanly, that is her dominant mood, and I say woe betide the man who gets her, and her children too. One lady had her house all done over with beautiful floors, and her boy of twelve had to sit on the kitchen stoop outside to take off his boots every time he went into the house. Over-cleanliness, fussiness over her home dominates her.

Then we have the woman whose dominant mood is charity. Her every thought seems to be a kindly one about somebody else. There is the complaining mood. What a dreary world the woman who is always complaining makes. Nothing satisfies her. A terrible mood to nurture. Get rid of it if you possibly can.

The mood of cheerfulness—that is wonderful. A lovely persons to live with is she who can always find something to praise, to be thankful for.

The thrift mood is commendable, like everything else in reason. It is the extravagance of the poor that makes them poor very often. Thrift does not mean being too economical. Economy is not stinginess. Don't encourage the stingy feeling, don't squeeze every penny before you let it go. Life can be very miserable for yourself and for your children if you indulge in that mood.

Next comes the melancholy mood. Some people are only happy when they are miserable. They like to recount all the ills and misfortunes that have ever befallen them. If they have had an operation they can talk for hours on that. Don't keep things to yourself. There is too much sorrow and pain in the world without you thrusting yours into the ears of somebody else.

There is also the sympathetic mood. One should be able to have a smile for every joy, a tear for every sorrow. A wonderfully comforting person to go to is the sympathetic persons, but sometimes in our life we are so busy that we cannot take time to sympathize. It takes so very little often to be kind.

Some people have the work mood. A good one again, in reason. If overdone, it makes you rather hard to live with, and it makes you very hard on yourself. Some women have the work habit, so hopelessly that they take their knitting to prayer-meeting.

Self control is one thing we women need to practice more than anything else. I go to bed ready to cry some nights, because I have been too hasty with my tongue. We can learn self control from our native Indians.

A number of Indian chiefs were tendered a dinner in the city of Washington. On the table was cayenne pepper. They saw some of the men putting a little dash on their food and they thought it looked pretty good. One Indian chief shook a big splash on his plate put it on his fork and ate it. Instantly the very fires of hades were in his throat and mouth. Tears ran down his cheeks, and the lady next to him said: "What are you crying for?" And he answered: "I am crying over the death of my grandmother." The next Indian chief did the same thing and he swallowed it. Never a muscle moved, but the tears would not be checked. The first chief said: "What are you crying for?" He answered: "I am crying because you didn't die with your grandmother!" But there was no exclamation. There was perfect self-control.

Some have a passion for self-adornment. Perhaps it has taken possession too much of our girls. There was a little girl who said to her grandmother: "Grandmother did the girls in your age set their caps for the young men?" And the grandmother answered: "Yes, my dear they did; but not their knee-caps."

Self-adornment does mean a great deal to us and we cannot be too particular about our own personal appearance. Still we don't want it to obsess us or let it be our dominant mood.

If our leisure can be used properly, it reduces our concern about many other things. We must keep our recreation along healthy and truly recreating lines.

The best and last mood is the love mood. If there is one thing for which this old world is starving, it is the expression of love. We take too much for granted in our homes. A friend of mine said the regret of her life was that she could not go up and kiss her children. She was Scotch, and when they were young she put them off her knee and ceased to kiss and caress them as she feared pampering them. Don't get out of the love habit. Demonstrate it on every proper occasion, in every proper place. Don't let it die out. It is the one thing that the world needs most of all. We have had this emphasized in our Great Master. I was so glad to hear our president and D. Patterson speak of the character of Christ. That should be the dominating character in the the mysterious fires have consumed upbuilding of youth. We are getting too far away from the Book and its teachings.

Christ's dominant mood was loving sympathy. He went along showing it in helpfulness, in healing, in feeding, in comforting, and if we want as women, a rounded out womanhood, if we want our dominant mood to be one that people will admire and that will be most helpful, then we must take that for our example."

There is much in this paper which will appeal to the women of our Institutes, and this year is a good time to think over it and strive to carry out its suggestion. During his time of depression and for many extreme want, caused by unemployment, we can do much to help if together and individually we strive to do what we can to make this world a better and a happier place in which to live.

A little from everyone, whether it be help in food clothing or money will help to bear the burden of those whom circumstances, perhaps over which they have no control, have reduced to want.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

This is one opportunity the Women's Institute is a boon to its community in providing recreation and amusement. It is interesting to read of the different methods taken by different branches to add to the funds in the treasury and to provide recreation and maintain interest. One institute writes that as soon as January comes along they begin to plan for their annual "at home," which is always held in that month.

The question comes up, Shall we have a social evening, cards and dancing, or an oyster supper? She says they usually compromise and have a little bit of cards and dancing and a great deal of oysters. Some do not approve of cards and dancing and others do, so by planning an evening like this, we make every one feel at home and no one seems left out.

In February comes St. Valentine and we have a penny tea and a sale of articles made from a yard of cotton to be sold for not more than 25 cents. All the members bring something for lunch.

At the March meeting, this same Institute plans to have an interesting paper on St. Patrick, and a successful chicken raiser tells her method of caring for and raising chickens.

April brings hints for housecleaning. How interesting to have a year's program well planned and arranged for.

At the May meeting "Hints on Gardening" is a common topic while the members exchange plants, seeds, slips and bulbs.

A number of institutes have undertaken to purchase a quantity of fall bulbs and distribute them among the members.

WARSAW.

The country Women's Association of Australia has existed for only eight years. A Mrs. Hugh R. Munro, of New South Wales, was responsible for what is the greatest and most influential organization of women in Australia. In the "Gossip" department of the Stock and Station Journal of N.S.W., Robert McMillan spoke of the need of some such work. Mrs. Munro felt she had some support, and offered to help. A conference was called in April, 1922, by Miss Florence Jordon, editress of the paper, and as a result the organization started.

Both Mr. McMillan and Miss Jordon have since died.

Mrs. Munro was a woman of some means. Her vision was for the betterment of conditions in the Australian bush. She was the first president, and with determination, seal and unselfishness, set out to bring her vision to reality. At her own expense she traveled thousands of miles to tell of the possibility of better maternity care, motor ambulances, child welfare instruction, social halls and clubs, better telephone service, more social life and recreation for the lonely bush homes.

She felt well-to-do people should come to the aid of these lonely homes, and in season and out put her ideas before them.

At first she did not meet much encouragement. The public was not very enthusiastic, and was often hostile. Many would have been discouraged, but Mrs. Munro did not know the meaning of failure, and finally her ideas took root in other minds, and the County Women's Association obtained a firm footing, and now carries on a splendid work in N.S.W. and Queensland.

Mrs. Hubert Fairfax, of Queensland very soon saw Mrs. Munro's vision. She was a woman possessing extraordinary persuasive powers and executive ability, and a few months after the organization was started in N.S.W. it was started in Queensland. Their motto is Service for Country Women, Through Country Women, by Country Women.

Over thirty thousand members, as well as uncounted other bush dwellers in that far-off sister country have good reason to rise up and call it blessed.

Later, organizations have been formed in the other provinces of Australia, as told before.

In many ways Canadian women may take an especial interest in Australia, as though conditions and modes of life are different, in some ways it may be considered more like ourselves than any other of the British Dominions.

MILLBROOK

A discussion on "Common Colds" in a northern Institute meeting, brought the advice from the local medical practitioner, "Turn your back on your neighbor, if he has a cold; and tell him why. There are seventy different kinds of colds. Don't mix them. Especially don't give your kind to the baby." A study of this subject, particularly at this season, is recommended as profitable for any branch at its regular meeting.

"Do you wish your children to be as you would like to see them? Then remember to have straight-limber, fresh-complexioned, clear-headed, and good-tempered boys and girls the homemaker must study the matter of diet intensively, since she is responsible for their 'eating for brains and good temper,'" declares a well-known speaker at Institute conventions. "Keep to the front the body-builders in the form of fresh eggs, milk, cheese, meat, fish, and poultry. And do not neglect the cereals. Heat and energy come from the sugars, starches, and fats—sugar being supplied by syrup, sugar, honey, sweet fruits, preserves, jams and jellies; starches by wheat, corn rice, barley, oats, rye, tapioca, sago potatoes, carrots and paranips. The regulators, so necessary, yet so frequently neglected, are green-leaf vegetables, apples, cabbage, spinach, tomatoes, that the thirty feet of digestive tract may be kept clean, and in working order."

During a discussion on the amount of work a woman should do within and without her home at an Institute gathering, one members rather electrified the others by her statement: "Don't be too sensitive; one should be governed by her own good judgment just about how much work she can stand, and not by what others think she should do. I used to help my husband in the fields, and one day a neighbor happening along, said: "It's cheaper to hire a man than to pay doctor bills." We paid little attention at the time, but later found his words were exactly true. My husband paid in doctors' and hospital bills more than would have paid three hired men. From my own experience I advise all women to work, but refuse to go beyond your strength."

From another member's contribution to the discussion came the information, "I know a woman who helps her husband a great deal, she milks, feed pigs and calves, does practically everything for her five children, and having her mother to live with her, the sewing for the whole family is done in the home. I am inclined to think, however, that the splendid health of which she boasts will eventually break down, and how much farther ahead will she be than the rest of us who do not cover such a wide scope in our daily activities?"

Yet another had this to add: "I do the best I can, and if others manager twice or three times as much, all well and good: I find it best to suit myself. I have four children, and I find plenty to do to keep the house reasonably tidy, and their clothes mended, with the daily cooking, etc., without trying to bake my own bread, or make all their clothes. I believe country women should not be so overworked that they cannot take time to look up and see 'the heavens declare the glory of God,' or notice around them the wonderful evidences of His handiwork. I rather agree with the writer who recently said we, who live in the country, ought to have a clearer vision and a stronger faith, because we grow up seeing the stars and the daisies, and are not always among high buildings and electric lights, which shut out the view."

Just as a concluding thought, there came the comment on the mother soaring her daughter and trying herself to do all the work. "A light-footed mother makes a heavy-footed daughter. One of the reasons why young people dislike work may be found by pondering on this old saying."

FASHION SERVICE

913

The flaring circular skirt is no doubt one of the most popular fashions with the growing girl. It gives a sophistication that is truly smart.

The curbed seaming of this model is particularly young. It just pretends a hip yoke with the long waisted bodice belted at the natural waistline. The collarless neckline is interesting feature and best suited for classroom. Tab cuffs trim the long sleeves with slight fulness below the elbow.

Style No. 913 is designed for girls of 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

Of course little daughter will want a dress for more formal occasions. This same pattern may be used. Note the miniature view with cape collar and short sleeves. Dark brown velvet or silk crepe is lovely for its development. It will be completely disguised from the school dress with its new neckline.

Wool jersey ,covert cloth, lightweight tweed and the heavier weight cottons are ideal selections for service.

Size 8 requires 2 1-8 yards 39-inch with 3-8 yard 39-inch contrasting.

Pattern price 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

We suggest that when you send for thi pattern, you enclose 10 cents additionals for a copy of our new Fall and Winter Fashion Magazine. A copy should be in every home, for of course every woman wants to look her best without great expense, and this book points the way.

Warkworth Institute Apoints Delegates

WARKWORTH, Nov. 8. (Examiner Correspondence) Mrs. Joseph Greenly and Mrs. George Helson, Jr., were appointed delegates to attend the Women's Institute convention to be held at Belleville, at the regular meeting of the local branch of the Institute held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the former.

Mrs. Lorne Hutchinson, second vice president, was in the chair and following the business transactions, the roll call was answered by Thanksgiving thoughts.

Mrs. Will Potter was in charge of the program. Mrs. Will Campbell contributed a solo, which was much appreciated. Mrs. A. M. Smale gave an interesting talk on "Know Canada Better", illustrating her subject with one hundred and fifty slides, which were beautifully colored. Among those places shown was the lift locks at Peterborough.

A dainty lunch was served and a social half hour enjoyed.

What To-day Means To You

"SCORPIO"

If November 8th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11 a.m. to noon, from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., and from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. The danger periods are from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. and from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Relaxing influences will be in force on this date—a non-worrying time, and inattention to business. Happy times within the home, and the burial of all feud hatchets. Some slight health trouble. Hopeful outlook.

The child born on this November 8th will give way to violent fits of passion and will need to learn self-control. It will be both sympathetic and kind, and will always regret hasty words or actions. It will be a very good student and a diligent worker.

Lack of self-confidence and nerve will not keep those born on a November 8th back in this world. You almost selfishly look out for Number One, and you elbow your way to your desired goals. You are fiery-tempered and are not ready to overlook any abuse from others. You are not a trench fighter, however, for you are brave enough to come out in the open, and to face your enemies. Your tongue is your best weapon of defence, and you seldom leave your opponents with a come-back. You make a very devoted and loyal friend, and woe be it unto those who speak or act against them. Your tongue can be witty as well as sarcastic, and you make a most entertaining companion. If you be a woman, you are handicapped by the thought that you carry a coronet in your handbag, and this makes you unpopular, especially with those of the opposite sex. Love may show you the worth of the common man.

Optimism lubricates the machinery of your effort, and you never anticipate failures. You have a good mind, considerable foresight, an abundance of energy, and a fair amount of patience. You are willing to take chances, but you are not a wild-cat gambler. You are rather inclined to hang on to your money, and its mere possession gives you happiness. The high-water mark of your life will not be reached until past middle age.

If November 9th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a.m. to 8:30 a.m., from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. and from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. The danger periods are from 11 a.m. to noon, and from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m.

The astrological influences on this date are of too invigorating a nature to bring about the desired rest of mind and body, and it will be difficult to forget the worries of the past week. New interests formed through new acquaintances. More peaceful hours promised during the evening.

Children born on this November 9th will have aggressive, and versatile natures. They will have courage, optimism, self-confidence and considerable ability. They will be naturally refined and cultured and will have simple tastes. They will be blessed with common sense.

You have too ambitious a nature to have a contented one, and you are ever seeking advancement. The fulfilment of a dream only brings your eyes in focus upon new fields to conquer, and there will always be streams of desire for you to cross. You are more desirous of social position and material acquisition than intellectual advancement. You are commercially minded, and you are very fond of your possessions. You stand on your own feet, free from the fetters of tradition, and you are always ready to embrace new ideas.

It will be difficult for you to learn how to relax and to live a less strained existence. You are never happy unless rushing from one thing to another, and in all probability you will suffer from "nerves." You are constantly seeking artificial amusements, and you are greatly bored with your own company. You care very little for reading, but you enjoy chatting with your friends. You are rather critical, and in many respects hard to please, and you should try to prevent this habit from growing upon you. Both envy and jealousy play their part in making you unhappy and discontented. You are inclined to be only interested in your own ambitions and hopes. Your beliefs and disbeliefs are stormy and obstinate affairs. Many journeys are pictured on the map of your life. You are an observant, but an intolerant, sightseer.

If November 10th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. The danger periods are from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. and from 9:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.

The stars are adverse on this date, and you will meet with underhanded opposition. Act cautiously and prove your suspicions. The a.m. hours are the best for business affairs. Financial problems face you.

The child born on this November 10th will have considerable reserve force and power, and will have a strong character. It will be self-reliant and assured, and will fight its own battles. An abruptness of speech is indicated, and considerable energy and ambition.

You have a very dynamic personality and staunch beliefs, which you are prepared to defend with a fearlessness of purpose which compels admiration from others. You fight your way through life, but not in an offensively aggressive manner. You have the traits of a good football player—courage, alertness of mind and body, the power of concentration, good sportsmanship, and a controlled temper. One could picture you as a vigorous center-forward but not as a participant of "parlour tag." The blameless character of your private life, your honest principles, and the sincerity of your motives are to your credit. You are more than a picturesque word-spinner, you are a whirlwind doer.

You are very business-like in all your dealings, whether it be with a friend or stranger. You have a good sense of time, and are almost never unpunctual. People with untidy habits, and who live without system or method, annoy you greatly. You will acquire very fixed habits of living which you will be very loath to break. Throughout your life, you will grapple many friends to your heart, and there will be a few who will betray your loyalty and confidence. Tolerance will be an acquired trait, brought on by your own personal experiences and sorrows. You have a dry sense of humor, and as a bystander, you are often quietly amused at the world and its people. In a dignified way, you know how to enjoy life.

A BEDTIME STORY

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY SAVES SUSIE.

"Now, Sammie, tell me just what happened," said Uncle Wiggily to the little boy rabbit as they hopped through the woods together. "Tell me just how Susie happened to be caught."

"Well," began Sammie, as he twinkled his little pink nose as Uncle Wiggily did his own larger one, "Susie and I were playing in the woods, scuffling our paws in the dried leaves, when, all of a sudden Susie yelled: 'A snake! A snake!' and she ran fast and she bumped into a box that a little girl was pretending was a house for her dolls. The box fell over on Susie and she's under it now, with the dolls, so I ran to tell you."

"And quite right you were to do that, Sammie," said Mr. Longears. "But what did the little girl do?"

"Oh, she ran in the house to tell her mother, I guess, that she had caught a rabbit. And maybe the little girl will put my sister Susie in a cage and keep her."

"Not if I can help it!" spoke Uncle Wiggily firmly. "But, knowing that little girl as I do, I do not think she will harm Susie. Still she might leave your sister under the box a long time, so we must go save her."

"Yes, I want to do that!" exclaimed Sammie.

"And was there really a snake in the dried leaves, Sammie?" asked Mr. Longears as the two rabbits hopped along. "If there was we had better go some other way. Snakes are all right in their places, for catching bad rats and so on, but I don't want one of them to catch you or me by mistake, Sammie."

"No, indeed!" agreed the rabbit boy. "But there wasn't really a snake. Susie rustled the dried leaves herself and it sounded like a snake crawling. Oh, but she ran fast! She didn't look where she was going and bunked right into the box the little girl was making believe was her dolls' house. And Susie is under the box now."

"We shall soon see," spoke Uncle Wiggily. "For we are getting close to where that little girl lives."

Not long after that Uncle Wiggily and Sammie came within sight of the little girl's house. In the yard at the back was a box marked FISH, but this wasn't Susie's name (which was Littletail) nor was it the name of any of the dolls. The box was marked FISH because it once held some tins of codfish.

There was no little girl in sight when Sammie and Uncle Wiggily hopped slowly and quietly up to the box. Then Sammie called:

"Susie! Susie! Are you under there?"

"Oh, yes, Sammie, I am!" answered the little rabbit girl. "And I don't like it here. I was caught in a trap, I guess, and some dolls are caught here with me. Oh, will you please get me out?"

"Of course I will!" cried Sammie.

helped Uncle Wiggily get a long stick and put under the edge of the box. Then the two rabbits pressed down on the stick, the edge of the box lifted up and Susie was saved! Out she jumped, very happy, indeed, to be with her brother and Uncle Wiggily again.

"Come on now, hop fast!" called Mr. Longears. "That little girl may come back and, though I am sure she is good and kind to animals, she might want to keep us for a while to show her brother. We'd better run."

So Sammie, Susie and Uncle Wiggily ran home to the hollow stump bungalow. Meanwhile the little girl had run into her house to tell her mother she had caught a rabbit under the box she pretended was a house for her dolls.

"Oh, no, my dear! You never caught a rabbit!" said mother. "No!"

"Yes, I did! Come and see!" begged the little girl.

They went out to the box and carefully lifted it. But of course Susie was gone. Only the three dolls were left.

"See, my dear! I told you!" said mother, smiling.

"Dear me! Could I have dreamed it?" murmured the little girl. But when she reads this story she will know it wasn't a dream, but real.

MARMORA MEN ORGANIZE CLUB

New Association Will Operate in Connection With Anglican Church.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

MARMORA, Nov. 8 (Examiner Correspondence).—A men's club in connection with the Anglican Parish of Marmora was organized at the White Hall on Thursday evening, Rev. Percy Heywood, M.A., B.D., rector of Trans-George's Men's Club of Toronto being present.

Rev. A. B. Caldwell occupied the chair, and after extending a welcome to the visitors, called upon Rev. Mr. Heywood to explain the object of a men's club. Rev. Mr. Heywood gave the history of the Trenton Club which was formed in 1926, and made suggestions for the proposed local club.

The acting president, the secretary, and other members of the Trenton Club gave short speeches. John North, a member of the visiting club, gave a humorous talk, followed by a musical selection.

Community singing was enjoyed, followed by the election of officers, resulting as follows: Hon. President, Rev. A. B. Caldwell; H. R. Pearce, vice-president; Dr. R. E. Lumsden, secretary-treasurer.

Another meeting will be held on Friday, Nov. 14, when the executive will be elected and an entertaining committee selected. At the close a delicious lunch was served by members of the Ladies' Guild.

WOMAN'S FORTITUDE

Forces Herself to Smile Through Pain.

"I never seem to find time to rest," says many an overworked housewife. Under smiles and forced cheerfulness she conceals weariness and nervous depression; headaches and backaches. Often she is in real pain, but still refuses to give up. This very fortitude is apt to be her undoing. If she continues to neglect the signals of distress she will sooner or later suffer a serious breakdown.

A noted doctor has stated that nine-tenths of the ills of womanhood are due to poor blood. That anaemia is the cause of the low spirits, the poor appetite and palpitation that make life a burden for so many.

There is no need, however, for women to suffer in this way. All the miseries of anaemia can be banished by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills create an abundance of new, rich, red blood and this new blood will bring strength and vitality to nervous, overtired women. The Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

WHOLE CAULIFLOWER

You can keep a cauliflower whole by tying it up in a piece of cheesecloth for cooking. Be sure not to over-cook. It is excellent served with drawn butter and grated cheese.

AIRING PILLOWS

Don't sun feather pillows as the heat brings out the oil of the feathers. But hang them on the line on a windy day so the air can penetrate.

ACID CONDITION

the common cause of pain and discomfort after eating--

GET RID of your dread of pain after eating. Eat without fear of "indigestion," sour stomach, disagreeable gas or headaches.

When your food ferments, "disagrees," lies like a lump in your stomach, it's a sign of too much acid. You need not resort to crude methods—take instead an anti-acid that will correct the condition. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

A spoonful of this pleasant-tasting, soothing fluid neutralizes many times its volume of acid. It restores the proper alkaline balance to an acid-soaked stomach and bowels—assists these organs to function as they should.

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is what you need when a bad breath, coated tongue, headaches, nausea or biliousness indicates an over-acid condition. Take a spoonful today and for several days and see how it sweetens the system. You won't be nearly so liable to colds or sickness. All drug-stores—in 50c bottles.

Genuine Milk of Magnesia is always a liquid—never a tablet. Look for the name Phillips on wrapper and bottle.

Beautiful hair!

Modern hair dressers arrange the hair so beautifully that it's bound to attract attention. That's why it's so important to guard its color and lustre; keep it in perfect condition.

There is no surer, simpler way to do this than with Danderine. Each time you use your brush, just moisten it with this delicately fragranced liquid. Then as you draw it through your hair, it removes the excess oil; brings out the natural color; makes the hair fairly sparkle with new life and lustre.

How much easier it is to arrange the hair afterwards. How it stays in place. And try "setting" the waves with Danderine. They stay in so much longer.

Danderine quickly dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition; helps the hair to grow long, silky and abundant!

Castoria... for CHILDREN'S ailments

ARE you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for every-day use. For a sudden attack of colic, or for the gentle relief of constipation; to allay a feverish spell, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is geniune Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so.

You can tell from the formula on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

One of the most successful Hallowe'en costume dances in a long series of very successful affairs of this type, was held at Columbus Hall last evening, when the Knights of Columbus were hosts to a large number of people, numbering well on to two hundred and fifty. The majority were in costume and a vivid array of colorful and lovely outfits of every variety, grave and gay, comic and historical, were on view. The display was exceptionally good and the judges had a difficult time in making awards. Decorations were carried out in Hallowe'en colors and novelties in orange and black, with crepe paper streamers, lighted pumpkin lanterns and stooks of corn around the walls. A Grand March opened the program and favours were distributed. Refreshments were served at midnight. Excellent music for dancing was provided by Rick Roberts and his Melody Men. Grand Knight Dr. E. M. Crough supervised general arrangements, which were in charge of Don McKinnon and his committee, including Messrs. T. J. Ryan, lecturer, J. C. McCabe, E. Rabeau, J. J. Condon, J. H. Primeau, A. Letellir, Ray Paquette and T. Leblanc. Judges were Messrs F. J. Hickey, J. C. Rutherford and T. J. Ryan. Prizes were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wolff (fancy dress couple), Miss O'Toole and Mr. Hubert O'Keefe (comic couple), Mrs. John Cumming (ladies' fancy), Miss Bernardine MacPherson (ladies' comic), Mr. R. Little (men's fancy), Mr. T. Leblanc (men's comic) and to Mr. Charles Shaughnessy, in a special award for a female impersonation.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Alice Michaelis

EBB TIDE

Ebb tide, bare sands, the wind asleep,
And from the sea a murmur deep
That fails and faints away;
A paler saffron in the sky,
Then twilight's glory, soon to die,
Flares up across the bay.

Ebb tide, bleak hours, a life swept clear
Of all that once it held most dear,
Scant hope for days to be;
Yet, through the deepening dusk of night,
Through sense of bafflement and blight
Comes distant melody.

For, like the sure-returning tide,
Whose forces cannot be denied,
So strong are they, so vast,
All sorrows still must fade, must wane
And to sad lives joys come again
As long as time shall last.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Rooms reflect the spirit and character of the persons who occupy them. Have you ever noticed that?

• • • • • • •

Well, they do unless they are decorated or arranged by someone who does not understand the occupants, and who impresses upon the rooms his or her own ideas of decorations.

• • • • • • •

The fine interior decorator, either treats the rooms of a house impersonally putting in them the correct furnishings for the type of architecture of the dwelling, or the style designated by the owner.

• • • • • • •

Then again he may study the tastes of the owner and family who are to live in the rooms and instills into them as much as he can of the characteristics of these persons.

• • • • • • •

If the decorator does over the rooms impersonally, he or she leaves the rooms to take on the characters of the occupants when they live in the house.

• • • • • • •

The home decorator has an advantage over the professional in this one particular of knowing the traits of those for whom she decorates.

• • • • • • •

At first when the home is new the articles have been chosen to reflect the character of the young couple. Each has been glad and ready to get furniture and furnishings to suit the toher.

• • • • • • •

The combination of the things is made also to suit both, and so the home has the atmosphere that is right to begin with.

• • • • • • •

Later or when children grace the home, there is the nursery to furnish and still later the bedroom of the first child. These rooms are done to reflect the spirit of childhood.

• • • • • • •

When the little folks grow older there is a masculinity to be brought out in the boys' rooms and a daintiness of feminity in girls' rooms.

• • • • • • •

Then, as the children show decided tastes and have ideas of their own, those that can be made helpful in decorative ways should be stressed.

• • • • • • •

Books and appointments for study lend themselves well to a student's room.

• • • • • • •

The main rooms of a house reflect something of each person. There is a musical instrument for one who plays, books for those with literary tastes and easy chairs for the comfort of all.

• • • • • • •

And pervading the entire room is the spirit of the homemaker for she it is above all others, the one who has the most to do with that room.

• • • • • • •

If she has an artistic bend the room will be beautiful. If she is orderly, the room will have everything in its place. The room may be cold and uninviting, or cosy and welcoming.

• • • • • • •

It is for the home decorator to impart to the rooms of the house that individuality of her own and the members of her family that will make the home attractive.

L.O.B.A. HOLDS ANNUAL BAZAAR

Members of Vimy Ridge Lodge Hold Successful Affair in Orange Hall.

ROOMS DECORATED.

The Orange Hall, George street, was in gala attire yesterday afternoon and evening with its brightly decorated booths, and busy corps of ladies of Vimy Ridge L.O.B.A. No. 244, who were holding their annual bazaar and tea.

The fancy work booth was decorated with red crepe paper and here lovely articles could be purchased at very reasonable prices from Mrs. L. P. Campbell in charge, assisted by Mrs. E. Delong.

The novelty booth was decorated with orange crepe paper and was looked after by Mrs. Albert Hiller, assisted by Mrs. Fred Meaby. Dainty little candle holders fashioned of innuerable nasturtiums made of orange and yellow crepe paper were greatly admired.

A table of home-made cooking was in charge of Mrs. J. Devall, assisted by Mrs. D. Monk, where all kinds of goodies could be purchased. They specialized in pumpkin pie, and doughnuts.

Mrs. T. Monk was in charge of the home-made candy, which was put up in pretty flower baskets. Here one could procure a fine selection of sweets.

A fish pond in charge of Mrs. J. Little proved a popular diversion.

Mrs. F. Millard was in charge of the tea room, where tea was served at small tables decorated with yellow candles in orange and yellow nasturtium candle-holders.

The central table was decorated with a silver basket of yellow 'mums and similar candles. Mrs. E. J. Brown and Mrs. C. Wright poured tea. Tea room assistants were Mrs. C. Johnson, Mrs. G. Peters, Mrs. R. Wright and Mrs. E. Dormer.

Mrs. Broadlid rendered some very enjoyable piano numbers during the tea hour.

In the evening the rug donated by Mr. E. F. Reid was drawn for, the lucky winner being Miss Louise Elliotson.

Mrs. E. J. Brown, Worthy Mistress of the Lodge acted as general convenor of arrangements and was delighted with the success of the affair.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D

HEALTH LIKE A BANK ACCOUNT.

I often speak of health as an asset; in fact, good health is the greatest human asset. With good health you are capable of doing the things that your brain and ambition direct. Without good health you cannot accomplish the things you would like to do in life.

Someone has likened health to a bank account, which doesn't increase in size of its own accord.

This bank account of health was given to you partly by your parents and partly by your own care, your own common sense.

However, it is not like a savings account which increases as the years pass. It is like a current account which will not increase in size unless you make a deposit from time to time. And if you make no deposits but keep checking out all the time, the account will decrease and gradually disappear.

Of course, you know what I mean by depositing something in your bank of health. It means the watchful common sense care of the body; not eating too much or too often, but eating enough and often enough; not sleeping too much, but sleeping enough; and taking enough exercise—very few will ever take too much.

Checking out means that you do the foolish, the careless, the thoughtless things that rob you of some of that health you have stored up; eating anything, anytime, anywhere; trying to get along without enough sleep; and working your brain continuously and your brain not at all.

One of the deposits must take the form of active exercise out of doors, as Dr. L. Langstroth points out. I believe this is where most people fail.

Yet this deposit really pays a large dividend from a health standpoint. Gladstone, as you may remember, said, "Exercise of the body pays a larger rate of interest than any other investment."

We can't all chop down trees, as was his custom, but everyone of us can do something outdoors every day, if only to walk a few blocks at a brisk gait.

So, be careful of your bank account of health; it is your most valuable possession. Remember that if you make regular deposits you can likewise check out large amounts, which means being able to work hard or play hard.

Vancouver Selected as Canadian Olympic Trials Site

A.A.A. APPROVES MANY RECORDS

Change From Metre Distances to English System Goes Into Effect.

NEW BATON RULE.

VANCOUVER, B. C, November 8 —The 1932 Canadian Olympic track and field trials will be staged in Vancouver. Delegates attending the annual convention of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, now meeting here, yesterday allocated the track and field events to this city after a lengthy discussion.

Vancouver officials presented plans already completed for the holding of the trials in anticipation of receiving them, and generally impressed upon the delegates that track and field athletics were at such a stage now in British Columbia that nothing but success could attend the holding of the 1932 trials.

R. Bell-Irvine of the Vancouver Olympic Committee, a body formed to promote the erection of a huge stadium at a site already selected, and to further interest in amateur athletics in Vancouver, told the gathering that not only were amateur athletics officials here behind the project, but that the Provincial and Civic Governments, and the citizens at large as well, supported it.

Later yesterday discussion centered upon recommendations brought in by the Rules and Records Committee under the Chairmanship of E. H. Bourdon of Montreal, and the Affiliations and Alliances Committee, under the chairmanship of W. A. Aldritt, Winnipeg.

Work With Newfoundland

Mr. Aldritt reported his committee had considered the application for affiliation from the Newfoundland Amateur Athletic Union and had been giving it sympathetic consideration. Nothing could be done about direct affiliation because Newfoundland was not a part of Canada, and as such could not come under the control of the Canadian A.A.U. He said, however that the A.A.U. of C. would work in close harmony with the Newfoundland body. His report in this respect was concurred in by the convention. Mr. Aldritt's committee also urged that endeavors be made to procure closer co-operation with athletic organizations not now directly affiliated with the main governing body.

Chief among recommendations brought in by Mr. Bourdon's committee regarding alterations in rules or by-laws of the Union was one which asked the change from the metric system of measuring in all track and field events, to the English system. This was concurred in by the convention, as were the following regulations:

Batons dropped with ten yards on each side of the starting line in a relay race may be recovered by the succeeding runner; provision will be made for presenting diplomas to athletes who create new or equal existing Canadian records; in distance events exceeding five miles, no competitor shall be allowed to start until he is more than 18 years of age; a standard of track and field events for juniors will be promulgated.

The convention met in Committee of the Whole to consider the report of the "Definition of Amateur" Committee. The report was presented by Chairman N. Kilby of Montreal. After much discussion it was decided to bring the report as presented before the convention itself for open discussion.

CHICAGO LOSES TO LONDON 4-2

International Leaguers Give Impressive Performance Against Black Hawks.

"TOOTS" HOLWAY STARS.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 8.—London Tecumsehs of the International League defeated Chicago Black Hawks of the National League, by 4 to 2 in an exhibition game played before a [illegible] here last night. London took a commanding lead with [illegible] Black Hawks with a [illegible] and after [illegible] the end of the first seven minutes of play retired for the balance of the game.

"Toots" Holway, captain and defense player of the Tecumsehs played a sensational game, scoring two goals, while Len Grosvenor and Archie Briden accounted for the others. Tom Cook and Earl Miller accounted for the Hawks' two counters. While the Tecumsehs were strengthened by Bostrum and Ty Arbour of the Hawks, London's own players scored the goals and brought about the defeat of the Hawks.

"Dolly" Dolson, former London net guardian, and now with the Detroit Falcons, was borrowed for the game, and the London fans gave him a great reception as he turned back the attacks of the big leaguers. Dolson played a spectacular game between the posts, and cleared some hard drives from close in.

Canadiens Extended By Providence Team

MONTREAL, Nov. 8. — Sprague Cleghorn's Providence Reds of the Canadian-American League last night fought Montreal Canadiens tooth and nail in the second of a two-game exhibition series and lost the decision 4—3. The winning tally came from Howie Morenz in the last minute of the game. The world's champions took the first game on Wednesday by 8 to 4.

The Reds undoubtedly will be a powerful factor in their league this season. The team has a splendid second line, with "Bud" Cook in center flanked by the Giroux brothers, and a defense of Paulhus, Vail, Carson and Leseur able to take hard knocks. The first line of Cormier, Hart and Gaudreault tonight had the punch of a major league outfit. Morenz, Wasnie, Larochelle and Burke were Canadiens' marksmen, while Hart (twice) and Leseur tallied for the visitors. Leduc drew the first major penalty of the season on Montreal ice.

WALKER BEATS JOHNNY RISKO

Middleweight Champion Winner Over Much Heavier Opponent.

19,000 SEE FIGHT.

DETROIT, Mich., November 8 (C. P.). — Mickey Walker, champion of all the middleweights, boxed and slugged his way into a place among the contenders for the heavyweight championship by decisively defeating Johnny Risko in a 10-round bout at the Olympia Arena last night.

"Standing room only" signs were out at Olympia as 19,000 persons acclaimed the "Toy Bulldog" in his first appearance against a heavyweight.

Overcoming a handicap of nearly 30 pounds, Walker jumped into the lead in the second round by sending Risko to the floor for a count of nine with a stinging left to the head. From then on he was always in front, with Risko trying desperately.

Four Major Battles In To-day's Football

TORONTO, November 8. (C.P.) — Four highly important struggles are bited on to-day's menu for Eastern Canada Football fans. For once the weatherman is kind, promising a climb in the mercury, which should make conditions ideal for the thousands who will throng to see the grid-iron warriors do battle.

Attendance records for all time will be shattered at Varsity stadium here where University of Toronto and Queen's University meet in an Intercollegiate Union match, generally rated as the headliner of a fine program.

At Montreal supporters of McGill University's Red Men will flock to Molson Stadium in the hope of seeing their favorites register their first victory of the season.

Famous Star Passes

Mrs. Hamish Munro, better known as the former Evelyn Colyer, famous British tennis star, who died in Assam, India, this week. Miss Colyer married Mr. Munro in February, 1929, and went to India, where her husband had a tea plantation. She was regarded as one of Great Britain's best tennis players and held the hard court and covered mixed championships in 1924.

There isn't any sentiment in business and apparently there isn't any in professional hockey either. This policy has forced two of the game's most famous players out of the major league, Frank Frederickson and Frank Nighbor. Few men have equalled thier performance at centre ice but as they reach the twilight of their careers there aren't any major clubs bidding for their services. The unconditional release of Frederickson from the Pittsburgh management came as a great surprise. According to rumor, he may find a berth with the Frank Patrick loop on the Pacific coast, where he started his major league career. Not as old as Nighbor, in years or in hockey, it is hard to believe he is through in major ranks. He starred for the Winnipeg Falcons ten years ago when they were the World's amateur champions, and in 1921 he jumped into the moneyed ranks to become one of the best in the game. Frank Nighbor has a somewhat different situation to face. He played in the N.H.L. before the war and for many years his famous hook-check broke up many an attack for Ottawa. Nighbor was always one of the hardest men to come to terms with and he seems to have held out just once too often. As a result it isn't likely that this great player will ever be seen in action again in N.H.L. hockey.

TUNNEY SAYS RICKARD AGREED TO MAKE HIM WORLD CHAMPION

Testifies Promoter Promised in 1925, a Year Before Mara Deal, to Arrange Dempsey Bout.

FRIEND SUGGESTED CAREER.

Gene Tunney told of his career as a fighter on the stand in his own defense in the trial of Timothy J Maras suit against him for approximately $500,000 and told how he began, as an office boy at $5 a week, the career which brought him the world's heavyweight boxing crown and an income of more than $1,000,000 in a year.

He told of his first essays at boxing, "fooling around evenings" after his day's work as a clerk, of his winning the boxing championship of the American Expeditionary Force, of his entry into professional boxing, gradually gaining in skill and confidence until he felt able to meet any man in the ring, and of the late Tex Rickard's promise to make him champion of the world.

That promise of Rickard was the high light of the retired champion's testimony yesterday. The promise was given in July, 1925, said Tunney, at a meeting he had with the famous sports promoter at the home of James Eagleton, then a warm personal friend of Tunney.

Rickard made the first overture, Tunney testified, by remarking that Dempsey would fight for no one but him.

His Agreement With Rickard

"'Dempsey fought for another promoter once and he hasn't been paid yet,'" Tunney quoted Rickard as saying.

"'Now, Gene,'" said Rickard, as Tunney quoted him on the stand, "'I can make you champion of the world if you will string along with me!'"

"I said, 'Do you mean I'll fight Dempsey?'" Tunney continued.

"Rickard said 'yes.'

"I said, 'All right. You've got me.'

"We shook hands across the table and Rickard said to me, 'Do you think you can live on $70,000 a year after you become champion?' When I left I had a gentleman's agreement with Rickard to fight Dempsey."

Thus, Tunney testified, he was well on his way to the summit of the pugilistic business before Mara, who contends that Tunney afterward promised him a quarter of all his earnings as champion in return for Mara's "assisting and cooperating with him in a general way," came into any close relation to Tunney's affairs.

Tunney began his testimony in a faint voice, but he spoke distinctly and with assurance and with an apparent effort to be frank. Emory R. Buckner, his counsel, drew from him first the facts that he was 32 years old, born in New York, christened John J. Tunney but called Gene all his life, that he now lived at Stamford, Conn., and attended a parochial school until he was 16, when his formal education ended and he went to work.

His first job was as an office boy for the Ocean Steamship Company and when he quit there to enlist in the Marine Corps he was a rate clerk earning $16.50 a week.

It was not until after the war that he became seriously interested in boxing. After the Armistice he fought ten matches with other soldier boxers, became champion of his sector and was ordered to Paris to take part in the finals for the A. E. F. championship which he won.

It was a friend he had made in the army who steered him into professional boxing after he had returned from overseas, he said. At first it was a precarious existence.

"I fought sixty-five bouts after the war," he said in reply to direct questions, "and was defeated once."

That one defeat was by Harry Greb, he explained, but he defeated Greb four times afterwards.

He interrupted his boxing career to work as a lumberjack in the Canadian forests, came back as a preliminary fighter at the Dempsey-Carpentier match where he knocked out Jack Burke.

Polish policemen have been ordered to wear a metal cuirass and carry a shield.

LEAFS SHUT OUT WINDSOR 5 TO 0

Cotton Scores Two Goals—Chabot is Faultless in the Net.

NUMEROUS PENALTIES.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 8.—Showing good form for so early in the season and despite the numerous penalties incurred, because of the freak rules in operation this year, the Toronto Maple Leafs last night swept in to a 5-0 victory over Herb Mitchell's Bulldogs and were full value for that margin, even if the locals rose to great heights in frantic efforts to lodge the puck behind Lorne Chabot.

In the first period Referee Bert Corbeau and Judge-of-play, Glenn Smith, ruled with an iron hand, and, as a result, eight Windsor players and six Leafs paraded to the penalty bench, all for minor offenses. In all, play was stopped thirty-one times and the large crowd in attendance voiced disapproval in no uncertain terms. It was wretched hockey and during the intermission the officials and the rival managers went into a huddle, and it was deemed advisable to give the teams some leaway, the International League interpretation getting a trial. There was an instantaneous change and the game lived up remarkably.

Numerous Penalties

Play in the second session was halted eighteen times and in the last on twenty-two occasions. Penalties were given that amazed players and fans alike, and once when Charlie Conacher threw his stick in an effort to send the puck past the veteran Clint Benedict, Windsor was awarded a goal, much to the amazement of all concerned. However, Referee Corbeau announced at the intermission that the counter would not be allowed.

The Leafs played smart hockey, as expected, their attacks being cleverly executed, but it was Lorne Chabot who drew most of the applause. He was unbeatable and he was fighting for his position on the team, as it had been hinted that he was due to depart to other fields. Chabot entered the game determined to register a shut-out and he came through, earning brackets all the way.

BEACHERS WIN FROM AIRMEN

Camp Borden is Outscored By 13 to 10 in Exciting Game.

EXHIBITION RUGGER MATCH.

TORONTO, November 8. — Balmy Beach defeated Camp Borden flyers last night in a floodlight football game, played at Ulster Stadium, by a 13-10 margin. The Beachers took no chances on spoiling their play-off chances on Thanksgiving, most of the substitutes being given a chance to display their ability. Previous to this game, the fans were given an exhibition of British rugger by the Ontario All-Stars and the Toronto Welsh, a game that was replete with thrills from start to finish. Although distinctly foreign to the majority of the spectators, it was well played, the hard, accurate tacking, reckless ball carrying, and the speedy running of the players, causing no end of excitement. The Welshmen emerged victors, but only after a stiff battle that left the result of the issue always in doubt. The score was 7 to 6.

SCHOOLS WILL STAGE CONTEST

Public Speaking Event to be Run in Northumberland County—Entries By Townships.

FOUR CUPS DONATED.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 8 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — A movement which is creating great interest in the County of Northumberland is the public speaking contest. For some time past the Public schools of the different townships have been competing in a series of events staged in the different schools. These contests will come to a head when a final rally will be held on December 4th at Castleton to decide upon the competitors for the county.

Three cups are to be presented to the first three winners in the county contest. These are donated by the following men in order of the prize: W. A. Fraser, M.P.; F. J. McArthur, M.P.P., and H W Nelson, Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham. These cups are only one-year trophies, and will be competed for next year. A fourth prize will be a cup, donated by R. B. Dawson, which will go to the first prize winner as a permanent award. In addition, each contestant will receive a prize.

Cramahe—Nov. 14th, at Castleton.
Murray—Nov. 28, at Wooler.
Brighton—Nov. 21st, at Hilton.
Seymour—Nov. 27th, at Campbellford.
Percy—Nov. 18th, at Warkworth.
Haldimand—Nov. 26th, at Centreton.
Alnwick—Nov. 25th, at Roseneath.
Hamilton—Nov. 20, at Cold Springs.
South Monaghan—Nov. 24th, at Bailieboro.

BOY SCOUTS ACTIVE AT CAMPBELLFORD

Christmas Preparations Include Mending and Distribution of Used Toys to Poor Children.

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 8.—Winter activities have commenced with the 1st Campbellford Troop, Boy Scout, under the leadership of Scoutmaster M. H. Sergeant. Looking toward the coming Christmas season, the boys are thinking along the line of service. With this in mind, a contract has been taken by the troop for the selling of Christmas cards, and exclusive rights to this district has been given them.

Also, following their usual custom, the boys will commence work in the Toy Shop at once. The object of this venture is to receive donations of disused and broken toys which the boys will collect, and which they repair and fix up in their work shop for the purpose of bringing cheer to many children who would otherwise be denied the pleasures of a happy Christmas among their toys.

This work has been very successful in the past and it is hoped that this year it will be enlarged upon.

A great deal depends on the co-operation of the citizens and an appeal is being issued by the troop for support in this good work.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Hockey talk is beginning to be heard, Mac, and before the month is out Peterborough's 2 junior O.H.A. teams, the Petes and St. John's, will be seen in action in the S.P.A. serious. It ain't likely either of the outfits will go a long distance in the pre-season battle, because they stack up against a lot of teams what has got artificial ice to practise on and is in good shape for the serious, but anyway it gives the lads some seasoning and gives the management a chance to look over the material, so the trips to the big town ain't exactly waste motion. The outlook at present ain't rosy enough to claim no championships, but both junior teams hope to give a good account of themselves. The brakes favors the Petes jrs., for they only got to win a game to make a better showing than they made the last 2 or 3 seasons in the O.H.A. race.

The big excitement in football, Mac, is the Queen's-Varsity clash this Sat. It will be all over before this is out, but anyway I'm going to call Mister Batstone's lads to win, although to tell the truth, Mac, it don't look like none of them rah-rah teams has enough punch this year to get anybody excited. The scores look more like soccer than rugby, and while most of the fans seems satisfied, these games that is won by a few long boots to the deadline don't mean a thing to one. I want to see a bird dash 30 yards through a broken field for a touchdown, or some husky blast his way over the goal line with the ball hugged tight to his tummy, and if they ain't any of that kinda thing in a game, I'd just as soon listen to Mister Graham McNamee describe a big American fixture than to watch the other stuff. The Intercollegiate better adopt the forward pass, Mac. If they can't run the ends or crash the line, mebbe they could get somewhere with a tossing game.

Our Collegiate lads win themselves the group last Sat., Mac, when they beat Cobourg 6 to 2. It wasn't a big margin, but it was plenty, and Mister Legon's shifty youths has only Belleville between themselves and Dr. Neal's mug, which the local boys has formed the habit of winning. The Belleville team watched P.C.I. perform at Cobourg, and went home loudly proclaiming they'd take them in both games. Mebbe they will, Mister, mebbe they will, but somehow I got a hunch that our Confederation Sq. machine will unreel enough speed to keep the big fellows from the East tolerable busy, and I don't mean likely.

Well, Mac, the cash and carry circuit gets under way next week, and right now I'm going to pick the Canadiens to be up there near the top when it's all over. Mister Morens and Co. fired 8 pucks past our own Mister Mickey Murray the other nite, and while it was only a exhibition game, the Flying Frenchmen showed boocoup speed against good opposition.

And now it's curtains for to-day.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

SIX TEAMS COMPETE IN RELAY RACE

Six Mile Jaunt Will Be Held Through Streets of City.

START 10.30 A.M.

Dozen Crack Juniors to Take Part in 1½ Mile Event—Order of Race.

Lining up on their mark at 10.30 Thanksgiving Day morning, the runners in the Y.M.C.A. senior relay race will be set off on the first lap of the six mile jaunt through the streets of the city. There will be four runners to a team in the relay and indications are that six teams will be competing. A strong squad has entered from Lindsay.

More than a dozen crack juniors will turn out in the junior 1½ mile race over the same course. It is expected that the young runners will uncoil real speed in their effort, since all of them have been carefully practising for weeks for the event. A Lindsay group will participate in this race also.

The course starts at the "Y" and goes down George street to Hunter street, over Hunter to Water street, north on Water to Smith street, west on Smith to George street, and down George to finish at the "Y." Spectators and motorists are requested by the race officials to keep the course clear.

Officials for the race are: Starter, H. Tudhope; timer, R. Cranfield; clerk of course, Newt. Thompson; scorer, Don Crawford.

BOXERS MEET AT LOCAL "Y"

Gord Garwood to Promote Special Class in City This Year.

NEED TWENTY MEMBERS.

Boxing is promised a new lease of life in this city. The Y.M.C.A. was last evening the scene of a meeting, under the chairmanship of Doug. Loomis, physical training director, who outlined the conditions under which the "Y" will provide equipment and instructionn to participants in the gentlemanly art of self-defence.

Gord. Garwood, who would have the duties of boxing instructor, is well qualified. He is no stranger to Peterborough sportsmen, and has signified his intention of getting together several more boxing enthusiasts for the meeting to be held on Tuesday night next at 6.30. A cordial invitation is also extended to anyone in the city interested in this sport to be on hand.

About ten young men attended the meeting held last evening, the majority of them being members of the "Y." For non-members Mr. Lomis outlined a plan which would enable them to take a membership covering the boxing season, and which would grant them all the priveleges of the regular members. It is essential that a man, who is to take up boxing seriously should have regular access to the gymnasium and shower baths, he contended.

In order to put a boxing club on a business like basis, Mr. Loomis further pointed out that there must be at least twenty members, and considerably more than that number if possible.

He wishes to get in touch with promising material to provide the nucleus for a strong boxing club, and is confident that tournaments can be arranged later in the season, and for any young man who shows promise of being a good boxer, the "Y" will pay his expenses to the Ontario "Y" Boxing Championships.

Roll up on Tuesday evening, fellows! Make your wishes known!

Ex-Senator Players Leave For Quakers

OTTAWA, Nov. 8 (C.P.) — With final arrangements of their sale to Philadelphia completed, Wally Kilrea, Allan Shields and Syd Howe, former members of the Ottawa Senators N.H.L. team, leave to-day to report to Manager Cooper Smeaton. Shields is a defence player and the others, forwards.

Although it is reported he will play in Detroit again this season, no official news was forthcoming about Billy Beveridge, goal-keeper.

The three new members of the Philadelphia Quakers do not expect to encounter the same difficulty in crossing the United States border, as several other Canadians earlier in the season. They made all the necessary arrangements yesterday with United States Immigration authorities.

ALEX AND ART SMITH LISTED FOR DEFENSE

Non-relative Brother Act Will Furnish Defensive Power For Senators.

CONNELL IN GOAL.

Joe Lamb, Hec Kilrea and Frankie Finnigan to Act as First String Forwards.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 8 (C.P.) — With one exception, the regulars of the Ottawa Senator team which last season fought its way into the championship play-offs only to go down before the brilliance of New York Rangers are intact for the National Hockey League 1931-32 pennant chase. But the exception being Frank "King" Clancy could hardly be a more serious setback to title aspirations.

The hard-skating, never-tiring Clancy, as potential a threat on the incessant goalward rushes he is famous for, as he was on the defence, was long sought after by many other teams. An offer made for him a few weeks ago by Toronto Maple Leafs was so generous the Ottawa club management could hardly in a business sense, turn it back. Two players and $35,000 came to the Senators for their dyuamic defenceman and ex-captain, but the gap left by his departure leaves the Ottawawans with prospects not nearly so bright as were those of last year.

New "Brother" Act

Art Smith, one of the two men sent here by the Leafs, seems destined to take the "King's" place on the rearguard. Despite his bulk Smith is a speedy skater and possessor of a notoriously hard, tricky shot on goal. Lanky Alex Smith, who last season teamed with Clancy, will likely put on a non-relative brother act with Art, although Harold Starr is giving the two of them stiff competition in the pre-season practices for the regular berths. Starr graduated from amateur company only last year, but he plays the rugged style of hockey that is pleasing to the fans.

In the nets will be the familiar figure of Alex Connell while the first string forwards will again be Joe Lamb flanked by Heck Kilrea and Frankie "Irish" Finnigan, the new Senator captain. Possessing as it does two such natural skaters as Kilrea and Lamb, in addition to the quick-thinking Finnigan, the regular forward line more than any other factor makes Senators a threat for championship honors. Kilrea, so called "Blonde Flash," and Lamb are two of the fastest men in the league and, despite their youth, they are veterans in professional ice company.

Eric Pettinger, who came here with Smith in the Clancy deal, will probably hold down centre ice position on the relief forward trio. Foxy Danny Cox and Art Gagne will form his wings.

LIGHT PLANE FOR AUSTRALIA FLIGHT

Kingsford-Smith Made England-Port Darwin Hop Under Ten Days.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(By the Canadian Press)—Regular high speed air mail and passenger services right across the world between London and Australia are brought appreciably nearer realization by Wing Commander Kingsford-Smith's feat in flying from London to Port Darwain, Australia, inside 10 days.

Never previously have modern light aircraft proved so conclusively in two consecutive weeks their ability to cover the longest possible journeys at a rate unapproached by any form of land or water transport. Recently, Mr. Caspareuthus, a South African, improved on all earlier journeys by flying from England to Cape Town in nine days, his vehicle being a standard light British monoplane. Now Kingsford-Smith, flying a standard sports light biplane which can be bought in Great Britain for approximately $4,000 has trimmed the London-Australia journey to less than 10 days and flight Lieutenant Hill, piloting the cheapest machine of the three, was only prevented by bad luck in crashing at his last take-off from surpassing all earlier flights.

Once again the acid test of long distance flying in all kinds of weather and over most sorts of terrain which an airman can meet in world travel has proved the supremacy of the British light aeroplanes and low powered aero engine. Hill's and Kingsford-Smith's machines were craft that any air enthusiast can buy "over the counter"; the only important alteration from standard being the placing of extra fuel tanks in the passenger's cockpit to enable the pilot to fly unusually long distances without alighting to refuel.

Much has been said about the fatigue incidental to long flights of this kind. Undoubtedly the flights are tremendous tests of endurance, but a moment's thought will prove that the aeroplane is probably the only vehicle in existence comfortable enough for long distance "lone" touring of this kind. Driving a motor car or a motor boat for 12 hours or more a day during 10 or more consecutive days would be an ordeal far surpassing that borne by the Australian flyers. The modern light aeroplane flies itself for long periods in decent weather conditions; progress is generally smooth and unexacting compared with the strain of piloting continuously any land or water vehicle; the air is clear, dustless and unpolluted.

Dame Clara Butt, the opera star, will soon arrive in Japan to make the first English phonograph records ever produced there, and in Tokio she will sing with native musicians for the recorder.

Great Agriculturist Honored In Trinidad

Sir Francis Watts, Principal of Imperial College, Buried on Collegiate Grounds.

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Nov. 8.—(By the Canadian Press)—Agriculturists from all parts of Trinidad, standing with bowed heads in a rude little wooden hut in the heart of the Arena Forest, recently paid tribute to the memory of the late Sir Francis Watts, Hon. A. B. Carr, president of the Trinidad and Tobago Agricultural Society, moved a resolution extending sympathy to the relatives of the man whose death is a great loss to the colony and to agriculture in the whole of the West Indies.

Born in Devon 71 years ago, Sir Francis worked in the interests of West Indian agriculture for 40 years and strove to implant a love of nature in the children attending the schools. He was buried on the grounds of the West Indian agricultural college here, among the plant life he had tended. He was principal of the college from 1921 to 1924.

The Arena Forest was chosen because it contains one of the most hallowed spots in the whole West Indies, and the agriculturists had gone there as guests of the forest department to observe the great progress being made in reforestation. Four hundred years ago three missionaries, the governor and the principal authorities were put to death by Indians who had invited them to a banquet on the occasion of the inauguration of a mission for the Indians.

A wooden cross marks the last resting place of the victims of one of the most blood-thirsty attacks ever made on strangers to the Islands by the Indians they found there. In 1687, the King of Spain, according to Fraser's history "confided to the Capuchins of the Province of Catalonia the spiritual charge of the Indians of Trinidad. Five "Missions" (Indian Settlements under the joint charge of a Priest and of a Civil Magistrate) were formed. In December, 1699, when the opened a new mission in the Island of Trinidad, under the name of San Francisco de los Arenales the Indians, prompted by the devil, put to a cruel death the three Missionaries who had undertaken the charge of it."

According to a tradition which still exists among the old Spaniards of the Island, it would appear that the Governor and the principal authorities were also present at the banquet given on the occasion of this inauguration of the Mission of San Francisco, and that on a pre-concerted signal being made they were all massacred by the Indians.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES HELD FOR PONTYPOOL UNITED CHURCH

Rev. Mr. Stevling of Orono, Officiates at Both Services.

SPECIAL MUSIC.

(Examiner Correspondence)

PONTYPOOL, November 8. — Anniversary services of the United Church were held on Sunday, when Rev. Mr. Sterling of Orono, officiated at both services.

The local choir contributed special music and was assisted by Messrs Sutton of Orono, and J. J. Clarke, of Bethany. Mr. Sutton and Miss Bernice Cain sang solos at both services. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, leaves and fruits.

Fowl Supper.

On Wednesday evening a fowl supper was served by the ladies in the basement of the church. After supper, which everyone enjoyed, a concert was given in the Orange Hall by local and outside talent. Some of those contributing toward the program were Mrs. Cawker and son, Charles of Bowmanville; R. Sutton of Orono, Dr. Kuslake, of Orono, Miss Adamson, Neil Curtis and school children of Pontypool. Rev. Mr. Adamson, pastor of the church, acted as chairman. Proceeds of the supper amounted to about two hundred dollars.

Celebrates Birthday.

Mrs. James Connell, who recently celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday, is enjoying good health. A fowl dinner was served in her honor in the evening when the following guests were present: Reeve P. and Mrs. Stinson and family of Millbrook; Mr. and Mrs. John McNight and family of Cavan, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Payne of Pontypool.

Mr. and Mrs. Connell have practically spent their entire life in Manvers Township. Their many friends join in wishing Mrs. Connell many more birthday anniversaries.

HYDRO ELECTRICITY IN CANADA

Two men were once viewing the great Niagara Falls—one of them was declaiming on the wonderful panorama presented by the Falls when he was interrupted by his companion who pointed out that while appreciating the beauty of it all, and recognizing the great predominate forces, he was also impressed by the enormous results achieved in controlling those forces for the benefit of himself and his fellows. He was, of course, referring to the hydro-electric developments operating on both sides of the Niagara River. And the same story might be told of every one of the hydro developments scattered throughout Canada—the dominating spirit of man harnessing Canada's mighty powers to serve humanity in its upward course.

Little Known.

Yet less than half a century ago hydro power was still little more than a potentiality—was even an unknown force so far as its practical utilization was concerned. To-day approximately 6,000,000 horsepower is being taken from Canadian waters, all made possible by the genius and enterprise of men who had faith in their own country. And what a difference this remarkable utilization of the water powers has had on the development of the vast resources of the country, and in the advancement of the amenities of life. It is questionable if there is any country in the world so well off as Canada is in regard to facilities for progress—where the home, the factory or the community has at command so much light, heat or power, or at so low a cost. The consequence is that Canadian industry has a special advantage over that of other countries, with living conditions on a higher plane. Because of the low cost, and wide distribution, of hydro power, as compared with any other power, there is not a resource either below or above the ground but what can be profitably developed; as is indicated by the huge amount of business done in the varied products of the mine, the forest and the land.

Private Enterprise.

Two thirds of Canada's hydro-electric development is the result of private enterprise. This means that 4,000,000 horse-power has been developed by private individuals at an outlay of over one billion dollars, the larger part of which has been raised from the Canadian public. And as the average investment is not large it may be taken for granted that quite a large number of the citizens are financially interested in hydro-power, and Canadian hydro-electric securities are amongst the soundest investments of the country.

To get an idea of the financial ramifications of hydro power in Canada your correspondent recently discussed the matter with one of the executives of Nesbitt, Thomson and Company of Montreal, undoubtedly the largest organization in the Dominion specializing in power securities; it having a direct interest in power corporations generating over one million horse-power in forty power plants in the different sections of the country.

This executive of many power plants was quite enthusiastic regarding the future of hydro energy in Canada. He pointed out that this was a world of mechanicalization, and that Canada had water powers—the most economical motive force for modern machine production—on a scale unapproached by any other nation. "When capital" he went on "has been applied to a water-power, there has been set in motion an active agent of progress, and the fact of power development becomes the promise of ever widening circles of prosperity. Present installation represents the direct investment of many hundreds of millions of dollars contributed not only by the Canadian people, but by those of other countries. The outlook of hydro-electricity as it affects the Canadian people either as investors or consumers is distinctly bright."

And to back up this expressed confidence it might be stated that the Nesbitt Thomson power interests are spending millions of dollars in new hydro developments in British Columbia, Manitoba and Quebec. And what has been said of Nesbitt Thomson may be said with equal truth of the other private power interests of the Dominion, for all have invested their money on faith; and if on the whole, they have been successful in their investments it is because they have backed up that faith with ability, hard work and enterprise.

Through all the provinces have their hydro developments only about fourteen per cent of the present recorded water power resources have been harnessed, so there is plenty of room for the further development, which is continually going on. A very interesting and encouraging feature of the new development is that on the completion of a new hydro-electric plant the power is immediately absorbed, not only by the established industries but by new industries. This means that in the course of a very short period Canada will become one of the great industrial centres of the world—particularly in those industries indigenous to the country—and hydro electric energy will be the great factor that will make it possible.

VEGETABLE WASTE

Some of the best part of vegetables is lost through thick paring and over cooking. Most vegetables should boil from ten to fifteen minutes only.

GREASE SPOTS

Don't wash grease spots on linoleum or wood floors with hot water as this sets grease. Wash with soap powder and cold water until the grease comes out.

WHEN BIG NEWS TRAVELLED BY PONY EXPRESS

Co-operative Gathering of News First Attempted in Nova Scotia.

BY N. Y. NEWSPAPERS.

Despatches From Europe Came in Mail Steamers From England

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 8 (C.P.) — Newspaper readers everywhere are familiar with the symbols which identify present day news despatches as the product of world wide news gathering agencies; few, perhaps, realize as they scan the headlines over their breakfast coffee, that the first important steps toward an organized dissemination of intelligence on this continent had Halifax as the heel-print and Digby as the end of the initial stride.

The first step was the Halifax Express, in which the Associated Press had its inception, and which, by a fortnightly desperate gallop from Halifax to Digby, placed English and foreign news in the hands of New York readers thirty-six hours before the arrival at Boston of the steamer on which the despatches crossed the Atlantic. In the records of the Nova Scotia Historical Society are stories of how the express riders covered the 144 miles in an average of eight hours, thrusting their sealed packages into the hands of the waiting couriers for conveyance by steamer across the Bay of Fundy to the eastern extremity of the telegraph at Saint John.

Old World News

The Halifax Express was in operation during nine months of 1849, between the establishment of the telegraph line from Saint John to Calais, Maine, whence it was hooked up with Boston and New York, and its extension to Halifax. In those days the English mail steamers ran between Liverpool and Boston, calling at Halifax. News from England was then the news of the world. It came in fortnightly budgets from London, not as now in continuous despatches over leased wires from the ends of the earth. It was this condition that brought the New York newspapers together and caused the Associated Press to be founded. It also demonstrated the necessity of extending the telegraph to Halifax.

From 1825 on, a revolution had slowly been taking place in methods of newsgathering. In that year Topliff and Blake had begun prowling about Boston Harbor and selling shipping and market intelligence. Later on Hale and Hallock purchased the New York Journal of Commerce and extended the system, employing a seagoing yacht to meet the incoming European steamers and relaying their information to the presses by carrier pigeons, semaphore signals and every available means. Competition between the New York papers was keen. James Gordon Bennett had a horse express in operation between Boston and New York after the establishment of the Cunard steamship line between Liverpool, Halifax and Boston. In the New England city, Topliff and Blake had now been succeeded by D. H. Craig, who sometimes communicated with his office in Boston by carrier pigeon from a point of fifty miles at sea, after meeting incoming steamers with his schooner.

Among Craig's exploits, it is related that coming to Halifax as one of a party of newspaper men who had chartered a steamer to meet the English mail, he secreted two pigeons in a basket, releasing them while still many miles at sea on the return trip. Thus others of the party found the despatches already public property when they landed in Boston harbor.

Meanwhile, Morse had been struggling with the telegraph, and by 1849 the lines had been extended to Saint John. The English news was of immense value to spectators, particularly that relating to world markets, and in order to keep pace with private speculators and protect their public, as well as safeguard their own interests, six New York papers established the Halifax Express. D. H. Craig was the first superintendent at Halifax. Thus Halifax became the first foreign station and Craig the first foreign correspondent of the Associated Press.

3,000 Word Budgets

Budgets of news, generally running to 3,000 words, were delivered to Craig's men, often before the steamers reached their piers, and rushed to Victoria Beach, Digby by two riders, changing at Kentville, and taking fresh horses every twelve miles. The express had competition, for the private speculators did not relish being beaten to New York with valuable information. The races of the rival expresses through little Nova Scotia villages are still the subject of somewhat vague traditions in that section of the country. The first express left Halifax on the morning of February 21, 1849, and reached Digby over eleven hours later, a record which was lowered by over three hours on the very next trip. On one occasion only two and one half minutes separted the rival horsemen at the finish. At another time, when the express was being run in the dead of night, a rider felt his horse give a tremendous leap, and was unaware until the next day that his faithful animal had taken in his stride a twenty foot gap in a highway bridge.

The cost of maintaining the express was about $1,000 for each mail arrival. Besides this, newspapers contributed largely to the upkeep of the telegraph. Boston newspapers shortly came into the association and bore their share of the cost.

The British Colonist, a Halifax paper of the time, remarks editorially: "Had we ever entertained any doubts as to the importance of an electric telegraph being constructed between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick the following fact would suffice to remove scepticism. The America arrived on last Thursday morning, and incredible as it may seem, the English and foreign news which she carried was published in New York on the same evening."

The first telegraphed despatch to be published in a Halifax paper appeared when the line was extended from Saint John to Halifax. It was headed "Great Storm At Portland" and read: Saint John, N.B., Nov 14, 1849. Ten buildings were blown down on Friday night. No other news per steamer."

The first despatch of English news by telegraph direct to New York and Boston was completed on November 15, the following day. Thus was terminated the Halifax Express.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a 16 oz. bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make 16 ounces. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

The Pain Vanished in Three Days

Ontario Lady Used Dodd's Kidney Pills

"I have off and on suffered with Rheumatism," writes Mrs. W. Russell, 183 St. James St., Port Arthur, Ont. "I couldn't find relief in any pills or medicine which I had been taking until a friend advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I got a box and in a day's time I felt better and on the third day the pain was nearly gone. Now I have no pain at all and always keep Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house."

Dodd's Kidney Pills have restored sound health to thousands of troubled men and women. They strengthen weak kidneys and remove the cause of the pain. 501

URGES U.S. ENTRY IN WORLD COURT

Senator States Refusal Would Show Indifference to Settlement of International Disputes.

SPEAKS BEFORE STUDENTS.

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass., Nov. 8.—(C.P.).—Senator Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts yesterday told the alumni and undergraduates of Mount Holyoke College that for the United States to refuse to subscribe to the World Court "would show indifference to the great cause of judicial settlement of international disputes."

He was speaking at Founder's Day exercises, a program commemorative of the 93rd anniversary of the founding of the college by Mary Lyon.

"We certainly are not risking much," Senator Gillette said, "in helping to establish a court which can never try us except on our request. Any judgment it may render in disputes between other nations does not bind us but only the nations on trial.

Fifth Reservation.

"The fifth reservation, which has been the sole source of difficulty, provided that the Court shall not 'without the consent of the United States' entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest."

Senator Gillett explained how the treaty awaiting ratification adjusts the "misunderstandings" by expressly accepting all of the Senate's 1926 reservations, subject to "certain agreements as to their operation."

"It is unfair to direct against the court," Senator Gillett said. "The hostility which exists against the League of Nations. Personally, I am glad we are not in the League. I think our geographical location and our racial differences would seriously hamper our usefulness in the League. But I think that, despite its defects, it has for 10 years been the most effectual agent for peace and reconstruction in Europe.

"To refuse to support the World Court, however, would show indifference to the great cause of judicial settlement of international disputes, which is the most hopeful pathway to peace, and which represents a tradition which America has most consistently followed."

Sir William Soulsby, aged 79, saw his fifty-fifth Lord Mayor of London elected this year.

MRS. THOS. WILSON ENTERS 102ND YEAR

Finds Life Happy Adventures—Still Knits Lace and Writes Letters.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—The year that Queen Victoria ascended the throne saw a little Canadian girl then about eight years old crying bitterly as she watched her father march away at the head of his men to fight the rebels outside Montreal. She laughs now as she recalls the tearful scene, for she recently celebrated her hundred and first birthday. She is Mrs. Thomas Wilson, of Upper street, and her father was Lieutenant-Colonel Edwin Pridham, of Grenville, Que.

Her father's stone mansion at Grenville is in as perfect condition as when it was built. It became a fashion among the leading residents of the town to have houses built of stone, for at that time the canal between Grenville and Carillon was being constructed, and advantage was taken of the presence of masons to erect dwellings that have weathered the fortunes of time and stand to-day as monuments to a generation that has long since passed away.

Mrs. Wilson did not have a birthday party this year. "Once in two years is enough at my age," she remarked with a musical laugh that is like the chime of silver bells, for she finds life a very pleasant matter, surrounded as she is by the affection and attention of her descendants. She resides with her daughter, Mrs. W. J. Tucker, and is visited every evening by her son, Sidney Pridham Wilson.

Although her sight has failed during the past year, Mrs. Wilson still writes all her letters. After her hundredth birthday she wrote replies to a hundred letters and nine telegrams.

Mrs. Wilson's smile is as bright and happy as that of a girl in her 'teens. Her dark eyes shine behind her spectacles as she talks over old days, sitting erect in her chair, and her soft white hair is set off by the little lace-trimmed cap she wears. She is a member of Knox Crescent Church, and rarely misses attendance on Communion Sunday. She is also an active member of the Women's Missionary Society and attends the monthly meetings. She is an expert knitter, and made several yards of lace during the past summer.

Her father was a native of Devonshire, England, and for over fifty years was postmaster at Grenville, and his son succeeded him in that office. Mrs. Wilson's husband, the late Thomas Wilson, was also a postmaster, at Clarence, Ontario, and their son now holds this position. There are also three nephews in the post office department of Winnipeg, their father having gone to the West as a member of Lord Wolseley's staff at the time of the Red River rising in 1870. Lieut-Col. E. A. Pridham, M.C., a nephew of Mrs. Wilson, is in command of the Manitoba Rifles at Portage la Prairie, the fifth generation of his family to be connected with the militia. He is a barrister, and deputy registrar-general for Manitoba.

JUDICIAL SALE OF HOUSE AND LOT (BRIDGENORTH) AND FARM (SMITH TOWNSHIP)

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF ONTARIO.

HEARD VS. HEARD.

PURSUANT to the Judgment dated the 17th Day of February, 1930, in this action and the Order for Sale made herein dated the 16th Day of October, 1930, there will be offered for Sale, by Public Auction, in Two Parcels, with the approbation of the undersigned Master, by W. J. Hancock, Auctioneer, at his Auction Rooms, in the City of Peterborough, at the hour of Two o'clock, on Thursday, the 27th Day of November, 1930, the following Lands and Premises being composed of and more particularly described as follows:

PARCEL NUMBER ONE: ALL AND SINGULAR that certain Parcel or Tract of Land and Premises situate lying and being in the Township of Smith, in the County of Peterborough and Province of Ontario, and being composed of the North Half of Lot Number FIFTEEN, in the Sixth Concession of the said Township of Smith.

PARCEL NUMBER TWO: ALL AND SINGULAR, that certain Parcel or Tract of Land and Premises situate lying and being in the Township of Smith, in the County of Peterborough and Province of Ontario, and being composed of Part of Lot Number SIXTY-FOUR as shown upon a plan registered in the Registry Office for the Registry Division of the County of Peterborough as Number Four for the Township of Smith, and which may be more particularly described as follows:

COMMENCING at a point in the Southerly limit of said Lot Number Sixty-four distant one hundred and ninety-six feet easterly from the south-west angle of the said Lot; thence north fifty-eight degrees thirty minutes east along the said southerly limit one hundred and thirty-eight feet seven inches; thence northerly at right angles to the said southerly limit of said Lot twenty-six feet nine inches; thence southerly fifty-eight degrees thirty minutes west one hundred and sixteen feet six inches; thence south thirty-six degrees twenty-five minutes west thirty-seven feet three inches; thence southerly in a straight line fifteen feet ten inches to the place of beginning.

The said Parcels of Land will be offered for Sale subject to reserved bids fixed by the said Master.

The Purchaser shall pay down to the Vendor's solicitor on the day of Sale Ten per cent. of the purchase money, and shall pay the balance of the purchase money into Court without interest within Thirty Days after the date of Sale. Adjustments to be made as of date of Sale. The Purchaser shall search the title at his own expense. The Vendor shall not be bound to produce any abstract of title or any deeds or evidence of title other than those in his possession or control. In all other respects the conditions of Sale are the standing conditions of Sale of the Court as modified by the conditions of Sale settled by the undersigned.

On the Premises of Parcel Number One is said to be erected a Frame House, about twenty-two feet by twenty-six feet, with Kitchen attached, about sixteen feet by twenty feet, with a good cellar and stone foundation. Also a Frame Barn, with steel roof, twenty-eight feet by forty feet, with a stone foundation, and stable underneath. This Parcel is sold subject to a verbal lease for one year expiring the Eighteenth Day of April, 1931, at a rental of $75.00 per year and taxes, more particularly referred to in the Conditions of Sale.

On the Premises of Parcel Number Two is said to be erected a Frame House, about twenty feet by twenty-four feet, with Kitchen attached. (This Property is situated in that part of the Township of Smith known as Bridgenorth.)

Further particulars and conditions of Sale may be had from Hall, Hall & Stevenson, Solicitors, Hunter Street, Peterborough, Ontario, or from Gordon & Elliott, Solicitors, George Street, Peterborough, Ontario.

DATED at Peterborough this 31st Day of October, A.D. 1930.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN No 48 (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

In a day and a night Tarzan covered the same distance the fifty frightful men had taken nearly a week to traverse. As last he reached the great boulder that marked the secret passage beneath the city. Like a cat he scaled its steep sides. In a moment he was running through the long, straight tunnel that led to the treasure vault.

Finally he came to the well-like shaft, upon the opposite side of which lay the dungeon with the false wall. His quick ears caught a faint sound—and translated it! 'Twas the dance of death that preceded a sacrifice. He recognized the sing-song ritual of the high priestess's voice! A wave of horror swept over him! Was he, after all, to be just a moment too late?

Like a frightened deer, Tarzan leaped across the narrow chasm. At the false wall he tore like one possessed. With giant muscles he forced the opening. Thrusting his head and shoulders through it, he ran to the barred door. Here he was stopped, for it was proof against even such muscles as his. Turning, he ran swiftly back into the passageway.

He heard again the monotonous voice of the high priestess. Twenty feet above him the wall ended. Binding his grass rope to a granite slab, he threw it over the top. For a brief, sickening moment Tarzan felt the slipping of the rope to which he clung. Then the slab caught over the wall's edge. Gingerly the ape-man clambered up the frail support.

PROTECTION FOR MOUTH AND THROAT

Exposure to damp weather, excessive use of voice, or smoking are frequently the source of irritated, sore throats. Unless promptly cared for serious complications often follow.

A gargle of one part Absorbine, Jr., to nine parts water will bring quick relief to the inflamed tissues . . . And if there is congestion with the infection, as usually happens, break it up at once by rubbing the outside of the throat with a few drops of full-strength Absorbine, Jr.

To sweeten the breath and keep the mouth in a clean, wholesome condition at all times, the daily use of Absorbine, Jr., diluted as a mouth-wash, is ideal . . . just a few drops in a little water morning and night. Get a bottle at your druggist's—$1.25. 130

Y.W.C.A. WEEK'S ACTIVITIES.

Finance Campaign — The annual finance Campaign is now at its height. It costs money as well as time and thought to run a large activities building. Peterborough Y. W. C. A. budget is $27,000.00. The income from classes, clubs, residence and memberships provides 94 per cent. of the budget, and to the citizens of Peterborough the Y.W.C.A. turns for the balance of 6 per cent. or $2,000. The Y.W.C.A. serves the girls of Peterborough, Canada and the World. The Board of Directors will appreciate the Co-operation and help of citizens who would like to send in contributions to "Y" work. All subscriptions will enable the Association to go forward to greater usefulness.

Swimming Exhibition—The big annual swimming exhibition will be held on Friday evening at 8 o'clock. A splendid program of races, stunts and diving has been arranged. There will also be the competitions for the various cups and trophies.

Life Saving—The final life saving examinations will be held at the Y.W.C.A. pool Friday at 4.30 p.m.

Swimmers' Notice—All swimmers of the city who wish to compete for the city trophies or take part in the races at the "Y" Swimming Exhibition are asked to be at the pool Tuesday at 7 p.m. Also all members for Junior Stunt and Life Saving Classes.

Gymnasium — Because of the Thanksgiving Holiday Monday, the Elementary Class will meet with the Advanced Class at 8 p.m. Tuesday. New members will be welcome at any gym. class. Join now and enjoy the winter's program of drills, folk and aesthetic dancing and games.

MAIL COLLECTION ONE HOUR EARLIER

Change in Night Trains Forces Letter Boxes to be Cleared Earlier.

Commencing Monday, November 10th, the night collection from the street letter boxes will be one hour earlier than the time given on the time cards in the boxes at the present time. This is for the reason that the mail train from Toronto will arrive in this city at 11.50 p.m. in place of 1.50 a.m., as at present. The time cards on the street letter boxes will be changed during the coming week. The public are requested to be governed accordingly.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM E. HAYES.

William Edwin Hayes, of 460 Elm Street, this city, passed away in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, on Friday, at the age of 45 years.

The late Mr. Hayes, who was admitted to hospital three weeks ago, served overseas with the 127th (Toronto) Battalion from 1915-1918.

He was born at Woolwich, England, and had resided here for twenty-two years, working for a number of years at Fisher's Battery Store. He leaves his wife, two sons William and Frederick, and two daughters, Hilda and Margaret.

He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church, and the vicar, the Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, will conduct the funeral services on Monday at 10 a.m. Interment in Little Lake Cemetery.

THOMAS LAUGHLIN

Another of Peterboroughs County's oldest residents has passed on, in the person of Thomas Laughlin who died in this city at the age of 92 years, following a short illness.

The late Mr. Laughlin was born in Smith township where he had engaged in farming for the major part of his life. Before coming to this city three years ago, where he has been residing with Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Westlake of 300 Wolfe Street, he resided in Harvey township for a short period.

He was a member of the United Methodist Church.

Left to mourn his loss are four nieces Mrs. Gordon of Dunkalk, Mrs. W. G. Westlake and Mrs. Vallery of this city and Mrs. Peters of Hastings, also nephews Fred Pearson of California, and Robert of Walkerville, Ont.

The funeral will be held on Monday at 10 a.m. from Belleghem and Sons, Funeral Home to Lakefield Cemetery. Rev. J. E. J. Millyard of George street United Church will conduct the service.

EDWARD J. McCARTHY.

The funeral of the late Edward J. McCarthy took place from the family residence, Hunter street, on Friday, Nov. 7th, to St. Peter's Cathedral, where a solemn requiem High Mass was celebrated by the Rector, Rev. Paul Costello, with Rev. K. A. Corkery as Deacon, and Rev. J. Finn as Sub-deacon.

The pall bearers were John Coughlin, William Rudkins, Dr. D. C. Hewett, Vincent McElderry, K.C., John Corkery and T. J. Hurley of Belleville.

The remains were interred in St. Peter's Cemetery, with Rev. J. V. McAuley, Ennismore, and Rev. J. Finn officiating.

THE most difficult gifts to select are those for personal friends. But the most personal and appreciated gift of all presents no problem. Just send them your portrait.

REV. MOORHOUSE IS SPECIAL SPEAKER

Three Adult Classes of Murray Street Church Hold Annual Banquet.

Rev. A. E. Moorhouse, pastor of St. James' United Church was the special speaker at the annual banquet of the three adult classes of Murray Street Church last evening.

Mr. Moorhouse in his short address left with the young people the idea of a life worthwhile—that there is really something worth striving for in life and by several illustrations showed that we really can obtain whatever we set out to get, providing we go at it in the proper way and are really desirous of succeeding.

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, presided and with him at the guests' table were Rev. A. E. and Mrs. Moorhouse, Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Madill, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Shiner, Mrs. M. McLellan, teacher of the Other's class, Miss Phyllis Rome, of the Eveready class, and Fred Ward, president of the Baraca Class

The banquet which was postponed from last summer, was given as a result of an attendance contest in competition for the Wearing Shield which this year was won by the Baracas.

Mrs. S. Gillespie in presenting the shield to the Baracas said that while the shield was obtained for attendance, she hoped the young people would also continue to strive for higher things in life. Miss Dorothy Gavine presented the shield to Fred Ward on behalf of the Others and Eveready classes.

Miss Geraldine Collins delighted the audience with two solos delivered in her usual pleasing style. Miss Elizabeth Webber was her accompanist.

Dr. Madill and W. G. Shiner as representatives of the Sunday School congratulated the classes upon the enthusiasm shown and recalled three leaders who were the means of furthering the work of the young people —Mr. Reid ,W. G. Richmond and Judge Wearing, the donor of the shield some years ago.

The banquet provided for the Baracas by the girls' classes, was in charge of Mrs. Howard Prise and Mrs. George Post and the tables looked lovely done in Hallowe'en decorations and centered with large pumpkins carved in basket shapes and filled with apples and grapes.

The piano which was used during the program was from Heintzman Hall.

IN MEMORIAM

DEYELL—In loving memory of Baby Stuart Warren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon E. Deyell, who died November 8, 1928.

Day after day we think what he is doing,
In those bright realms of air;
Year after year his tender steps pursuing,
Behold him grown more fair.
—Sadly missed by the family.

IN MEMORIAM

MILLAR—In loving memory of James Millar, who died November 8, 1926.

There is someone who misses you sadly,
And found the years long since you went;
There is someone who misses you daily,
Though we try to be brave and content.

Time moves on and we are reminded
Of a day our hearts were crushed
When God took you, oh, so quickly,
And we all in our gloom were thurst.

Times may come and bring many changes
Fresh with every coming year:
But your memory we will cherish
In the hearts that loved you here.

Our life cannot speak how we loved him,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say:
God only knows how we miss him
In a home that is lonesome today

The flowers we place upon your grave
May wither and decay.
But the love and memory that you left
Will never fade away..

BULLER.—In loving memory of our dear mother, Elizabeth Buller, who departed this life November 8th, 1929.
—Sadly Missed By Sons, Daughters and Grandchildren.

IN MEMORIAM.

NEWALL.— In fond and loving memory of our only brother Jack, who was drowned near Vancouver, B.C., on November 10, 1928.
—Ever Remembered Fy His Sisters, Maggie, Belle and Lottie.

IN MEMORIAM.

DRAKE. — In fondest memory of my dear wife, who departed this life on Nov. 9th, 1929:
Why do we mourn departing friends
Or shake at death's alarm,
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends
To call them to His arms.
—Inserted By Her Husband, F. J. Drake.

IN MEMORIAM.

DUNFORD.—In loving memory of my dear grandmother, Mrs. Richard Dunford, who entered into rest Nov. 10th, 1929:
One whom we loved is out of sight
But never out or mind,
She is cherished in the hearts
Of those she leaves behind.

Loving and kind in all her ways
Upright and just to the end of her days,
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she leaves behind.
—Lovingly Remembered By Her Granddaughter, Susan Reed.

Program Approved By Caledonian Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Caledonian Club was held last evening in the Woodmen of the World Hall. W. Petrie, president, occupied the chair, and the representation of membership was large.

Reports from the various sub-committees were given. The Executive submitted a program which had been drawn up for the balance of the month. The most important event will be the celebration of Saint Andrew's Day, which will take the form of a concert for the members and their friends, and will be held on the 28th inst. Rev. J. B. McCormack of Lakefield will give the address of the evening.

In honor of those whose names are on the Caledonian Roll of Honor, the members observed two minutes' silence.

The Caledonian Club decided to participate in the annual Armistice celebration, by taking part in the parade and placing a wreath on the War Memorial. Members are asked to meet in Confederation Square at 2.15.

After the business meeting the Executive served refreshments, and a social hour was spent in dancing.

Plot to Overthrow Soviet Union Bared

HIGH TREASON CHARGE IS LAID TO 8 RUSSIANS

British Oil Magnate, Briand, Poincare Named as Co-conspirators.

RAMSIN PRIME MOVER.

Movement Financed By Outstanding Statesmen of Half Dozen Nations.

MOSCOW, U.S.S.R., Nov. 11.—(AP)—What is described as the most ambitious plot yet uncovered for the overthrow of the Soviet Government was outlined today with the publication of a sweeping indictment charging eight anti-Soviet leaders with conspiring to overthrow the Stalin Regime.

Lawrence Implicated

Lawrence of Arabia, that glamorous figure who appears on the British Army rolls as "Aircraftsman Shaw," and the outstanding statesmen and financiers of half a dozen nations were named as having aided and financed the movement.

Poincare and Briand of France, Sir Henri Deterding, British oil magnate, and prominent figures in Poland, Rumania and Finland were named as co-conspirators.

The counter-revolutionist leader Ramsin is alleged to have been the prime mover in the plot. His associates, three of them educators and the others engineers are charged with having formed a central committee of the so-called industrial party in the interest of the intrigue.

Face High Treason Charge

The alleged Russian leaders, who will be tried on charges of high treason for which the punishment is death are alleged to have implicated more than 200 others in confessions of their parts in the plot.

VICTIMS GIVEN BANDIT'S CARD

Ottawa Clerks Read the Message and "Hand Over the Cash."

TWO STORES ROBBED.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 11 (C.P.).—"Smile and hand over the cash. I have a gun in my hand. Don't yell." A card bearing these arresting words has been presented to the clerks of two Ottawa stores within a period of 48 hours, and on each occasion a debonnair bandit of some 20 years has been successful in his quest.

Last night the clerk of a tobacco store on Sparks Street, main thoroughfare of the capital, was confronted by the young card-bandit. The card was placed on the counter and a hand buried in an overcoat pocket pointed a revolver-shaped object in the direction of the clerk. The robber was handed $18, only a part of what the cash register contained, and he fled.

The same mode of operation was carried out on the clerk of a drug-store Saturday night, when $24 was taken. From descriptions of the bandit given by the victimized clerks, police believe the same youth carried out both holdups.

Two-Minute Silence Is Observed In City

All Peterborough observed the two minutes of silence this morning in reverent memory of the great sacrifices of the World War. The activity of work shop, office, factory, and even the bustle of the streets, was stilled at 11 o'clock. Whistles of factory sirens announced the time for silence to busy workers in shops, and the chiming of the city clock automatically stopped movement on the business streets.

The ceremony at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute was impressive Two minutes of silence were observed at morning assembly, and one by one pictures of the many men from the school who paid the supreme sacrifice were shown on the screen. The Last Post was also sounded.

Later at 11 o'clock, when people throughout the British Empire stopped a moment to remember, the pupils in all schools throughout the city sat with bowed heads.

Danish farmers, enjoying their third favorable year, are optimistic regarding the future.

Cab Drivers' Joke Results in Death

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.— Some taxicab drivers thought they would have fun early to-day with Policeman Joseph J. Palermo, new on the force.

One of them ran up to Palermo, crying out that a nearby restaurant was being held up.

Officer Palermo rushed to the place. A man was just coming out, but when he saw the policeman h. backed up. Witnesses said the man made a move as though to draw a pistol.

The policeman took no chances. He fired, sending two bullets into the head of Thomas Ottati, a cab driver.

It was just a practical joke on a new policeman, but Thomas Ottati is dead.

DOMINION HONORS GREAT WAR DEAD ALL WORK HALTS

Brief Religious Services Held in Cities and Towns Over Country.

WREATHS DECK MEMORIALS.

Speeches Recall Gallant Part Played By Canadians in 1914 to 1918 Conflict.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 11. (CP)—All activity ceased in Canada today for a space of two minutes, and the nation stood in reverent homage to those whose names are numbered among the dead of the Great War. The Armistice Day silence from 11.00 am. to 11.02 a.m. was observed from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts. The whirr and clang of the machinery in the industrial centres were subdued; trains speeding over the network of railway lines east and west were slowed down to a stop in the cities the bustling noises that accompany everyday life were silenced, their place taken by a hush that stirred the emotions. Canada's observance of this solemn period, now a part of the country's national life; acquires added poignancy as the war memories recede further into the dim twilight of forgotten things, and as there broadens out an enlarged conception of all that was secured by the sacrifices of the men of the Canadian corps.

Religious Services Held

Throughout the country brief religious services were held. In the small hamlets reverent groups surrounded the village memorial, some modest piece of statutary or in cases only a little tablet in the wall of the parish church, and there they deposited their wreaths of laurels and poppy—laurel because it is the sym-

MEIGHEN SPEAKS PLAINLY ON WAR

Claims Civilization Must End War or War Will End Civilization.

GREAT TASK AHEAD.

(By Ken Clark C. P. Staff Writer)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, former Prime Minister of Canada last night placed before the Good-Will Congress of the World Alliance for International Friendship in unequivocal language his concept of a world imperilled by war.

He said: "Civilization must end war or war will end civilization'

"War has lost its efficacy, it can only bring defeat and despair for both conquered and conquerors."

"The policy of the Governments is dominated by fear."

"There has to be found a substitute for armaments, something else that will bring security not only to one but to all."

"The one supremely important task before our world today is to bring about an organization against war and such an organization cannot be brought about without the United States. I despair of finding a substitue for armaments except in a universal association of nations.

"The hand of force to hold in check an offender (whether an individual or a nation) is the very essence of the social contract, it is the principle by which the integrity of a nation is assured and the reign of law sustained."

CLUB OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY OF ARMISTICE DAY

Two Minute Period of Silence During Weekly Luncheon of Rotarians.

FITTING ADDRESS.

J. E. R. Munro Tells Club of the Efforts Being Made For World Peace.

The twelfth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice was marked by the Peterborough Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day, when an address most appropriate to the occasion was delivered by J. E. R. Munro and a period of two minutes' silence in memory of the unreturning brave was observed. Rotarian R. F. Downey presided in the absence of President Robert Abbott.

Mr. Munro, who was introduced by Rotarian Dr. M. A. Morrison, as a young man who had gone out to fight for Canada, described the world as a land flowing with milk and honey, but containing an immense forest in the centre of which there lived a terrible monster, the scourge of war, against which the peoples of the world were striving. The forest by which he was protected was composed of the big trees of differences of color, race, and creed, the smaller trees of national differences, and the shrubs of provincial, municipal and personal differences. The peoples of the world had arrived at the conclusion that if these trees were cut down and the sunlight let in, the scourge would be ended—and so they were battling, the church, the Rotarians and other organization to put an end to war. In this connection, Mr. Munro stressed the efforts of Rotarians throughout the world to promote international peace and expressed the opinion that should the League of Nations fail in its objects, world peace might still be made possible through the efforts of international organizations, such as Rotary.

But while preparing for peace, there still was the need of what the speaker described as trained bands of hunters who might resist the onslaughts of the dragon while the peoples of the earth renewed their efforts to subdue him. In other words some measure of national defence was still needed. He also emphasized the necessity of doing honor to the memory of the men who lie beneath the wooden crosses, remarking that no knight in the old days of chivalry had even ridden forth with a higher motive than the men who had gone out to fight for Canada and the Empire in the World War.

Rotarian W. Gordon Hall expressed the thanks of the Rotary Club to the speaker.

Rotarian Dr. A. Moir, chairman of the crippled children's committee, reported on the progress of the survey being made in connection with the clinic, to be held here later in the month, and announced it was expected that some twenty-five children would be examined during the clinic. Dr. Moir also reported successful treatment given several children during the past year.

TWO FREIGHTERS GROUND ON REEFS

Tugs Busy Lightering Vast Cargoes of Grain to Refloat Vessels.

OFF AMHERSTBURG.

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 11. — Two freighters were hard aground to-day off Amherstburg. One was rapidly being lightered while arrangements were being made to start operations toward refloating the second.

Two tugs and a lighter worked throughout the night to release the steamer John P. Reiss downbound with a cargo of grain which went aground at Ballard Reef, opposite Amherstburg. This morning some 46,000 bushels of her cargo of wheat and flax seed had been taken off and there were indications that she would be refloated within a short time.

The second boat is the freighter Angeline, also loaded with grain. She went aground at 9.30 Monday evening, some 300 feet below the Livingstone Channel Light.

GALSWORTHY TO VISIT ARIZONA

ANOTHER OF GERMANY'S GREAT PL ANES

This giant Junker plane G-38 (also known as the D-2000), is the largest plane in existence at the present time. A remarkable feature of the ship is the manner in which the hollow wings have been utilized in creating engine rooms and accommodation for passengers. The plane is said to have a capacity for covering 2,000 miles without stopping. This picture was taken when the G-38 went on a tour of Europe.

Citizens, Veterans Honor Heroic Dead

Memory of Those Who Did Not Return is Fittingly Honored at Impressive Service Held in Front of Cenotaph.

VETERANS PARADE TO GRAND OPERA HOUSE WHERE SHORT ADDRESSES ARE DELIVERED

Surrounding the cenotaph, the citizens of Peterborough and the war veterans in particular, gathered on Sunday afternoon to do honor to the memory of those legions who sleep their last sleep on the battlefields of Europe and elsewhere; who died in the service of their King and Country in the World War 1914-1918.

The veterans, drawn up in two long ranks facing the Cenotaph, stood in impressive and solemn silence in homage to the memory of their fallen comrades. Shining medals, two, three, and four in number, worn on their breasts, gave significant testimony of their own brave service to their country. The citizens stood behind, and they, too, stood in silent respect to the glorious memory of loved ones who gave their lives in the hour of the nation's need.

The Boy Scouts, representing the youth of Canada along with the Girl Guides, were drawn up on the west and east sides of the Cenotaph, and were ample proof that young Canada appreciates full well the debt they owe those men who gave their lives in such noble service, and revere their memory and their deeds.

Immediately in front of the veterans were the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion. For the most part they were attired in deep mourning, and brought to one's vision the distressing thought of the vast number of war widows, and bereaved mothers and sisters to whom the anniversary of armistite has an added significance.

Men fully representative of all the militia units of Peterborough garrison, were drawn up on the left side of the veterans. They were in civilian clothes but presented a soldierly bearing nevertheless.

Impressive Service

It was a short impressive service, impressive in its simplicity, throbbing with silent eloquence of feeling, there enacted at the Cenotaph. The Ranger's Band played the air "Meditation", while wreaths were reverently and carefully placed in large numbers at the base of the Cenotaph. There were wreaths from many old comrades of the fallen, from many clubs, fraternal organizations and from the city.

Rev. Captain Paul Costello, Dominion Chaplain of the Canadian Legion and a padre overseas pointed out the significance of the annual observance of Armistice and the reason why the Poppy was chosen as a sign of remembrance. He explained that the Poppy had sprung up everywhere among the graves of the immortal dead. "The Poppy reminds us of sacrifice, of those splendid men exemplified in this monument," he said.

As the sad sweet notes of the "Last Post" ran out on the still air of a perfect Autumn afternoon, the long line of veterans sprang to attention. The Union Jack at the flag staff was lowered, as also was the Legion standard, borne by A. J. Gash, then as the "Reveille" sent out its silvery call to action, the flags were slowly raised billowing in the breeze.

The veterans then paraded to the Grand Opera House for the program there, after having first paused at the War Memorial in Confederation Park where further tributes of remembrance were laid, while the large concourse of people stood by with bared heads.

Headed by the Standard bearer, the Rangers' Band, the parade made an impressive appearance as it marched down George street. Following the band marched representatives of the City. Then came Lieut.-Colonel J. W. Miller, V.D., grand old

King George Attends Service At Cenotaph

LONDON, Nov. 11 (C.P.). — The British Empire to-day kept the twelfth anniversary of the armistice with ceremonies of silence and prayer that the horror of the world war may never be repeated.

An Empire-wide two-minute silence was observed at 11 a.m., while the King, symbolizing the grief of his realm at the war losses, stood with bowed head in prayer at the Cenotaph, where just two years ago today he caught the cold which led to his long and serious illness.

The King stood between his sons, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York, with the Premiers of the Dominions and the Princes of the Indian states flanking them, to make a group truly representative of the British commonwealth of nations.

MOTORCYCLIST DIES IN CRASH

Hamilton Racer's Girl Friend Badly Injured Near Woodstock.

AUTO DRIVER ARRESTED.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 11. — Leonard G. McIntyre of Hamilton was instantly killed and two others injured in a head-on collision between a motorcycle and an automobile about one mile east of here last evening.

McIntyre had been attending the motorcycle races at Woodstock and was returning to Hamilton with Miss Betsy Manson as a pillion passenger. About a mile east of here a car, driven by Harry Chernaty of Ingersoll turned out to pass another car going in the same direction and crashed into the motorcycle. Chernaty was placed under arrest.

HUNT RENEWED FOR LOST FLIERS IN WILDS OF B.C.

Two Royal Air Force Planes Reach Alert Bay on Way to Atlin.

FOUR MACHINES TURN BACK.

Hazardous Flying Weather Hampers Search—Three Missing Month.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 11.—Two Royal Canadian Air Force planes, battling fog, rain storms and dangerously restricted visibility, succeeded in reaching Alert Bay yesterday on the first stage of their hop to Atlin, B. C., where they are to join the search for Capt. E. J. A. Burke and two companions who have been missing 28 days in the wilderness along the headwaters of the Liard River.

Two other planes, owned by the Pacific International Airways, which took off from Vancouver yesterday to fly by the inland route to Atlin, were compelled to return to the city. Speeding up the Fraser Valley, these two machines piloted by E. J. Barrows and Harry Blunt, encountered extremely hazardous weather conditions near Yale, B. C., and were forced to turn back.

Commander Pushes North

W. Joerrs, field commander of the search planes, was meanwhile pushing steadily northward. Joerrs, it was reported, hopped off from Prince George, B. C., yesterday with the intention of reaching Taku River, 200 miles north. Flying Officer L. H. Phinney and Flying Officer C. R. Dunlap, Royal Canadian Air Force pilots, were reported to have hopped from Cowichan Lake for Alert Bay Sunday. A wireless message, however, from Alert Bay Monday night stated Phinney and Dunlap had been delayed by bad weather. With favorable weather conditions today, however, the two Air Force machines were expected to continue their northward hop to Prince Rupert.

Search headquarters announced Monday night that no new reports have been received from the north.

Burke, who was accompanied by Emil Kading and Bob Marten on his hop into the Liard Country, has now been lost 28 days, while Renahan, with Sam Clerf and Frank Matcher as companions, has been missing half that time.

BALLANTYNE PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11 (C.P.).—James H. H. Ballantyne, suspended Deputy Minister of Labor, appeared before Judge Denton in the General Sessions Court to-day and pleaded not guilty to a charge of stealing a dress valued at $15. Mr. Ballantyne was represented by Arthur Roebuck, K.C., while Eric Armour, K.C., acted for the Crown.

Gene Tunney Suit Is Given to Jury

NEW YORK, November 11 (C. P.). — The $526,812 suit of Timothy J. Mara against Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight boxing champion, charging breach of contract, was given to a jury in Supreme Court at 11.30 a.m. (E. S.T.) to-day.

POLICE SWOOP DOWN ON SIDING MAKING HAUL OF EIGHTY CASES BILLED "GROCERIES," IN C.N.R. CAR

Shipment Was From Montreal Consigned to Mythical Local Firm.

VALUED AT OVER $2,000.

Officers Have Busy Time Unpacking Cases Bottle By Bottle.

LONDON, Ont., November 11 (C.P.). — With the seizure of about 80 cases of liquor, of Quebec origin, on a C.N.R., siding, near the freight sheds here this morning, Provincial Police dealt another heavy blow to interprovincial liquor running. The liquor, valued at over $2,000, was billed "groceries" from Montreal, and consigned to a mythical local firm.

Eight Packing Cases Full.

Inspector H. Gardiner and Sergt. William Scott, of the local Provincial Police headquarters, swooped suddenly down on the freight car with its secret load of contraband at about 11 o'clock this morning. They found eight packing cases, marked as groceries, and upon investigation discovered their valuable liquid contents.

Firm Never Existed.

The secret cargo had been billed to "Donner & Sons, of London, Ont," a firm that does not and never did exist. The liquor was taken to the Provincial Police office, where officers started to unpack it, bottle by bottle. At press time they were still employed and could give only an estimate that the cargo consisted of 80 cases or more.

Premier's Message

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 11. (CP) Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime minister, cabled the following Armistice Day message from England: "On this twelfth anniversary of the armistice I join with my fellow-citizens in paying profound and grateful tribute to the memory of those who died for Canada and the Empire. We will not forget them, nor will we forget that to us is handed the trust to maintain inviolate the great principles of justice, freedom and fair dealing for which

ANGRY ELEPHANT IMPERILS PARADE

SIGHTED PLASTER TIGER.

LONDON, Nov. 11 (By Thomas T. Champion, C. P. Staff Correspondent) —There might easily have been a disastrous finish to the Lord Mayor's Show yesterday. This annual perambulation of the city always comprises an extraordinary mixture of civic pomp and circus procession, included four elephants intended to portray some of the glamor of the East.

At Charing Cross, however, something put one elephant out of humor. It is stated that students of St. Bartholomew's Hospital held aloft a plaster tiger and this sight of his old enemy of the jungle caused the beast, who had stood with patience the blaring of brass bands and other noises, to lose his manners. At any rate he surged through a dense crowd with all the symptoms of being out of control and a wild stampede followed.

Many women and children were thrown down and some were so seriously bruised that they were taken to the hospital. None, however, remained there for long.

HIGHER TARIFFS WANTED IN WEST

Ryckman Claims Protection on Agricultural Products Urged on Him at Many Points.

TOURED TO VICTORIA, B.C.

OTTAWA, Ont., November 11 (C. P.). — After a trip which took him as far West as Victoria, B.C., Hon. E. B. Ryckman, Minister of National Revenue and Acting Minister of Finance, returned to Ottawa to-day with the general impression that higher tariffs are acceptable to the West. Tariff protection on agricultural products was urged upon him at many points, Mr. Ryckman said, while wheat producers put forward requests for guaranteed minimum prices.

Despite this year's reduced wheat crop, and low prices, Prairie farmers were optimistic for next year, the Minister found, while in British Columbia everything pointed to increased prosperity.

The tariffs put into effect at the special session of Parliament appeared to have been well received, Mr. Ryckman said, and farmers were now turning to the idea that protective tariff on their own products would operate in their best interests.

DEPUTY MINISTER IS FOUND GUILTY

James H. H. Ballantyne is Found Guilty By Judge Denton.

WILL FYLE APPEAL.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11.—(CP)—James H. H. Ballantyne, suspended Deputy Minister of Labor, was today found guilty before Judge Denton on a charge of stealing a $15 dress from a local lingerie store. He was remanded in custody until Nov. 13 for sentence. Mr. Ballantyne through his counsel Arthur Roebuck, K. C., has made known that he will fyle an appeal.

SENATOR TURRIFF DIES IN OTTAWA

Passing of Noted Politician Cuts Liberal Majority in Upper House to Three.

ADVOCATED CONSCRIPTION.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 11 (C.P.) — The first vacancy in the Senate since the Government of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett took office occurred with the death of Senator J. G. Turriff yesterday. His death cut the Liberal majority in the Upper Chamber of Parliament to three because, while Senator Turriff styled himself a Progressive, he gave fairly consistent support to the Liberal party. He was appointed to the Senate in 1918 during the term of the Union Government headed by Sir Robert Borden, and prior to that had represented the constituency of Assiniboia in the House of Commons.

Senator Turriff will be buried at Beechwood cemetery here. The funeral will take place from his late residence on Manor road, Rockcliffe, at two o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

Came Into Prominence During War.

It was during the war and just prior to the formation of the Union Government by Sir Robert Borden that Senator Turriff (then J. G. Turriff, M.P.) came prominently into the public life of the country. Those who were present at the great Weyburn Liberal convention in Winnipeg in 1917 recall the resolution which he moved and which threw into that meeting the question of conscription. It was this issue on which the Liberal party split and on which many Liberal stalwarts became the supporters of the Union Government. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Liberal Chieftain, was opposed to conscription.

The resolution moved by Mr. Turriff was not one of want of confidence in the Liberal Leader or party. It endorsed the party and its aims and efforts, but it concluded with a significant declaration supporting the prosecution of the war even by conscription if necessary. Its reception was mixed. There was applause. There was also some dissent. But the resolution carried.

Bush Fire Is Raging In Oak Lake District

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 11.—A bush fire is raging in the vicinity of Oak Lake, and has already burned over an area of about two square miles. The fire started on the plains about two miles north west of Fred Foote's farm house on Friday morning it is thought. There are no fire rangers on duty there and no measures whatever are being taken to combat the fire. A fire is also said to be making inroads in the vicinity of Ketchuem.

Past President Col. C. P. Patterson and Golf Club Engineer Overcome By Smoke Battling With Firemen to Save Structure.

SIR WILLIAM CLARK, PERLEY, BORDEN TAKE PART IN SALVAGE EFFORTS WHEN BLAZE DISCOVERED

Low Water Pressure and Breakdown by Part of Ottawa Apparatus Hampers Extinguishing of Blaze—Will Rebuild Shortly.

OTTAWA, Ont., November 11 (C.P.). — Damage exceeding $200,000 resulted yesterday when flames reduced to a pile of ruins the palatial clubhouse of the Royal Ottawa Golf Club on the Aylmer Road. Dozens of members and their guests, including Lord and Lady Willingdon, Sir George Perley, Acting Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, former Prime Minister, and Sir William Clark, British High Commissioner, were at luncheon when cries of "fire" resounded through the the corridors. The Governor-General and Lady Willingdon were among those who aided in the removal of furniture and fixtures before the flames enveloped the entire building.

Water Pressure Low.

Efforts at extinguishing the fire were hampered by lack of water pressure, and through the breakdown of one section of the Ottawa Department, which was speeding to the scene. Insurance totalling $120,000 was carried on the building. Brig.-General C. H. Maclaren, the club president, stated.

This was the second time in the club's history that its buildings were burned, the other occasion being in 1919. Yesterday's blaze was thought to have been caused by defective wiring in the attic.

Two Notables Overcome

Colonel G. P. Patterson, a past president of the club, and James Quinn, the engineer, were overcome by smoke while assisting the firemen in carrying hose to the top stories. Neither man, however, suffered serious disability.

General MacLaren said immediate plans would be laid for rebuilding probably on a more elaborate scale than that of the destroyed clubhouse.

Among the guests who were dining in the clubhouse when the fire started were: Mr. Justice A. K. McLean, President of the Exchequer Court; Senator J. A. Calder; Judge J. P. McKinley; Norman Wilson, husband of Hon. Senator Cairine Wilson, and F. C. T. O'Hara, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce.

LESSON OF WAR LITTLE BENEFIT

Despite War-like Outlook MacDonald Has Big Hopes of Peace.

BRITAIN READY TO LEAD.

LONDON, Nov. 11 (C.P.) — Questioning that the world had learned much since the Great War, Premier Ramsay Macdonald pleaded for disarmament in a speech given at the Lord Mayor's banquet last night.

"The old Adam is still rampant," he said. "Words are used which make us doubt how much the world has learned by the bitter, tragic experience of 1914 to 1918.

"Great Britain, while perfectly prepared to lead the way, looks behind at the same time as she looks before her, and wants to know how the other nations are following, because she cannot allow herself to be isolated in the steps she is taking to secure peace."

He said he had "The most hopeful expectations" of the Naval negotiations which have been renewed between France and Italy.

"While the world has been going through great upheavels," the Premier continued, "His Majesty's Government has been doing everything it can, with a gentle and smoothing leading hand, to establish a tranquillity where tranquillity has not been.

"South America has gone through revolution after revolution. The nations there are old friends of ours; it is not our business to inquire into their internal conditions, and we recognize Government after Government as soon as that Government has shown signs it has come to stay for a reasonable time."

HINT FOUL PLAY IN LAD'S DEATH AT SMITHVILLE

Youth of 12 Found Hanging From Limb of Pine Tree.

POLICE IN DARK.

Father Claims Boy Could Not Have Climbed Tree or Tied Knot.

SMITHVILLE, Ont., November 11 (C.P.). — Foul play is suspected in connection with the death on his father's farm near here of 12-year-old Charles R. Lampman, whose body was found hanging from a tree.

James L. Lampman, father of the lad, who was an adopted child and local police, claim the boy could not have climbed the tree from which he was found hanging. In addition, they claim the noose about his neck was undoubtedly knotted by more expert hands than his.

The boy's body was found last night by a search party organized after the boy had disappeared while going after the cows several hours earlier. He was considered one of the cleverest boys of his age in the community, and his continuous cheery disposition precludes the possibility of suicide, according to his parents.

Search Party Sent Out.

Mr. and Mrs. Lampman were totally at a loss as to who might have been connected with the boy's death. The search party found his body hanging 12 inches from the ground, while the limb of the pine tree about which the rope was fastened was about eight feet high. There was no trace of any object nearby on which the boy could have stood to reach the limb, nor is it nown where the rope came from. Lampman claimed the knot in the rope was of a type which his son did not now how to tie.

Provincial Police Constable Embleton and Coroner Dr. Gordon Sinclair of Grimsby, who are investigating the mysterious case, admitted the strong possibility of foul play, but could offer no suggestion as to why the lad was hanged.

Fire Damages Hydro Tower Foundation

(Examiner Correspondence)

ELDORADO, Nov. 11. Shortly after the men had ceased work on Saturday afternoon, fire broke out in one of the Hydro Power Commission's steel tower foundations. A tarpaulin was burned and also some of the form work. It is believed that the fire was caused by sparks from one of the coal burners as there was a high wind blowing at the time. Ten men were afterwards busily engaged in repairing the damage.

Please buy a pencil, Miss

"OH BOTHER, there's that tiresome old woman again. Just because I sympathized with her once—"

Then like an arrow came a strange thought.

The office girl's gaze went past the shabby dress, the hopeless coat, and rested on the seamed face with the wistful eyes from which fear looked out—the fear that dwells with the aged poor.

The girl knew her story. Once young of course, and thoughtless, happy with a husband and a home. Then came hard times. Luckless speculations swept away what little they had. The husband died at the wrong time, and left her unprovided for. The widow drifted here and there ... finally to this ... selling pencils to people who didn't want them.

So, to the office girl came these drumming questions that would not down—"could this happen to me? Could it? Old, helpless forlorn ... no money ... unwanted. What can I do to make sure I will never come to this?"

ROUGHAGE IS ESSENTIAL IN REDUCING DIETS

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Is Ideal Roughage

If you are following a reducing diet, it is doubly important that you take a regular amount of roughage into the system daily. Most reducing diets do not contain a sufficient amount of roughage. The result is constipation—thief of both health and beauty.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is recommended by many doctors and dietitians because it contains the bulk necessary to insure proper elimination.

Also, because it contains the iron needed to help prevent anemia—another danger in reducing diets.

ALL-BRAN is not fattening. Its bulk sweeps the system clean of poisonous wastes—helping to promote glorious health and beauty.

A popular way to eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is soaked in fruit juice. Try it! It is delicious with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over cereals, salads and soups. It adds flavor to cooked foods and is equally effective. Your grocer has Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It is served in restaurants, hotels and dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

PROVINCES WIN OVER DECISIONS BY PARLEY HEADS

Repeal of Colonial Validity Act Must Be Requested By Each of Provinces.

PRIVY COUNCIL APPEALS UP.

Ferguson, Taschereau Upheld—Dominions Get Right to Define Nationals.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 11. (By George Hambleton C. P. Staff Correspondent)—The Prime Ministers of the Empire spent yesterday in rounding out the subject of equality of status.

The end of the day found the Premiers with all their constiutional recommendations completed for the approval of the plenary session of the conference.

Last on the day's list came the issue of appeals to the Privy Council. But here the Premiers made no recommendation whatever. There will thus be no expression of opinion by the conference itself, and the status quo will remain.

1865 Validity Act to Go

The decisions confirm, in all essential particulars, the recommendations of the 1929 conference on the operation of Dominion laws. The Colonial Laws Validity Act of 1865 will be repealed, and thus no act passed by a Dominion Parliament will be void on the ground that it is repugnant to the laws of England. But to this recommended appeal there is a condition attached. In Canada the criticism has been made that the recommendation of the commission which studied the operation of Dominion laws went further than this repeal and by inference, might be interpreted as giving the Dominion Parliament powers to amend the British North America Act.

Premier Taschereau of Quebec and Premier Ferguson of Ontario held the Provinces should have been consulted before the commission made such an implication, and, before the Sankey Constitutional Committee of the Imperial Conference, Hon. Maurice Dupre, Solicitor-General of Canada, supported their view. The Empire Premiers concurred, and ruled the Provinces should be consulted.

The repealing bill will not now be presented to the British Parliament until the resolutions requesting it are passed by the Provincial Parliaments of the Dominions.

When further recommendations are made fully effective the net result will be:

Power Over All Ships

Each Dominion will have full legislative powers over all ships in its territorial waters or engaged in its coasting trade, and over its own ships both intraterritorially and extraterritorially.

Any alteration in the law touching the succession to the throne will be made only by the comment of all seven Parliaments of the British Commonwealth.

The right of each Dominion to define its own nationals, as has already been done by Canada is recognized.

The Empire Premiers recommend, however, that there should be no alteration in the status of common British citizenship, except after consultation and agreement between the different members of the Commonwealth.

CONFIDENCE IN IMPERIAL HOUSE.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11.—(C.P.)—That he believed he was expressing the sentiment of the citizens of Ontario when he said they were willing to leave their destiny in the hands of the Imperial House, was the comment of Hon. George S. Henry, Ontario Minister of Highways, and Acting Premier, regarding the colonial laws validity act, discussed at the Imperial Economic Conference yesterday.

SHORTER HOURS STIRS PROTESTS FROM NORTHLAND

Reduction Means 60 Cents Per Day Less For Laborers.

NEW GOV'T POLICY.

Northern Ontario Members Indicate Negotiations Will Be Opened.

COBALT, Ont., Nov. 11.—The action of the Provincial Authorities in reducing to eight hours instead of ten the working day of men engaged in various works in Northern Ontario, will be protested by members of the Ontario Legislature from some northern ridings. The reduction in the working day means a difference of 60 cents per day in the earning power of the men.

The reduction follows the adoption of the eight hour day on jobs undertaken under the relief funds for unemployment. Hitherto the northern development men have worked ten hours daily at the rate of 30 cents per hour, but with the Federal Government supplying part of the money available on the relief jobs. Ottawa insists the Dominion's eight-hour day of public work be the basis of the contribution hence the reduction of two hours in the working day in Northern Ontario making the daily wage $2.40.

Protest To Be Lodged

A. F. Kenning, M. L. A. for South Cochrane, passing through Cobalt, said the whole matter would be the subject of negotiations with the Department at Toronto. He declared Hon. J. M. Robb, Minister of Health (Algoma), A. V. Watters, North Cochrane, C. R. Harrison, member-elect for Nipissing and himself would take the matter up at the Parliament buildings and object to the rate of pay.

"It is too low," Mr. Kenning said and intimated no time would be lost in approaching the Provincial government. All the members named by Mr. Kenning are Conservatives.

Finlayson Heard Nothing

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11 (C.P.) — Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, who is in charge of Northern Development, stated he had heard nothing of the intention of several members of the Legislature taking up the matter of wages paid to workers on unemployment relief work in Northern Ontario.

A dispatch from Cobalt intimated Northern members of the Legislature would voice objections to the scale of wages paid within the next few days.

"The Government has not reduced wages," said Mr. Finlayson. "In order to receive the 25 per cent. grant from Ottawa we have reduced the working day from ten hours to eight. The Federal Government has stipulated that any works for which Federal funds are used must be on an eight hour basis."

He stated the work was for relief purposes and the money granted by the Federal and Provincial Governments had to go a long way.

PRISONER ADMITS BUCKLEY KILLING

Detroiter Surrenders to Police —Later Found Dead in Cell.

OFFICIALS SKEPTICAL.

DETROIT, Nov. 11. (CP)—A man believed to be William Jones, 50 years old, who walked into police headquarters yesterday announcing, "I killed Jerry Buckley, lock me up" was found severely injured two hours later in a cell block on the ninth floor, and died before he could be taken to receiving hospital. Inspector William Rick immediately ordered a complete investigation of the circumstances of Jones' death.

The man was intoxicated when he appeared at the station, said Patrolman John Norris, who locked him up. When found two hours later his skull had been fractured, his jaw crushed, and his left eye mangled.

Police stated he had received fatal injuries when he fell off a bench in his cell. They said he could have had no connection with the Buckley slaying.

Military Idea Scored By J. A. Woodsworth

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11 (C.P.).—Military parades on Armistice Day are inclined to foster and glorify the spirit of war, declared J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., of Winnipeg, addressing an audience in Yorkminster Hall here. While peace advocates were sometimes described as impossible idealists, he proceeded, the persons who should be condemned for the impracticability of their proposals were those who advocated war.

The speaker deplored the fact that 50 per cent. of Canada's national income was spent for war purposes, which he compared with the expenditures of one per cent. of that income for industrial relations, scientific research, old age pensions and foreign relations through the League of Nations. It was a ridiculous situation, he declared.

BERLIN, Nov. 11 (C.P.).—Two persons were killed and several others injured in clashes coincident with nation-wide observance of the 13th anniversary of the German Republic Sunday.

FORMER LINDSAY RESIDENT BURNED TO DEATH IN CRASH

Body of Brampton Engineer Found in Rear Seat of Fire Twisted Auto.

POLICE PROBE MYSTERY.

COOKSVILLE, Nov. 11.—Frank C. McClory, Town Engineer of Brampton, and a former resident of Lindsay, was burned to death about 3.30 Sunday morning, when he was trapped in his car, which caught fire on the Dundas Highway near Cooksville. From what can be learned, the car first struck a culvert and then rolled over in flames into a four-foot ditch.

Identified by License

Some mystery exists over the fact that McClory's body was found in the rear seat of the car, and the police are investigating the possibility of there being a second occupant of the car at the time of the accident. On the other hand, it is thought that possibly the impact of the car might have thrown McClory over into that position. His body was burned beyond recognition, and identification was only established by the license number of his car. The remains were removed to Skinner's Undertaking Parlors at Port Credit, at the instance of Dr. A. B. Sutton, Coroner, who has not yet decided whether an inquest will be necessary.

Passing motorists who notified Provincial Officer Fraser Bell were unable to do anything, on account of the terrific heat, and when the officer arrived the car was reduced to smouldering ruins.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11.—(C.P.)—Charlie Daly, 19, established a new Canadian parachute jump record here yesterday when he leaped from a plane piloted by Captain Earl Hand, of the Toronto Flying Club, from an altitude of 14,960 feet. This betters by 1,960 feet the recent record made by Warner Lips, 18, of Kitchener.

DEPARTMENT OF TRADE AND COMMERCE
OTTAWA, CANADA

November 8th, 1930.

To Canadian Manufacturers,
In Every Line of Business.

Remember the Golden Rule!

For some weeks now I have been urging consumers in every part of Canada to buy your products in preference to imported products. I have tried to make it quite clear to them that, in their own interest, it's the common sense thing to do.

Now if it is sound common sense that your fellow Canadians should support you, in your efforts to increase and to improve your production, isn't it also sound common sense that you, in the purchase of your materials, should support other Canadian producers who are trying to increase and to improve their production?

It's a poor rule that won't work both ways! When others wrench themselves out of life-long habits to do something that will help you, don't you agree that it's up to you to reciprocate in whatever way you can?

So let me ask you very frankly—are you co-operating in this campaign as fully as you might co-operate? When you buy materials and supplies, do you always make a conscientious effort to find some Canadian producer who can give you what will fill the bill? Conceding for the sake of argument that there are certain things you must import, because they cannot be produced in Canada, are your reasons for importing other things that do not fall within that category such that you would have no hesitation in making them public?

No fair-minded person is ever going to reproach you for buying imported materials and supplies when you can advance perfectly valid reasons for doing so. For example, if, after making diligent search, you were unable to find a single Canadian producer who could make delivery in the quality, and in the quantity, and within the time necessary to meet your requirements, and at a price you could afford to pay, that would be sufficient reason for your giving your order to a foreign producer.

And yet it hardly seems like playing the game, does it? It's equivalent to saying to the small Canadian producer—"To qualify for my business, you've got to show me that you can meet your big foreign competitor on every point—quality, quantity, time and price—otherwise you don't get it!"

If every Canadian consumer had always taken that stand, and stuck to it, many a man who is a successful Canadian manufacturer to-day would have lost his entire stake without ever having made a sale! But despite the competition he was up against, and the handicaps under which he had to labour, he made sales because there were enough Canadian consumers willing to see to it that he got his start.

So I ask you, aren't there times when you could well afford to show some Canadian producer just that little extra consideration that would be the means of starting him on his way to bigger and better business? If he cannot give you the quantity you want, within the time you want it, the reason probably is that you and other Canadian manufacturers have never given him enough business to warrant him enlarging the modest little plant he began with. If he cannot deliver you out of stock the exact quality you want, might he not soon be able to do so with the patronage that you and others might give him, by enabling him to keep pace with his big foreign competitor in bidding for skilled labour, in trying out new processes, and equipping himself with new devices as they are brought out? And if his price is a little high, just ask yourself if the preservation of your business makes it absolutely necessary for you to buy in the cheapest market!

As I write this I have before me two competitive articles, both produced in Canada. They sell to the same class of people, at the same price, and are apparently on a parity so far as quality is concerned. Both are made from the same kind of material, but whereas the material in one is 100 per cent Canadian, the material in the other is 100 per cent imported. The producer of the article made from Canadian material admits that he could make a little more profit for himself by using imported material, but he won't do it—he says he doesn't need to! The producer of the article made from imported material, while contending that the exigencies of his business make it necessary for him to buy in the cheapest market, only uses that as an excuse to swell his profits!

If you want the "Produced in Canada" movement to be a real success—to bear abundant fruit—remember the Golden Rule, and do unto others as you would have others do unto you! Don't assume that a thing is not now procurable in Canada, just because it wasn't when you first started importing it! Why not take us into your confidence regarding all your importations, and see if we cannot help you to locate suitable Canadian sources of supply?

Very sincerely yours,

H. H. Stevens

Minister of Trade and Commerce.

ARMISTICE DAY SERVICES HELD HAVELOCK HALL

Members of Women's Institutes Together With War Veterans Take Part in Gathering.

SEVERAL ADDRESSES.

Principal Speakers Were Lieut. Wells of Peterborough and Mr. O'Neill of Belfast, Ireland.

HAVELOCK, November 11 (Examiner Correspondence).—On Sunday evening, November 9, an Armistice service was held in the Mission Hall, which was packed to overflowing. The hall was beautifully decorated with Union Jacks, and a large number of war pictures adorned the walls, which gave it the appearance of an art gallery. Wreaths from the local war veterans, the Belmont Women's Institute, Havelock Women's Institute, and members of the Mission Hall, were placed in front of the platform, and a large cross draped with purple hung at the back of the hall.

The principal speakers were Lieut. Wells, a wounded soldier from Peterborough, and Mr. O'Neill from Belfast, Ireland whose father gave his life in the Great War. Mrs. Fred Chase acted as pianist for the occasion.

The meeting opened with the singing of that favorite of the soldiers, "Stand up stand up for Jesus." Mr. O'Neill then offered up a prayer for all those who are still suffering in hospitals from the effects of war wounds for the widows and orphans, fathers, mothers, sisters, and brothers who still mourn the loss of those near and dear, who fell in the great cause.

Reeve Sanderson expressed great pleasure at the large number of the public present to pay tribute to the local boys who had given up their lives that we might still remain a free people, and urged upon all to attend the short service at the Memorial Gate, on Armistice Day, November 11, at 11 a.m.

J. Kinnaird stated that the old cry of "Lest We Forget" was rapidly becoming extinct, and a new cry, "Let us forget" taking its place. Mr. Kinnaird also spoke on the Peace conference and the general condition of the world at the present time, while the peace conferences are still in session; Russia is in an upheaval, Afghanistan in rebellion, China murdering and plundering and fighting continuously, India at political war with Britain, Brazilians and Mexicans in revolution, Egyptian revolution, Germany ready for revolution, and even the Jews and Arabs fighting over the ruined walls of Solomon's Temple. All this was going on, while thousands of pounds were being spent on round table Peace Conferences; talking peace while the world is preparing for another upheaval, greater than that of 1914.

Mr. Wells gave a vivid description of the sorrow and suffering he had encountered during the time he was in France, and held the audience spell-bound while he cited case after case that came under his observation. He invited his hearers to visit Christie Street Hospital in Toronto, and see the Canadian war wrecks in that institution, which was only one of many thousands throughout the world, looking after wrecks from the Great War. He felt sure that if before their visit there was any disposition to forget the war, they could never forget it afterwards.

Mr. O'Neill gave a powerful Gospel address on the Great Divine Sacrifice. He stated that in the Great War, men willingly gave up their lives for their friends, that we might enjoy the liberty that is now ours. But Christ gave His life for His enemies that they might become reconciled to Him, and that through Him, we might possess everlasting life and freedom. And as He is the Prince of Peace, it is only by Him and through Him that the world will ever possess real peace.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells sang a beautiful duet, and the Last Post and Reveille were sounded by J. Kinnaird, while the audience stood at attention in silence for two minutes. The benediction given by Mr. O'Neill brought the meeting to a close.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN FAIRBAIRN.

On Tuesday, October 28, Mary Gain, relict of John Fairbairn, passed away at the advanced age of 83 years 6 months, after an illness patiently borne.

The funeral was held from her late residence, Lot 26, Concession 10, Smith Township, and was largely attended by sympathizing friends and neighbors. The floral tributes were many and testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held.

The late Mrs. Fairbairn is survived by three daughters, Eliza at home, Margaret of Windsor, and Florence at home; also three sons, Sidney of North Monaghan, George at home, and Harry of Port Huron.

The pall-bearers were two old neighbors, Messrs. Andrew Fairbairn and Robert Garbutt, two nephews Richard Fairbairn and Andrew Falls, two grandsons Gerald Cunningham and Keith Fairbairn.

The service was conducted by Rev. T. M. Wesley of Knox United Church, Lakefield.

LINDSAY STARTS DISPOSAL PLANT

Action is Outcome of Order Banning Sewage Emptying in Scugog River.

PROVIDE MUCH WORK.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LINDSAY, Nov. 11.—Preliminary work on Lindsay's new sewage disposal plant, which it is planned to construct as part of the town's employment policy, has been undertaken by Engineer Dallyn, of the Provincial Board of Health. The construction of this plant will give employment to quite a number of laborers during the year, and will cost the municipality considerable money.

Some years ago the town received notice from the Provincial Board of health to cease emptying its sewage into the Scugog River—a navigable stream. The municipality at that time was also threatened with actions for damages on the part of farmers residing along its banks, who claimed that the sewage was a menace to the lives of their stock. In order to meet the situation, the town undertook the construction of a sewage disposal plant, and action on the part of the Provincial Board of Health was withheld on assurances being given that such a plant would be installed.

Certain work was undertaken, but the general scheme was held up owing to financial conditions until this year.

KNIGHTS VISIT COBOURG LODGE

Large Class of Candidates Initiated Into Second and Third Degree.

MARCH TO CENOTAPH.

COBOURG, Nov. 11.—Knights of Columbus of the district celebrated Thanksgiving Day here with initiation of a large class of candidates in the second and third degrees.

In the morning they assisted at High Mass at St. Michael's church. The Mass was sung by Rev. Father Ryan of Detroit, with Rev. John Finn of Peterborough as deacon, Rev. Father Welsh of Lindsay as subdeacon and Rev. Father Butler of Cobourg, master of ceremonies. The sermon was preached by Bishop O'Connor of Peterborough. Visiting clergy were Monsignor McColl, Lindsay; Rev. Father Guiry, Port Hope; Dean Scanlan, Grafton; Rev. J. V. McAuley, Ennismore; Rev. Father, Bartley, S.J., Guelph; and Rev. Father Gillogly of Kinmount.

After the Mass the members marched to lakeside park where a wreath was placed by Judge L. V. O'Connor upon Cobourg's cenotaph in memory of the soldiers of the town who died in the war.

The second degree was exemplified by a Peterborough team, and the third degree by District Deputy Wilfrid Gauvreau and his staff of Champlain Council, Ottawa. Among the district Councils represented at yesterday's assembly were Cobourg, Lindsay, Peterborough, Oshawa, Belleville and Trenton. The concluding feature of the day was a banquet which was served by the ladies of St. Michael's parish.

The initiation ceremonies and the banquet were held in the parish hall of St. Peter's (Anglican) Church. After dinner speakers were J. D. Larkin, Grand Knight of Council; State Deputy T. E. Brown of Ottawa; District Deputies D. A. Costello of Peterborough and Wilfrid Gauvreau of Ottawa; State Treasurer A. B. Collins of Belleville; Rev. Father McAuley and Rev. Father Butler, representing Monsignor Kelly, parish priest of Cobourg, who on account of illness was unable to be present. Mr. James O'Sullivan of Cobourg was chairman of the post-prandial program.

In commemoration of the anniversary of Armistice Day, its purpose and spirit, the company of Knights of Columbus stood and joined in prayer, led by Rev. Father McAuley for the repose of the souls of the brethern who died in the war and for all the Canadian soldiers who made the great sacrifice of their lives. The prayer was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

The degree work was reported to be exceptionally successful, and congratulations were extended to the Ottawa and Peterborough team. To Grand Knight Larkin and the members of Cobourg Council compliments were tendered for the day's efficient arrangements, and a special vote of thanks was expressed to the ladies of St. Michael's church for their generous assistance.

MASONS' HALL AS LIBRARY SITE

Committee's Report Discussed at Meeting of Havelock Institute.

UNDER HEAVY EXPENSE.

HAVELOCK, Nov. 11.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The regular meeting of Havelock Women's Institute was held in the Council Chamber on Monday afternoon, November 3, when there was a large attendance of the membership.

The vice-president, Mrs. L. C. Hagerman, occupied the chair. The meeting opened in the usual way with the Lord's Prayer and Institute Ode. Minutes of the previous regular meeting and a special meeting were read and approved.

The roll call was recipe for Christmas cake, and some favorite recipes were given.

The committee appointed to make a survey of rooms available and suitable for library purposes made their report. Mr. Leeson's store was thought to be too small for use as a meeting place for the young people, which was a part of the plan in securing rooms. Mr. Williams had stated that he did not wish to rent the room over his store. The committee stated that the Masonic Order would rent their rooms to the institute for $7.50 per month, the institute to supply their own fuel and to pay for electricity in excess of $2.50. A discussion then ensued over the proposition to buy the Isaac block. Terms of purchase were discussed, and this was thought to be the best plan by some. A motion was made and a vote taken. This was decidedly in the negative. The advisability of procuring the Masons' hall was again discussed as a suitable place for the library and for meeting purposes. It was decided to rent the hall, providing the Juniors and Agricultural Society would use it for meeting and bear their share of the expenses.

Miss Armstrong, president of the Junior W. I., was present and expressed the opinion that they would be willing to meet there providing there was a piano. It was finally decided that a committee from the W.I. and the Juniors meet and discuss the purchase of a piano.

It was moved by Mrs. Jones, seconded by Mrs. Davies, that Mrs. Hubel be delegate to the convention in Toronto, the latter part of this month. Carried.

The communication re the dental clinic was read, and on motion was left over till next meeting.

Other communications were read and ordered filed.

Mrs. Jamieson, program convenor for November, then took the chair, and the following program was given: Recitation, Mrs. Charles Dewey; demonstration in bandaging and first aid, Mrs. Lancaster.

Afterwards a social half-hour was enjoyed when the hostesses were: Mesdames Martin, Scott, Morrison and Jamieson.

Harvest Dinner.

The regular anniversary dinner under the auspices of Havelock United Church was held on Monday evening, November 3, in the church dining-room. The tables, which were covered with snowy linen and decorated with cut flowers and small potted plants, were stretched the full length of the room and were twice filled with those from afar and near who had come to this sumptuous dinner, which is yearly a part and parcel of this community. It is like a big family re-union where each one is sure to see some old friend seen at no other time during the year. Old members of the congregation who have moved away from Havelock make it a point of returning for this happy occasion and gather again under the church roof where old memories are revived. Each year there are newcomers added to the list of annual visitors, and all are made to feel just as much at home as the oldest.

No fowl is served now as the ladies felt that there was really too much waste in a fowl dinner, but everything else that goes into the making of a beautiful repast is there in full and plenty. Hot roast meats, mashed potatoes, vegetables and brown gravy, baked beans, salads of all kinds, apple, pumpkin, lemon, cream and every other kind of pie are served, as well as jellies and all kinds of cake. When all have partaken they adjourn to the church proper where a fine program is enjoyed.

This year the entertainment was given mostly by the United Church choir from Norwood, under the leadership of Prof. Waters, who also gave a splendid organ recital. The proceeds of the supper amounted to $150, and the afternoon tea served on Tuesday brought an additional $20.

CITIZENS AND VETERANS HONOR MEMORY OF HEROIC DEAD

veteran of the American Civil War and the Riel Rebellion. He marched briskly and afterwards delivered a stirring address at the Opera House. The veterans came swinging down the road with the same old rhythm that carried them over the roads of France, while the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides showed pride in every step, at the opportunity afforded them to march with the men who had defended the Empire.

Spectators lined the route, many of them standing to attention or removing their hats as the parade marched past in token of the respect they held for the men who had fought with them and for them in France.

Theatre Is Filled

Hundreds of reverent citizens entered the Grand Opera House with them to recall and pay tribute to the men who died for their country. The theatre was soon filled to capacity and during a short interval of waiting the Salvation Army Band under Bandmaster H. Robinson, rendered a short program of sacred music.

Captain James Abraham, president of the Canadian Legion in opening the program, requested that the audience stand in two minutes' silence. The audience stood with bowed heads, each heart crowded with memories of the dead. The silence was palable and was only broken by the occasional faint metallic tinkle of medals and the slight rustle of programs.

The band then played the stirring battle cry of the Church, "Onward Christian Soldiers," while the audience fervently caught up the refrain.

In a few simple and heartfelt words the President of the Legion then explained the great meaning of the service. "We have met here today to celebrate the twelfth anniversary of Armistice, and to pay tribute to our dear departed comrades we left behind on the battlefields of Europe and to those who came back broken and maimed.

Mr. Abraham was accompanied on the platform by Rev. Captain Paul Costello, Arnold Everitt, vice-president, and Captain R. E. Layfield, of the Legion, Aldermen Jack McNabb, W. Stocker, G. A. Macdonald, M. McIntyre and Fred T. Tuggey; Colonel J. W. Miller, John T. Hornsby, District Commissioner Boy Scout Association and Robert Hendry and others.

Alderman J. A. McNabb, deputising for His Worship Mayor Denne, brought with him the Mayor's regrets at being unable to attend the service of remembrance on account of indisposition. Speaking on behalf of the City, Alderman McNabb said, "We appreciate very much the work of your president. In 1914 pledges were made by the citizens of Peterborough and by the Council of that time. Your present members of the Council will implement those pledges," he stated, "and thus keep faith with you."

"It is our duty to keep faith," he proceeded, "and I can speak frankly as a representative of the citizens, when I say we will carry the torch and hold it high."

He did not think this the occasion to rejoice in the fruits of victory but an occasion to remember those splendid boys who sacrificed their lives on the field of battle. It was a time when we must renew our pledges to help to assist and co-operate with the returned men at all times.

"To those of us who have had the privilege of serving our country," said Alderman McNabb in conclusion, it brings back the joys and the pains, the difficulties and the dangers, the happiness and hardships. It also brings to our minds the bitterness and futility of war and thoughts of those sincere brave conmrades, who fell on the field of battle that we might enjoy freedom."

Judge Huycke Absent

Captain Abraham in apologizing for the absence of His Honour Judge E. C. S. Huycke, who was listed on the program, explained that he had not been called upon until the eleventh hour, when it was found that he had made arrangements to attend an Armistice service at Campbellford.

Before Lieut.-Colonel Miller was called upon to speak, Mrs. Ross Williamson sang an especially appropriate song entitled, "Are We Forgotten."

Colonel Miller opened his speech by dwelling on the meeting of Armistice and said that 500,000 Canadians were sent overseas. "I need not recount their glorious victories, those we know and those the world knows, Canada's men were second to none."

He traced the part which Canada has played so proudly and well during the short but crowded years of her glorious and inspiring history. Going back to the summer of '66 he spoke of the trouble in the North West when the Government issued a call for 25,000 men and when in less than two weeks 32,000 men flocked to the colors and were sent for service on the frontier. Those men were descendants of the grand old men who formed the thin red line; who conquered the teeming millions of India," he said, "and thus through the whole annals of the service Canada has played her part.

"Louis Reil thought he had this country in his hands," said Colonel Miller, but he was caught at Batoche, and got what was coming to him. Our soldiers and sailors are the men who have always opened up the dark places so that the missionaries may enter, and so to-day we should be proud of those men, proud of the flag and proud of the fact that we are British Canadians.

When Wilhelm of Germany came into the field with his legions of men against the British flag, we answered him and said we are sending the best we have.

"Those men were heroes, he said, but this is not the day to speak of victories; many of them died and found their graves on the sunny slopes of France or on the flats of Belgium. To-day their thoughts seem to come back to us from those other lands. They ask us if we are doing anything to make this a better place than before the war. If we are not doing anything to make it a better world, then those men died in vain.

The speaker, in calling attention to the fact that many of the returned men who came back apparently in normal health, sooner or later, give way; their constitutions having been undermined by the nerve wracking experiences and hours spent in damp trenches, said the Government should see that all returned men whether they were wounded or not should be looked after.

Following Colonel Miller's address, Miss Geraldine Collins sang "Abide With Me." The singers during the program were accompanied by Gwen Mary Donley. The audience afterwards sang the hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee."

Rev. Captain Costello at the outset of his address drew attention to the meeting of Armistice day, which he explained is celebrated on the nearest Sunday to the 11th day of November. "I am inclined to visualize on this occasion," he stated, "the scenes in France and Flanders, where you will see the fields of poppies so well nurtured by the vast army of Canadian dead. There were about 70,000 Canadians all told who died in the theatre of war and those who died since from the effects of the war. We should be very ungrateful indeed if we did not remember our Canadian dead. The great reason we are here this afternoon is, "lest we forget."

In mentioning that it was the largest service held in years in commemoration of Armistice, the speaker thought it was evidence that the returned men had the full sympathy of the public. It was shown in a more concrete form on Saturday, when in spite of the so called hard times, the citizens of Peterborough handed the Canadian Legion a little better than $1,000.

Commends Governments

"The late Government and the present Government are both to be commended for the steps they have taken in reference to returned men," said the Reverend speaker, who had no doubt that the Government would always do what is right and proper in this respect." That is the result the Canadian Legion has been trying to bring about. The Legion is the only organization the Government will listen to, and it will be seen to that the men who fail in health will be given proper and just pensions."

Rev. Captain Costello pointed out that there is much work being done by the local branch of the Legion and he paid a tribute to the untiring efforts of the Legion president James Abraham.

The Legion is stronger to-day than ever before in this city and has the sympathy of the whole population, he said in conclusion.

The service drew to a close with the singing of the hymn "Abide With Me," followed with the National Anthem, after which the parade reformed and marched back to the Canadian Legion Hall, headed by the Salvation Army Band.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 11—Big selling and sharp breaks in values yesterday tumbled wheat down to the lowest price level since 1902, with rye outdoing any bottom since 1898. Oats, too, reached new depth records.

Much of the selling deluge that swamped the wheat pit and pulled down other cereals came from houses with stock-market connections. Corn kept up better than other grain, many corn traders holding off to await the Government crop report, which, however, when issued after the day's business was complete, proved to be bearish, showing that 1930 corn production was 54,000,000 bushels larger than the average of recent private estimates.

Wheat closed semi-demoralized at almost the days minimum prices, 3½c to 4¼c a bushel lower than Saturday's finish. Corn closed ¾c to 2c off, oats 1¾c to 1⅞c down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 20c.

VETERANS AND CITIZENS HONOR WAR DEAD AT MADOC CENOTAPH

Armistice Day Services Largely Attended in Memory of Departed Soldiers.

SOCIETIES REPRESENTED.

MADOC, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence).—Armistice Day Services were held in Madoc under the auspices of the veterans on Sunday afternoon at the Armouries and the Cenotaph. Wreaths of remembrance were laid at the Cenotaph by the veterans, the I.O.D.E., Woman's Institue, Civic authorities, Presbyterian Church, Anglican Church, and Roman Catholic Church, leaving a bright spot at the War Memorial to testify to the loving and respectful memory in which the departed soldiers are held, and also to testify to the gratitude in which those assembled hold both the living and the dead who fought for the freedom and independence of all the world.

The veterans and others marched from the Armouries to the Memorial and after the "Last Post" was played by James Aylesworth, the half-mast flag was raised.

The wreath for the veterans was placed by Master Tommy Hawthorne; that for the Woman's Institute, "Lest We Forget," by Mrs. E. West; for the Municipality of Madoc by Miss Helen Whytock; for the I.O.D.E. by Miss Nancy Holland; for the Presbyterian Church by Miss Florence Holland; for St. John's Anglican Church by Miss Olive Storing; and for the Sacred Heart of Mary (Roman Catholic Church) by Michael O'Halloran.

Open-Air Program

Walter Whytock, Reeve of Madoc Village, was chairman for the open-air program which followed, and after a short introductory speech, the hymn, "All People That on Earth do Dwell," was sung and prayer was offered by Rev. P. G. Reynolds; the 46th Psalm was read by Rev. G. W. Rivers. Addresses were given by Rev. Father Meagher, Rev. G. W. Rivers of Trinity United Church, and Rev. P. G. Reynolds of St. John's Anglican Church. Rev. T. G. Marshall of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church was absent on account of anniversary services in his church.

Rev. Father Meagher dealt with the work attempted, and the grand way in which the call to arms was answered by the men of Canada, and the many difficulties met and conquered by the men who went. Rev. C. W. Rivers spoke of what the war has accomplished, and the present tendency to return to the idea that the government might demand the most from its soldiers, and stressed that surely those who fought might rightly have most to say as to how the country should be governed. Rev. Mr. Reynolds dealt principally on the debt owed by all to the efforts of those who fought, and the urgent need that this debt be met to the uttermost by the country and the people.

The hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," and the National Anthem and the Benediction closed a most impressive service.

Confederation Life Association,

Dear Sirs:

I beg to acknowledge with many thanks the Company's cheque for $126.30, profits on Policy No. 10,019.

I need not say it was a most pleasant surprise. I was gratified to know that the Company had decided not to ask any further premiums on the policies I held with them, but it did not strike me that the profits to be earned by the policies would be paid me now.

It is most satisfactory, and I am very greatly obliged for the action taken by the Company.

Yours sincerely,

We have issued a series of policies at low premium rates for "Super-Select Lives," that is, business and professional men. These policies may be had with Total Disability and Double Indemnity Accident Benefits. Write for particulars concerning them. Use the coupon for convenience.

A CHANCE FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN.

The crippled children's clinic to be conducted by the Peterborough Rotary Club during the last week in November, during which expert surgeons will thoroughly examine and prescribe treatment for children who are suffering from disabilities that it is hoped can be removed, is a most important event, and it is essential that this opportunity should be made available for every child in need of attention.

The Rotary Club hopes through this campaign to materially improve the condition of all local children who can be helped by treatment and whose parents are unable for financial reasons to assume the cost involved.

While a large number of names has been secured through various sources, the crippled children's committee of the Rotary Club is by no means satisfied that the list is complete, and therefore the assistance of the public in obtaining the names of children who should be brought before the clinic is being sought.

Citizens who know of crippled children for whom something might be done can greatly assist the Rotary Club by sending in the names and addresses to Dr. A. Moir, chairman of the crippled children's committee, or to other Rotarians.

The entire expense of the clinic and of whatever treatment may be necessary will be assumed by the Rotary Club, the members of which feel that the curing of crippled children is a humanitarian work well worthy of attention and support.

UNFAIR TO THE MUNICIPALITIES.

The deputation which Mayor Robson of Guelph is organizing, to wait upon the Provincial Government to urge that the municipalities of Ontario be relieved of the heavy burden of assessment for the building and maintenance of provincial highways and suburban county roads, promises to be one of the largest to visit Queen's Park in recent years.

That is easily understood, for a successful demonstration would mean thousands of dollars to Ontario municipalities, which at present are finding the levy a load too onerous to be borne.

There is no difficulty in making out an impressive case on behalf of the proposal that the Government should assume full responsibility for the cost and maintenance of both provincial and suburban county roads.

Obviously the present assessment is an unjust arrangement, for while Ontario municipalities have to pay huge sums toward the cost of roads outside their own boundaries, the Province, while taking all the revenue from motor licenses and the gasoline tax, even in cases where the provincial roads are never used, does not pay a cent toward the cost of building and maintaining streets within municipal limits, even when these are links in the provincial system and have to meet the wear and tear of through traffic.

These statistics showed that fifteen of the larger municipalities in Ontario with a population of 30,000 or less have contributed for permanent roads built outside the cities two and one-third million dollars, an average per capita assessment of $8.50.

At the same time these fifteen cities contain forty-four miles of paved streets, forming provincial highway links that cost the municipalities well over a million dollars, and toward the financing of which the Government, of course, made no contribution.

Most people will agree with the following from the Mercury's forcible summary of the situation:

"The urban taxpayer is so burdened to-day with taxation for educational purposes, for general civic administration, for building of pavements, sewers, water works extensions, old age pensions, mothers' allowances, hospitals, public works and so on ad infinitum, that it is entirely unfair that the city taxpayers, who in many instances are working men struggling to pay for a home or to educate their families, should be obliged to contribute to the cost of paved highways for distances in some cases of twelve to fifteen miles outside city limits.

"These cities have already contributed large sums of money to the provincial highway scheme. This money is gone and must be forgotten. But having regard to taxes which the Government receives from the use of motor vehicles, from the Liquor Control Act and other forms of revenue which were not available in former years, it would seem the time has come when the Government of this Province should seek to afford the taxpayer some relief by imposing a fairer and more judicious distribution of the cost of building paved highways."

THE DAY OF ARMISTICE.

Twelve years ago to-day the "cease fire" was sounded and the armistice brought the Great War to a close.

Never did a call ring out that was more welcome; never did news flashing round the world cause so much exulation as the intelligence that hostilities in the most terrible conflict of all time had ceased.

Singularly enough it was at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month that the end came.

To-day as we observe the twelfth anniversary of the day of armistice it is a fitting time to take stock of conditions, to look eagerly to see whether the things for which over half a million Canadians as well as millions of brothers in arms fought and for which thousands of them died are any nearer realization than they were at the hour the war ended.

There is some reason to believe—despite the fire-breathing utterances of Mussolini and other disturbing elements—that more and more the world as a whole is thinking in terms of peace.

True it is that war cannot be banished in a day. While men are subject to human passions, there will always be the danger of a clash of arms. Yet saner counsels prevail in international disputes and the world is treading slowly and at times with almost imperceptible progress along the road that leads to co-operation and universal peace.

This is the great boon for which we in Canada should give thanks to-day. It transcends all other benefits which we gratefully acknowledge—good health, material prosperity and the bounties of Nature. For if it is true that the world is thinking more in terms of peace and shaping the course of nations more along peaceful lines, then we can enjoy the solace and comfort that the Great War with all its terrors and all its suffering and all its sacrifices was not fought in vain.

So to-day we cherish more deeply the memory of those who paid the full price that we might live in happier age. The splendour of their sacrifices is an inspiration to us for further service to our country. We must win the way to peace as they won the more hardly followed path of war.

The Great War showed above all things the great brotherhood of man. To-day some of our brothers are suffering from cold and hunger. They are the victims in many cases of circumstances which they could not control and of conditions which they did not instigate. Let us remember to share our prosperity with the less fortunate, and in so doing we shall bring happiness to ourselves and to them and through a service of love bind our great Dominion into a greater nation.

U. S. FARM BOARD AND FARM RELIEF.

Farm relief is still a lively topic in the United States and Mr. Alexander Legge, chairman of the Farm Board, appointed by President Hoover, undertakes in the current issue of the American Review of Reviews to state the case for its policies and practices. Mr. Legge, who was president of the International Harvester Company, did not seek public office, only accepting his responsible position in response to the summons and personal appeal of the President himself. This gives special interest to his defence of the board's action, but leaves him open to the criticism that having committed himself to the undertaking his very anxiety to see it through successfully may have tempted him to modify or even disregard his own personal opinions that might otherwise have prevailed had he been entirely independent.

Mr. Legge, however, makes it very clear that he has no hope whatever of discovering any magic formula that will operate as a panacea for the plight of the United States farmer. Indeed, he is emphatic in his insistence on the fundamental truth that nothing effective can be done to escape the scope of the inexorable law of supply and demand. No doubt, he has particularly in mind the result of the board's experimental purchases of grain at prices above the current market figure. Like all other efforts to maintain prices at a stabilized level, this failed as completely as have previous attempts of similar kind. The idea that grain is a possible exception has been eliminated from Mr. Legge's mind and he recognizes that the board has bumped against a concrete and hard fact.

The federal board head is now convinced that the conditions it has vainly endeavored to change constitute a world situation, and he is also satisfied that a foreign market for United States wheat cannot at present be found. Thus he has been driven to the conclusion that the salvation of the American farmer must be sought in reducing the cost of production and raising the price by limiting the acreage, in other words, by reducing the quantity produced. But it is now pointed out that both remedies have always been open to the farmers and were always available even before the board was called into existence. Organization and co-operation have long been preached throughout the rural communities, mostly to deaf ears. Only when the apostles of co-operation became satisfied that the average farmer was too individualistic to realize the value of common action for the common welfare was the way paved for the appearance of the various nostrums that deluged Congress.

Mr. Legge admits that the unorganized and unresponsive farmer remains the big handicap with which the Farm Board has to contend. Speaking specifically of the board's campaign for wheat acreage reduction, he remarks: "The unorganized farmer will say to himself, 'Since the whole country is cutting its acreage, prices will go up, so I'll plant more and make a killing.'" That, of course, is just what he would say and what has happened. Moreover, it is just what will again happen in spite of the Farm Board's plan to extend the organization plan by the offer of loans, but only to the members of co-operatives. Farmers, too, who dreamed of a halcyon time when they would get all the money they needed, are learning that "charity patients" are not included among the recipients of "drought relief." The credit corporations, that will act as intermediaries, have no intention of granting loans to farmers considered to be a "poor risk."—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE SILVER HAWK

By

WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

At the lower end of his island, in a thicket of devil's-club, he ambushed himself beside the water-edge trail and waited, knowing that the 'breeds would have to pass him to reach their boat. As he crouched there for several long minutes, his hot purpose cooled and he came to realize that again his own life meant Aurore's too, and so must be guarded preciously; and that if Luke was a prisoner, he could not be saved by precipitating a fight with clubs and pistols there in the dark—a hopeless fight against those five- fire-eating Babines. He thought: "If they've got Luke with them, I'll let them go by and then follow and watch for a chance. If they haven't, if he's dead, I'll get a couple or three of them and then cut for the tent."

Presently he heard bushes softly swishing back and a twig snapping and the padded footfalls of several men. He heard a groan and muffled curse of the 'breed he had wounded. Another of the men trod heavily and lumbersome, as though he carried a limp burden; and when the moving shadows halted for a moment a few feet from Dorn and he caught the guttural whisper, "Charlo-la, prend' tour a ce chien Indien-ci," he knew that the limp burden whom Charlo was asked to take turn carrying was old Luke, alive and a prisoner; and that the 'breeds were taking him to the enemy camp at the Lake of Dead Waters, and would torture out of him the information of Aurore's refuge.

When they passed, Dorn rose up, with his decision already made. "I'll follow and try to get Luke away from them. I'll listen, and if I hear a plane go up, that will mean they know where Aurore is and it'll be a signal for me to get into the air."

He went back to his tent and made a few hasty preparations. Then he stepped down the path to the landing and recovered old Luke's rifle; and paddling across to the mainland, he skirted the station clearing and hurried on east, lone-handed, following a trail through the black tamarack, to attack the enemy camp beside the Lake of Dead Waters.

CHAPTER XIX

THE EARTHQUAKE STICK.

As he neared the Lake of Dead Waters, Dorn cut aside from the travelled path, for he knew perfectly well that at least one of those French-Babines was lying low for him somewhere along their back-trail. Circling out into the drogue of black tamarach, he made his way through the dark woods, with a star to guide him, till at last he caught the red glow of Carter-Snowdon's camp fire three hundred yards ahead.

He dropped to hands and knees then, and with all caution crept closer to study the camp before attacking it. Several of those 'breeds would certainly be posted out in the darkness; and as he wormed, noiselessly through devil's-club and buck-brush, he kept warning himself: "They caught old Luke, at night, in the bush. Anybody who can do that. . ." He was wise enough to be fearful. Remembering how silent and elusive Aurore had proved herself in the woods, Dorn thought, 'She could do a better job of creeping up on this camp than I.' He imagined Aurore there beside him, slipping along with him over the dank moss and rotting needles to save the old Indian who had been so loyal to both of them.

When he could hear muffled voices ahead, Dorn stood cautiously erect; and, unable to see over the deerbush, he drew himself into a tree, and from that perch had clear view of the camp.

A big wasteful fire had burned to red coals. To the right of it a tent was pitched and from the tent came blasphemous groans of the 'breed Dorn had shot. On beyond the camp lay the starlit sheen of Eaux Mortes. In the fire-glow shadows moved, vague and blurred at first to Dorn; but as his eyes grew used to the strain, he identified his men and made out what they were doing.

Old Luke, hog-tied hand and foot, his head slumped pitifully on his breast, was bound to a tree about twenty-five feet from the fire. Cold and business-like, Soft-Shoe stood near him with some glittering instrument in his hand, waiting till the old Indian was conscious enough to talk. In front of the two Carter-Snowdon paced back and forth, nervously chewing a cigar. The heavy biplane was drawn close in ashore, but the aviator was not about. Dorn reasoned. "They sent him up to the station, likely; they didn't want any unnecessary witnesses here to-night."

Joe Yoroslaf was busy with some task beside the fire, but Dorn could not then understand what Yoroslaf was doing. At the edge of the shadows a 'breed was flattened against a tree with a rifle in the crook of his arm. Dorn thought: "The other three of them are out here in the woods. Those snags and rocks I crawled past—it was my good luck that none of them came to life!"

A shudder ran through Dorn when his eyes fell upon a block of ice on the moss near old Luke. He understood its purpose; he had heard some gruesome stories of the ice-torture with which the Cossack promyshleniki, generations ago had extorted sea-otter peltry from the miserable Aleuts. "God is high in his heavens and the Czar is far away," their boasts ran; and Dorn thought of that boast now and as he felt of his bulging jacket-pocket he reflected: "Not so far away as they think! If I can only get close enough to be sure I won't kill Luke . . ."

While he watched from the tree and carefully planned how to creep up nearer that camp, he saw the detective walk over to the fire and draw out of it two iron rods and then thrust them back into the glowing coals to heat better. He could plainly observe how nervous Carter-Snowdon was and how the sentinel 'breed, a little sickened already kept glancing around to see if the ghastly business had started yet. But Soft-Shoe was unmoved. Dorn knew he was the instigator of this torture scheme; he had planned these details of fire and ice and knife, and meant to consummate the affair with his own hands. Not even the 'breeds had the brutality for it. Dorn watched him come back from the fire, and heard him say to Carter-Snowdon:

"We'd better get this over with, sir. It isn't long till morning. He's still pretty groggy, but he'll wake up when we start to work on him."

Dorn swore grimly: "You damned alley-wolf, to-night I can't spare time to kill you, but if I ever get in reach of you again, I'm going to break your neck like a man thumbs a trout. You'd better die natural and die quick!"

For a moment or two he studied Yoroslag again, and this time he made that the man was tying warhide thongs around a heavy rock. Dorn shuddered as the meaning of it burst upon him. "God! That's for old Luke's body—after they've finished with him"; and his glance went on past the 'breed to the Lake of Dead Waters, dark and lonely and abysmally deep.

He slipped down from the tree, and abandoned his rifle there; and flattening himself on the ground he began creeping inch by inch upon the camp.

As his detective brought one of the irons from the fire and came up to the old Indian, Carter-Snowdon turned his back and sidled away. He had no heart to watch. He was angry at himself for not having gone to Titan Station and left this ugly work to his men. Orders for other persons to carry out had always been his rule and habit; it kept one pleasantly aloof from nasty actuality; one achieved results without a feeling of guilt or writhe of conscience. But here was one time that he was rubbed up against brutal reality. The whole scene around him—the black tamarack, the dark-silvered lake, the fantastic leaping shadows, the swarthy faces of the mountain 'breeds—was a little bit grisly; and Carter-Snowdon was afraid the murder might haunt his memory.

When he heard a sharp, nerve-jarring grunt wrenched from the old Indian, he came very near whirling around and ordering the detective to drop that iron; but he clamped down on himself and walked a little farther away to the edge of shadows. He was thinking: "If I let him go on, I'll damned quick know where she's hiding! She's dangerous. She could whisper and bury me like an avalanche. But to-morrow morning I'll have her again, and at one of my mountain lodges she'll no longer be dangerous." And the thought of having Aurore was an effective silencer of any squeamishness over an old Smoky.

Carter-Snowdon could not understand, it was utter mystery to him, why Aurore had left him that night so suddenly, or why the devil that girl should ever want to leave him at all. She had not previously shown the slightest sign of wanting to break away. Quite the contrary, Carter-Snowdon reflected, with roused memories; and it maddened him to think of Aurore now in the company and protection of that cartographer, Dorn. He had believed at first that she must have known this Dorn in her girlhood days; but he remembered that she had never mentioned the man's name. So he must have been a stranger; she must have fled to an utter stranger. It was galling to think of her taking up with a nobody; it was almost impossible to believe that she would prefer a government cartographer to himself. He felt sure that her flight was a sudden, foolish caprice and that she probably regretted it already and would be quite willing to come back. But willing or not, she was dangerous; one word from her would have thundering echoes; the thing to do was to get her again forthwith. And this old Smoky was a means not to be passed up.

So Carter-Snowdon walked away to the shadow edge; and while he was standing there, debating whether he might not quietly step on down the lake shore without showing a yellow streak, some sudden and mysterious missile seeming to come from a laurel thicket not twelve yards out in the dark, whirled past his ear, spluttering and fizzing like a tiny firecracker, and struck squarely in the bed of coals; and in the next instant that bed of coals exploded with a terrific flare, and the moss lifted up off the ground like strips of carpet, and the tent snapping its ropes as though they qwere spider webs, turned inside out and collapsed; and a blast of air struck Carter-Snowdon like a club and stretched him flat and knocked him unconscious.

When he groped back to his senses, like a swimmer struggling up through dark waters, he heard the guttural, excited, ed voice of Charlo, the sentinel 'breed trying to bring Yoroslaf to his wits again. Minutes must have passed since the explosion, and it must have plunged the camp into utter blackness; for the 'breed had kindled a new fire of dry twigs and it was already burning brightly. By its light Carter-Snowdon saw what a terrible wreck his camp was; but his brain was still too foggy for him to understand that Dorn the cartographer had slipped past those 'breeds out in the dark and had struck and struck hard.

He grasped the bole of a sapling and got to his feet and stumbled over to the spot where his detective lay doubled up against a tree. That was the tree which the old Indian had been roped to before that missile came whirling out of the bushes; but now those ropes, slashed to short lengths, were lying on the ground there and the old Indian had disappeared.

Then Carter-Snowdon heard Charlo explaining to the other 'breeds who had come running in: "That air-devil he musta follow' us. Musta belly' up close. Out in bush I hear one leel' scratch-scratch; I say, 'That mebbe rabbit or pine-hog or stink-tail the skunk? But ho! no! Was air-devil. He throw earthquake stick on fire, blow camp to hell 'n gone, grab old son-of-she-dog, and go like that!"—Charlo snapped his fingers.

The 'breeds, excepting Yoroslaf, all laughed; a camp so utterly wrecked as this one was a stupendous joke—since they had not been knocked out by the explosion of the "earthquake stick." Then Charlo took charge: "Indian can't walk. Air-devil hava tote him. Can't go fast, can't be far. We catch'm both. Hyaak, come 'long!"

(To be continued.)

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

A Thought

THE RIGHT WAY.

To recognize error as error is small evidence of power. To recognize truth as truth is in itself a sign of superiority. A man may point out every error within range of his observation, or that might endanger his fellows, and yet be of no service in the world. He may observe and indicate the important truth to be considered, and thus be in, and show to others, the right way, without taking note of any error at all. It is enough to warn against pitfalls on the road or rocks in the harbor; unless he can show the safe route and the clear channel he is worthless as a pilot. May God preserve us from thinking or saying too much about the faults and flaws and hindrances and from not saying enough about the right and safe way! He who fails to point others aright may prove the ruin of those to whom he talks earnestly about the false way.

What To-day Means To You

"SCORPIO"

If November 11th is your birthday, the most propitious hours for you are from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. The danger periods are from noon to 1:30 p.m. and from 10:30 p.m. to midnight.

Astrological signs for this date are very favorable, and many valuable opportunities will present themselves, but it depends on you whether they are converted to advantage. It is an especially good time for the launching of new enterprises, and beneficial changes.

Children born on this November 11th will be truthful and successful. They will have an inborn frankness that will not permit of dubious methods, and they promise to be straightforward in all relationships of life. They will, as they mature, be respected by all those with whom they come in contact.

You are not an apostle of progress. You affect to despise the degree of civilization, the modicum of knowledge, the extent of social organization which has been attained. You praise the past, and to a large degree live in it and on it. Tradition and custom mean everything to you, and so far as your limited vision goes, everything new and progressive is anathema. Your conduct is regulated by rules and regulations, and lacks all spontaniety. Needless to say, in present world conditions, you are not a very popular person, and are considered a bit of a freak.

The signs do not denote for you any great measure of worldly success, although your virtues are many. You are honorable, straightforward and truthful. You are considerate of other people and their feelings. You are sympathetic and kind. You refuse, however, to get out of a rut and have no appreciation of the new things that are going on around you, nor will you participate in any of the recreations that modernism has devised for our benefit and amusement.

If you can find a mate who also is willing to "stay put," married life will bring you happiness and in monotony you will find your greatest enjoyment. If you marry, you should choose a partner born either in June or August.

GLEE CLUB HOLDS INITIAL MEETING

Reeve and Mrs. P. Stinson Act as Hosts For Jolly Gathering.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 8.—(Examiner Correspondence.) — The home of Reeve and Mrs. P. Stinson, Centre street, was the scene of a jolly gathering on Wednesday night, when the members of the newly-formed Glee Club, in connection with the Millbrook Continuation School, were entertained for a social evening that was replete with interest and enjoyment for all.

Miss Jean Stinson is president of the Glee Club, and in order to give the organization a good start for its winter activities, the invitation to her home was extended, and the delightful gathering arranged for, the 'get together' method proving, as always, a most successful means of initiating the new venture.

More than forty guests, including the M.C.S. principal, Mr. W. H. Jordan and his wife, received hearty welcome to the hospitable home, the earlier part of the evening being devoted to community singing, under Mrs. Jodan's leadership and with the pianist, Mary Burnham, accompanying.

When the song sheets began to lose their attraction games and contests engaged the attention of the young folk, the lively moving about, with peals of laughter interspersing conversation, proving how heartily everyone present entered into this part of the evening's enjoyment.

Mrs. Stinson was assisted by her daughter, and a number of the young men and women, in serving delicious refreshments before the happy gathering finally broke up, the formal vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Stinson and their daughter and son, Miss Jean and Master Jack, and to the Glee Club, for the enjoyable time provided, being moved by Henry Gray, seconded by Marian Earle, and endorsed by prolonged applause.

All joined in singing "Good-night Ladies," and the M.C.S. Glee Club was well launched on its journey through the months which lie ahead.

Mrs. J. C. Kells and Miss Anna Kells went to Barrie on Thursday and will spend the Thanksgiving week-end with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Sims and family.

The annual report for the Young Worshippers' League, and the awards for the year will be presented at morning wirship in Saint Andrew's United Church on Sunday, November 9, at 11 a.m. Miss Marian O'Brian is the secretary.

Among those from Millbrook who motored to Peterborough on Tuesday and heard Rev. Dr. Poole of London, England, at the Murray Street Baptist church were Rev, W. W. and Mrs. Jones, Mrs. (Dr.) L. H. Rae, and Mrs. M. McDowell.

Miss Phyllis Kidd has returned home after a week's visit with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Fife, Peterborough.

The formal opening of the Sunday school room of Saint Andrew's church, after the complete renovation which will be finished this week, will take place on Friday, November 14, at 8 p.m., talent from Peterborough, as well as local artists, supplying the program, which will be followed by a social hour with refreshments served.

The Anti-Litter League of Surrey, England, has become a private detective force to run down those who steal waste-paper cans as fast as they are placed in the public park.

IS POPPY DAY ENGLAND'S DISGRACE?

The Examiner, Peterborough.

Dear Sir—Your edition on Saturday commented on the fact that "Sir George Perley, Acting Prime Minister of Canada, endorses Poppy day."

His message was indeed appropriate and his remarks true.

Earlier in the day, I happened to be at James Stevenson Park watching the rugby game, when I saw a Boy Scout approach an assistant Public School Principal with a view of his selling him a Poppy.

This assistant Principal, who has somewhat of a Teutonic sounding name, instead of buying a Poppy said: "I would not wear one of those if you paid me, it is England's disgrace." He then asked the Boy Scout if he had never heard the story of England getting the Poppy from China.

I realized that his was a mean, miserable attempt to avoid spending 10 cents, therefore I entered into the discussion by asking him if he had ever heard the story of 1914-1918, when thousands of Canadians gave their lives to help save his miserable carcase, and thousands sacrificed their health, and that Poppy Day was the one day in the year that afforded him an opportunity of showing his gratitude. But still he never bought a Poppy.

My contention is this: If the Poppy or Poppy Day is England's disgrace, why should we tolerate such an individual on our Peterborough teaching staff, and pay him good Canadian money? Have we not more loyal subjects who can handle his job and are at the moment, anxious to get a position?

If I had the handling of this particular individual, he would not have time to get his hat. What is your opinion of the matter, Veterans?

Yours truly,

Posse Combing Bush For Lost Farm Youth

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 11 (C.P.).—A posse of police and farmers were searching through an extensive bush on a farm near Simcoe to-day in hopes of finding trace of Herbert Scott, 23-year-old British immigrant, who disappeared completely on Sunday afternoon. Fears for the missing youth's safety are felt as he vanished without cause, leaving a brother who worked with him on the same farm, mystified at his sudden disappearance.

Inspector H. Gardenar of the Provincial Police office here, reported on the case this morning, and expressed the opinion that the young man had met with an accident of some kind.

"I sure thought of the old Sun Life when I was under there!"

A MAN, a mine foreman in Ohio, took out a policy for $2,500.00 on October 16th, 1926.

Four days afterwards, a section of the mine roof fell and twenty-five tons of slate pinned him down. In falling it fortunately formed an inverted "V", else he would have been crushed. Two hours and a half later a rescue party extricated him. As he was being carried to the surface, his first words were:—

"I sure thought of the old Sun Life when I was under there."

DO AWAY WITH POOL?

(Special to Examiner, Copyright, 1930)

TORONTO, Nov. 8.—"In the multitude of councillors there is safety."

A wise old proverb, within certain limits. As with most of these ancient saws, there is always the possibility of the thing being overdone.

As the to existing world wheat problem, there is certainly no scarcity of councillors.

Everybody is doing it.

With such a multiplicity of free advice and solutions of the problem, as are now being forced on the attention of a much bewildered public, it will be necessary to submit them to a process of elimination, in order that the mass may be boiled down to a reasonable number of the most probable solutions, and these again submitted to a close scrutiny, in the hope that among them may be found at least some approach towards "The solution" of this world wide problem.

Prominent among all the solutions offered, there is of course that particularly loud voiced one which insists that first of all the c"wheat pool" must be got rid of. With the pool the cause of all the trouble, out of the way, the rest will be easy. Merely a matter of the unfettered working out of the divine law of supply and demand.

This free and easy solution of the wheat problem may be safely dismissed for what it is worth.

But through all this welter and confusion of thought on the subject, it is becoming clearer every day that at least one idea is emerging, which must be taken as a basic factor in any solution that may be found. And that is the idea of co-operation.

There is no getting away from this "idea."

Whether it be a group of farmers endeavoring to work out their own salvation, or a group of governments, working out a "quota" system, a "bulk" purchasing system, or any other scheme that may be devised, the "co-operative idea" is the active and guiding principle at the back of them all, and to that extent more or less an "interference" with that "divine" law so devoutly worshipped by those who seldom or never worship any other law or "being."

The denial, or attempt at denial, that the co-operative "idea" is not a new force in the wheat world destined to govern that world, and therefore is "with us" to stay with us," is as foolish and as futile as to deny that the "world does move," notwithstanding any former recantation of that law.

As the question as to just what ultimately will evolve from the numerous conferences, national and international, now taking place, is still "sub-judical," as the lawyers would say, we may for a moment take a glance at what is taking place in the wheat situation, outside the conferences, and more or less affecting the present price of wheat.

One "feature" of the market to-day is the evident propaganda to impress the world of the enormous over production of wheat in the world at large.

While it may be admitted that under the existing system of marketing and distribution, there may be technically some over production. In relation to the actual needs and requirements of the world's vast populations, there is no over production of wheat, or cotton, or any other commodity.

But admitting the excess of wheat supplies over present demand, marketing wise, there can be no doubt but that the over-production cry has been worked for more than it is worth, and for the express and deliberate purpose of forcing down wheat prices below their real values.

In spite of all the talk of huge "carry-overs" and excess supplies, present and prospective, the world is nervously jumping lest the menace of "rust" should affect by a few millions of bushels, the coming wheat crop of Argentina.

A difference of opinions as to whether Australia will have a crop of 215 million bushels, government estimate, or a crop of around 181 million bushels, latest semi-official estimate, is enough to send spasms through the whole nervous structure of the world's markets and to boost prices in Liverpool 2 to 3 pennies a bushel.

The conclusion one is forced to come to is that there is not in actual reality, such a tremendous over supply of wheat to-day, economically, and without any dragging in of the supposedly starving millions of China and other countries, as to justify the persistent hammering down of wheat prices to their present levels.

That the existing price situation is very largely the result mof market manipulation is the conviction of many, borne out by actual wheat statistics.

LEAD ISSUES AT NEW LOWS ON NEW YORK

Nevertheless Strong Support Evident For Several of So-called Pivotal Industrials.

LATE MARKET DULL.

American Can, General Electric and Westinghouse Holds Steady to Firm.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11. (CP) Strong support for several of the so-called pivotal industrials was conspicuous in confusing cross currents in to-day's stock market.

Several prominent issues, largely in the food, amusement and specialty classes, again tumbled to new lows, but selling pressure was less severe. After considerable activity in the morning a decided lull ensued.

U.S Steel sold up 2 points at one time, then reacted, but was well bought up a point or so above yesterday's final price. American Can, General Electric, General Motors, Radio and Westinghouse held steady to firm. The selling had the appearance ow special liquidation, uninfluenced by corporate or business developments. American Telephone dropped 5 points, then recovered 2. Baltimore and Ohio, National Biscuit, Fox and Lambert lost 3 to 4. General Foods, Procter and Gamble, Corn Products, Pan American "B", Warner Bros., and New Haven, lost 2 or more. Case surged up 5 points and North American advanced 2 during the early afternoon. A flurry of short covering in the morning sent several issues up 2 to 4, but that advance was soon lost.

Several commission houses continued to feel that an important technical rebound could not be long deferred after the steady two-month's decline. The source of continued selling was still regarded as puzzling. The weekly condition statement of reporting Federal Reserve member banks showed a gain of $24,000,000 in loans against securities.

bol of victory and poppy because those whose names are inscribed on the humble monuments sleep their last sleep under a blanket of poppies beyond the seas. In the cities the observance was more pretentious. Assembled around the cenotaphs, with all distinctions eliminated for this brief period, were the great and humble, the rich and poor. And for two short minutes Canada was a nation in mourning.

There were brief addresses. Speakers directed the minds of their listeners to those troubled years between 1914 and 1918, whose "spacious days of glory and of grieving — sounding hours of lustre and of loss." They recalled the agonies of the war and of the part taken in it by the youth of Canada. The desolated homes. The broken and the maimed for whom the country must care, the huge burden of debt that the present and succeeding generations must honorably liquidate, the wrack and ruin which almost destroyed a civilization — all were emphasized as a warning of what future wars must inevitably mean.

60,000 Dead.

Canada's 60,000 dead had their heroism once more acclaimed, and their memories revered.

In the National Capital the period of silence was observed, but to-night a service will be held at the temporary Cenotaph on Parliament Hill.

His Excellency the Governor-General will attend, and there will deposit a wreath. The ceremony in which the various militia units of Ottawa with their instrumentalists will participate, will be broadcast from a nation-wide hook-up.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—(Special to Examiner.)—The annual general meeting of shareholders of Teck Hughes gold will be held in Buffalo at 2 p.m. on November, 19, 1930, following this special general meeting will be held for the purpose of considering and, if thought advisable, approving a by-law inacted by the board increasing the number of directors from seven to nine, of whom four shall form a quorum. The street is wondering whether this indicates the addition of Canadians to the board. J. E. Lash, well known Toronto barrister, was recently appointed to the board to fill the vacancy created by death of the President Chas. L. Denison. In view of the fact control of Teck Hughes is understood to rest in Canadian hands it was hoped representative Canadian mining men who are also large shareholders in the company might be elected directors. The plans of the board in this regard are as yet unknown.

Weakness in Teck Hughes on the markets at present is attributed by New Yorkers to some disappointment regarding the quantity of ore reserves reported in the recently issued annual statement while it is pointed out in the report that only ore actually blocked out has been included, it felt some "possible ore" on the lower level might very well have been included to swell the total. Feeling is still bullish towards the mine in American circles, however, and investors are looking to the forthcoming annual gathering to clear the atmosphere to some extent.

Machinery for the mill addition of Siscoe is all on the ground and the enlargement is expected to be completed by the end of this year. Later work is progressing steadily at the 300 and 450 levels. A raise is being put through from the 450 to the 300 level. Underground work is reported to be showing a greater width of ore than indicated by diamond drilling.

The November issue of the Underground Mine World, one of the leading American mining publications, is given over to a full description of the history development and present status of International Nickel Co. of Canada and its widespread operations. Containing articles prepared by heads and members of the staff of the various departments including the Huntingdon and Clypach plants, the survey has much of general interest to shareholders and the general public alike.

GIRL'S MURDERER CONFESSES DEED

Detroit Laborer Tells Police He Wedged Victim's Head Between Trees.

Three Months Old Mystery.

DETROIT, November 11 (C.P.). — Ralph James, 33, married and father of a child, has confessed, according to Wayne County deputies, that he killed Alice Collier, 15, whose body was found three weeks ago with the head wedged between two trees near Telegrap and Van Born Roads, in Wayne County.

James was arrested yesterday and admitted last night after questioning that he was responsible for the girl's death, officers said. The man, who is a laborer, said Alice passed his home on the night she disappeared and that he invited her to ride in his automobile. He said she complied and that they drove to the place where the body was found almost three months later.

He said he made advances and the girl resisted. Fearing she would report his conduct to authorities, the confession said, James choked her, then wedged her head between the trees, which grew close together so that if she regained consciousness she would be unable to escape. Alice disappeared on August 2, and the body was found on October 23.

TWO LIVES SAVED BY BOYS' ACTION

Man and Woman Found Marooned By Rising Tide in St. Lawrence River.

ARRIVED IN NICK OF TIME.

QUEBEC, Que., November 11 (C.P.) —A rescue which, if delayed a few minutes, would have failed to save two lives, was enacted on the shores of the St. Lawrence River near the Quebec Bridge last evening. A group of boys, playing near the beach, heard calls for help coming from the river. The youngsters notified M. Everell and the latter with his son rowed out to investigate. They came upon a man and his wife marooned on a rock which the rising tide had surrounded with surprising suddenness. In another few minutes the rock would have been completely covered and the couple washed into the river. The rescuers brought them to the shore, none the worse for their adventure.

Nickel in Anticipation of Director's Meeting To-day Moves Against Trend.

LEADING GOLDS WEAK.

Lake Shore, McIntyre and Hollinger Among Issues to Suffer Declines.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11.—(C.P.)—Orders which accumulated over the long week-end leaned to liquidation, the mining market turning soft from the opening and showing a predinance of losses at mid-day.

Nickel, probably in anticipation of an announcement following to-day's directors' meeting; moved against the trend showing a fractional gain at noon. Hudson Bay eased 5 to 3.60 and Abana and Mining Corporation dropped a point each. Sherritt Gordon, as a result of rumors of suspension of operations, dropped 10 to 70 and Sudbury Basin and Ventures declined 2 and 3 respectively.

Softness was particularly noticeable among the higher-priced golds. Lake Shore was off 50 from last Friday at $20.75, McIntyre 30 at $17.60, Hollinger 25 at $5.75; Dome 20 at $8.30 and Teck Hughes; the most active stock on the board, 15 to $5.40. Big Missouri, Wright-Hargraves and Premier all displayed point recessions, and Granada was down 5 to $1.25. Howey and Kirkland Lake gold, up a cent each; were among the few firm spots.

Chemical Research declined another 25 to $2.25, Ajax and Almont a point each, but balance of the lower-priced oils were relatively steady.

LIST REMAINS IRREGULAR ON TORONTO CURB

International Nickel and Brazilian in Inter-listed Section Move Higher.

FORD OF CANADA DOWN.

C. P. R., Bell Telephone and Goodyear Tire Also Ease Slightly.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11.—(CP)—Prices were irregular on Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. The market resumed after the extra holiday Monday with trading at the same low ebb as last week. Weakness in New York yesterday resulted in some of the inter-listed issues coming out lower than they had previously left off but thereafter they held better. Some of the leaders, notably International Nickel and Brazilian, worked higher.

Nickel rose to within a small fraction of 18, where it was up nearly a point. Directors are scheduled to meet to-day to consider the dividend for the fourth quarter and their decision is being eagerly awaited. Earnings are admittedly running below dividend requirements and should the dividend be continued it might be taken as an indication of better business in sight.

Brazilian's gain was only for ½ point, the stock having shown strength in New York in the face of a weak market yesterday. Imperial Oil was holding well and at midday both B.A. Oil and Supertest were unchanged, International Petroleum down only ¼ point.

Ford of Canada turned downward, easing off to 19 where it was only a fraction above its low for the year. C.P.R. also lost ½ point and Bell Telephone was easier. Service Stations was unchanged at 32½, Goodyear Tire off one at 87.

Schulte-United October Sales

Schulte-United 5c to $1. Stores, Inc. and subsidiaries report sales for October of $2,906,750, an increase of $678,843, or 30.47 per cent over sales of $2,227,907 in October, 1929. Sales for the first ten months of 1930 were $21,103,200, a gain of $7,811,749, or 58.77 per cent over sales of $13,291,451 during the first ten months of 1929. The company reports 102 stores in operation at the end of October, as compared with 91 stores in operation at the end of October, 1929.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND BRIEFS

A SPECIAL SERVICE TO THE EXAMINER

Shareholders of the International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, are advised by James L. Ashley, secretary and treasurer, that the new permanent engraved certificates for the preferred and common stock of the company are now ready for distribution to stockholders upon surrender of their temporary certificates to the transfer agent. The official letter points out that within a short time the permanent engraved certificates only will be good delivery upon stock exchanges. Holders of the temporary certificates are requested immediately to lodge their certificates for exchanges. International Nickel will not be responsible for any loss in the mails and unless a transfer is involved, the certificates are not to be endorsed and there will be no charge for making the exchange.

In Final Stages.

Selling all through the market seems to be in the final stages, E. A. Pierce, head of the firm bearing his name, wires the Toronto office concerning Wall Street. "This is no time to turn bearish, no time to sacrifice seasoned stocks; on the other hand opportunity has been created to purchase common stocks under what appear to be exceptionally favorable circumstances, with income returns and equity values offering unusual attractions" he states adding that he is quite willing to recommend purchase of selected common stocks for the longer term. He presages his word on the market thus: "The depression has not wiped out the progress made by American corporations during the years 1926-29, but, if we are to listen to all the pessimism going the rounds, we might be led to believe that fourteen months of declining business had utterly destroyed the solid background of American corporations.

During the past week or so several Canadian corporations in diversified lines of business have mailed their financial statements to shareholders and for the most part the results have been in line with the exhibits preceding. Early in the week the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. of Canada presented a financial statement showing a reduction in profit and on Saturday three other reported decreased earnings and to-day another reported a slight drop in profit. Of the three present on Saturday there was a similarity in all. Canadian Bakeries, Toronto Elevators and Canada Malting were more or less affected by the grain markets. Toronto Elevators maintained their gross profit close tothe level of the preceding period, while Canadian Bakeries and Canada Malting met with a sharp contraction. In the case of Canadian Bakeries the company lost money through purchases and sales of grain and Canada Malting suffered through dumping of excess stocks of grain from across the border.

Sales on the Toronto Stock Exchange for the first ten months of 1930 were only slightly better than one half the total for the corresponding months of 1929 and approximately three quarters of the total for a similar period of 1928 amounting to 8,850,822 shares in 1930, 16,439,353 shares in 1929 and 12,936,266 shares in 1928. In 1928 and in the early months of 1929 the volume under the weight of a demand for securities never before equalled in the history of the local market. In the late months of 1929 the heavy volume was maintained through liquidation of holdings which continued for the greater part of 1930 to date and which has only shown signs of letting up recently of 8,850,822 in 1930, 6,225,184 were in listed securities and 1,989,475 in unlisted and 636,163 in mining stocks. These figures compare with 9,303,474: 5,305,744 and 1,830,135 shares, respectively in 1929 and 4,393,134 4,061,623 and 4,481,509 shares respectively in 1928. The greatest reduction has taken place in the unlisted department and mining sections, in more recent months the Toronto Exchange has turned comparatively quiet and this is noted in a reduction in sales from 2,160,772 shares in October 1929, and 2,337,828 shares in October 1928, to only 832,702 shares in October of this year.

All operations ceased on the Toronto Stock Exchange at 11 a.m. to-day when the whole city bowed its head for two minutes in honoring the memory of those who lost their lives in the great war. This marked the first time the wheels of the local market had come to a complete standstill during trading hours since the death of the late Hon. J. A. Robb, former minister of finance in the Mackenzie King government, when the exchange paid silent tribute to this great Canadian.

Arsenal Retains English Soccer League Lead.

LONDON, Nov. 11 (C.P.)—By defeating Aston Villa, one of their nearest rivals, Arsenal on Saturday remained in leadership of first division of English Football Association. Arsenal just kept ahead of Sheffield Wednesday who were also victorious taking the measure of Leeds United at Leeds. Manchester United which has won but one game since the season opened again lost Saturday dropping a 5 to 4 decision at Leicester City.

Everton continued their winning streak in the second division badly beating Wolverhampton Wanderers. Preston North-End, in second place, kept in step with Everton by winning from Charlton Athletic.

In Southern Section of the Third division Notts County secured a draw against Brighton and Hove to retain their margin over Northampton Town which dropped a game to Thames.

Lincoln City, pace setters in northern section of third division also won playing at home against Crewe Alexandria. There was no change of importance in Scottish first division.

MAN LEANS MORE UPON SCIENCE DECLARES ALBERTA PROFESSOR

Canadian Universities Crowded With Science Students, Says Wallace.

PROBLEM IN WEST

(Special to Examiner. Copyright 1930.)

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—Never in our history has the man of affairs leaned so heavily on science for the formation of the policies that govern the country, President Robert C. Wallace, M.A., Ph.D., of the University of Alberta, said in addressing the Canadian Club of this city.

"I do not refer to the Industrialist because he always did depend on the assistance of science, but on the man whose opinions govern the policies of the nation," he stated. "At a time when people are in a stress they go back to fundamental reasoning, and this development is an encouraging indication.

"The young people are crowding our western universities in the science courses. They think that they have the ability to turn science to a practical purpose. That is the whole swing of the present stage. Little boys of eight or ten years know how to drive motor cars—not because they are taught, but instinctively."

Canada is still in the primary stage, the professor stated. The primary developments, those of the disposal of raw materials, are the vital problem. During the last twenty years science has been searching for its solution on the western plains.

"We have suffered in Canada from superlatives," he continued. "Now, we have to face the future in a practical way. And in the rapidly growing belief in applied science, I believe we have been in the right direction.

He explained that the confined territory of the western farmer and the fact that his viewpoint was concentrated purely from one crop to another would not be ameliorated until a wider variety of occupation and industry presented itself to broaden the general attitude. The winning of the tar stands in the Murray district was particularly significant, he thought, for the bitumen that would be obtained there for road-building.

"In the Turner Valley some 350,000,000 cubic feet of gas, equal to 10,000 tons of coal," he estimated, "goes up in smoke every day because there is not an adequate population within a practical territory to use it. This is another problem of science and with the assistance of the government attempts are being made to develop some kind of by-products from the gas."

By very careful research it was possible to develop the flourishing industries of northern Manitoba—Flin Flon, Sherritt Gordon and others. The north could now be mapped completely and accurately in a space of ten years. It is progress of this kind that waits on science."

AUTOMOBILE SETS ARE MOST POPULAR

Rough Roads No Longer Interfere With Radio Reception.

What might be called a prison cell studio has been installed by the Columbia System.

Studio seven is on the 23rd floor of the Columbia Building in New York and is hidden behind the master control rooms. Its size is ten feet by ten feet. It has one window which faces the north. Two announcers spend all of their working hours at a control desk there.

Besides a clock, a large panel of controls, a monitor telephone and a chair the room is devoid of all articles usually found in a radio studio. The announcer may not read, nor may he receive visitors or telephone calls. For eight hours he sits before a condenser microphone and listens to the incoming programs of the Columbia System.

His one and only duty is to throw a switch on the panel when the network announcer says "This is the Columbia Broadcasting System," then wait five seconds before he intonates, "This is WABC, New York." Following this announcement he waits one second, throws another switch and says, "This is W2XE, New York," and then sets his three switches in their original position.

Station breaks of this sort occur every 15 minutes. They are required by a rule of the Federal Radio Commission.

By using this studio for local station announcements, Columbia executives had in mind another radio refinement. An orchestra playing in another studio may continue playing while the announcer in No. 7 makes his break. Thus the music continues uninterrupted for the entire program. There are no sudden breaks to cause annoying clicks and sputters in the loudspeakers of thousands of receivers.

BREAD WAR IN HALIFAX ENDS AS PRICE JUMPS FOUR CENTS

Manufacturers Hold Meeting and Decide to Set Price at Ten Cents.

RISE WAS EXPECTED

(Special to Examiner, Copyright, 1930.)

HALIFAX, Nov 11.—True to prophecy of many citizens, the price of bread has risen to ten cents per loaf, as against the six cent price of a few days duration.

At a meeting of seven of the leading bakers, the bread war was ended officially and the price was established at 10 cents to the consumer and nine to the dealer.

It all started when the papers called the public's attention to the difference between the price of wheat and the price of bread. Arguments for and against were given and prices still remained the same until a large department store broke the deadlock and started a sale of bread for nine cents a loaf.

After some controversy on the subject and statements saying that the bakers were selling their bread at a loss even at twelve and thirteen cents a loaf, the bakers decided to break the price and established the nine cents a-loaf-bread.

Then it was that the bread war started in earnest and when the smoke cleared away, the price of bread had dropped to the low price of six cents a loaf. It was reported that the larger concerns were working the price down so that the little fellows in the business would fail and then the price would come up to a better level.

And that is what has happened. One or two of the small bakeries almost went on the rocks, while others found themselves in difficulties. The war still ranged on and things looked very fair for the maintenance of the low price.

Thus it has happened that the price has risen according to popular opinion and has now been established at ten cents a loaf. This price, however, is still some three cents cheaper than before the controversy started.

The rest of the province is now looking for the ten cents loaf and in the Hub Town of Truro, the price has been beaten down to nine cents a loaf. Officially, however, the war has ended as far as Halifax is concerned. The next article of commercial value that is scheduled for a rap from the press and general public is the absurd difference between the price of coal paid by the consumer and the price at the pit mouth.

BAD LEGS CAN NOW BE TREATED AT HOME

A new treatment which relieves bad legs without staying in bed must be something out of the ordinary.

This new treatment is known as Moone's Emerald Oil. Varicose ulcers yield to this powerful penetrating oil and together with varicose veins disappear. Swollen and painful legs are reduced and inflammation and irritation become things of the past. Thousands can testify to the benefit they have received. Every sufferer should get a bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and start the treatment at once. All good druggists have it.

TRENT RIVER

The pupils of the Public School with their teacher had a pleasant hour before dismissal Friday afternoon. A short program was given after which refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake, candy and fruit were served. Mr. Umphrey left early by C.P.R. for his home at Brampton to spend Thanksgiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Garneau and family entertained a large house party to dancing and cards at their residence, Seymour West on Friday night. A most enjoyable time was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Christie and family of Toronto came down to "Osatka" Friday and spent over the holiday.

Miss Annie Hutchinson of Toronto was a guest over the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. William Preston, Havelock Road.

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Annie Carr daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carr, on the event of her approaching marriage.

PEOPLE'S THEATRE LONDON PROPOSAL

Scheme of Membership Tickets at Low Price on Lines of Berlin Institution.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 11.—(By the Canadian Press)—London is to have a People's Theatre on the lines of the institution of that name in Berlin. Negotiations are about completed for the acquisition of a theatre in Central London, and arrangements are in progress to open towards the end of November with a play with an all-star cast. The directors of the new scheme are J. T. Grein and Miss Nancy Price, well-known actress. Mr. Geirn is Consul-General of Liberia in London, a naturalized British subject, prominently connected with theatres in the Metropolis. He founded the People's Theatre in Whitechapel in 1923.

Miss Price, in an interview with regard to the proposed People's Theatre, said "Anyone may become a member by payment of half crown before November. For the half crown they will be entitled to a season ticket, which will last a year, and the membership ticket will give admission to any seat in the theatre for 56c. We are trying to get 20,000 members. Already we have 10,000. The theatre will be divided into stalls and dress circle, with a gallery, to which members will be admitted at 12c. Non-members will be able to get in at prices ranging from $1.80 to 24c.

It is intended that no play will run for more than a month, so that members will have at least 12 plays a year. The idea is not to have a repertory company, to cast each play specially. The first play is to be a revival of the comedy "The Man from Blankley's". Then will come a Galsworthy play, then "A Message from Mars" as a Christmas production, and afterwards a new play. After November 30, the subscriptions will be raised.

INDIAN PRINCES YET LOVE KING-EMPEROR

Despite Disturbed State of India Princes Will Erect Statue to King George.

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 11—(By the Canadian Press)—Despite the disturbed state of affairs in India the ruling princes are making arrangements, with the approval of the Viceroy, Lord Irwin, to erect at New Delhi an equestrian statue of the King-Emperor to commemorate his Majesty's recovery from his serious illness. An appeal for subscriptions towards meeting the cost of the proposed statue has been made by the Maharajah of Kapurthala and has met with prompt response.

In order to make it possible for all the Indian princes to take part in the movement a maximum subscription has been fixed. The site of the statue and other details will be discussed by the Maharajah of Kapurthala and the Viceroy at New Delhi during the coming winter.

The Maharajah, who was in London recently, in an interview with The Times, said the disturbed condition of India was a matter for deep regret. He hoped that more peaceful days were coming and that the Round-Table Conference would be fruitful of good results. However disturbed the atmosphere might be, the Maharajah said, the Indian princes would not swerve from their attachment to the person and Throne of the King-Emperor. They held fast by their connection with the British Empire; the last thing they wished was severance therefrom.

THIS GRAND OLD MAN IS 102 YEARS YOUNG

Nova Scotia's Oldest Man Happy In His Advanced Age—His Mind Is Keen and Elastic

GEORGE FOGO of Pictou, Nova Scotia, has reached the age of five score years and two, but to look at him one would not think he had exceeded the allotted span of life by thirty-two autumns.

George Fogo

The years have dealt kindly with him. He is up and about every day. He is still able to enjoy walks in the vicinity of his home where land and sea meet in the inspiring beauty which characterizes the shores of Pictou harbor, and the physical strength which he retains is wonderful.

But the most remarkable feature about the old gentleman is the keenness of his mind. The editor of the Pictou Advocate, who spends the summers in a cottage near the Fogo home, has said that one of the reasons for Mr. Fogo's longevity was that he took an interest in everything and didn't worry about anything. During the last few years Mr. Fogo has had more leisure and time to indulge in the pursuits of his heart—conservation, poetry and music—and has a rich store of entertainment for his friends.

He will follow one in a discussion of almost any subject, from bygone days to politics, music and poetry. He will recite original verse or run the bow across his violin in a lively tune.

As a poet he has been well known locally for years. He has never sought fame or fortune, but has enjoyed his ability in a quiet way. Only a few of his poems have been put down on paper, but he does not forget any of them and can recite them with entertaining expression. A lover of Nova Scotia, he has composed patriotic poems.

The characteristics of Mr. Fogo's nature are an inspiration to youth. How many people, in their 'teens and twenties, have lamented the fact that they were unable to play some musical instrument and that they were too old to learn! Mr. Fogo took a notion when he was well over eighty that he would like to play the violin. He did not lament the fact that he had not learned in his youth, nor did he say he was too old. He took up the task of learning and succeeded. At the age of 102 he still plays.

Mr. Fogo was born in Pictou in 1828, a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Fogo, who came out from Glasgow, Scotland. In his youth he set out to find fame and fortune in the United States. There he learned the trade of a tanner and worked for twenty years. The call of his native province was strong, however, and he returned to Pictou. For some years he conducted a small tannery here, but later resorted to farming, at which he was actively engaged until a few years ago. He was married three times. His first wife was Miss Johanna Brownrigg of West River, Pictou county, and his second wife, Miss Annie Brown, came from the same place. His third wife, who was formerly Miss Harriet Johnston of the Miramichi district, New Brunswick, is still living, and to her old-fashioned porridge Mr. Fogo attributes in some measure his good health. Outside of having porridge every morning and drinking plenty of water, the old gentleman has no rules of diet.

Sir Henry by "R.T.L."

Sir Henry Drayton

SIR HENRY DRAYTON has very nice clothes, wears a jaunty hat, keeps a flower in his lapel and, under pressure, will admit that he is a handsome man.

At various times he has been rumored a leader of the Conservative party, lieutenant governor of Ontario, high commissioner in London and successor to Sir Henry Thornton but none of these has ever quite happened.

He is at present managing the liquor business in Ontario, for which he receives twenty thousand dollars a year and a fund of anecdotes for dinner parties.

He is sixty years old.

The high peak in his life to date was when he was made chief commissioner of the railway board at forty-three. The low point was when he got one vote as prospective party leader at fifty-seven.

He parts his hair nearly in the middle. It is nice and thick.

He used to have a drooping and luxuriant moustache. This was trimmed down to a bristly, military model and finally, in 1924, was shaved off entirely.

He thinks he looks better clean-shaven but still wonders occasionally if a beard would suit him.

He is friendly and generous and tries hard to have a sense of humor.

When he shaved off his moustache he had to have a lot of new photographs taken, but he did not mind.

He was born in Kingston, Ont., and once was elected to parliament from there.

He used to be called Harry Drayton. This was changed to Henry about 1912.

He is a lawyer and a K.C. and once actually practised law for about a year. He was also corporation counsel for Toronto and succeeded Hartley Dewart as crown attorney for the county of York.

He has done a great deal of hard work in his life and got along pretty well until he went into politics.

Whenever he takes a new job he wants to change things and is a reformer by nature though he does not know it and would not admit it if he did know it.

He belongs to more clubs than any man in Canada and is a cheerful sportsman. He is nearly always cheerful no matter what happens.

He used to think he would do well in the movies and has wondered sometimes if he shouldn't try them.

In talking with new acquaintances he is still apt to mention casually that his old football knee is bothering him again.

He has a great many friends, most of whom like him, and was once able to attend a Liberal picnic in Quebec with no unfortunate result beyond the circulation of a rumor that he would soon be leader of the Conservative party.

If he had been less good-looking he would have gone further in politics but he does not understand this and would not believe it anyway.

Beneath his bonhomie he has always been highly ambitious and does his best to demonstrate the extreme importance of the Ontario liquor job.

He went to school in England and has had great difficulty in forgetting this.

He is a chronic sentimentalist, but likes to believe that he is a cynic, a man of the world and very hard-boiled.

He did good work for the country during the war and in 1917 returned a government cheque for fifteen thousand dollars rather than take payment for his services. Somehow or other this got into the papers.

He has never been a good speaker, although he has a lovely platform manner and a number of splendid gestures.

He does not feel right unless he gets eight hours' sleep every night.

It pleases him now to reflect that not many lawyers make twenty thousand dollars every year.

One of his best bits of work is the Drayton-Acworth report on the railways which is still highly regarded by everybody, including himself.

He keeps his name out of the telephone directory.

He has always been a promising young man.

A Little Lad Led Them But He Rode Nice Horse

ERNEST RAYMOND, the six-foot ex-chaplain to the forces who has made such a name for himself in recent years as novelist, essayist and dramatist, is making innumerable friends for himself during his present tour of Canada undertaken at the suggestion of the National Council of Education. Mr. Raymond was in Canada last year, too, and it was an address that he made at the Vancouver convention of the national council that led to the invitation which will mean an increased knowledge of him by Canadians—and, it is to be hoped, vice versa.

Active service on no less than six fronts during the war gave this famous writer an unsurpassed experience of the British Tommy on which he has drawn for two at least of his books. Mr. Raymond is a staunch supporter of the common soldier, and strongly deprecates the attitude of some writers towards the humble tankers whose services were indispensable.

Possibly a story that Mr. Raymond has been telling will serve to illustrate his own keen sense of humor. "On a somewhat detached portion of one of the distant fronts an officer received notification that hostilities would cease at 11 a.m. on the 11th day of November, 1918," he said. "The officer who received the wire was in support at the time, and at once ordered his men to fall in. He read them the message.

"What did the men do?" the speaker continued. "They did not shout with delight, as Germans might have done. They did not burst into tears, as Frenchmen might have done in the stress of their emotional excitement. Oh, no; all was silence.

"Then a sergeant stepped forward and saluted. 'Excuse me, sir,' he asked, 'but 'oo's won?'"

The audience rocked with merriment, but more was to come. Then later the chairman of the meeting, Rev. Lawrence Clare, adduced further evidence which was as new as if it had only happened yesterday.

"A very green young officer, fresh from some public school O.T.C., was put in command of a squad of hardened soldiers in the early days of the war. Once when his back was turned towards them he distinctly heard someone say, 'A little child shall lead them.'

"The youngster took no notice. The parade and the drill went on, just as if nothing had happened. Time came for the parade to dismiss at the end of the morning's exercises. But before sending the men off the parade ground the officer said he had an announcement to make.

"'There will be a 25-mile route march this afternoon,' he proclaimed as gruffly as he could. 'Equipment will be full packs, overcoats and blankets; and a little child shall lead them—on a big brown horse.'

"The men saw the point, of course," commented Mr. Clare. "That officer, kid though he was, had no more trouble with discipline."

WILL ESTABLISH "Y" IN LAND OF BUDDHISM

Montreal Business Man Has Travelled to Many Queer Places to Introduce the Y.M.C.A.

UPON the shoulders of Col. Gerald W. Birks, O.B.E., Montreal millionaire businessman, has been placed a titanic but intriguing task—that of introducing the Young Men's Christian Association into Siam, the stronghold of Buddhism. Accompanied by his wife and secretary, Col. Birks is now journeying slowly toward his new field of endeavor, by way of Japan and China, where he served the cause of the "Y" last year.

Col. Birks, O.B.E.

As honorary administrative secretary for the Y.M.C.A. in the far east the Canadian prince of commerce supervises a territory many times the size of the Dominion. His "beat" embraces China, Japan, Mongolia, Korea and the Philippines, with Siam as the latest addition.

He has been president of the Montreal branch for many years. Incidentally, it was through this life-long allegiance that he gained his "O.B.E." When the Canadian troops went overseas he went with them to organize Y.M.C.A. work in England and France. He had complete charge of this important activity, with the rank of colonel, and as a result of the success of his labors, was named among those whom the King chose to honor for signal services to the Empire.

Because of this valuable experience he was asked three years ago to take over the still greater responsibility of supervising work in the Orient, an undertaking which meant sacrifice of many of his personal and business interests and which was even not without danger as the most cursory survey of conditions recently prevailing in China will show.

His interest in the Orient had already been roused by several round-the-world tours, so when he set out to tour his vast and polyglot territory about a year ago he was full of zest and enthusiasm.

He accomplished much in the line of organization in Japan, Korea, Manchuria, China and the Philippines although he found, of course, that the epidemic of rebellions from which China is suffering made efficient administration of anything there well nigh an impossibility. "Y" centres in these Oriental lands are almost entirely administered and staffed by natives.

Col. Birks found work in these countries just as interesting as he expected and perhaps a bit more difficult. But both interest and difficulties are greatly increased in Siam—that ancient land of paradox, where a man must first be a priest in order to secure a government post and where a ruler educated in the universities of the Christian west officiates as head of the state religion, presiding over the rites of tens of thousands of Buddhist priests in tens of thousands of incense-perfumed temples.

Lord Reading Swings a Mean Racquet Although He is Over 70 Years Old

THERE is no greater believer in the old proverb, "Every cloud has a silver lining," than Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Marquess of Reading, who has recently been appointed a member of the round table conference on India. His has been a meteoric career, in that his first effort in life was an utter failure but through it he rose to the zenith of success. Born into the world just 70 years ago with no particular advantages—his father was like thousands of others, just a merchant in the city of London—he has risen by sheer ability from being an unsuccessful stock and share dealer to some of the highest positions in the empire.

Marquis of Reading

When young Rufus Isaacs left school he went to sea for a time, long enough to convince himself that the attractions of a life on the ocean wave were to him more imaginary than real! Like so many others of his race the money business was calling him; he felt he had a flair for finance, and finance it was to be. He became a member of the London Stock Exchange, but misfortune overtook him. Unable to meet his commitments the relentless hammer fell one morning, and his membership of that august institution came to a summary end.

All the same, Rufus was right. He had a vivid streak of finance in him, and it has never forsaken him in all the long years that have passed since that fateful morning. The cloud that enveloped him then, however, was only for the dark hour before the dawn. Rufus quickly put the past behind him and set to work to read for the bar, to which he was called at the age of 27. After his first few cases his ability began to show itself and briefs rolled in faster than he could deal with them.

So rapid was Rufus Isaacs' progress that he took silk and became a Q.C. in 1898, and six years later the benchers of the Middle Temple honored him by electing him a bencher. Having gained this distinction he went into politics and sat as Liberal M.P. for Reading from 1904 until 1913. As a politician he quickly made a reputation at Westminster. The clearly-thought-out utterances of his legal, well-ordered mind marked him out as a front bench man, but in the Liberal party there were several holding prior claims to promotion and he had to bide his time. It came, however, and in 1910 he was given a knighthood and a seat on the treasury bench as solicitor-general. This appointment he held for only a short time as a further step up came in the same year when he was made attorney-general. In 1913 he left the House of Commons, his great reputation as a commoner having been established in just nine years.

The end of the war and the peace freed Lord Reading from his legal, financial and diplomatic duties, but an administrator of front rank standing was required in India. He had looked forward to a hard and well-earned retirement at the conclusion of peace, but the government could not spare him yet awhile. So to India he went as viceroy and governor-general for five years, from 1921 to 1926, working in that tropical country for the good of India and the empire as few viceroys had worked before.

Star of American Stage Directed by Her Husband

KATHARINE CORNELL, who is now touring Canada, is often called the foremost American actress of the present day. She was born in Germany, where her father, Dr. P. C. Cornell of Buffalo, N.Y., was pursuing post-graduate medical studies.

Katharine Cornell

Dr. Cornell, an amateur actor of ability, later became director and manager of Buffalo's Star and Majestic theatres. His daughter evinced an early interest in the stage, directing the dramatic club at a girls' school in Mamaroneck and then going to New York, where she was given a two-line part in the Washington Square Players' production of "Bushido."

After appearing in several plays with this group, Miss Cornell became a member of the Jessie Bonstelle stock company in Detroit, toured with a William A. Brady production, and the following year went to England to play the part of Jo in "Little Women."

She became one of the most sought-after actresses on the American stage, but refused to be starred until the production of Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat." She rose steadily with her characterization of Mary Fitton in "Will Shakespeare," "Leslie Crosby in "The Letter," and last season, Countess Olenska in "The Age of Innocence."

She is married to Guthrie McClintic, whom she met when he was stage director of the Bonstelle company. Mr. McClintic has directed her in many roles.

Chooser of Pretty Girls Is Bored by His Job

AMERICA'S most famous judge of feminine pulchritude is a bit of a paradox.

Florenz Ziegfeld, whose nod of approval or frown of dissent means success or failure to the pretty girls seeking a place in the chorus of Broadway's revues, never won a prize in a beauty show himself. And he never will.

Florenz Ziegfeld

Furthermore, Flo Ziegfeld, in spite of his long association with the beauties of the continent, looks utterly bored most of the time. He explained why when he passed through Vancouver recently.

"I'm deathly tired of looking at girls," he said. "It's got to be second nature with me. I have to be always on the lookout for a pretty face or a classic figure that I need in one of my revues. That I hardly ever find what I am looking for is merely a proof that I am seeking what is almost unattainable. There are hundreds of thousands of girls who would like to work for me, but only a few scores that can come up to my requirements.

"How long is it since the novelty of appraising beautiful young women passed off?" he was asked.

"I've forgotten," he answered, waving the pungent cigar that he seems to be eternally smoking. "Years and years and years. Ever since I got married, pretty girls have been nothing but revue material to me. My business is providing pleasure for other people, and I stick to that."

It Must Be Admitted—

THAT Philip Snowden, chancellor of the British exchequer, is a man of iron. He is probably the best living example of the power of mind over matter. He hobbles painfully to his herculean tasks—a frail man whose face has been indelibly marked by the claws of pain. But this man is a Gibraltar of will-power. Against him the noisy waves of political strife break harmlessly. He defied smooth-tongued diplomats of Europe who came to him with plans to bleed his much-bled England. He refuses to be flattered or cajoled by his political admirers. Grim, bitter, unassailable, he stands like a bull-dog at the door of John Bull's treasury.

Philip Snowden

His attitude towards free trade shows his metal. Industrial depression has let loose a tremendous propaganda in favor of protective tariffs. Its current has swept many men from their political bearings. But not Philip Snowden. Although his task is to balance Britain's enormous budget in these trying days, he is still a free trader. The other day, at a time when many empire leaders were extolling the virtues of protection in Great Britain, he made a speech in which he scorched the theory and practise of protectionism. He may be wrong. I am not clever enough to judge as to that, but I was thrilled by Snowden's speech. A weak man couldn't have made it. A politician wouldn't have made it. Snowden is neither. He is a man of iron—a bitter, courageous, stubborn and brilliant Yorkshireman who will go down to imperishable fame.—P.H.D.

In Sport, Diplomacy or Statecraft Lord Derby Has Proved His Mettle

FOR many years now Edward George Villiers Stanley, 17th Earl of Derby, has been a silent force in British politics. Unseen and unheard, he has played the role of reserve man in Coalition and Conservative governments, ready in an emergency to step in and take the place of any cabinet minister or diplomat. He comes near to being a contradiction of the oft-used expression that "no man is indispensable." He has served Britain and the Empire so many times and in so many capacities that he is now regarded, after the Prince of Wales, as the Empire's best ambassador.

Lord Derby succeeded to the earldom in 1908, though the Stanleys have been a titled family since the end of the 15th century. The most eminent member was Edward the 14th earl, who was three times prime minister. Knowsley Hall, Lancashire, the family seat, came through the marriage of the first earl's grandfather with a Lancashire heiress, Isobel Lathom, some time prior to 1400. Thus he founded the fortunes of the Stanleys, who still own much of the land on which the city of Liverpool is built. Knowsley Hall stands in a park six miles in circumference, and here the King and other members of the royal family invariably stay when attending the Grand National and other north country race meetings.

It was in 1915 that Lord Derby came prominently before the public on his appointment as director-general of recruiting. Early in 1916 he was appointed under-secretary for war, and later in the same year he became secretary for war, a post he held until 1918. In that year, however, the government was looking for a superman to fill a very difficult post. The end of the war was in sight, and somebody with unusual tact, discretion and natural gifts as a diplomat was required in Paris as ambassador to France. Someone with a great name, a great position, and wealth, and someone who would be wholly acceptable to France. This was the problem before the British government. Lord Derby took the post, and quickly proved he had all the qualities necessary. He stayed in Paris for two years and, as subsequent events proved, he was one of the most successful and outstanding ambassadors ever to go to France from the Court of St. James.

Lord Derby's active association with politics ceased in 1924 when he returned to the private life of an English nobleman and squire. He returned, too, with added enthusiasm to his racing stud, which for many years has been among the finest in the world. It was his ancestor, the 12th Earl of Derby, who inaugurated in 1780 that greatest of all races, the Derby, which was run without a break until 1914.

Lord Derby has been a great breeder of bloodstock for many years, and he has won everything there is to be won under the rules of racing. His stud at present is valued at $5,000,000, and during the last twenty years his winnings in stake money amount to $2,500,000, practically all by horses bred in his own stables. He never bets. Hit by heavy taxation he is now faced with the problem of reducing the number of his horses.

During the late spring this year Lord Derby visited the United States to see the Kentucky Derby and to enjoy himself. Speaking of America, he told the Liverpool chamber of commerce: "A number of illusions that I was under have disappeared. One of these was that I imagined Senator Borah to be a bitter opponent of England. On the contrary, I find him among the most agreeable of my recollections of people I met in the United States. My trip dispelled another illusion. I had understood that money was the chief thing talked about in America. It is not. The chief thing talked of there is prohibition and how best to avoid it!"

HYTEX

The New Underwear for Healty Children

NOW! More comfort—better health—more warmth. That is what your children will have with this new underwear called Hytex. Hytex is the invention of leading Canadian child specialists. Hytex applies the new health principle of double insulation, which maintains resistance against colds. An outer layer of pure botany wool is knitted by a special process with an inner layer of finely combed, bleached cotton.

Six Reasons for Buying Your Child Hytex Underwear

1. Prevents escape of body heat (outer wool).
2. Absorbs body moisture (inner cotton layer).
3. Prevents wool rash and skin irritation (inner cotton layer).
4. Hygienic ventilation (because of special Hytex structure).
5. Unshrinkable—retains shape (due to Hytex knitting process).
6. More economical. Costs no more than ordinary underwear, yet is remarkably durable.

Hytex Styles

For every age from infancy to 16 years there is a perfect Hytex style. Each style has been scientifically designed to meet the requirements of a different age and climate. Ask about this new style Underwear the next time you are in the Store.

Diapers

If you have a baby in your home ask about the Hytex Diaper. Hytex Diaper absorbs 3 times its own weight and does it instantly.

MORE RESPECT IS NEEDED FOR OUR WAR HEROES

Judge Huycke, at Campbellford Armistice Service, Empha sizes Respect For War Shrines.

CANADIAN LEGION PARADED.

Large Crowds Attend Annual Observance With Local Ministers Participating.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 11 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent)—Twelve years were rolled away on Sunday when the Anniversary of Armistice was fittingly celebrated at Campbellford by the whole community, and many visitors from outside points. As the "Last Post" was sounded, the thoughts of those who had "been over" went back over the years to the comrades they had left behind, the names of some of whom were inscribed on the War shrine around which they were assembled. And those who had sent husband and son to Flanders, never to return to their native land, felt a glow of pride as they listened to the glowing tribute paid by His Honor, Judge E. C. S. Huycke of Peterborough, to the departed manhood of the nation.

The Campbellford Branch No. 103, of the Canadian Legion, under the command of Major J. M. Bygott, paraded in full force with visitors from Lakefield, Havelock, Warkworth and Peterborough.. Headed by the colors and a guard of honor under the command of Sergeant T. Dutton and accompanied by the band of the Northumberland Regiment, the parade was joined on the route of march by the High and Public Schools Cadets under the command of Lieut. J. Bygott, and in a body proceeded to the War Memorial around which a large crowd of people had assembled.

The service was in charge of Capt. Rev. N. Clark Wallace and local ministers, including Rev. L. M. Smith, Rev. R. C. Tait and Rev. W. H. Fuller of Markham, assisted. The ceremony commenced by the laying of wreaths on the base of the memorial.

Judge Huycke's Address

Judge Huycke, in his opening remarks stated that they were assembled in a three-fold capacity. First, to celebrate Thanksgiving; secondly, to observe the Anniversary of Armistice, and thirdly, to pay homage to those who went overseas and did not return. This was a time, he thought, when memories of the war came back to all and especially those who did not go but sent some of their loved ones, and had lived for so long in a state of fear for the future. There were those he said, who were grieving for the men who had been left behind To him, it was a pleasure and delight to come and do honor to those who had gone and those who had returned and were assembled there.

Judge Huycke declared that the Armistice was the greatest event in history, past or present. It ranked as first of the three outstanding events of history, the birth of Christianity nineteen hundred years ago, the final defeat of the Mohammedan forces in Europe twelve hundred years ago, and Armistice, the twelfth anniversary of which they were celebrating to-day.

The speaker stated that liberty had always been one of the basic elements in British constitution. Liberty of thought, word and action. This had always been observed as long as that liberty did not impose itself on one's neighbors. When a nation had arisen overthrowing that element of British constitution, the manhood of the nation had risen in arms against them and the best men of Canada had gone forth and followed that flag that bore the white cross of the liberty of Christ. "We were here to-day to do honor to those men, and too great honor could not be given," declared the speaker.

In regard to the War Memorials, Judge Huycke thought that one thing that was sadly needed was a greater show of respect. He said that on his recent trip to the Old Land he was greatly impressed with the respect shown to the war shrines in that country.

In London, it mattered not who it was that passed the Cenotaph in Whitehall—king or peasant, rich or poor, business man or laborer—the hat was always lifted and a pause made. This was also the case in France. In Paris and Brussels the tombs of the Unknown Soldier and the War Shrine were honored above all else. There was always a guard of honor on duty and the grave was surrounded by a living flame of fire that never went out. "This," said the speaker, is symbolic of that divine flame of fire that went out when the men gave their lives for their country, yet which lives on." These shrines were the holy places of the nations.

In emphasizing the respect that should be shown to the dead, the speaker stated that it was doubly needed here, for in his opinion there was not a place in the world that had sent men to the war where respect to those men who were left and who had returned was needed more than in the Province of Ontario. "Your liberties had been preserved by those who had sacrificed their lives," he declared.

Speaking to the Legion, Judge Huycke stated that he would like to see every returned man a member of the association. It was the one way they could help each other, by uniting, and said that they always had his support. He would like to see the soldiers rule the country, he said, and gave as his reason the fact, that if they did so they would defeat any scheme that reflected discredit on the British Empire.

And, speaking to those who had lost their men in the war, Judge Huycke said that he felt sympathy with them, yet he felt proud of those who had sacrificed, for they were Christians in the real sense, because they gave their lives for country and the sacred principles of its constitution. "And the same spirit that moved them to go still lives on here in Canada," he declared. "We do them all honor, the best, kindest and bravest of men, and when Tuesday comes and the nations are called upon to remember them in unity, shall we not breath a prayer for them?"

The ceremony ended with the band of the Northumberland Regiment playing the Scottish traditional dirge, "The Flowers of the Forest," and the sounding of the "Last Post" and "Reveille" by the bugles.

Mother and Daughter Relieved of Skin Disease

As Good For Eczema as For Simple Injuries

"We have used Zam-Buk for over 25 years; in fact, ever since my girlhood days in Lancashire. Recently my little girl's scalp was all broken out in eczema—it was a dreadful sight. With her head being so sore and painful I had to melt the Zam-Buk and then gently apply it to her hair with a soft brush. The result was marvellous. In two or three days time it began to show big improvement and further use of Zam-Buk removed the disease entirely. Last season my arms and legs were swollen up to twice their normal size, and the skin all fiery purplish red. Again Zam-Buk proved a real friend indeed and soon rid me of the trouble. I always have Zam-Buk by me in the house."—Mrs. A. Bentley, 2270 Joliette Street, Montreal.

"Living on a farm, where nasty accidents are quite common, we always keep Zam-Buk handy. We often get cut and gashed in the barbed wire, but Zam-Buk is always swiftly soothing and healing."—Mrs. C. Barnett, Fareham P.O., Alberta.

The unparalleled success of Zam-Buk as a healer of skin troubles lies in its original and valuable formula. Zam-Buk is compounded from certain extracts of herbal origin. These, scientifically blended, attain the maximum of soothing, healing, and antiseptic power.

Zam-Buk is so refined that it soaks through the tiny pores into underlying tissues. It heals from below as well as on the surface. It kills poisonous germs, stops pain and itching, and grows new skin. Zam-Buk gets at the root of such troubles as eczema, salt rheum, bad legs, ulcers, scalp disease, poisoned sores, etc. It is also a splendid remedy for piles, and a fine all-round first-aid for injuries. Zam-Buk Ointment 50c. box, Zam-Buk Medicinal Soap 25c. cake.

WEDDING BELLS

LAYCOCK—HEATH

MARMORA, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence)—A very popular wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Harry Heath, of Rawdon Township, when Flossie Glenna, daughter of Mrs. William Heath was united in marriage to Thomas E. Laycock, reeve of Marmora and Lake townships.

The ceremony was performed at 2.30 p.m. by Rev. H. A. Bunt, pastor of Springbrook United Church, immediate relatives of the contracting parties being present. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Harry Heath.

Following the ceremony, a dainty buffet luncheon was served. Many beautiful gifts were evidence of the esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Laycock later left on a motor trip to Ottawa, Montreal and other eastern points. On their return they will reside on the groom's farm near Deloro. A host of friends unite in wishing them a very happy married life.

GRANT—PAYNE

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence.) — A pretty wedding took place in St. John's Church on Saturday morning at eleven o'clock when Verna May, elder daughter of Mrs. F. G. Kendall and the late Robert Payne was united in marriage to Ingol MacFarlane Grant, son of Mr. Charles A. Grant, of Toronto, Rev. W. J. Creighton, M.A., performing the ceremony.

While the organist, Mrs. J. W. Todd played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, the vested choir preceded the bridal party up the aisle. The altar was prettily decorated with pink and white chrysanthemums.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, F. G. Kendall, looked very pretty in a white crepe de chine frock combined with silk radium lace and wore a silk net veil trimmed with valenciennes lace and arranged in cap fashion with a coronet of orange blossoms. She wore white kid slippers, white silk hose and gloves and carried a bouquet of white mums and maindenhair fern. She also wore a white gold necklace, the gift of the groom and the white gold bracelet presented by St. John's choir, of which she has been a valued member.

Miss Winnifred Payne, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a becoming gown of deep rose crepe de chine made with uneven hemline and trimmed with silk radium lace of the same shade, white kid slippers, pink silk hose and gloves and large hat which was of silk velvet of the same shade as her gown. She carried pink and white chrysanthemums.

Mr. Aubrey Grant, of Toronto, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

During the signing of the register, the choir sang, "Oh Perfect Love." Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home on Chippewa avenue.

Mrs. Kendall, mother of the bride, wore midnight blue canton crepe gown trimmed with chiffon velvet and hat to match. Decorations were carried out in pink and white, the luncheon table being centred by the bride's cake and decorated with pink and white carnations.

Following the luncheon, Mr. and Mrs. Grant left for a motor trip to Windsor and Detroit, and on their return they will reside in Toronto. The bride travelled in sea foam green crepe de chine frock, navy blue close fitting hat, navy tricotine coat with mole collar, navy kid shoes, with hose, purse, scarf and kid gloves of contrasting shade.

Pre nuptial events included a shower given by the members of St. John's choir and a presentation given by the Northern Light Lodge, L.O.B.A.

The young couple were the recipients of a large number of beautiful gifts from a wide circle of friends who join in heartiest good wishes for their happiness.

OBITUARY

JOHN GORMAN

WARKWORTH, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence)—The funeral of the late John Gorman was held on Thursday morning in St. Jerome's Church.

The late Mr. Gorman, who was in his sixtieth year, died at Kingston on Tuesday morning, following an operation.

The deceased was a good citizen being a resident of Percy township nearly all his life. Besides his wife, he leaves two daughters and two sons to mourn his loss, Mary, Helen, Paul and Bernard all at home. Burial took place at Warkworth cemetery.

Fenelon Falls Action In Court This Week

(Examiner Correspondence)

LINDSAY, Nov. 11.—The village of Fenelon Falls is the defendant in an interesting court action, which will be heard this week before His Honor Judge Swayze. Some weeks ago the village council, with a view to introducing a policy of civic retrenchment, dispensed with the services of Constable Gordon, who enforced law and order in the village. The Chief, holding that his dismissal was irregular, owing to an agreement entered into with the council, continued to perform his duties. The council claimed that no agreement exists, as he was only appointed by resolution of that body. Suit was entered by the Constable for salary dating from the period of his dismissal as well as for other monies which he claims the village owes him. The outcome of the action is awaited with interest.

Owing to the business depression charity balls are banned in Lincolnshire, England, this winter.

MILLBROOK COUPLE HONORED ON WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Lang Have Enjoyed 25 Years of Married Life.

RESIDE IN CITY

MILLBROOK, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence)—A gathering of delightful import took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Lang, recently removed from Millbrook and now residing at 620 Charlotte street, Peterborough, when the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day was observed by a surprise party arranged by the three daughters of the home, Mrs. Walter Wright, Mrs. Manson Cathcart, and Miss Marguerite Lang, and attended by only the immediate relatives of the family.

The actual date of the anniversary was November first, but for convenience in entertaining the previous evening, Friday, October 31, was chosen for the party.

The dining room, as arranged for the family dinner-party, presented a most attractive appearance, the table with linen cloth of Italian cut-work, being centred with the handsome wedding-cake, and otherwise decorated with rose pink candles in silver holders, and pink carnations in silver and crystal vases.

The wedding-cake, into which later the 'bride,' following the time-honored custom, first inserted the knife, was made by the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lang, Mrs. Walter Wright, the beautifully designed frosting being the work of a niece of Mr. Lang's, Mrs. Jack Huggins. The dainty ornament which 'topped' its final story was the one used on the wedding cake of Mrs. Manson Cathcart, whose marriage took place in Saint Thomas' Church, Millbrook, last June.

During the evening a further surprise for the bride and groom of a quarter of a century was the presentation of a handsome walnut smoker's stand, a pair of silver candlesticks, and a beautiful bouquet of carnations. As Mrs. Lang held her lovely sheaf of colorful blossoms the interesting fact was recalled that, on her wedding-day twenty-five years before, she had carried a bouquet of similar flowers.

The gifts already mentioned were from the family, and in addition Mr. and Mrs. Lang were the recipients of several pieces of silver, and received the best wishes of a number of relatives who were unable to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Lang were married on November first, 1905, in Saint Luke's Anglican Church, Peterborough, the ceremony being performed by the rector, Rev. Mr. Langfeldt.

Council Meets

The regular monthly meeting of the Municipal Council was held last week with Reeve P. Stinson presiding, and present Councillors W. E. Ball, J. R. Eakins, T. Ingram and T. J. Lang.

DUNCAN R. COWAN ENTERTAINS GUESTS

Special Entertainer at L. O. L. 2322 Pie Social at Petherick's Corners.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence). — A most successful and highly entertaining program marked the annual pie social of L.O.L. 2322 held on Wednesday evening, November 5, when Duncan R. Cowan, of Toronto, was the special entertainer for the event. His son, Grant Cowan, acted as accompanist for the evening and showed a remarkable degree of proficiency in piano music. Violin and piano numbers by Fred McMullen and Grant Cowan preceded the regular program. James Irwin, Government cheese-grader, of Belleville, an "old boy" of Petherick's and Sentinel Lodge, acted as chairman in a very capable and happy manner.

As a character entertainer, comic or otherwise, Duncan Cowan is the best ever heard locally, and it is regrettable that the crowd was not larger than it was, the hall being only comfortably filled. He appeared in various British costumes, representing the Scotch, Irish and English, with comic songs and stories, as well as some serious numbers, illustrative of each. Other costume effects were faithfully portrayed in song and story, while as a leader of community singing he is without a peer. The closing number of the regular program showed Mr. Cowan's remarkable talent as an accordion player and a combination of patriotic airs and more recent popular numbers delighted the audience.

The ever-popular feast of sandwiches and pie for which this locality is famous was then passed by the Orange brethren and the members of the local L.O.B.A. During intervals in the program Mr. Irwin called on Clarence Barnum, present W.M. of the lodge, for an address, and also on T. J. Petherick and Mrs. John Simpson, who are prominent in the work of the two organizations. Mr. W. McCreary, of Belleville, a friend of Mr. Irwin's, who accompanied him on the trip, also addressed the gathering.

A fancy quilt which the members of the L.O.B.A. had made and placed on exhibition was won by Fred. McGee, of Stirling, who held the lucky ticket, No. 123. Mr. Cowan drew the ticket from the ballot box at the conclusion of lunch. He then gave his concluding number and led the audience in the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem.

Water Shortage.

A decided shortage of water is evident in this and neighboring communities, and many farmers are being seriously handicapped in their fall work by the necessity of hauling water both for household purposes and for stock. Ploughing is a slow and painful operation owing to the lack of moisture in the soil.

Hallowe'en Concert In Gilmour Church

BRIDGENORTH, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence)—The annual Hallowe'en concert and masquerade of the young people of Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church was held on Tuesday evening in the basement of the church, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion, with Jack O'Lanterns, black cats, witches, etc.

In one part of the room was the Hallowe'en fire place where the glass fortune bowl and witch drew the attention of many of the young people.

The program consisted of readings, monologues, recitations, duets and solos by Gordon McGregor, Marion Blewett, Lillian McGregor, Jean Fowler, Edna Robison, Jean Coates and Hazel Telford.

A grand march of those in costume was held; those winning prizes being: best dressed lady, Miss Mabel Paul, representing Aunt Dinah; comic dress, Donald Telford, as a clown; best dressed girl under ten years of age, Jean Fowler, dressed as a bride; comic boy, Jack Blewett.

After the prizes were awarded, games and contests were enjoyed and lunch was served.

HUNDRED STUDENTS RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

Robert Cooper Receives Ravensdale Cup at Cobourg Collegiate Commencement Exercises.

COBOURG, Nov. 11 (Special to Examiner). — At commencement exercises of the Cobourg Collegiate Institute held Friday night, at which Principal J. A. Bannister, Ph.D., of the Peterborough Normal School was the guest speaker, over 100 students of a student body totalling only 270 received graduation diplomas, trophies or awards making their splendid scholarship or athletic prowess.

Robert Cooper, 16 year old son of ex-Mayor W. E. Cooper, received the Ravendale Cup for all round proficiency in scholarship, athletics and manliness. Miss Clara Blezard, now a student at the Peterborough Normal School, was awarded the A. L. Jex shield for upper school scholarship.

In presenting diplomas to 26 commercial school graduates, F. L. McArthur, M.L.A., urged all the graduates and students to remain in Canada and no longer to consider even the possibility of going to the United States.

"Stay right here at home where you belong," the local member of Provincial Parliament declared. "We don't want you to leave us and there's a place for you in Canada now, for it is no longer necessary for you to cross the line to make your living."

Efforts recently launched by A. J. Hewson, postmaster of Cobourg and member of the Collegiate Board for 43 consecutive years, is meeting with a wide response. The attendance of parents and friends at Friday evening's excercises was token as evidence that the public is prepared to back the erection of a complete new building clude a complete technical-commercial department.

Mayor Willmott of Cobourg declared in his address that the Town could not help but give support to a school which maintains, under Principal R. D. P. Davidson, M.A., such high standard of excellence in all its departments, and whose reputation is one of Cobourg's chief assets.

MONTHLY MEETING WARKWORTH W.M.S.

Mrs. Harry McCleary Has Charge of St. Paul's Church Society Program.

WARKWORTH, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence)—The W.M.S. of St. Paul's Church held its regular meeting in the Sunday School room of the church on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Harry McCleary had charge of the program which was interesting. This consisted of the second chapter of the new Study Book which dealt with Christian missions in Japan. A leaflet on Thinking Peace and a responsive reading on the Lord's Prayer were given.

The financial report was given and showed that $353.80 had been raised and that there was an amount of $66.20 yet to raise to meet the allocation of $425.

Institute Observes Birthday Anniversary

Young's Point Members Meet at Home of Mrs. Dave Darling.

YOUNG'S POINT, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence)—On Wednesday afternoon, the monthly meeting of the Young's Point Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Dave Darling and was in the nature of a birthday anniversary, the Institute being one year old.

J. B. Nelson, of Peterborough gave an interesting address, and also congratulated the women on the amount of work accomplished in the year and said he hoped the interest and enthusiasm would not grow less as time went on.

He spoke of the need of a community hall in Young's Point and thought the Institute could do much to help along the good cause. A family in the village where the father was ill and there were several small children was reported and Mrs. Wilson was appointed to inquire into the matter, and report to the relief committee.

Miss Lois McNaughton gave the report on the Cooking Class under Miss Edith Hopkins, and all agreed who were fortunate enough to attend those classes that they were very instructive and beneficial to all.

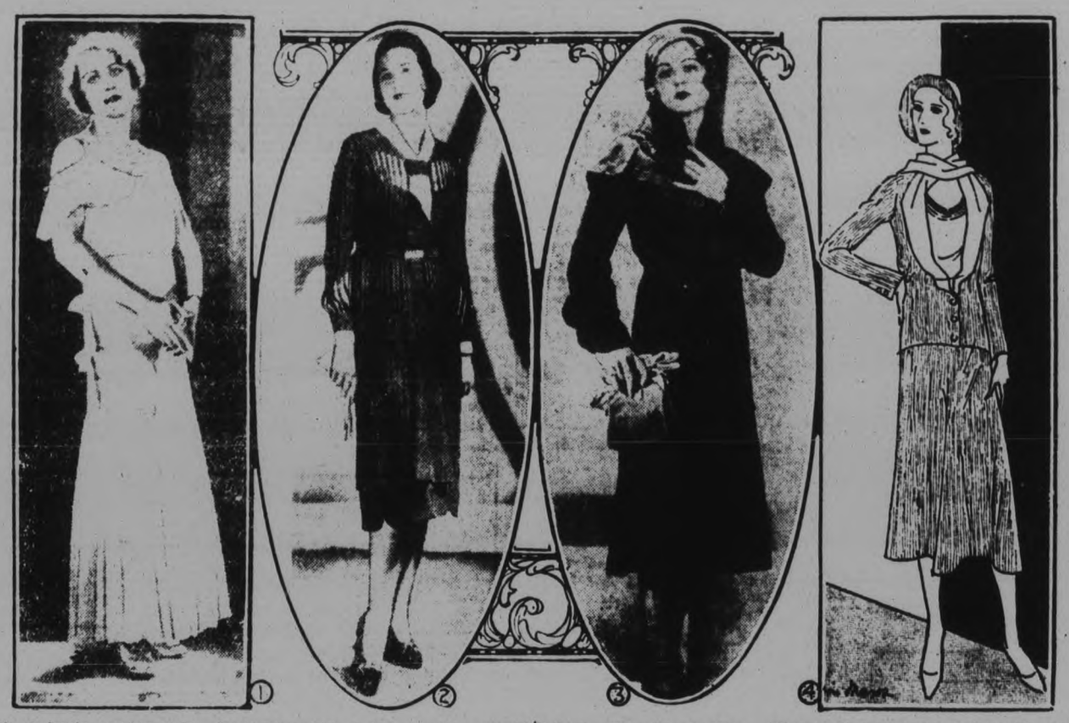
It was decided to have the examination for the girls' sewing class on Saturday, November 29, the class to be held in the local school house if possible, the judge to be Mrs. Cameron of Lakefield. Miss Jennie Kearney was appointed to purchase the prizes for the same.

Mrs. Oscar Reed very kindly invited the women of the Institute to meet at her home for the December meeting, when the roll call will be answered by the giving and receiving of each others names for Christmas remembrances. Each member's name will be written on a slip of paper and placed in a box, after which each member will draw a slip, the gift not to exceed 15 cents in price.

The relief committee, Mesdames F. M. Young, A. Wilson, William Brooks, H. Freeburn, A. Duggan, Jr., William Bullock and Max Kidd was appointed to look after the sick and needy at Christmas time.

At the close of the meeting the hostess, Mrs. Darling served a dainty lunch, of sandwiches and birthday cake, the cake having one candle on top which was lit by the president, Mrs. W. J. Tedford. During the serving of the lunch, music was played on the piano by Miss Daisy Wilson, which was much enjoyed.

Something New in Modes of the Present Season



(1) A lovely evening gown from Lucien Lelong in light blue chiffon trimmed with embroidery and beads. (2) A copy of Lucille's very smart "strap dress," in green and white crepe with a belt at the normal waistline. (3) An attractive afternoon coat of red cloth trimmed with black astrachan from Lucien Lelong. The hat is from Mario Guy. (4) A Marie Marot sketch of a smart knitted suit of deep green. The reverse have long ends forming a throw-over scarf in a light shade of green. The blouse too, is of light green with a border of several shades of green.

Interest Warming Up In Lindsay Elections

(Examiner Correspondence)

LINDSAY, Nov. 11. — Unless all signs fail, this town is to witness one of the liveliest municipal elections next month in its history. This year's council has had to deal with one or two contentious problems, which have caused a division in public sentiment. These questions were handled fearlessly, and, it was thought, satisfactorily, by the council. Considerable criticism, however, has been heard during the past several days, and some of the citizens have taken municipal politics so seriously that private meetings have been held, and candidates selected for the different departments of the council.

The council holds its inaugural meeting on November 15, when the decks will be cleared for the election. Practically every member of this year's council will seek re-election.

Hazzard's Corners W.M.S. Plans Supper

QUEENSBORO, Nov. 11 (Examiner Correspondence) — The W.M.S. of Hazzard's Corners held their November meeting on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Daniel Gunsolus, with twelve members present. Miss Francis Keene, the president was in the chair. The meeting was opened with singing the doxology, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The roll call was answered by reading a verse of scripture from Hebrows, chapter eleven and this took the place of a reading lesson. Among the items of business discussed was a chicken supper to be held at Hazzard's on the evening of Friday, November 21st. Committees were appointed to take care of the canvassing for baking and also the program. Mrs. Daniel Gunsolus read a paper on "Using a Mite Box" which pointed out that every person had much to be thankful for and that a little watchfulness would soon prove this. Mrs. William Blair gave a synopsis of the chapter in the Study Book, "Jerusalem to Jerusalem," outlinging the unfinished task of the church and presenting the great need of Foreign Missionary work. The hymns used were, "We've a story to tell to the nations" and "The Whole Wide World for Jesus." The Rev. J. F. Everson said the benediction.

HASTINGS LODGE IS HOST TO VISITORS

Entertain Brother Masons From Different Points—Moving Pictures Shown.

CAMPBELLFORD, November 11 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — A very pleasant function was held on Friday evening when the Hastings Lodge, No. 633, A.F. and A.M. G.R.C., were hosts to visitors from Keene, Lakefield, Campbellofrd, Norwood, and Peterborough.

After the regular session of lodge, a splendid lunch was served to the visitors by the Hastings brethren. The feature of the evening's entertainment was a series of moving pictures presented by Wor. Bro. N. D. Buchanan of Peterborough. The views, which were ably explained by the visiting brother, were taken by him while on a trip to the East Indian Islands. Presented in the form of a travelogue, they showed the customs of that portion of the world with portraits of the lives of the peoples and the different occupations in which they were engaged.

With Wor. Bro. W. R. Learmouth in the chair, a few of the visitors brought greetings from their mother lodges. The speakers were Wor Bro P. Gillespie of Keene, Bro. Rev. F Battisby, Hastings, Bro. T. J. Craighead, Campbellford, Wor. Bro. Gillespie, Peterborough, Wor. Bro C. P. Doughty, Hastings, and Bros. C. Gillespie and E. H. Curle of Hastings.

LIFFORD LINE

Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Vance of Millbrook were recent visitors at the home of their cousin, Mrs. John Kerr, Eighth Line.

Preparatory service was held in the Ballyduff Presbyterian Church on Friday evening previous to the Sacramental service on Sunday afternoon. The Ladies' Aid in connection with the church met at the home of Mrs. William Clarke last week and discussed ways and means of adding to the treasury for the purpose of improvement of church property.

Schools in this locality closed on Friday evening until after the Thanksgiving holiday, the teachers going to their respective homes.

A striking feature of the shooting match held at Charles Staples last week was the fact that Mr. Neil Gray a resident of Lindsay who is seventy-three years of age was successful in securing two out of nine ducks without the assistance of eye glasses.

Mr. Archie Staples was a visitor to Toronto this week and brought home his son Nelson who was a victim of infantile paralysis and is gradually improving although his left arm is still paralysed from the elbow to the shoulder.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Staples were visitors at Millbrook on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Offa and Thomas Staples motored to Lindsay on Friday.

Fenella

Among those from this district who have gone to the North Country are Howard Macklin, Jamer Waldie and Arthur Murphy.

Miss Letty Gibbs, of Hamilton, is visiting over the week-end and holiday with her friend, Mrs. John Lonsberry.

Mrs. James Waldie is visiting friends at Trent Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Leach and Mr. and Mrs. Saul Leach entertained a number of their friends to cards and dancing on Friday evening.

Miss Gertrude Knox, of Toronto University, and Miss Ruth Knox, of Peterborough Normal School, are with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Knox, for the week-end and holiday.

The Misses Nellie, Laura and Betty Montgomery, of Bowmanville, Cobourg and Millbrook, respectively, and R. P. Montgomery, of Toronto, are home with their mother, Mrs. C. Montgomery, and brother, Bill Montgomery, for Thanksgiving.

The Misses Donna Talling and Ruth McFiggin, of Cobourg C. I., are home for the week-end and holiday.

The Officers, Samaritans and Degree Team of Cyzicus Sanctorum No. 24, A.M.O.S., arrived home safely last evening from Ottawa at 7 o'clock, after a most enjoyable trek. Sheik Ness, S.D.S. Monarchos, was the life of the party from the time of leaving here until the arrival back, and left for his home in Toronto this morning by C.P.R. The officers and members reporting at Ottawa were: Sheik D. T. McIntyre, Gd. Monarch; Vice Gd. Mon. A. . Mowry; Sheik W. F. Green, Registrar; Sheik E. Norman, Banker; Sheik G. J. Wyatt, Ven. Friar; Sheik F. J. Batten, Gd Director; and Samaritans J. Trennum, H. B. McFee, L. T. Parker, J. C. Thompson, J. Rogow, R. Bates, A. J. Duncan, B. M. Frederick, F. Biddle, Sr., F. N. Biddle, H. Robertson, R. S. Dutton.

The members composing the A.M.O.S. orchestra were: R. F. Dyer, Walter Hughes, J. W. Boorman, C. Russeau, S. J. Rowe, E. McLaren, the splendid music they provided being greatly enjoyed by all, and they were highly complimented by the 'Gotno' members, and all present. Samaritan Sam Thomson was on hand with the bagpipes, and his music was always in demand, where opportunity offered.

Samaritan Vick White's services as patrol officer on the trek, was much appreciated by all, and led the Caravan right through Ottawa and back, and he was joined here by Patrol Officer Ted Hornick, who carried through as far as Cobourg with the party.

Mr. Sam J. Calladine was the courteous driver on the "Miss Kawartha" bus of our "Transportation Company" and was voted by all the right man in the right place.

The Peterborough Samaritans are all in accord with the very kind hospitality extended to them by the officers and members of Gotno Sanctorum No. 3, from the time they arrived there until they reached the limits of Ottawa city on the homeward trek, and a visit here from No. 3 in the near future is hoped to be the result. "We never sleep," but "always eat."

Of course all you readers know how delicious and wholesome baked apples are.

• • • • • • •

There are a number of ways of baking apples, so I am giving you a few today.

• • • • • • •

Sometimes the apples when baked have a shriveled appearance and this is what must be avoided so I am going to tell you how to bake them and not that appearance.

• • • • • • •

There are ways of avoiding the "cooked" look, but many persons prefer the flavor of the apples encased on the deep colored "cooked" skin, and find the skin itself tasty.

• • • • • • •

The first matter of importance is to have apples that will bake as you like them. Do not expect to have the apples come out to perfection, unless fine large apples have been used.

• • • • • • •

The texture of different apples varies and is largely responsible for the shape, as well as the texture of the baked fruit. Sweet apples keep their shape best.

• • • • • • •

The variety known as Tolman Sweets or Tolman Sweetings remains firm regardless of the length of time they are in the oven. Most varieties especially the tart apples, will get soft and mushy if over-baked.

• • • • • • •

There are few if any kind of apples, that excel greenings as cooking apples. Baldwins are perhaps next best, but each kind has special qualities and it is well to try different ones and find out what your family likes best.

• • • • • • •

Apples that are steam-baked will have skins more tender than those baked uncovered. The fruit will not be shriveled and the pulp will be firm, unless the apples are in the oven too long.

• • • • • • •

The length of time needed to bake the fruit perfectly depends entirely upon the size of the apples, the temperature of the oven and the variety of the fruit.

• • • • • • •

Small Baldwins, if cored and baked in a hot oven, may take but 20 minutes, while extra large Tolman Sweets or Greenings in a slow oven may require 50 or 60 minutes.

• • • • • • •

By pricking the apples with a two-tined fork or a sharp metal skewer it is easy to know when they are tender, and should be taken out immediately.

• • • • • • •

The simplest recipe for baked apples is as follows: Select ripe apples of approximately the same size, wash and core them with an apple corer.

• • • • • • •

Place in a shallow baking dish and fill centres with granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons being enough for greenings or baldwins. No sugar is used with Tolman Sweets or other sweet apples.

• • • • • • •

To each six apples allow one third of a cup of water. Put in moderate oven and bake until tender. Apples may be basted with sugar and water syrup made of one tablespoon sugar to three quarters of a cup of water.

• • • • • • •

To stam-bake the apples, prepare as above and put in a pudding dish with a cover. Allow one quarter of a cup of water to six apples. Cover and bake in a hot oven until tender.

• • • • • • •

Richer baked apples are made by putting a dot of butter on top of the sugar in the core cavity. By sprinkling cinnamon over the apples, spiced baked apples result. If clove flavor is preferred, stick one clove on opposite sides of an apple before baking.

AUTUMN RAIN

When slow rains fall in Autumn
It is a silver wall
That shuts away the Summer world
Of song and flowers and all.

It is a silver barrier
Between us and the sun,
A barrier no man can scale,
Whose bars fall down for none.

As nearer still around us
The shining waters close,
The earth seems walled in chrysoprase
As fair as Summer's rose.

And as the rain keeps falling
Through hours dim and long
The gleaming raindrops weave us
A pattern of sweet song.

This green and silver rainfall
Shuts Springtime's world away;
But where the hearthfire flickers
Hearts find another May.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D

WHAT ARE ADHESIONS?

Perhaps you or some member of your family has had an operation for appendicitis and, although life is saved, there is still pain or discomfort in the region of the appendix.

Your doctor informs you that likely there are some adhesions.

What is meant by adhesions?

Covering all the abdominal organs, and lining the abdomen itself is a sort of network or apron of tissue which manufactures a juice to enable the organs in the abdomen to rub or roll against one another without friction. You can understand that with a small intestine twenty feet long enclosed in the small space of your abdomen that it must be coiled up pretty well. And so these coils of intestine and the other organs in the abdomen—liver, kidneys pancreas, and so forth—although fastened by tissue to the spinal column, all move freely upon one another owing to this juice manufactured by this apron the covering of which is called the peritoneum.

Now, if something irritates this peritoneum it is called peritonitis, and a sort of roughened surface is formed which "sticks" to the coils of the intestine or the surface of other organs, or coils stick to one another. This "sticking together" is called an adhesion.

It was formerly thought that these adhesions were rather rare, and only followed cases of appendicitis or gall-bladder trouble where there was much pus formation.

As a matter of fact, they are now learning that practically one in every three persons has some adhesions in the abdominal cavity.

What has happened?

There has been some irritation, some slight inflammation in the abdominal cavity, but as the two surfaces stuck together, the inflammation did not spread any farther, no damage was done, and no after symptoms occurred.

Sometimes the adhesions interfere with the proper action of the organs, and the passage of food down the small intestine and of wastes along the large intestine. It is sometimes necessary to have these adhesions broken up by an operation.

However, the point is that about one in three persons have these adhesions, and by the proper care of the bowels—exercise, massage of abdomen, or mild laxatives—they never have any trouble.

Scout News and Notices

FIRST PETERBOROUGH TROOP.

The command "Troop alert" given by Scoutmaster Johnson brought the weekly meeting of the First (St. John's) Peterborough Troop to order. After the usual opening procedure the boys were dismissed for inspection. The inspection showed that practically the whole troop was present.

The patrols were then sent to their corners for a half hours instruction period. Following patrol instruction the boys were called out for a recreational period. The Assistant Scoutmaster took charge of the boys, giving them a few minutes' physical drill. Then the boys were divided into two teams for a game known as a "cock fight." The results of this were too one-sided to be announced.

Camp fire followed, at which the Wolf patrol put on a short skit, which caused a lot of merriment and which showed something of the scouting spirit of obedience. During the camp fire period the A. S. M. conveyed to the boys the best wishes of their former A.S.M., Mr. Reg Howden, who in correspondence with A. S.M. Turner asked to be remembered to the boys.

The Scoutmaster urged the boys to be on hand for the Memorial parade on Sunday at the Armouries at 1.45 p.m.

The meeting then closed with the singing of the song, "When you come to the end of a Boy Scout day," Scout silence, lowering of the flag and "the King."

The boys are urged to be on hand next Friday in full force and on time.

New motion picture theatres are being opened in London at the rate of one a week.

A Hundred Dollars a Month will be paid to you regularly free of any chance of loss for the rest of your life

Do you want a definite, sure income that will come to you even though all other sources of income fail? You can have it.

Picture what a hundred dollars a month would mean to some people you know—the totally disabled, the old unemployed man or woman, the widow struggling along on very small means. Resolve that you will take the simple steps we suggest and provide now against you or yours ever being in such a position.

For most people it is a very difficult task to build up a fund of thousands of dollars in order to provide an income for themselves. It takes years of self-sacrifice.

Why not adopt the modern way and by depositing moderate annual instalments let the Canada Life take over your problem?

We will guarantee you one hundred dollars a month income when you decide to retire at age 50, 55, 60 or 65, or it would be paid to you personally should you become totally disabled at any time or we would start paying it at once to your family if you should die.

Why not find out how it is done? It will mean no obligation on your part.

P.C.I. ONE UP IN NEAL CUP FOOTBALL FINALS

GORD YOUNG'S FORTY YARD RUN FOR SECOND "MAJOR" OF GAME PROVIDES ONE OF THE FEATURES

Garnet and Grey Enters the Second Game of Series With the Quinte Collegians For Possession of Neal Trophy Strong Favorites to Win After Having Won First Decision 12-8.

NEAR RIOT THREATENS PLAY IN ONE QUARTER BUT QUELLED BY THE POLICE IN SHORT ORDER

In one of the hardest fought gridiron combats ever staged at James Stevenson Park, Coach Ernie Legon's Peterborough Collegiate team on Saturday afternoon turned back the Belleville threat in the first game for the Central Ontario Interscholastic O.R.F.U. championship, defeating the Quinte Collegians, western group champs, 12 to 8.

The two teams will continue the struggle for rugby laurels and possession of Dr. Frank Neal's big trophy at Belleville on Wednesday afternoon. On the strength of their performance here the Garnet and Grey squad will enter the second game of the series as favorites, but they will need to be on their mettle to down the Belleville team on their own stamping grounds.

Several things stand out in Saturday's tussle. One is the second touchdown scored by P.C.I. It was a beautiful play and proved again the added thrill dashed into the game by use of the forward or on-side pass. The Petes had just returned from scoring their first major count. The ball had been kicked into their territory. On the second down Richardson was called on to hurl a forward pass. He threw the pigskin a good twenty yards and Gordie Young swooped in and grabbed it in his hands. Sidestepping one tackler, Young ran forty yards for a touchdown.

Dispute Decision

Another memorable incident is the near riot caused by one of the officials' decisions. This decision concerned possession of a fumbled ball and led to Belleville Collegiate's only touchdown. It was in the third quarter and Belleville gained possession on P.C.I.'s 40-yard line, when one of Macdonald's snaps went high. Several Belleville extends made big gains and P.C.I. were backed up to their five-yard line, where they were making a determined stand. On a plunge the Belleville ball carrier let the pigskin slip out of his arms. It bounced in the air and Preston grabbed it. P.C.I. rooters expected the Garnet and Grey would be given possession, but the officials ruled that the ball was dead before the fumble occurred and allowed Belleville to retain possession. On the next down Twiddey vaulted the line for a touchdown.

Led by a few hotheads most of the large crowd immediately swirled onto the field. The officials became the centre of a tightly packed mass of angry fans. The more thoughtful spectators feared that someone might strike the official and a fight commence, which would besmirch Peterborough's name in sport circle. Police and cooler heads prevailed before anything did occur, and the milling crowd, obeying orders, moved back to the sidelines.

Offensively P.C.I. seemed to lack some of the punch displayed in earlier games. Their extends were always too slow in getting away. Some attention will have to be shown the kick formation too, since repeatedly Belleville broke through to block Armstrong's punts.

The winners made most of their gains on line plunges. Armstrong, Clayton, Dinesen, Richardson and Lord hit the heavy Belleville defenders will a will and repeatedly made big gains. Richardson's forwarding passing was another big gainer for P.C.I. and made the game one of the most spectacular on record.

Wagar was the outstanding tackler on the field, turning in a prodigious amount of work. His low tackles repeatedly stopped Belleville's galloping halves. Defensively P.C.I. was far better than their opposition. Along with Wagar, Ward, Macdonald, Dunkerly and Preston were outstanding in halting Belleville's attacks.

Armstrong had a bad day in kicking. He did not get his usual height and distance into his punts, which might have been due to the manner in which Belleville was consistently breaking through on top of him.

For Belleville, Twiddy was the outstanding line plunger. Graves, Byrnes and Champagne, on the half-line, showed speed on their extension runs and Brynes turned in great work on his kicking. The outsides, Maraskas and Scopis, displayed great tackling ability.

The teams:—

Belleville Collegiate. — Snap, H. Morgan; insides, Twiddy and Weese; middles, Smith and Hall; outside, Maraskas and Scopis; quarter, C. Mott; flying wing, St. Denis; halves, Graves, Byrnes and Champagne; subs, McGeary, Rigby, Philips and J. Morgan.

Peterborough Collegiate. — Snap, Macdonald; insides, Waddell and Clayton; middles, Lord and Armstrong; outsides, Ward and Wagar; quarter, Preston; flying wing, Dunkerly; halves, Fraser, Richardson and Young; subs, Breckenbridge, Sloane, Dinesen, Robinson, Mesley and Reynolds.

Referee—Lindsay, of Peterborough; umpire—Ross of Belleville.

Ideal Football Day

The day was ideal for football and one of the largest crowds ever to view the gridiron sport here crossed the bridge. A west wind blew the length of the field throughout the game, giving the team with the wind at their back a material advantage.

Belleville selected to have the wind at the go-off and immediately unloosed a series of end runs that secured them yards three times in succession. Near their own goal post P.C.I.'s defence stiffened and the ball changed hands on Belleville's failure to make yards. However, Armstrong's boot was short and Byrne was able to kick for a rouge.

P.C.I. made their first gains on plunges with Preston and Richardson carrying the ball. After Armstrong's boot, Lord gained P.C.I. possession when he secured the ball on a Belleville fumble. After Dinesen and Richardson had plunged for yards, P.C.I.'s attack stopped when Preston fumbled a snap.

A neat forward pass by Richardson to Wagar at the start of the second quarter gained P.C.I. twenty yards and started them on another plunging advance. Young attempted a drop kick from thirty yards out, but the ball hit the bar and bounced out. Belleville gaining possession. Belleville attempted two forward passes and both were intercepted. Bryne's kick was blocked and P.C.I. gained possession on Belleville's 15-yard line. Preston, Richardson plunged, and then Armstrong carried the ball over for a touchdown.

Immediately after the kick-off Richardson tossed his second forward pass, which Young caught and raced forty yards for a touchdown.

P.C.I. continued to make gains as half-time closed down.

Richardson faked a forward pass for a neat gain to start the third quarter. Armstrong's punt was run back fifteen yards by Champagne to P.C.I.'s 45-yard line. P.C.I. was given a gain when the Belleville outsides failed to give him yards on a catch of Byrne's kick. Armstrong booted to centre, where Belleville lost possession when they were held for three downs. P.C.I. gained ten yards on a cleverly-executed fake snap, which caught Belleville off-side.

The ground was lost, however, when Armstrong's kick was blocked at centre. Graves and Byrnes teamed up for an extend, which gained fifteen yards. Bynes kicked to Young, who was downed one-yard inside the P.C.I. touchline, for a rouge.

Richardson tossed a forward pass to Ward for a fifteen yard advance. Armstrong faked a kick and then raced around the end for a forty-yard gain. When tackled, the ball bounced out of Armstrongs' arm and rolled out over the sideline; Belleville gaining posession. P.C.I. gained possession on Belleville's failure to make yards. Young attempted a drop kick, but it was blocked.

At the start of the fourth quarter Belleville kicked to centre, and regained possession on P.C.I.'s 40-yard line when Macdonald's snap went high. Extends advanced the play to P.C.I.'s five-yard line, when the disputed fumble occurred, Twiddey went over for a touchdown, making the score 10-7.

Young ran Byrne's kick back to Belleville's 35-yard line from where Armstrong lifted a high boot for a rouge.

Belleville plunged for yards and then was forced to kick, Young running the ball back to centre. Lord, Preston and Armstrong plunged for yards and on another trick snap P.C.I. were presented with ten yards. Armstrong was able to boot for another rouge.

Belleville kicked past centre. Armstrong's fake kick was downed for a loss, and Belleville gained possession at centre. Belleville kicked for a rouge as the final whistle blew.

Few Deer Being Shot Across Haliburton

(Examiner Correspondence)

LINDSAY, Nov. 11.—Reports from the northland for the first few days of the hunting season indicate a great scarcity of deer. In sections of Haliburton where deer were quite plentiful last year, there is silence deep, as not a shot has been fired by hunting parties who make annual visits to the northern preserves.

That wolves have been active in the favorite hunting haunts of the north is evidenced by the many bones of devoured deer seen everywhere.

FOOTBALL RACKETEERS FROM LIMESTONE CITY TAKE BLUES FOR RIDE

Varsity Succumbs Before Vigorous Onslaught of the Tri-color.

SCORE 12 TO 5.

Carter Outkicks Sinclair While Gilmore Stars For Queen's.

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—Before the greatest crowd in Canadian football history—more than 20,000—Queen's University scored a notable triumph over University of Toronto at Varsity Stadium on Saturday afternoon, by 12 to 5, and practically obliterated all hope the local collegians had fostered of winning the Intercollegiate senior football championship this fall.

It was a crushing blow the Tricolor dealt the Blue and White and came as a surprise, considering that U. of T. had beaten Queen's in Kingston two weeks previous in similar decisive fashion. Undoubtedly the better team won here, and the victory was deserved. From the first minute of play Queen's dominated the situation, and before the end of the first quarter accumulated such a substantial lead that the spectators realized only a miraculous recovery by the U. of T. players could stave off defeat. But that rally never came, Queen's outplaying Toronto in almost every department of the game and easily thwarting the desperate measures which the locals resorted to in the final period in a last frantic effort to bring victory to their side.

Loose Play Costly.

Fumbles and loose play behind the wingline contributed to the Blue and White's downfall. Captain Johnny Keith, who returned to the line-up after a one-game lay-off caused by a fractured nose sustained in the game at Kingston, paved the way for Queen's touchdown when he made a poor snap out to Sinclair on the third down while Toronto was backed up on its own goal line. Sinclair had no chance to make the kick, but he attempted to and Queen's recovered the ball which was the Tricolor's in any case. On two or three other occasions, Keith was guilty of poor snapping, being unfortunate to have a bad day in the most important contest of the season.

Jack Sinclair was another Toronto player who did not perform up to the standard he set himself at Kingston. Sinclair worked hard, but for the first time this season his kicking lacked the punch that has earned him a place among the great backfielders of the Canadian gridiron. In the final quarter he was painly in distress and Coach Blackwell took him off the field and replaced him with Hal Richardson. Although they had the wind to aid them in the last period, the locals failed to score a point.

The one bright feature in Toronto's play was the work of the diminutive Billy Bell. He was one of the stars of the game. Had his teammates shown some of the fighting spirit he displayed the result might have been different. He played for 60 minutes; made the outstanding run of the game when he carried the ball 40 yards; stayed on the field after being knocked out by a hard tackle, and gave such an all-round fine performance that he overshadowed his teammates considerably. Hal Richardson, who teamed up with Bell on the rearguard after Jack Sinclair retired, gave an impressive display and helped to "pep" up the team in the final minutes.

AB BOX LEADS BEACHERS TO 18-6 VICTORY

Defeat Tigers' Cubs For Ontario Rugby Football Union Championship.

ENTERS EASTERN FINALS.

Two Teams Left in Running For Interprovincial League Honors.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 11. (CP)—A slender, dark haired youth of scarcely twenty summers, stood on the Varsity stadium gridiron Thanksgiving Day and gave one of the finest demonstrations seen here this season as to how a pigskin should be punted as he led his team, Balmy Beach of the Eastern section, to a smashing 18 to 6 victory over Hamilton Tiger Cubs and the Ontario rugby football union championship.

The punter extraordinary, was Ab. Box, graduate of Malvern Grads, last year's finalists in the Junior O.R.F.U. with St. Thomas, and his splendid kicking, particularly when the Cubs were making their most serious bids for major scores and possible victory, drew admiration from practically every one of the 7,000 odd fans present.

As a result of their well-earned triumph, Balmy Beach qualified for the eastern Canada final. The other finalists will be either the champions of the intercollegiate or the inter-provincial unions. The final will be played here on Nov. 29.

Teams in the other two major unions resume training tonight for next Saturday's struggles which will see the settling of the titles in both cases.

Two Teams in Running

Only two teams remain in the running for the Big Four crown, Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tigers, the latter brushed aside the Montreal A.A.A. threat Saturday, while Argos were keeping in the running by inflicting the sixth straight defeat on the Ottawa Senators, who wound up the season winless. Queen's University, generally accepted as logical winners of the intercollegiate championshipfi after their clean-cut win over University of Toronto last Saturday, resumed light training for final scheduled fixture with McGill University at Kingston.

The Montreal Red Men have been showing marked improvement of late and defeat to the Tricolor would be disastrous at this stage, especially if Varsity should defeat University of Western Ontario at London. Two weeks ago McGill held the clever Varsity team to a tie and last week defeated Western to move up out of the cellar position. These results indicate the Kingston rugbyists will have no easy time in clinching the title.

The Western Mustangs, determined to vacate the cellar, are confident of their ability to hand Varsity the second defeat of the season for the Blue and White students, but the latter seeking to avenge themselves for Saturday's calamity should win and remain in the picture for the college championship right to the finish providing Jack Sinclair's injured knee responds to treatment.

MONTREAL EASY FOR THE TIGERS

Winged Wheelers Crumple Under Fierce Bengal Line Plunges.

FINAL COUNT 29 TO 1.

HAMILTON, Nov. 11.—Tigers went on a rampage here Saturday afternoon and handed the Hughes-coached Winged Wheelers one of the worst drubbings ever administered to a Montreal team. The final score was 29 to 1, the invaders started the counting early in the first quarter when "Huck" Welch kicked the ball for a sixty-five yard journey to the dead line. After that the Bengals just smothered the opposition and on the play should have piled up about fifty points.

Anticipating a keen battle, a large crowd assembled at the historic H.A.A.A. Field and saw a runaway. Right from the start the Bengals tore the Montreal line to shreds and they continued to do so during the rest of the game. In all, they moved the yard sticks 27 times against two such forays by the Wheelers.

Two weeks ago, Montreal held Tigers to a 5 to 5 time at Molsom Stadium. How they ever did not one of those who saw Saturday's avalanche will ever be able to understand. Tigers, however, were on that occasion well nigh on the verge of exhaustion, due to many games and injuries, but they took the rest cure this past week, and it was a well-conditioned fighting band that went into action against the Montrealers.

THREE GAMES TO-NIGHT OPEN NATIONAL HOCKEY CAMPAIGN

Feature is Invasion of Philadelphia By Major League.

MUCH NEW TALENT.

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—A new National Hockey League season, the fifth since the circuit reached its present size, will open this evening, bringing perhaps more changes than any year since the 1926-1927 season.

The first new club since that year, the Philadelphia Quakers, will make its bow in one of the three opening night games. The Quakers, who replaced the Pittsburg Pirates and took over most of the playing talent from that club, open at home against the New York Rangers. At Boston, the Bruins, runners-up for the world championship last spring, meet the revamped New York Americans, and the Montreal Maroons play at Ottawa.

The new Philadelphia team merely brings a change of Benny Leonard's hitherto unprofitable franchise to a new location where Leonard has hopes of producing a championship contender. Cooper Smeaton, former referee-in-chief of the league, has been engaged as manager. Another change is the name of the Detroit club from the Cougars to the more easily pronounced title, the Falcons.

New Material

New players will be seen on nearly every team, as the managers and magnates spent a busy summer rounding up new talent. Most of the outstanding minor league and amateur stars of last season will be seen in new uniforms. A good many of the old familiar faces will be missing, while others have altered their allegiance in off-season trades.

The rule-makers have made fewer changes this year than in recent seasons. The only notable innovation in that line is that of the delayed penalty. The rule makes it impossible for a team to have fewer than four men on the ice. When penalties would reduce a team's man-power below that mark, a substitute is permitted until one or more of the penalised players returns to the ice. The penalties for rough play have been made more severe; notably by the ruling that a player who cuts another about the head, whether intentionally or not, is given a ten-minute penalty.

Of the four teams which do not get into action the first night, Toronto and Detroit start on Thursday, entertaining the Americans and the Rangers, respectively. The Montreal Canadiens open against Ottawa on Saturday and Chicago meets the Rangers Sunday night.

St. Catharines Outplayed By Galt-Preston Squad

GALT, NoNv. 11.—The Galt-Preston Combines had sweet revenge for their defeat of a week ago in St. Catharines, when they applied the kalsomine brush to the visitors, 34 to 0, to make sure of second place to Oshawa. The locals crashed through the St Catharines wingline, and tore around the ends with regularity, while the visitors never once threatened the Galt goal line, and were ably only to gain yards on one or two occasions, Steel and Garibaldi contributed some fine runs for the winners, while Mills and Richmond were the main plungers. The score by periods was: 6-0, 12-0, 17-0, and 34-0.

McGILL SCORES WIN AGAINST WESTERN

Red and White Team Outplays Londoners on Half Line.

MONTREAL, Nov. 11. — McGill University kept themselves out of the cellar position in the Intercollegiate football, and put Western there by defeating the Mustangs 4-1 in the final game of the season here Saturday. The Redmen kicked their way to victory in a game that held little interest, owing to the fact that both teams were out of the running for the Intercollegiate title. All the points were rouges.

BIM STURGEON COVERS GROUND IN FAST TIME

While Harold Stewart, Anchor Man For C.G.E., is Six Seconds Slower.

THANKSGIVING DAY RACES.

Tom Martin and Art Ellis First and Second Respectively in 1½ Mile Junior.

The "Y" team easily won the six-mile relay race which featured the Y.M.C.A.'s program of Thanksgiving Day road races. "Hec" McLeod, first runner on the "Y" team, opened up a big gap over Chamberlain of the C.G.E., and Edward, running for C.D.S.L., and the other runners increased the gap. Harold Stewart, anchor man for the C.G.E., reduced the lead somewhat, however. Stewart is a young runner, who shows great promise.

"Bim" Sturgeon did the 1½ miles in the fastest time of the day, stepping it off in 7 minutes and 56 seconds. Stewart was six seconds slower Tom Martin won the junior 1½-mile handicap, with Art Ellis second. Ted Tice did the distance in the fastest time, but was started from scratch and came in fifth.

Relay.

1. "Y" team—McLeod, Sturgeon, H Tranter, J. Larmer.
2. C.G.E.—Chamberlain, G. Palmer, J. Mitchell, Harold Stewart.
3. C.D.S.L.—D. Edward, J. Lynch, J. Robbins and D. Thompson.

Junior Race.

1, Tom Martin; 2, Art Ellis; 3, Gordon Ellis; 4, Frank Spenceley; 5, Ed. Tice; 6, Art Parnell, 7, Leonard Martin.

CANADIANS WIN MAJOR AWARDS

Cop Honors in Hunt Class at Annual Show in Madison Square Garden.

SIXTH IN MILITARY.

NEW YORK, November 11 (C.P.).—Three Canadian owners of prize-winning horses to-day were possessors of major awards in the class for teams of three hunters from one hunt a feature of yesterday's judging at the annual National Horse Show being held in Madison Square Garden.

Miss Ruth Cowans, of Montreal, with her three champions, Lucifer, ridden by herself, Mountain Top, with Miss Mallory Davis up, and Red Tape with Robert Maxwell in the saddle, gave a faultless exhibition to win first place, and the cup presented by the United Hunts Racing Association.

In the same event R. S. McLaughlin, of Oshawa, Ont., took second place with Shararogue, ridden by Mrs. Eric Phillips, Sligo, with Mrs. Churchill Mann in the saddle, and F. P. O'Connor's Limerick. Lieut.-Col. W. F. Eaton, Oakville, Ont., came through to win fourth prize with Ravenscraig, Rainbow, and Rathlea.

Canada was able to annex sixth place only in the $1,000 international military stake for the Fremount Service Cups. Major R. S. Timmis, Toronto, on Pericles, had half a fault more than Lieut. Baron von Nagel, of the German Army team. Three United States jumpers had perfect scores, while another had half a fault but finished in better time than either Major Timmis or the baron.

Regina Roughriders Eliminate Calgary

CALGARY, Nov. 11. — Regina Roughriders won the senior football championship of the Prairies, defeating Calgary Tigers 9 to 6, and qualified to meet Vancouver Meralomas in the Western Canada final at the coast later this week.

Six thousand spectators saw the powerful Roughriders overcome the sternest opposition they have faced in the West for years. They trailed by a point at half-time, tied the score in the third quarter and won through a dazzling aerial attack in the final 15 minutes.

"The Great" Shires Bows To Dan Cupid

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 11. — Arthur "the Great" Shires chesty first-baseman of the Washington American League Baseball Club, was married to Miss Elizabeth Greenbaum, University of Wisconsin coed, at the County Court House yesterday. Shires is 23 and his bride 18.

"This is just batting practice," Shires told reporters. "There will have to be a church wedding later, although I'd rather face that great pitcher, 'Lefty' Grove that do this over again."

The couple did not reveal where they will spend their honeymoon. Shires is under contract to appear in the movies this winter.

PLAYFORD COPS ONLY HOME RUN

Harrisons Defeat Lakefield in Walk-over to Open Second Schedule.

INDOOR SOFTBALL.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 11. (Examiner Correspondence)—The second half of the softball league got away to a good start on Friday evening last and judging from the results the second half may have some surprises. The hunting season has taken several players from Lakefield and Selwyn but their places were filled with capable material. Richmond pitched a remarkably fine game for Lakefield against Harrisons.

The Canada Cement team was right on its toes and played a splendid game, their batteries were first class and they were given real support. The first game was held up a few minutes while the managers and umpires waged a worldly battle over "Red" Creighton who, having played once with the Sugar Bowl, is now on Harrison's team. Creighton was called into consultation and was warned that "No man can serve two masters" even in softball and after a promise of playing only with Harrisons for the remainder of the season ,the game went on.

The first game, Lakefield vs. Harrisons was a walkover for Harrisons in some respects. There was some brilliant individual play among Lakefield's players but Harrison's team play was superior. Playford in the fourth scored the only home run of the game in the fourth. R. C. Chittick at the plate and W. Eliott at bases spent an exceedingly busy hour and a half.

The line-up was as follows:

Lakefield		Harrisons
Richmond	pitcher	Sturgeon
Payne	catcher	Haas
Stabler	1st base	Playford
Hamblin	2nd base	Creighton
Gibson	3rd base	Dorrington
Kyle	short stop	Smith
Langley	short stop	Wilshaw
Lancaster	field	Vinnett
Lawless	field	Corbett

The score by innings was:

Lakefield ..... 0 1 0 0 1 0 3— 5
Harrisons ..... 1 2 2 4 2 0 x—11

Win From Selwyn

The second game saw the Canada Cement step out and leave Selwyn with the short end of a 19-7 score. Selwyn played a good game but Shearer was missed, also Max Wilson who arrived near the end of the game, owing to unavoidable delay.

N. W. Kyle at the plate and R. C. Chittick at base filled acceptably the role of umpires. The Canada Cement batteries, which are first class, had better team support than they had all season and the result was a real game. Louis Sabatino in the third, scored the only home run.

The line-up was as follows:

Selwyn		Canada Cement
FitzGerald	pitcher	F. Elliott
Nicholls	catcher	H. White
Graham	1st base	Wannamaker
D. White	2nd base	Morin
A. Wilson	3rd base	J. Sabatino
H. Olver	short stop	L. Sabatino
R. Elliott	short stop	Mott
W. Elliott	field	Abrams
C. McIlmoyl	field	Junkin
M. Wilson	sub

Score by innings:

Selwyn ..... 0 0 1 2 0 0 3— 6
Canada Cement .. 3 0 2 3 1 2 8—19

On Tuesday evening, November 11, Yakefield plays the Canada Cement and Sugar Bowl plays Selwyn.

CHOCOLATE TO BOX FOR WORLD'S TITLE

Cuban Meets Battalino in New York City on December 12.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Bat Battalino of Hartford, Conn., will defend his world's featherweight championship against Kid Chocolate, Cuban flash, in a 15 round bout in Madison Square Garden December 12. The bout will top the card for the New York Americans' annual Christmas fund show.

Battalino has held the 126-pound title since September, 1929, when he outpinted the champion, Andre Routis. Chocolate long has been rated as an outstanding challenger for the crown, but suffered a serious defeat at the hands of Fidel LaBarba in his last start.

The Garden announced that LaBarba has been signed to meet Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., body puncher, in a ten-rounder at the Garden Nov. 21.

Oshawa Wins Group With Unbeaten String

OSHAWA, Nov. 11—After threatening the Blue Devils with defeat when they took a 3-point lead in the third quarter, the Galt-Preston combines were humbled when the locals scored two touhcdowns in the last quarter, and came out on top of a 15-6 score at the Motor City Stadium here yesterday. The game, which attracted the largest crowd to attend an intermediate football fixture here this season, was the last scheduled contest in the local group. Oshawa are undisputed champions of the group, having won every one of their scheduled starts this season. They now go into the playoffs for the Ontario championship.

MAROONS HAVE SIGNED STRONG DEFENCE LINE

Last Year's Allan Cup Winners and Lionel Conacher Present Formidable Array.

MUNRO MAY TAKE ICE.

Stewart, Siebert and Hooley Smith Will Make Up First Forward Line.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 11 (C.P.)—Having signed intact one of the finest amateur hockey teams that Canada has produced in years, Montreal Maroons of the National hockey league are prepared to throw a brilliant array of talent against other teams in the league during this season. A team that was already strong, having headed the Canadian section last year only to lose to Boston Bruins in the first play-off series, has been strengthened by the addition of Dave Kerr, goaler; Johnny Gallagher, defence; Paul Haynes and Huggins, centres, and Desse and Earl Roche, wingmen, of last year's Allan Cup winners. The Montreal Amateur Athletic Association.

Maroons have also secured Lionel Conacher, a defence player of vast experience and almost as great size, to steady up its young rearguard. The defence of last year is gone. Clint Benedict, in goal, has eventually left the league which he helped make great and will be with Windsor of the International League. Dunc Munro is now manager instead of playing defence; George Boucher, who broke a leg last spring, will act as coach, and Red Dutton is with the New York Americans. However, the club's present defensive strength looks powerful with Kerr and Flat Walsh available for goal; Conacher, Gallagher and McVicar formerly of Providence, as new material, and Archie Wilcox of last year's squad. Also available for the job are Munro, who may get into the game occasionally, and Bill Phillips, who has been a forward but is breaking into the rearguard work.

On the front rank few teams look as strong as do Maroons. Three able forward lines will be available to relieve each other. First in the rugged, hard-hitting combination of Stewart, Siebert and Hooley Smith, all veterans and all poison around the goal. The newcomer, Huggins, flanked by Dave Trottier and Jimmy Ward, will act as the second line and the third will be Paul Haynes and Roche Brothers.

SARNIA WANDERERS WIN GROUP HONORS

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 11. — The Wanderers intermediate football squad defeated St. Thomas 2 to 0 in a closely contested play-off at Petrolia yesterday afternoon to win the group championship and qualify to meet the Petrolia entry at a date to be set by Ontario Union officials. The two teams in the Thanksgiving feature threw the heaviest material into the fray and both squads emerged with only minor injuries. McPhedran's toe outclassed the punting of Harry Medcalf of the Saints. The Sarnia punter booted across two rouges, Udell the fleet-footed visiting half being downed on both occasions for the single count.

Famous Cricketer Succumbs In England

LONDON, Nov. 11. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—England lost one of its outstanding cricketers through the death to-day from blood poisoning of William Wilfred Whysall, the Nottinghamshire professional.

Whysall has been a star player for over twenty years and has played for England against Australia. He was a first class bat and a good wicket-keeper. He joined Nottinghamshire in 1910. He was a member of the English team which visited Australia in 1924 and in test matche made scores of 76 at Melbourne and 75 at Adelaide. He played for England in the series last summer when Australia won the "ashes." Whysall used to go in first wicket with George Gunn and was a fine foil to that batsman's daring. In one season Whysall made centuries in four successive matches.

Whysall was born at Woodborough, near Nottingham, in 1887 and was thus 43 years of age.

AERIAL ATTACKS COP 9 TO 1 WIN FOR SCULLERS

Turville Kicks All Argos' Points in Three Periods.

PLAY IS STRONG.

Argonaut Juniors Defeat McCormick to Advance Into Ontario Playdowns.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—With a brilliant kicking display that saw him boot every one of his team's point, Captain Frank Turville Saturday led the Toronto Argonauts to a 9-1 triumph over Ottawa Senators at Lansdone Park. Six rouges and a placement goal made up the Oarsmen's total, and each point was made by the foot of the backfielder, who last week was awarded the Jeff Russell Memorial Trophy, as being of the greatset value to his team.

It was the final Big Four game of the local season, and saw the home team close out their scheduled engagements for 1930 without scoring a victory. Six straight defeats are chalked down on the records against the Ottawa team, and although they made a gallant effort Saturday to register one triumph they were unsuccessful.

Turville carried the scullers to victory, just as he did here a year ago when the Trontonians handed the locals and 8-0 trimming in the opening game of the season. Along the wing lines there was little to choose between the teams, and it was a hard-fought battle the front ranks waged. Through the backfield they took turns in garnering honors, and several good gains were recorded by both teams during the course of the game. In the kicking department the visitors were supreme. Turville and Armour Munro were more than a match for the trio of Ottawa kickers who shared the punting duties.

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—Argonaut Juniors advanced another step toward the Ontario playdowns by scoring a decisive 16 to 1 victory over McCormick juniors in a football game played at Hampden Park.

The Scullers showed a decided superiority over their opponents in practically every department of the game. Their line was much more effective in plunging, while the work of Bell, Taylor and Chalkley on the backfield, eclipsed that of Sinclair, McBeth and Coutts on the enemy's rear-guard.

Bowling Alley Gossip

By Pin Boy

The A.Y.P.A. bowling league blossomed forth for the first time this season on Friday night, when eight teams bumped the maple at the Duffus alleys, in a skillful exhibition of pin toppling.

TWO GAME VICTORS

The Maroons polished off the Tigers in a three-game duel, winning two games, although G. Bell for the latter gave his opponents a mark to shoot at when he spilled 258 pins in a single game. Herb. Lee was the key man for the winners, with a 246 single.

H. Lundy gave a brilliant display of pin bouncing when he knocked off 261, 229, 249, for a triple of 739 to set a league record which resulted in a 2-game win for his team, the Maple Leafs, over the Senators. C. Horn collected 237 to take high single on the losing team.

The Canadians trundled their way to a decisive win over the luckless Rangers who failed to annex a single point, due partly to the fact that they were forced to score a dummy. W. Hill chalked up 283 pins in a single game for the victors to set a league record which should stand for some time. A. Watkins furnished the sharpshooting for the Rangers with a 243 single.

K. OF C. ALLEYS

A barrage of scores that were exceptionally outstanding was a feature of the bowling at the K. of C. alleys in the Wednesday Night League last week. Harry Rudkins scored 217, 264 and 276 for a total of 757 and A. Delahaye made 248, 210 and 258 for a triple of 716 to pave the way for an 8-point victory by Primeau's team over Hickey's crew.

Kelbrick's team whitewashed the Condon aggregation, to add 8 points to their already high total. Sweetman with 240 and Kelbrick with 292 were the high men.

Donaghue's stalwarts had little trouble disposing of the Kylie team, who, with the exception of the captain, were away off their usual form. Kylie hit 229, 220, 283 for a nice triple. R. Lewis topped the 300 mark to score 304, the third 300 score made this season in the K. of C. leagues. A. Cox made 216, 267, 261, and L. James scored 267, 265 to carry the issue in favor of the Donaghue side.

Shaughnessy and Pepe made the league fracas a sociable duel when they divided eight points equally. T. Cupoli picked off 269, 193, 229, for the latter to maintain his high standard while McDonald kept the Shaughnessy team in the running with the following totals, 260, 212, 161.

GOOD PROGRAM AT MEETING

River Valley Women's Institute Visits Stirling Members.

MUSICAL NUMBERS.

STIRLING, Nov. 11.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—River Valley Institute visited Stirling on Thursday evening and gave the program. Mrs. Mary Vandervoort, district secretary, gave a short address. Mrs. Lansing gave a splendid paper on "Cheerfulness." She emphasized the difference between 'cheerfulness' and 'mirth,' the one being a 'habit' of the mind, the other the 'impulse' of a moment's duration. One as 'daylight,' the other as 'lightning.'

A duet was then given by Mrs. A. Pyear and Mrs. Earl Morrow, "When It's Moonlight on the Colorado." They were accompanied by Mrs. N. Rosebush. Mrs. Hannah gave a reading, "Home," by Edgar Guest. Mrs. J. Chambers then sang "At the End of a Cobblestone Road," accompanied by Mrs. A. Lansing.

Mrs. Roy Bush gave a talk on "Thanksgiving," its origin and meaning. A piano duet was well given by Mrs. Norman Rosebush and Mrs. A. Pyear.

Lunch was served and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

A BEDTIME STORY

by Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY HELPS FLOPPY.

Not many years ago, in a time when apples were so ripe that they fell off the trees all ready to eat, there was a farmer man who had a nice orchard. In his orchard were many apple trees, some with red fruit, some with yellow and some with brown.

"Now," said the farmer man to himself one day as he walked about his orchard and saw his many apples, "I must do something to keep the boys, pigs and goats out of my apple orchard. For they will be sure to come and take away my fruit unless I do something."

So the farmer built a high, tight fence around his apple trees, thinking in this way to keep out the boys, the pigs and the goats that might take his fruit.

"For," said the farmer man, "I don't know which is worse, the boys, the pigs or the goats. For the matter of that a boy will eat almost as many apples as a pig and a boy can jump over a fence, or break through it almost as well as a goat. But I think my apples are safe."

"I can't get out!" squealed Floppy.

Now it happened that Curly and Floppy Twistytail, the two pig boys, lived not far from this farmer man's apple orchard. And when the apples were so ripe they fell ker plunk off the tree, Curly and Floppy smelled them and Curly said:

"Let's go get some apples. The farmer man has so many he will not mind if we peck up a few off the ground."

"All right," grunted Floppy. So they waddled over to the orchard one afternoon when they were out of school. The last time they had seen the orchard was when the apples on the trees were green. Then there was no fence built around the orchard. But now, when the pig boys saw the high boards Floppy said:

"Oh, we can never get any nice, ripe apples now."

"Too bad," grunted his brother. "But maybe if we wait long enough," he went on, "the wind will blow some apples over the fence to us."

"It would take a very hard wind to blow apples over the fence," grunted Floppy. None of the trees is near the high board. I know a better way than that."

"How?" asked Curly.

"Let's go look for a hole in the fence," suggested Floppy. If we find one I can crawl through it and throw some apples out to you."

"Oh, that will be fine!" cried Curly. "And while you're inside you can eat as many apples as you want."

"Yes," agreed Floppy. "I guess the farmer man won't care if we only take the old apples that fall to the ground."

"And that - the only kind we'll take," added Curly. "Come on, now, let's go look for a hole."

The piggie boys walked around and around the high, tight board fence that was built to keep boys, pigs and goats out of the farmer man's apple orchard. After a while Floppy saw a place where the dirt was dug away from a bottom board, leaving a small hole beneath it.

"I think I can crawl in there easily enough," he grunted. "Once I get inside I'll eat a lot of apples and chuck some out to you."

"Chuck me a lot," begged Curly.

With his strong, rubbery nose, which was as good for digging as the paws of a rabbit, Floppy made the hole beneath the fence larger so he could wiggle in. Soon he was inside the orchard.

"Any apples?" called Curly from outside the fence.

"Plenty!" answered his brother. "Here! Catch these!" Floppy threw many apples over the fence. His brother ate them and Floppy ate many more apples that he picked up off the ground in the orchard. Then Floppy rolled some apples out through the hole to his brother and said they would be time for their mother to make into applesauce.

"You'd better come out now!" grunted Curly. "I think I hear somebody coming. Maybe it's the farmer man."

"I'm coming!" grunted Floppy. He tried to crawl back through the hole under the fence, but he could only get his head out.

"Come on! Come on! Hurry!" yelled Curly.

"I can't! I can't get out!" squealed Floppy.

"Why not?" asked his brother.

"Because," squealed Floppy, "I ate so many apples that I'm fatter than ever and I'm stuck in this hole! Oh, what am I going to do?"

"You got to get out! Somebody is coming!" yelled Curly. "Push with your hind feet and I'll pull and maybe you'll get out." So the piggie boys pulled and pushed but poor Floppy was stuck fast in the hole. He might have been stuck there yet if Uncle Wiggily had not happened to hop along just then. It was Uncle Wiggily whom Curly heard coming.

"Oh, please help me out of this hole!" begged Floppy.

"All right, I will," said Uncle Wiggily. With his paws he dug some dirt away from around fat Floppy who then could wiggle out all right.

"After this," said the rabbit gentleman, "don't be such an apple pig!"

"I won't," promised Floppy.

"O Fairest Flower! No Sooner Blown but Blasted!"

GOOD MUSIC in our country has grown to a glorious blossoming. American orchestras, American musicians now rank with the finest in the world. Shall we continue to nurture and cherish this beautiful flower, or shall we let it dwindle and die under blighting Canned Music poured out by mechanical Robots?

Which do you prefer for the money you pay at the theatre box office? The stirring performance of Living Music played and felt by fresh and blood musicians, or a strident din from the throat of a piece of machinery? Shall it be glamour or clamor?

Millions of men and women who love real music are demanding that it shall not be blighted . . . demanding that they shall not be deprived of enjoyment to which they're entitled. These millions are giving force to their demands by enrolling in the Music Defense League. You can swell this chorus of protest by mailing this coupon today. Do it!

Efficiency League Hears Aviation Talk

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 11.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The regular meeting of the Efficiency League was held Friday night at the United Church. Milton Hawley had charge of the meeting. The meeting opened with the singing of hymn "More Love to Thee," followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Archer. Hymn "There's a Royal Banner Given for Display." The Beatitudes were read in concert. Hymn, "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old."

Milton Hawley gave a short talk on aviation.

Rev. Mr. Archer gave brief addresses on the following: Joseph Scriver, author of the hymn "What a Friend We Have in Jesus"; Frances Ridley Hauergal, who wrote "Take My Life and Let It Be"; Charles Wesley, who wrote "Jesus Lover of My Soul"; and H. G. S. Spafford, who wrote "When Peace Like a River."

The meeting closed by all repeating the Mizpah benediction.

IN POLICE COURT

Two minutes of silence—in memory of those who died in Flanders' Fields—were observed in Police Court this morning. The big clock atop the market square chimed eleven and Magistrate Langley requested two minutes' silence. The railbirds, many of whom had served overseas but have fallen into hard luck during the present depression, sat with bowed heads, while the clock on the wall tick-tocked the 120 seconds.

The silence over, the court machinery began again to grind and Tom Flannery, who pleaded guilty to being intoxicated on Sunday in a public place and who also said guilty to trying to use another's permit to secure liquor, was sentenced to pay $50 or one month on the first charge and three months straight on the second. He was charged as a second offender under the L.C.A.

An Irish boy pleaded guilty to being drunk on Charlotte street. He was given the usual option of $10 or ten days, and was forced to take jail.

BRENNAN COMPANY STARTS WEDNESDAY

Work on New Highway is Scheduled to Start Aid to City Workmen.

The Brennan Construction Company of Hamilton, contractors for the construction of the "block road" section of the new highway east of Peterboro, will begin work Wednesday morning, according to local information to-day. As part of this road is within the suburban area and the city will have to pay its prescribed share of the cost, it is expected that city workmen will participate in the employment which the new job will generally afford.

This applies particularly to a number of teamsters who are out of work at present and who have been looking forward to the building of this road as an opportunity for them. It is expected that modern machinery will be used to a large extent by the contractors, but on the other hand the teamsters expect that their horses might be used to advantage on several long swampy stretches of the suburban link of the new highway. Local labor has been hoping that their claims to generous consideration will be recognized by the contractors in their engagement of men for this job. At the same time if recommendations by T. P. Lancaster, M.P.P., of Havelock, are permissible, it is thought that he will appreciate the local viewpoint.

GRAND PATRIARCH IS COMING TO CITY

Hiawatha Encampment is Planning Important Program Wednesday Night.

Hiawatha Encampment, No. 66, which is a composite part of the local Independent Order of Odd Fellows have made plans which point to a red letter night within their fraternal circle. The Grand Patriarch of the Order will pay his first official visit to Peterborough tomorrow evening, when a class of candidates will be admitted to membership. Jewels will be presented to a number of Past District Deputy Grand Patriarchs of the Encampment of this district who are members of Hiawatha Encampment, as tokens of appreciation for the good work accomplished during their respective terms of office.

A very large attendance of members of this splendid branch of Odd Fellowship is expected to be present to do honor to both the recipients of these beautiful jewels and Grand Patriarch Moore, who will no doubt have some very interesting and valuable remarks to impart to those present.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN No. 49 'Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

In a moment Tarzan's head was above the edge of the shaft. The court was empty. The inhabitants of Opar were viewing the sacrifice. He heard the voice of La from the near-by sacrificial court. The dance had ceased. It must be almost time for the knife to fall! But even as he thought this, he was running rapidly toward the sound of the high priestess's voice.

Fate guided him to the very doorway of the great roofless chamber. Between him and the altar was the long rows of priests and priestesses, awaiting with their golden cups the spilling of the warm blood of their victim. La's hand was descending slowly toward the bosom of the frail, quiet figure that lay stretched upon the hard stone.

Tarzan gave a gasp that was almost a sob as he recognized the features of the woman he loved. And then the scar upon his forehead turned to a flaming band of scarlet, a red mist floated before his eyes, and, with the awful roar of the bull ape gone mad, he sprang like a huge lion into the midst of the votaries.

Seizing a cudgel from the nearest priest, he laid about him a veritable demon as he forged his rapid way toward the altar. The hand of La had paused at the first sign of interruption. When she saw who was the author of it, she went white. For she had never been able to fathom the secret of this strange man's escape from the dungeon in which she had locked him.

La had never intended that Tarzan should leave her city, for she had looked upon his giant frame and handsome face with the eyes of a woman and not those of a priestess. She felt quite sure he would be satisfied to remain and be her husband rather than return to the sacrificial altar. And now he had come back—materialized from thin air.

And he was killing her priests as though they had been sheep. For the moment she forgot her victim, and before she could gather her wits together again, the huge white man was standing before her, the woman who had lain upon the altar in his arms. "One side, La," he cried, "you saved me once so I would not harm you; but do not interfere, or I shall kill you also."

As he spoke he stepped past her toward the entrance to the subterranean vaults. "Who is she?" asked the high priestess, pointing to the unconscious woman. "She is mine," said Tarzan of the Apes. For a moment the girl of Opar stood wide-eyed and staring. Then a look of hopeless misery suffused her eyes—tears welled into them, and she gave a little cry

As she sank to the cold floor, a swarm of frightful men dashed past her to leap upon the ape-man. But Tarzan of the Apes was not there when they reached out to seize him. With a light bound he had disappeared into the passage leading to the pits below. The men of Opar laughed and jabbered together, for they thought there was no exit from the pits.

TWO WEEK-END CALLS

While attending a chimney fire at 535 Aylmer street on Sunday morning, firemen received an urgent summons to 537 Harvey street, where a Sunday dinner was in danger of destruction. It is not known whether they salvaged the joint of meat, but they certainly prevented the fire from assuming serious proportions. These were the only two calls received over the long week-end.

Opera House Filled For Annual Concert

As a fitting conclusion to the Armistice anniversary services conducted under the auspices of the local post of the Canadian Legion, a band concert was given in the Grand Opera House on Sunday evening by the Peterborough Ranger's Band under Lieut. W. Peryer.

The auditorium was filled to capacity, and the large audience showed their appreciation in a very tangible form, donating to the Band Fund through the collection the sum of $77. Lieut. Peryer announced that this was the largest collection on such an occasion during the past seven years.

The program was bright and enjoyable and was considerably enhanced by the inclusion of two soloists, Miss Bertha Hill and Bandsman W. Greaves, who were accompanied by Martin B. Chenhall.

Captain James Abraham, president of the Legion, occupied the chair.

WEDDING BELLS

HULL—GOLLOP

A quiet wedding took place on Saturday morning, November 8th, when Ethel Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Gollop, 98 Spruce Hill Road, Toronto, was carried to Mr. Leonard Franklin Hull, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hull of Strathroy. The Rev. Peter Webster, pastor of Yonge Street United Church, officiated. The attendants were Mrs. R. B. Bowen, Peterborough, and Mr. Jack Gollop, brother of the bride. On their return from a trip to Pittsburg and Detroit, they will reside at 105 Kenwood Avenue, Toronto.

RALPH—WALDRON

At eight o'clock this morning, at the Church of the Sacred Heart, the wedding was solemnized by the Rev. J. J. O'Brien, of Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Waldron, to Harold Ralph, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ralph of East City, and popular baseball player, a member of the East Peterborough League.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the Wedding March played by the organist, J. Armstrong. She wore a lovely gown of brown transparent velvet with brown velvet hat and slippers and hose to match. She wore an amber pendant and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaid, Miss Genevieve Gilbert, was in rose beige, with a hat of French beige and matching shoes and hose. She carried a bouquet of rose carnations.

Howard Ralph acted as best man for his brother.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served to thirty-five of the immediate relatives and friends of the bridal party, at the home of the bride at 214 Lock street. A program of dancing and cards followed.

Mr. Ralph and his bride left on the afternoon train for Toronto and Niagara Falls, the latter travelling in a gown of black silk crepe in cape style, embroidered in white, with a black velvet hat trimmed with white and a seal coat collared with muskrat.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph will reside on Park street.

BLAIR—GLEED

A lovely autumn wedding was solemnized in All Saints' church on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 8th at one o'clock by the Rev. J. D. Paterson, when Violet Bessie, only daughter of Mrs. S Gleed, 553 Patterson street, was united in marriage to Robert Blair, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Blair of 27 Lafayette avenue.

The bride, looking very attractive in a midnight blue Celanese frock daintily trimmed with bronze satin with hat, shoes, hose and gloves to match, carried yellow 'mums and entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus played by Miss Dorothy Worby. The bridesmaid, Miss Marjorie Simms was prettily attired in a maize canton crepe dress with black hat and shoes and carried mauve mums. Mr. J. Blair, brother of the groom, acted as best man, and Mr. J. Young as usher. During the signing of the register the organist played "Meditation" and Mendelsohn's "Wedding March" as the bride and groom left the church. A reception for about forty guests was held at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. C. Hayward, 564 Albert street, where decorations were carried out in pink and white.

Mrs. Gleed, wearing a pretty black satin faced crepe dress trimmed with beige net and a corsage bouquet of red roses received at the house assisted by the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Blair, who wore a smart black satin dress and a corsage bouquet of red roses.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a lovely brown leather purse, to the bridesmaid a silver compact, to the best man a fountain pen, and to the organist a dainty bar pin.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair left on the 3.50 train for a short honeymoon in Toronto. Mrs. Blair travelled in a powder blue Celanese dress with brown coat, hat shoes and gloves.

Many costly and useful presents were received by the young couple.

OBITUARY

MRS. ANDREW GOODFELLOW

The death occurred early this morning of Mrs. Andrew Goodfellow at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Melville Morgan of Park Hill Road, in her 73rd year, following a short illness.

She was the daughter of the late Mr and Mrs Samuel Campbell of Cavan, Ontario and had lived in Ontario all her life.

The late Mrs. Goodfellow was a faithful member of St. Andrew's United Church. She leaves one son Cecil of Owen Sound, two daughters, Mrs. Melville Morgan of Park Hill Road and Mrs. Thomas Medd of Toronto. Her husband predeceased her two years ago. She also leaves three brothers Alexander Campbell of this city, Samuel of Manitoba and Robert of Bewdley also one sister, Mrs. McCall of this city.

The funeral will be held on Thursday from the residence of her daughter at 2 p. m. to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. Chas. V. McLean of St. Andrews Church will officiate at the funeral services.

WILLIAM E. HAYES.

William E. Hayes, ex-service member of the 127th Battalion, who passed away in Christie Street Military Hospital, Toronto, on Friday last at the age of 45 years, was laid to rest on Monday morning, and accorded full Legionary honor by his comrades of the local post of the Canadian Legion.

As the cortege left the family residence, between eighty and one hundred War Veterans fell in at the side of the hearse, in which lay the casket draped with the Union Jack, while a number of them also marched ahead of the cortege.

On arrival at the graveside, where the Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave of St. John's Church officiated, the Veterans each filed past the grave and dropped a poppy on the casket as a last token of grateful remembrance to a man who served his country well in the hour of her need.

The deceased was a native of Woolwich, England, and had resided in this city for twenty-two years. He leaves his wife and two sons, William and Frederick, also two daughters, Hilda and Margaret.

Lieut. W. Peryer sounded the Last Post and Reveille at the graveside. There were numerous floral tributes received, emblematic of the esteem in which deceased was held.

FREDERICK BRIEGEL.

The death took place at noon today of Frederick Briegel at the family residence, 591 Gilmour Street, City, who was a resident of Peterborough for the past fourteen years.

The deceased entered the Canadian Railway mail service at Kitchener, rose to the position of superintendent of railway mail service at Montreal, and retired after fifty-four years of service. After his retirement he became a resident of Peterborough in 1916, and has resided at 591 Gilmour Street, since where in his immediate neighborhood and wherever known he was honored and esteemed.

The deceased was 87 years and 7 months old, and leaves his widow, two daughters and six sons to mourn his loss. The daughters are Miss E. Briegel at home and Mrs. W. G. Balfour of Toronto, while the sons, Edgar, Fred, Herman and Walter, live in Montreal. Clarence in Toronto, and Alfred in Vancouver.

He was a member of Antiquity Lodge A. F. & A. M., Montreal, and was affiliated with St. Andrew's United Church of this city.

Mr. Briegel will be missed by many with whom he made acquaintance through his kindly attitude.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

Look Upon U. S. as Unfriendly Nation and Watch. Every Tourist.

SOCIETY OF EXILES.

(By Priscilla P. Burd. Special to The Examiner. Copyright 1930.)

MOSCOW, Nov. 11 (SNS).—The Society of Political Exiles of Russia is not a large organization, the rule of the survival of the fittest holding good and only the most sturdy of those old Czarist prisoners living to come out to freedom. We were therefore fortunate in finding three members on the train which brought us across Siberia.

The first of these men we met we referred to as The General—an officer in the Soviet army, on the staff of one of the foreign legations. The Russians like to refer to their officers as Comrade-General or Comrade-Major, as the case may be. This man was in his middle forties, perhaps, but his health had been impaired by the hardships through which he had passed, his heart being affected, and when he caught cold on the train it was necessary that he remain in bed for most of the journey. He was a gentle, gracious person with a most winning smile.

This man's forefathers had been officers in the Cossack army for generations but his father had different notions and made of himself a school master. So this man had educational advantages of the best. In a student uprising thirteen students were arrested, six were shot and the other seven sent into exile and our friend was one of the seven. Here he was caught by the World War and was released and brought back to fight in the Czarist army. After the defeat of the White army he went over to the Red army and was accepted and given positions of trust. He, of course, is a member of the Communist party; as are the other two whom we met.

Our second ex-exile acquaintance was of a very different type. Big, blonde and jovial, his father had been a foundry worker and this man had taken up his father's occupation as a boy. Arrested at seventeen and sent into Siberia he had had no education until he was thrown with other political prisoners in the prisons there. He laughed and said that was where he got his education—and why not? The political exiles under the Czar were the best minds of the nation. They taught this boy political science and government. He it was who told us most about the hardships of the prisoners, though they all had much the same experiences. This man was at one time put into a cell with a floor covered with water and with nothing for either bed or chair. Food was poked through the grating at intervals. Later when he had a bed the jailer occasionally entered and if he were not standing at attention he was flogged for being caught lying on his bed. If he were standing when the jailer entered he was flogged for being caught standing. Another time the towel would not be hanging with both ends even, or uneven, as the case might be. The object of course was to wear the men out, to kill them, because the prisons were always overcrowded. Many escaped, however, and this one did. There was an underground system of help like our underground railway of slavery times. They helped him to the railway and he made his way to Moscow. On leaving the train there he knew they would be looking for him so when he saw a group of soldiers he went up to their commanding officer and asked for a light for his cigarette. No officer would expect an escaped exile to ask him for a light, so he was safe. He went to work again in the foundries under another name and continued his revolutionary activities. One day upon returning to his room he found soldiers searching his things so he joined in the search for himself and when they left the quarters came away with them. Eventually he was sent back to Siberia again and was there until the Revolution released him. Now he is an organizer for co-operative factories, stores, banks, etc., over a large area of Siberia. He seems in perfect health and what seemed more nearly impossible to us, was as sweet spirited and gentle as though life had not dealt him so many hard knocks as we knew it had.

The third man was an officer of the G. P. U. (pronounced Gay Pay OO) on his way from the head of the office in an important Siberian post to a promotion in Moscow. He was dark and keen faced and hard bitten—hard boiled if any one ever was that. He was rather skeptical when we told him how little we knew of the G. P. U. and laughed though unconvinced when we added it troubled us not at all. He seemed to feel that all of America knew about the Russian secret police and stood somewhat in awe of it. We asked him if he had his men in America and his answer was, "Of course. And you have yours in Russia." "And you know who they are?" "Again of course." Then we asked how many of the force were detailed to watch us and his reply was, "All of the G. P. U." This man had not come out of his experiences in prison so free from hardness as the others—or else his work now had made him so. Keen he undoubtedly is. Russia has her best men in the G. P. U. as no doubt she needs to have. But there was in this man's attitude what we found in some others, a feeling that America and other countries as well were watching Russia with unfriendly eyes and we found it hard to convince some of them that we were entirely friendly to their plans and much interested in their working them out to a successful conclusion. Certainly no one can go into Russia, see the enthusiasm manifested by all classes of people for the present plan of government, and feel that this enthusiasm will be wasted. To have enlisted the interested efforts of such masses of people in so few years is a very significant thing. In Moscow one sees many strained and worried faces for food is scarce there just now and life is hard. But out in Siberia there is a look of assurance in the faces of the people one sees, particularly in the young faces. Several people said to us, "Russia is a country for the young." It is not so good for the old, perhaps. It is too hard just now. Too many must be sacrificed for the good of the whole.

COMMERCE COUNCIL MEMBERS VISITS NORTHERN ONTARIO

Investigating Industries in Northern Sections of Ontario and Quebec.

COVER WIDE AREA.

The industries of northern Ontario and northern Quebec are mining, forestry, the tourist trade and agriculture. During the first ten days of October nearly one hundred representatives of the Canadian Chamber of Commerve visited Kapuskasing, Cochrane, North Bay, Rouyn, Timmins, Swastika, Iroquois Falls, Abitibi, Cobalt and Sudbury. It was their desire to secure a better knowledge of these industries and a more sympathetic understanding of the aims and ambitions of those who are developing the resources of this northern frontier.

These members of the Chamber of Commerce tramped for miles through the catacombs which have been hewn out of solid rock to gain access to the troves of gold, silver, copper and nickel. In the stopes they listened to the continuous roar of the miners' drills. In the mills, where the rocks were crushed to fine dust before being chemically treated, they studied these great chemical laboratories which recover the treasures from the ore. In both mine and mill they talked with the men whose work, courage and imagination are making these riches available.

Cover Wide Area.

They travelled twenty-two miles back into the woods on a logging railroad and enjoyed a lumberman's dinner in a logging camp, while French-Canadian lumbermen sang the old songs of Quebec. They followed the logs out of the woods into the towns where millions of dollars had been expended in building the stage on which they saw these logs transformed by gargantuan mill stones and chemicals into pulp. The liquid pulp was carried through dozens of drying rollers, each fifteen feet in diameter, at an unbelievable speed, and there was no single intermediate point where these observers could feel certain that the liquid had ceased to be individual particles of pulp and had become the continuity—paper. The long rolls of paper were carried out in the freigh cars and disappeared until they were later seen again on the streets car ying the latest news of Canadian development and progress.

The people of the north country drove these representatives of Canadian industry and trade through many miles of rich agricultural land, and told them that in the future the greatest source of revenue in that country would be neither from the forests nor the mines but from livestock and harvests. Possibly this confidence in the future of agriculture in this area was the most surprising feature of the trip.

The scenery was impressive and the roads were excellent. It was easy to understand that the increase in the inflow of visitors has been so rapid that accomodations have become inadequate. There can be no doubt that this country is destined to become one of the great playgrounds of the world. The completion of the railroad to James Bay will open another important area to visitors where thousands will come to look upon the waters of this mighty inland sea.

In spite of the present low prices for metals, newsprint and agricultural products, there was optimism, courage and enthusiasm throughout this country. The men believe in the future of their land and are confident that the north country will be the stage for developments no less impressive than those which have been taking place in other parts of Canada.

Each of the tours of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce has given the business men of the country as a whole, impressive pictures of the resources and possibilities of some part of Canada. There is no single organization which has done more to encourage the economic unification of the country and none which has done more to promote confidence in the future of Canada.

Bush Fires Cause Trouble In Methuen

LATE FALL FIRES CAUSING WORRY TO FIRE RANGERS

500 Men Are Engaged in Fighting Bush Fire in Apsley District.

800 ACRES BURNED.

Hunters Are Blamed For Many of Fires at This Time of Year.

(Examiner Correspondence)

APSLEY, Nov. 12. — Eight hundred acres of woodland in Methuen township were swept by fire on Monday, and every available man in Apsley and the nearby district was pressed into service to check the outbreak which is believed to have been caused by hunters.

With the closing of the tourist season a few weeks ago, the main force of fire rangers throughout Peterborough and Hastings county was withdrawn, but with the invasion of the hunters fires have broken out in many parts of the district causing a great deal of anxiety and labor to the chief fire rangers who have been kept on duty at several central points, including this village and who have been forced to augment their forces.

Fires On Runways

It is said that hunters have a practice of building fires on the "runways" while watching for deer, and from these sources the sudden and general upflaring of flames in the dry underbrush this week is believed to have spread into a wide menace in several townships.

Mr. Hess, the chief fire ranger for this district, in an interview with the Examiner this morning stated that there were five hundred men engaged in suppressing fires in his area. They were being reported hourly to his department, Monday's list totalling fifteen.

From the lookout tower on Huckleberry Plains Mr. Hess himself observed the smoke of forty spearate fires in the surrounding country, most of them presumably along the deer runways. A few minutes after this morning's interview a big fire in the vicinity of Bottle Lake was reported by telephone to the Apsley Ranger's office.

This is an unprecedented condition at this time of the year. The woods are dry as tinder, due to the fact that there has been no rain nor snow for a month, and in the leaves and underbrush a fire spreads with alarming rapidity.

From the Fire Ranger at Tweed at noon today The Examiner learned that in one area mentioned above twenty-two individual fires were being fought by men who had been enlisted to assist the ranger.

Fire Fighters Wash Soot From Streets

The Fire Department was yesterday afternoon called upon to wash the surface of George street between Brock and Hunter streets. The request came from several of the merchants, into whose stores was being tramped soot, which lay in a heavy coating over the surface of the street. The soot was blown from a chimney on the building at the corner of George and Hunter street, where workmen are busily engaged razing the large mansard roof, on the orders of the Toronto Trust and Loan Company.

The brigade also dealt with a fire at 206 Sherbrooke street, which was not of very serious proportions. Another call was also received from 305 George street, where an oil heater had literally filled a room with heavy black smoke, giving rise to the belief that a fire had broken out.

Double Speakers At Engineers' Meeting

A. L. Killaley, Superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal and Ross L. Dobbin, Manager of Peterborough Utilities Commission, who both went aboard the R-100 at St. Hubert airdrome recently, will give their colleagues of the local branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada a full report of their experiences on that occasion. The lecture will be illustrated by films taken with Mr. Dobbin's Cine' Kodak, and will doubtless arouse a great deal of interest.

The meeting is scheduled to take place in the Paragon Hall at 8 p.m. on Thursday evening.

Premier MacDonald Appears Worn Out

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 12. (CP) Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, when he addressed the Indian round-table conference today after being appointed chairman, spoke slowly and appeared to be making one of the greatest efforts of his career. He seemed rather worn and there were shadows of fatigue about his eyes. Usually he speaks extemporaneously but to-day he read carefully from a manuscript while ripples of applause frequently interrupted him.

AGED RECLUSE SLAYS ENEMY IN PISTOL DUEL

Glare of Blazing Home Attracts Neighbors to Scene of Tragedy.

LITTLE HOPE FOR VICTOR.

Wife 16 Had Divorced Farmer of 70 to Marry Victim of Fatal Scrap.

BALTIMORE, November 12 (C.P.).—The glare of flames early to-day in a Howard County home revealed a fatal duel between Herman Westphal, 70, known to neighbors as a recluse, and Charles Hubble, 40, who had married the young woman who four years ago divorced Westphal.

Hubble, a farm laborer, was found dead, with a bullet in his head. Westphal, farmer and caretaker, had a wound in his left side, and physicians at a hospital here said they had little hope for his recovery.

Enemies for Years.

Police said the two men have been enemies for several years. About four years ago, they were told, Westphal was married to a 16-year-old girl, Gussie Dressler. They lived together only a short time, and she obtained a divorce and married Hubble.

The tragedy came to light with the discovery of the burning home.

Part Of Chinese Wall Found By Explorers

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, November 12 (C.P.). — What appears to be another section of the "Great Wall of China" has been discovered in the Gobi Desert by the Sven Hedin Expedition, its leader informed the newspaper Dagens Nyheter by telegram to-day.

It is in the neighborhood of the River Etsingol, north of Kiara, the message said, and the section is well preserved for a stretch of several hundred yards. Its construction and materials appear to date it in the Han Dynasty.

Peterboro Hunt Club Probably Set Record

Word has just been received from the Peterborough Hunt Club, which is at present hunting in the Pakesley district, that on the first five days out the members had all but two of filling their quota. George Robertson was one of the first members of the club to bag his deer, and he brought down one of the largest bucks shot in that district in years. Dr. Meighen of Ohio has also a fine buck to his credit.

Major Winterbottom Passes Examinations

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 12 (Special to The Examiner).—Lieut.-Colonel R. I. Moore, Victoria and Haliburton Regiment; Major G. G. Winterbottom, M.C., D.C.M., Peterborough Rangers, and Major A. D. Thorne, Durham Regiment, have completed the Militia Staff Course of 1930, and have satisfactorily passed their examinations.

LANDSLIDE KILLS CHILD

FUNCHAL, Madeira Island, Nov. 11 (AP)— A huge boulder toppled from the steep cliffs which border the National Road to-day, burying a child in the landslide and injuring two pedestrians. Several houses at Sarmago were abandoned as cracks appeared in their walls.

PRINCE OF WALES TAKES CONTROLS OF VISITING DO-X

Royal Heir Lauded by Seaplane's Chief Pilot on his Performance.

TOASTS EXCHANGED.

Second Flight Taken that Visitor Might See Monster Rise Off Water.

CALSHOT, Eng., Nov. 12. (AP)—The Prince of Wales took complete control of the giant German seaplane DO-X for ten minutes during a half hour flight he made in her today.

"He is a very fine pilot" was the compliment paid the Prince by Flight Lieutenant Meltz, the plane's chief pilot.

While in the air, the Prince toasted the Commander and wished him success on the forthcoming Atlantic flight. In return Captain Christiansen and the crew drank the Prince's health.

After the flight in which the Prince participated, the DO-X made a second and shorter one in order that he might see her take off and alight on the water.

Used Canadian-owned Ship

The Prince had flown from London earlier in the day in a powerful amphibian plane owned by Captain Robert Holt, a wealthy Canadian, landing at the airport not far from where the DO-X rested on the water.

The guests made a brief inspection of the plane, then her twelve motors cut loose with a roar, the plane taxied across the water, rose gracefully into the air and turned toward the Isle of Wight.

TWO CARS CRASH NEAR WINNIPEG ONE MAN KILLED

Three Women and Two Male Companions Badly Injured.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL.

Driver of Second Auto Has Miraculous Escape From Flaming Machines.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 12.—One man was killed and five other persons were rescued from a flaming automobile which caught fire when two cars collided on the outskirts of Winnipeg early today.

5 In Hospital

Robert Simpson was killed while three young women and two men, one the driver of the death car, are in hospital seriously injured. The injured, Mabel Allison, Mary Giles, Herbert Warren, Harry Townes and Gladys Pickering. All are local residents.

The car driven by Warren collided with one which Earl Andrews was driving. Andrews escaped injury.

Federal Agents Round Up Narcotic Ring By Staging Birthday Party for Leader

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (C.P.).—John Collins celebrated his twenty-eighth birthday last night and Federal agents gave him the surprise party of his life.

For seven months they had worked their way into his good graces, but with little headway, in ascertaining what friends were allied with him in a suspected narcotic ring of wide scope.

So they arranged a birthday party for him and bade him bring all his friends.

To-day Collins, his wife and fifteen of the more than seventy guests who came to the party in a Times Square restaurant last night were under arrest as participants in a narcotic ring whose business, the Federal men said, ran to fifty thousand dollars a week.

Other arrests were expected during the day.

"Pepsodent" Pair Delights Kiddies

A line of excited and enthused children that stretched, almost four deep, from the entrance of the Capitol Theatre to the corner of King street, waited patiently yesterday afternoon for the opening of the special children's matinee, to see Amos 'n' Andy in "Check and Double Check." They milled and crowded around the box office and it required a lot of determined effort on the part of P.C. Deannard to keep them in line. The genial officer almost lost his temper when he discovered that a couple of hefty-looking youths had usurped the places of two small girls at the head of the line. He ejected the offenders and made them wait on the side-lines, while outraged feminity was installed virtuously in the front ranks.

STUDENTS FIGHT BERLIN POLICE; SEVEN ARRESTS

Riot Commences Between Socialist and Fascist Party Admirers.

GIRL IS BEATEN.

Scrappers turn on Officers When University Battle Interrupted.

BERLIN, Nov. 12 (C.P.) — The serenity of Berlin's academic life was badly upset to-day when the University became the scene of a three-cornered fight in which one girl student was beaten and several male students were severely injured.

The clash started between Socialists and Fascist students and the police then took a hand with the fight winding up between the police and the Fascists.

Seven Fascists Jailed

Seven Fascist students finally were locked up. The clashes started as a repetition of encounters yesterday between leaflet distributing Socialists and objecting Fascist students, but they soon developed to such proportions that the President of the University and the Police Commissioner had to take a hand.

"Germany awaken," shouted the Fascists, mixing these cries with "Out with the Jews." Then they turned their verbal guns on the police and sang mocking songs when the officers sought to establish order.

Princesses On Visit Are Heavily Veiled

LONDON, November 12 (C.P.).—A group of princesses who have come half way across the world with their husbands to attend the Indian Round Conference will go home, at last, without having seen the shops of Bond and Regent Streets.

As a matter of fact, anything they do see will be only through the folds of the "Purdah" veil which conceals the face of a Marahanee from the gaze of her subjects.

Toronto Police Take Suspect After Chase

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 12 (C.P.).—A man giving his name as George Mirrer of Louisville, Kentucky, is in custody here, following an exciting chase in the downtown section of the city. Mirrer entered the drug store of Frank Hasmall, and is alleged to have driven the proprietor and a clerk into the basement, after seeking to force them to drink morphine. When arrested Mirrer had $18 in his pockets, two bottles of morphine and a loaded revolver.

NORWAY ADMITS CANADA'S RIGHT TO ARCTIC GROUP

Sole Ground For Dispute as to Dominions Sovereignty in Great Sector Removed.

EXPLORER REWARDED.

In Return Canada Gets Sverdruy's Maps, Notes and Diaries.

OTTAWA, Nov. 12 (C.P.) — The Government of Norway has formally recognised the Canadian title to the Arctic islands commonly known as the Sverdrup group, comprising Axel, Heiberg, Ellef Ringnes, Amund Ringnes and King Christian. This friendly action on the part of the Norwegian Government removes the one possible ground of dispute as to Canadian sovereignty in the whole Arctic sector north of the Canadian mainland.

Announcement that Norway has given formal recognition to the Canadian title of these northern islands was made yesterday by Sir George Perley, acting prime minister.

Discovered in 1898

The islands in question were discovered and explored in the years 1898-1902 by Commander Otto Sverdrup, leader of the Norwegian polar expedition in the "Fram."

With the announcement from the acting premier came a statement from Senator Robertson, Minister of Labor, that the Dominion had paid Sverdrup $67,000 in return for the services rendered by him in his explorations and discoveries. From the explorer Canada will receive the original maps, notes, diaries and other documents relating to Sverdrup's expeditions. The payment was described as the liquidation of an old Canadian obligation.

Axel Heiberg, the largest of the four islands, is situated approximately 850 miles north of the Arctic Circle and is one of the farthest northern islands in the Canadian Archipelago. It is about 250 miles long and 100 miles wide. The other islands are smaller in size.

GUTHRIE LEAVES ENGLAND FRIDAY.

Hon. C. H. Cahan and Many Other Canadians at Imperial Parley Ready to Sail.

ADVISERS RETURNING

LONDON, Nov. 12 (By George Hamblin, C. P. Staff Correspondent) —Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Canadian Minister of Justice and delegate to the Imperial Conference, will return to Canada on the steamship Empress of Australia, sailing from Southampton for Quebec on Friday.

Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State, who has been in England and Europe for some weeks, will also return on board the Empress of Australia.

A number of Canadians who came to London as advisers to the Canadian delegation to the Imperial Conference, will sail for Canada on the Duchess of Bedford, leaving Liverpool on Friday. They include J. E. Head, legal adviser to the Department of External Affairs; W. W. Swanson, Professor of Economics of the University of Saskatchewan; Lieut. H. L. Cameron, of the Department of National Defense; Brig.-Gen. A. G. I. McNaughton, Chief of the Canadian General Staff, and H. M. Tory, President of the National Research Council.

R. H. Coats, Dominion Statistician, will return on board the steamer Doric, sailing from Liverpool on Friday for Quebec and Montreal.

John J. McPharlane of Calgary will also sail on the Duchess of Bedford.

Bank Branch Manager Sentenced To 3 Years

GUELPH, Ont., Nov. 12. —(CP)— Pleading guilty to two charges of forgery and theft from the Imperial Bank George McNee, 32, former manager of the Belwood branch of the bank, was sentenced to three years in Portsmouth penitentiary on each charge when he appeared before Magistrate Watt in police court here today. The sentences are to run concurrently. Although the charges only mentioned $350. Both Crown Attorney J. M. Kearns and P. Kerwin defence counsel stated that the total amount of McNee's defalcations is $4,092.

QUEBEC PROVINCE SHOWS SURPLUS OF $2,005,730 DURING PAST YEAR

Liquor Commission Has Most Prosperous Session, Netting $9,560,791 Profit.

COST OF EDUCATION UP.

QUEBEC, Que., Nov. 12 (C.P.) — The Province of Quebec shows a surplus of $2,005,730, according to the financial statement for the fiscal year ending June 30, as shown in the Quebec Official Gazette. Total receipts for the year were $59,113,725, including receipts from loans and trust funds and all other sources. Disbursements totalled $57,107,995. This compares with $51,449,040 receipts last year and $46,841,257 expenditures.

Liquor Commission Sets Record

Noteworthy in the accounts are the figures for the Quebec Liquor Commission, which proves to have enjoyed the most prosperous year of its history ,with a total profit of $9,560,-791. To this is to be added a total of $2,248,611 in licenses from shops, hotels, restaurants, etc.

Motor vehicles brought to the Provincial Treasury a total of $9,395,689, which represents an increase of $1,-261,910 over the previous year. Of the total $5,423,650 arose from the Motor Vehicle Tax and $3,972,038 from the Gasoline Tax. Both items show an increase.

Taxes on commercial corporations totalled $4,444,492, an increase of $378,097.

The effects of the higher succession duties, on the larger estates, a scale which went into effect at the last session, had but little time to make themselves felt in three months, but nevertheless income from this source reached $5,268,088, an increase of $1,084,512.

The weak condition of the stock market is reflected in the drop in receipts from the transfer tax on bonds and stock shares, which fell off from $980,433 to $79,296.

Civil Service Costs Up

Civil Service costs have been tripled in twenty years, the cost of the service for this year being $2,009,-649. The cost of the public debt fell to $4,406,613, a decrease of $930,694. Administration of justice and legislation show but slight increase in cost.

The cost cost of education reached the highest mark in the history of the Province with an expenditure of $4,480,490.

At one time recently there were strikes in 30 industries spread over 50 cities throughout Spain.

British Gov't Rejects Scheme By Bennett

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 12. (C. P. Cable)—The British Government today definitely rejected the Canadian offer of reciprocal Empire tariff preferences put forward by Premier R. B. Bennett at the opening of the Imperial Conference.

The Empire Premiers sat until 7 o'clock this evening and found themselves unable to reach any agreement on alternative decisions. They will resume the discussions tomorrow.

Spanking Suggested For Hamilton Trio

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 12 (C.P.).—John Smith, 23, Elmer Peeler, 24, and Reginald Poole, 26, were arrested after an unsuccessful attempt to seize a woman's purse. The trio appeared for sentence this morning.

The sentence was not forthcoming, but His Worship intimated in Police Court that if the trio reported on Friday that they had submitted to a sound spanking at the hands of the police in the meantime, that he would be prepared to suspend sentence.

The trio fairly "yipped" out a call for immediate strapping in order that they might get their liberty. Their wish will be granted.

Germany Not Seeking Revision Of Payments

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—(A.P.)—Preparation by the Reichstag Foreign Relations Committee of a record of German reparations payments to the former enemy countries in no wise means that Germany is preparing to seek further revision of the reparations agreements, the Associated Press learned to-day on high authority.

This is merely a routine procedure occasioned by the expiration of the old Reichstag and the convening of a new body. The previous compilations were considered obsolete and the new Foreign Relations committee wants its facts brought up to date.

Happier Day Seen For Indian People By His Majesty

Eighty-six Delegates Gather in Royal Gallery of House of Lords as Britain's Ruler Urges For Solution of One of Empire's Most Pressing Problems.

FIRST TIME IN HISTORY THAT PRINCES OF INDIA AND BRITISH STATESMEN MET ROUND SAME TABLE

Premier Ramsey MacDonald Elected Chairman of Conference—Warns of Heavy Responsibility and Urges That All Proceed With a Will For Success.

LONDON, November 12 (By George Hambleton, C.P., Staff Correspondent). — India turned a new and fateful page in her momentous history to-day. In the Royal Gallery of the House of Lords, with the gilded statues of Norman Kings looking down on many gilded chairs, the King in a speech of ten minutes opened the Indian Round-Table Conference.

It was such a scene as not even Westminster has witnessed before. East and West met on common ground. The Princes and peoples, the clashing races, castes, and creeds that make up vast and mysterious India met in common purpose. The sombre formality of the Occidental morning coat predominated, but across it splashed the many-colored turbans, and the flashing jewels of the East.

Dominion Premiers Present

And it was a scene that symbolized the vastness and variety of the British Commonwealth of Nations. Just behind the ruling princes sat Premier R. B. Bennett of Canada and the Premiers of other Dominions. His Highness the Aga Khan, spiritual leader of the Moslem millions, chatted with Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions, just before the entry of His Majesty. The Aga Khan, who is a famous racehorse owner as well, was in morning dress.

The Maharajah of Nawanagar, better known a "Ranji" his cricketing days long behind, sat with the other princes, wearing a flowing turban. A circle of diamonds gleamed in the deep green of the turban worn by the Maharajah of Alwar, member of an extremely ancient Rajput family. A bracelet flashed on the wrist of the Majarajah of Patiala, ruler of the largest state in the Punjab, as he moved the appointment of Premier MacDonald as chairman of the conference, speaking in precise English.

Lord Reading, who first went to India as a cabin-boy, chatted with Indian statesmen he had known as India's Viceroy. Mah Janmah, who is reputed to earn $150,000 a year at the Bombay Bar, toyed with a very occidental monocle, as towards the end of the proceedings, he made significant references to Dominion status for India. Among the many celebrities, Indian and British, the figure of Sir John Simon, great jurist and head of the Statutory Commission which investigated the question of Indian statutory reform, was notably absent.

First Parley Of Its Kind

"More than once the Soverign has summoned the sentries on the side of India, but never before have the British and Indian statesmen and rulers of Indian States met as you now meet in one place and around one table to discuss the future system of Government for India and seek agreement for the guidance of our Parliament as to the foundations upon which it must stand."

"Nearly ten years ago in a message to my Indian Legislature, I dwelt upon the significance of its establishment in the constitution prevalent in India. Ten years is but a brief span in the life of any nation, but this decade has witnessed not only in India but throughout all the nations forming the British Commonwealth, a quickening and growth in ideas and aspirations of nationhood which defy the customary measurement of time. It should therefore be no matter of surprise to the men of this generation that as we then contemplated it should have become necessary to review the results of what was begun ten years ago and to make further provision for the future.

"With such a review as has been later carried out by the commission appointed by me for that purpose you will have before you the outcome of their labors, together with other contributions which have been or can be made to the solution of the great problem confronting you.

Momentous Task.

"No words of mine are needed to bring home to you the momentous character of the task to which you have set your hands. Each one of you will, with me, be profoundly conscious how much depends to the whole of the British Commonwealth on the issue of your consultations. This community of interest leads me to come forth and it is a happy augury that there should be present to-day the representatives of my Government in all the sister states of this Commonwealth.

"I shall follow the course of your proceedings with the closest and most sympathetic interest, not indeed without anxiety, but with a great confidence. The material conditions which surrounded the lives of my subjects in India affect me greatly and will be ever present in my thoughts during your forthcoming deliberations.

"I have also in mind the just claims of majorities and minorities of men and women of town dwellers and tillers of the soil, land owners and tenants, of the strong and the weak, of the rich and the poor, of the races, castes and creeds of which the body politics is composed.

Hopes for Best

"For these things I care deeply. I cannot doubt that the foundation of self government is in the fusion of such divergent claims into mutual obligations and in their recognition and fulfilment. It is my hope that the future of the Government of India, based on this foundation, will give expression to her honorable aspiration.

"May your discussion point the way to a sure achievement of this end and may your names go down in history as men who served India well and whose endeavors advanced the happiness and prosperity of all of my beloved people. I pray that Providence may grant you in bounteous measure wisdom, patience and good will."

When the King had finished speaking, the Maharajah of Patiala, ruling Prince of the Punjbs and Chancellor of the Chamber of Princes, in a short address proposed that Premier Ramsay MacDonald be named chairman of the conference.

OLD MANUSCRIPT BROUGHT TO U. S.

PRICE KEPT SECRET.

NEW YORK, November 12 (C.P.). —A musty, treasured, and hitherto unknown collection of James Boswell's original manuscripts on the career of Dr. Samuel Johnson is on the high seas, bound for the United States.

Col. Ralph H. Isham has acquired the papers from Lord Talbot de Malahide, a descendant of Boswell, from whom he secured a similar collection in 1927. They include 107 pages of the original of "The Life of Samuel Johnson," the complete original of "The Journal of a Tour to the Hebrides," a projected outline of a biography of Lord James, and numerous letters between the writer and his biographer, Col. Isham said.

While he refused to divulge the price paid, Col. Isham said the collection might overshadow in value his previous acquisition, which was described by scholars at the time as the find of the century, and which a New York book dealer priced at $80,000.

5 Prisoners Escape From Guelph—2 Free

GUELPH, Ont., Nov. 12 (C.P.) — Walter White of Gananoque and Clifford Marshall, alias Grant, of Guelph, both facing terms in Portsmouth Penitentiary on expiration of their sentences here, escaped from the Ontario Reformatory yesterday and are still at large. Michael Huard of Ottawa, and William Bradt, two other inmates who made a break for freedom at the same time, were retaken by guards a short time after their escape, and a third man, whose name was withheld by the authorities, later returned to the institution and gave himself up.

The two prisoners for whom the guards are now searching are thought to have been the ringleaders in the escape.

TAXICAB BY-LAW DEFERRED UNTIL MIDDLE OF 1931

Judges Coatsworth and Morson Deny Being Told Mayor Would Refuse to Sign.

MATTER LONG INVESTIGATED

Have No Desire to Make Decision of Board Subject in Civic Election.

TORONTO, Ont., November 12 (C.P.) — In an elaborate statement issued to the press Judge Emerson Coatsworth and Judge F.M. Morson, members of the Toronto Police Commission, of which Mayor Bert S. Wemp is chairman, give their reason for the signing of a by-law last June concerning taxicab regulations, which has resulted in a storm of protest from the taximen and considerable comment by local newspapers.

Long Investigation.

In their statement Judges Morson and Coatsworth declare the most careful investigation has been made and information obtained from 75 cities in Canada and the United States and also from London, England and the by-law in question is the pronouncement of the Board after hearing deputations from all taxi owners and drivers, and after full deliberation in which no less than three mayors, including the present Mayor Wemp, took part. The question of regulating taxicabs and traffic arising therefrom has been before the board since May, 1928, the Commissioners state.

Mayor Wemp has been absent (no doubt unavoidably) from several meetings of the board, the statement continues. One of these was on July 10 last, when the by-law as approved by the city solicitor, was passed in regular routine by the other members of the board. Neither of us ever heard, or were told by any person whatever, that the Mayor would refuse to sign the by-law, and at a subsequent meeting when he was again absent, the by-law was signed by the acting chairman in regular routine.

Referring to the two main objections to the by-law, the installation of taximeters and finger-printing, the statement says the zone system is fundamentally unsound, as by it one person contributes to pay part of the fare of another.

Finger-printing Done in New York

Regarding finger-printing, the Judges state this is done in London, New York, Cleveland, Los Angeles and Detroit.

In conclusion, the Judges state: "It is to us a matter of regret that this by-law has been left unchallenged since July until the present time, on the eve of a civic election, when there is danger of its purpose being misunderstood or misinterpreted. Under these circumstances and as our power to pass on the by-law is being questioned, we will at our next meeting have its operation postponed until the middle of next year."

Wemp Refuses to Comment

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 12. (CP)— "No, I did not approve of it," declared City Solicitor C. N. Colquhoun when shown that portion of a statement issued by Judge Emerson Coatsworth and Judge Morson that the taxicab by-law was approved by the city solicitor.

"What is more" continued Colquhoun, "I do not think deputy solicitor Angus approved of it either. I think what happened was that Mr. Angus was called in by the Board of Police Commissioners and given instructions as to what the by-law should contain, and then drafted it accordingly."

Mayor Wemp, who declined to sign the by-law, refused to comment on the statement issued to the press by his fellow members of the Board.

Sailor Hangs To Log 3 Days After Wreck

EUREKA, Cal., Nov. 12 (C.P.)—Jorgen M. Greeve, Chief Officer of the schooner Brooklyn, which sank off the Humbolt Bar here late last Saturday night, has been found alive at sea holding to a piece of bulkhead from the ship. He was picked up by the Two Sisters, a fishing boat, and brought to a hospital here. Greeve had gone without food and water since Saturday afternoon, when the schooner cracked up. He said he was unconscious some of the time he was clinging to the wreckage, but managed to hold on. Physicians said the Chief Officer would recover.

Vancouver Business Men Have Scheme to Get Over Unemployment Situation.

DO PUBLIC WORK.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 12 — (CP) — Recruitment of a national army of workers to be fed, paid and maintained at productive occupations on the public demesne as soldiers of peace is advocated by a group of Vancouver's leading business men in an Armistice Day message made public yesterday.

First name on this memorial to members of Parliament and business leaders of Canada is that of Sir George Bury, former executive of the C. P. R.

The plan, as embodied in the memorial, follows:

Expressing belief that the current economic depression imposing suffering and hardship upon thousands of families is a condition comparable to war, they call upon Canada's national leaders to employ drastic measures such as war would justify

1—Recruiting of a peaceful army.
2—Voluntary enlistment.
3—Acceptance upon proof of unemployment and no other means of existance.
4—Enlistment for six months.
5—Army pay, army regulations, army allowance to dependents.
6—Boarded in camps, fed, trained physically and entertained as at war.
—Furnished with the tools of peace.
8—Used for works on the public demesne and not for private exploitation. There are all kinds of work that should be undertaken but until it could be organized this army should be given physical drill and treated as if training for war but without war instruments.

CANADA TO STAY WITHIN EMPIRE

Premier Ferguson Addresses Canadian Veterans' Banquet in London.

MESSAGE SENT HIS MAJESTY

LONDON, Nov. 12 (C.P.)—"No matter what is the outcome of the Imperial Conference, it cannot shake the determination of the Canadian people to live under the Union Jack," said Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, last night, when he was one of the speakers at a dinner of 450 Canadian veterans of the Great War. Mr. Ferguson told the gathering that the fact that the United States entertained a wholesome respect for Canada was largely because the Dominion was in the habit of asserting herself. When the British people understood Canada in that light, and, perhaps, assumed more of the assertive role themselves, he was sure the Motherland and the Dominion would get closer together. The Canadian veterans sent a message of loyalty to His Majesty the King, and received a gracious answer within what seemed but a few minutes.

SOLLOWAY MILLS PLACED IN CELLS TO SERVE TERMS

Brokerage Firm Heads Withdraw Appeal on Calgary Sentences.

TOTAL TIME 5 MONTHS.

Pair Since Arrest Have Paid Alberta and Ontario Govt's $525,000 in Fines.

CALGARY, Nov. 12. —Assigned to cells in the Lethbridge jail, Isaac W. G. Solloway and Harvey Mills, President and Vice-President of the once Dominion-wide brokerage firm of Solloway, Mills & Company, have commenced to serve terms of imprisonment imposed by Mr. Justice Ives here in June following their conviction of "bucketing" and "attempting to affect the market values of stocks."

Solloway was fined $225,000 and sentenced to four month in jail. His partner was fined $25,000 and a jail term of one month imposed. Both appealed, and the Crown launched a counter-appeal, seeking a more adequate sentence.

Withdraw Appeal,

The appeal was scheduled for hearing yesterday, but counsel for the brokers announced they had withdrawn their appeal, and would serve the jail terms.

At the same time announcement was made that the Crown had withdrawn its counter-appeal.

Since their arrest, during the Dominion-wide brokerage probe in January, Sololway and Mills have paid fines totalling $525,000 to the Alberta and Ontario Governments.

ARMISTICE DAY AT MILLBROOK

REV. J. RIDDELL SPEAKS.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 12 (Examiner Correspondence).—A reverent hush fell over the community yesterday when the citizens gathered at the Cenotaph in the Town Hall square for the observation of the twelfth Armistice Day service, the pupils from the Continuation and Public Schools marching in a body, with their respective teachers, to the place of meeting, while the Cadet Corps, though not in uniform were under the command of their instructor, Lieutenant B. B. Dawson, and had a section to themselves at the east side of the Square.

Business and traffic were alike suspended on King Street in its downtown section, when the bell rang at 11 a.m., calling the people to the service, at which Rev. W. W. Jones, B.D., pastor of Saint Andrew's United Church, was chairman, the two minutes' silence being impressively observed as the opening feature of the program.

The Reeve, P. Stinson, and the local clergy occupied the Town Hall balcony, and following the period of silence during which those who had made the supreme sacrifice were remembered, the hymn, "Abide With Me," was sung.

Rev. Riddell Speaks.

Rev. John Riddell, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, who is himself a returned soldier, gave the address, eloquent with feeling and impressive in delivery, the presence of the school children leading to emphasis being placed upon the fact "that a generation is growing up who do not know the old story; they were unborn on that grey November morning, somewhat like to-day, only the rain was falling, when the soldiers awoke on the shell-shocked fields, a hush fell upon the battle-line, and officially the word came that the Germans had given up resistance, and peace was in sight. To-day we celebrate this great incident in history."

"The obligation to remember those men still ill in hospitals, hopelessly crippled, those who lie in Flanders' fields, and those still alive and well, means that we are pledged to take up their cause, and to remain true for the principles of justice, truth and honor, for which they fought, that these laws may be forever maintained."

"We cannot honor them; they honor us. We enjoy the privileges they secured for us—national, social, and economic—and our responsibility is to hand these on to the progeny of mankind yet unborn, and to care for the dependents of those who gave and those who were willing to give, their all."

The disgrace of having returned soldiers standing in the bread lines of our cities, with more wheat in the world than there ever was before, was strongly scored: "Can a state demand life, and then deny the means of livelihood?"

The disquieting general conditions of the world at the present time were vividly pictured, and though ePace Conferences are in session, the speaker insisted that peace will not be ensured until the nations cease leaving Christ out of their economic and international problems. "Our Great Master gave us the law by which peace may exist: "Love God with all that you have and are, and your neighbor as yourself."

In conclusion Rev. Mr. Riddell, in a most impressive manner, read the names inscribed on the Cenotaph, "the men who maintained the line between freedom and slavery for you and me." The poem by the beloved padre "Woobine Willie" with which Mr. Riddell closed his address, put in other language the thoughts

MANY CANADIANS PRESENT AT ONTARIO HOUSE OPENING

Mrs. Jocelyn Thorne Entertains at Tea in House Once Owned By Rev. Louis Jordan and Mrs. Jordan — Mrs. W. H. Cawthra is the Hostess of Smart Dinner.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 12. (Special to The Examiner. Copyright 1930).—Down the Strand the festive red and white stripes of an awning, sheltered the entrance to the government of Ontario's new office building, 163-164, which, October 21st, held its first gala birthday party. Mr. W. C. Noxon, agent general of Ontario, has been its courteous and efficient guardian since 1921. In front of masses of yellow and red chrysanthemums the Hon. Howard Ferguson, Mrs. Howard Ferguson, Miss Mildred Bennett, Mr. W. C. Noxon and Mrs. Noxon received the guests at the entrance to the attractive room. Miss Bennett was in a pale gray crepe gown with three flounces and wore a gray felt hat, beige fur coat, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations tied with pal green ribbon which was presented to her. Mrs. Howard Ferguson looked smart in a dull red chiffon velvet with gold flowers, made on long lines, with a big bow on the left shoulder and large felt hat of the same colod. Her large bouquet was of dark red chrysanthemums tied with the same shade. A dark blue georgette printed on dark blue velvet was worn by Mrs. Noxon with a small blue toque. Mrs. Noxon carried pink carnations. Mrs. Howard Ferguson wore her beautiful diamond and sapphire pendant, the crest of the province of Ontario, presented to her by some of the women of Ontario.

The main floor was hung with flags and done with a profusion of yellow, red and mauve chrysanthemums in towering vases and stands which also decorated the two buffet tea tables upstairs, where a string orchestra played. The affair was immensely jolly and informal, five hundred people were present, some wandering homewards and some recently arrived.

Every inch of the building was articulate with "Canada." The front elevation rises from two large stones of granite of quaint pink shade. Queenstone blue dolomite has been lured from near the Niagara river for the front of the building. Marble steps from Ontario, marble balustrades and Canadian marble floors for Canadian feet, were shipped to London docks and finished by English stone-cutters. Ontario birch and pine interlaced and woven dexterously into jointless floors and panelling. Nickel from Sudbury has lent its brilliant solidity and the whole of the edifice is a paeon of "Canada". From the reception room, pannelled with Ontario marble, one can view through a huge window the ceaseless flow of the Strand. The clocks work by elecricity and heating is cleverly imprisoned behind the marble walls.

An amazing number of Canadian products were arranged at the entrance on countless shelves, and pictures by Canadian artists hung on the walls. As one woman remarked, "Everything from Canada except the Canadian mosquito."

Canadians Present

Among those noticed, well known in Canada, were: Sir George Badgerow, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cambie, Mrs. Allan Cassels and her daughter, Mrs. Willis, Sir Frederick and Lady Williams Taylor, Mrs. Kirchoffer and her daughter, Mrs. Clarke Bowker, Mrs. D. A. Dunlop, who returns to Canada the end of November, Mrs. John D. Hay and her daughter, Mrs. Wilson, were among the guests. Mrs. Hay, who has been spending a year on the continent and who sails for Canada at the end of November, was in black with a big corsage of mauve orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel are for some months at their London house in Porchester Terrace, the latter looked very smart in brown. Mrs. W. H. Cawthra was in biege with long coat of the same shade trimmed with fox. Her nephew, Mr. Rankine Nesbitt, accompanied her. Mr. Home Smith, Mrs. Frank Cowan, Oshawa, who wore a very becoming black frock and black hat with touches of white, had her niece, Miss MacMillan of Oshawa with her. Both have returned from Oberammagau and a motor trip through the continent. Mrs' Cowan sails with her niece this week for Canada, on the S.S. Marita ia. Lady Baillie who was in black with a becoming black hat turned off her face, wore some exquisite pearls.

ANNIVERSARY IS OBSERVED AT HASTINGS

Citizens Gather in Town Hall in Memory of Great War Dead.

OBSERVE SILENCE.

Major, the Rev. J. F. Belford, is Principal Speaker of Service.

HASTINGS, Nov. 12 (Examiner Correspondence).—The twelfth anniversary service of Thanksgiving and Memorial was held on Tuesday morning in the Town Hall. There was a large crowd of citizens out to do honor to the gallant sons of Hastings who gave up their lives. An added feature to the service this year was the attendance of the school children from both schools in a body.

Deeve Dr. W. E. Wilson opened the service at 10.30 and thanked the citizens for the large turnout, also the school children, the Excelsior Orchestra and onyone who in any way helped in the preparation and carrying out of the service. To Captain Marryatt, who had charge of the preparations, he extended sympathy on behalf of the citizens of Hastings on the death of his brother. The chairman then called upon Major the Rev. J. F. Belford to take charge of the service.

Major Belford has been the principal speaker at the memorial service held here practically from the start.

The first hymn on the program was "Onward, Christian Soldiers," followed by Psalm (responsive, all standing); Prayer and Thanksgiving were then offered, followed by "O Valiant Hearts."

Principal Speaker

Major Belford then delivered a short address in his usual forceful manner. In opening his address he thanked those in charge for the invitation to again take charge of the service. He thanked the citizens for the large turnout, which showed that the citizens had not forgotten the wonderful sacrifice that the young men of the community had given. He was also pleased to see the children, as the carrying on of the memorial services in future would depend on them.

Major Belford then spoke a few words on the present crisis the country is in at the present time, which if the British-speaking people did not guard against closely would result in serious trouble. The "Reds" were causing riots in large centres all over the Dominion.

During Major Belford's address, two minutes silence was observed, during which time the church bells rang and whistles blew.

The service in the Hall was brought to a close with the singing of "O Canada," and "God Save the King."

The procession to the Memorial was led by the school children. After the placing of the wreaths, Major Belford read the names of the boys who had given up their lives. The service for the day was brought to a close with singing of "The Maple Leaf."

"PENMANIZE YOUR UNDERWEAR BUYING!"

Protect your body and enjoy good health!

About your underwear—

Its function is to protect your body in cold weather—to keep chills, colds, bronchial and chest troubles away—to promote and preserve good health.

Any kind of underwear won't do! Any style of underwear won't do!

Some few hardy souls can go through Winter in light weight garments. We do not advise it for the majority, however.

A great many men find they must wear heavy woollen underwear in cold weather to keep warm and well.

It all depends on occupation, age and bodily condition.

Find YOUR type in the Penmans Chart

To help men choose the type of underwear that will give them the needed cold-weather protection, safeguard health and promote comfort, we present a chart covering all under-garment variations.

Look it over. It may tell you to wear a different type of underwear this Winter. If so, order by the Penmans name and number. It means the best in quality, workmanship and lasting wear—the product of over 62 years of manufacturing experience—the utmost in value for your underwear-money.

Ladies! A Word to You!!

Bring this new idea to the attention of the men of your family. You're interested, of course, in keeping them well and comfortable.

Look over the chart yourself. Perhaps you can help with a decision that will mean much to the health and well-being of those whose health and well-being mean everything to you.

For fine quality, sterling worth and long life there is no underwear quite so good as

LOOK OVER THIS CHART

Among the types of health underwear listed below, is your kind—the one best fitted to take care of your individual needs.

You'll find it in a moment. Then, if you order it, you'll enjoy exceptional comfort and protection this Winter.

Every Penmans garment is full size, well-tailored and easy fitting.

MEDIUM

Penmans No. 95 is the finest natural Merino underwear made. For fifty years Canada's most popular medium weight. Gives healthful protection in coldest weather, yet is not too heavy for indoor wear. Penmans No. 71 is an excellent natural Merino at somewhat lower cost for men who do not desire underwear of No. 95 quality.

LIGHT

Penmans light weight pure wool underwear is the highest grade made in the world. Ivory in tone. Light, yet very warm and comfortable. Recommended for those who work indoors, yet need sufficient protection to guard them from chills when they are outdoors.

HEAVIEST

Penmans Serviceable Scotch Knit. A good heavy grade for outdoor workers or in districts subject to severe cold weather in Winter. Has the weight and the warmth, without too much bulk.

FLEECE-LINED

For those requiring maximum protection, we recommend Penmans No. 37. Extra heavy and fleece-lined. Suitable for outdoor workers. The soft cotton fleece next to the skin makes it most comfortable to wear. Durability unexcelled.

BALBRIGGAN

Nos. 222, 223 and 46 are extremely light cotton underwear suitable only for those who keep warm easily, are immune to colds and not liable to chills from sudden temperature changes. Not recommended for any but those accustomed to wear very light under-garments all year around. Made in short or long sleeve and leg lengths.

FINE ELASTIC RIB COTTON

For those who require warmth and ample protection, yet do not prefer woollen underwear, we recommend a choice from the various Penmans fine elastic rib cotton lines. Easy-fitting and durable-made in all the different styles.

In addition to the above, there are many other lines of Penmans Health Underwear from which you may choose.

HEAD HURT?

WORK won't wait for a headache to wear off. Don't look for sympathy at such times, but get some Aspirin. It never fails.

Don't be a chronic sufferer from headaches, or any other pain. See a doctor and get at the cause. Meantime, don't play martyr. There's always quick comfort in Aspirin. It never does any harm. Isn't it foolish to suffer any needless pain? It may be only a simple headache, or it may be neuralgia or neuritis. Rheumatism. Lumbago. Aspirin is still the sensible thing to take. There is hardly any ache or pain these tablets can't relieve; they are a great comfort to women who suffer periodically; they are always to be relied on for breaking up colds.

Buy the box that says Aspirin and has Genuine Aspirin printed in red. Genuine Aspirin tablets do not depress the heart. All druggists.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Nov. 12—Receipts at the Union Stock Yards yesterday were: 4,985 cattle, 651 calves, 940 hogs, 692 sheep and lambs.

In addition there are 982 cattle on through billing. The cattle offering for sale is not heavy considering the accumulation of two days' receipts at the yards.

Trade in killers opened fairly active with good butchers selling at $7.25 to $7.50 cwt. Fair to good baby beef brought $9.50 to $11 cwt. In the early trading Butcher cows were selling steady from $3 to $5 cwt. and butcher bulls $4 to $5 cwt. Not many common killers sold up to 11 o'clock.

Store cattle prices ranged from $4.50 to $6.25 cwt. Calves are a moderate offering and are selling at steady prices. Good veal calves are bringing $11.50 to $12.50 cwt., with grass calves from $3.50 to $5 a cwt.

The market was slow on lambs up to 11 o'clock. Early bids were $7.75 cwt. for good ewes and wethers, but the sales were made up to 11 o'clock below $8, and a few of the best lambs sold at $8.25 cwt. Buck lambs are bringing $6 to $7 a cwt. Sheep are below trade, with prices from $4.50 a cwt. down.

The hog market was unsettled, with packers making no bids up to 11 o'clock. Salesmen are asking $10.50 to $10.75 a cwt. for bacon f.o.b.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, November 12.—Grain values suffered drastic declines in trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday as traders rushed heavy offerings into the market immediately the session opened. There was a slight rally at the close, and wheat finished the day 3c to 3¾c a bushel below Saturday's final quotations.

Coarse grains followed the wheat futures into lower ground, and drastic recessions were recorded by flax and rye, the former losing as much as 10c a bushel.

Weakness at Chicago, while the local market was on a holiday on Monday, and the slightly better tone developed only when short interests entered the market shortly before the close.

Trade in cash wheat markets was limited yesterday, and only small lots were traded.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Nov. 12.—Less than car-lot prices for fresh eggs here yesterday were: Top grade, 58c; firsts 44c to 45c, and seconds, 32c a dozen. Supplies of fresh eggs were scarce and storage eggs were the main bulk of trade. Receipts were 3,358 cases, of which the majority were American eggs going through for export. The increases to retailers were generaly adopted today. On the butter market, Eastern Townships No. 1 pasteurized creamery butter was quoted at 29¾c a pound and to retailers solids were 32c and prints 33c. Receipts were 344 boxes.

Prices on the cheese market were unchanged. Ontario cheese being 13¼c to 13½ and Quebec 13½c a pound. Receipts were 1,670 boxes.

The potato market was also unchanged. New Brunswick Green Mountains were 85c and 80-lb. bag and Prince Edward Island potatoes per 90-lb. bag were 85c for Cobbler and 90c for Mountains.

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, Nov. 12—There were no changes noticed on the local butter market yesterday. Some sales were made, as usual, but no volume of any consequence was concerned in the transactions. Prices were steady with those quoted last week-end at 30c to 30½c for Ontario No. 1 and 29c to 29½c for No. 2. Any good quality No. 1 brought more than 30c, but the range quoted covered low and high scoring offerings. New Zealand finest was worth 31c and moved fairly freely at that price.

Cheese

Cheese sold at the lower prices of 15c for new large, 15¼c for twins and 15½c for triplets, which was ¼c below the previous quotation for Government-graded, paraffined, colored.

Cream

Cream prices were steady at 33c for special, 32c for No. 1, and 29c for No. 2, f.o.b. country points.

Eggs

Brokers were quite out of the picture on the egg market, as most of them reported no receipts of fresh supplies and no demand as yet from the wholesalers for storage holdings. The wholesalers were working on their own storage and short-held eggs and seemed to have unlimited quantities to dispose of.

New-laid eggs were worth all kinds of prices in Toronto yesterday, but it made no difference, as there were very few received by any of the regular dealers. Some retailers stated that they would pay 60c for extras, 50c for firsts and 42c for pullet extras, but they were not in the big buying class and a very few cases would meet their needs for some time. But, nevertheless, these retailers stated that they could get 70c a dozen for them and some were known to better that price by 5c to 10c on Saturday.

Prices To Retailers

The large buyers, however, were not quoting the high prices, naturally, as they have to sell to the retailer on some margin. Their prices to country shippers for ungraded eggs delivered, cases returned, were, 50c to 55c for extras, 46c to 48c for firsts, 27c to 29c for seconds and 35c to 37c for pullet extras. Prices to retailers for graded supplies were 58c to 60c for extras in cartons, 56c to 58c for extras loose, 50c to 52c for firsts loose, 35c to 37c for seconds loose, and 43c for pullet extras. Wholesalers were also offering short-held eggs at about 5c per dozen less than the prices for new-laid. Storage eggs were offered by wholesalers at 38c for extras and 36c for firsts, loose, and 2c more for extras in cartons.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

HAPPIER DAY SEEN FOR INDIAN PEOPLE

The Prime Minister with his white hair and ageing care-worn face telling the story of the year of strain in his high office, first asked permission of the assembly to thank the King in their behalf for his words of inspiration and the Queen for her hospitality to the visiting Princes.

Proceed With a Will

Premier Ramsay MacDonald, responding to his election as chairman of the Indian Round-Table Conference, called upon the delegates of Britain and India to proceed to a solution of their problem with a will that they should succeed.

He first asked the conference to authorize him to convey to the King an expression of loyal gratitude for his presence and the inspiration his words had given them, and to convey to Queen Mary their grateful appreciation of her kindly solicitude for the Indian visitors.

He continued: "I am very conscious of the honor you have done me in asking me to preside over this conference, and I am very conscious of the responsibility you have put upon me. But the responsibility lies heavily upon us all. We are now at the very birth of a new history.

"Declarations made by British sovereigns and statesmen from time to time that Britain's work in India was to prepare her for self-government have been plain. If some say that they have been applied with woeful tardiness, I reply that no permanent evolution has seemed to anyone going through it anything but tardy. I am never disturbed by people who say that I have not fulfilled my pledges provided I am fulfilling them.

'We are met to try to register by agreement a recognition of the fact that India has reached a distinctive point in her constitutional evolution. Whatever that agreement may be some will say that it is not good enough, or that it goes too far. Let them say so. We must boldly appeal to an intelligent and informed public opinion.

"Civil disorder is the way of reaction. It destroys social mentality from which all constitutional development derives its source and whereupon all internal administration is based. The men who co-operate are the pioneers of progress.

Task is Immense.

"The task that lies ahead of us is immense. It is beset by difficulties for the solution of which the past affords no ready-made guide. There are stubborn diversities of view that still have to be brought together and conflicting interests which have proved irreconcilable hitherto.

"Could any issue be more momentous? Could any be more enticing to men who love to make the rough places smooth We must bring to our task all the resources of mutual trust, of practical sagacity, and of statesmanship.

"Yet there is much to give us confidence in our ultimate success. This is not the time for reciting, to say nothing of prejudging, our problems. We shall meet them as we proceed. Let us face them as men, determined to surmount them.

"What problems of growth and development in liberty and institutions have our peoples not faced? And united we remain, in all our diversities, by our skill in harmonizing differences by reasonable mutual accommodation.

"This gathering itself is surely a heartening promise. His Majesty's presence at the opening of our deliberations enabled us to understand both the strength and flexibility of the bond which binds our whole commonwealth of nations together in loyalty and devotion to the Crown." The attendance of the representatives of the Dominion Governments is an attest of the interest and goodwill with which the sister states in the Commonwealth will follow our labors.

"The association of the princes for the first time in a joint conclave with the representatives of the people of British India is symbolical of the gradual molding together of India into one whole. And when I turn to the representatives of British India I am mindful, it is true, of India's different communities, languages and interests.

"Nor is it without significance that we who, though not of India, also seek India's honor are drawn from all three parties of this parliament on the interplay of whose rivalries, no less than ideals, is built our system of government.

"But apart from these things, surely the simple fact that we come here to sit at one table, with the set and sole purpose of India's advancement within the companionship of Commonwealth is itself an undeniable sign of progress toward that end and also an inspiring challenge to reach an agreement.

"We must now begin our labors. Things have been said in the past, whether in anger or blindness or for mischief, which we had better forget at this table. Let us strive to make a story of this conference worthy of the best political genius of our peoples and add by it to the respect paid by the world to both our nations."

which stood out prominently in his remarks.

Rev. Mr. Jones read the forty-sixth Psalm for the scripture lesson, and Rev. P. W. A. Roberts, of the Anglican communion, led in the closing prayers. Reference was made to the absence, through illness, of Canon Allen, who initiated the Armistice Day service, locally, and who had lost his only son in the world conflict.

After the hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers" G. S. Burnham sounded the Last Post, and the gathering was dismissed with the benediction pronounced by Rev. Mr. Jones.

Place Wreaths on Cenotaph

Wreaths had been placed on the base of the Cenotaph by the Women's Institute, and by relatives of those who had given their lives in the world struggle, and there were still in place the memorial wreaths laids on the monument at the public service on Sunday, November 2, when the Prince of Wales' Dragoons, 'B' Company, remembered their fallen comrades, and then paraded to Saint Thomas' Anglican church for divine worship.

TWEED MERCHANTS MAKE COMPLAINT

Certain Stores in Tweed Keeping Open After Regular Hours.

TWEED, Nov. 12 (Examiner Correspondence)—At the meeting of the Tweed Council held recently, a deputation of local merchants made a complaint that certain stores were keeping open after hours. The clerk was instructed to write the offending merchants, advising them of the by-law to cover such cases.

T. S. Rath tendered prices for picks and shovels and a communication was read from Carleton Place, regarding the manner in which money is collected under the Liquor Control Act, this being endorsed by the Council and the clerk was instructed to reply accordingly.

The Park Board asked for some crushed rock to be delivered, and this request was granted. A communication was also read regarding the possibility of the installation of a new factory. This was endorsed and the necessary assistance given.

Johnson Bros. tendered to furnish an air compressor for the proposed waterworks extension. The following accounts were ordered paid: J. S. Stout and men, crushing rock, $390.15; J. Laveque, wood for crusher, $5; J. Masters, work on street, $3.60; J. Burley, work on Park, $12.25; Bell Telephone Company, $2.50; P. Rashotte, posts, $1.50; F. B. Foster, soda, etc., $4.80; Gordon Steel Works, $12.23; Dominion Foundries, repairs, $5.80; Stan Lee, $4.50; T. O'Connor, work, $4.80; P. Wheeler, wood for crusher, $105; William Rodgers, $5; Gordon Steel Works, smokestacks, $10; Rashotte Bros., cement, 70c; S. Rowley, work, $5; William Vlneff, B. of H., $10; Tweed Hardware, $33.60; George Way, work and tile, $43.50; John Breen, work, $4; J. Abrams, work, $2; James Lobb, $2.85; A. Godfrey, work, $21.20; J. M. Stout and men, crushing rock, $497.50.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Burgess of Toronto were holiday visitors with Mr and Mrs. David Burgess and Mr. James Paget at "Cedar Lodge."

The Misses Agnes and Laura Wight of Toronto were at the parental home "Cedar Isle" over the week-end and holiday.

Miss Ada Doupe returned Saturday to Toronto.

CARIBOU DISTRIBUTED IN ALASKA

SEWARD, Alaska, Nov. 11. (CP) Two thousand caribou, a cross between a large woodland caribou and a reindeer, are to be distributed among the reindeer herds of Alaska.

The herd has been built up through five years of experiment on Mumivak Island in the Bering Sea. The interbreeding has produced an animal 50 pounds heavier than either the caribou or the reindeer, W. B. Miller director of the work says.

MISSIONARY GIVES SPECIAL ADDRESS

W. M. S. of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church Holds Thankoffering Meeting.

The thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's church was held in the Sunday school room on Friday evening last. After devotional exercises taken by Mrs. H. B. Cowan and Mrs. Turner, a very pleasing solo was rendered by Mrs. G. McClelland, entitled "My Task."

The guest speaker was Mrs. J. Goforth of Manchuria, who gave a splendid expression of experiences on the Chinese mission field, recounting many trying and arduous incidents in the life of a missionary telling the heathen the way of the cross. She also stressed the great need in a most sympathetic manner inspiring in her listeners a renewed desire to help in this great and necessary work. A very sincere vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. W. Allan and all the ladies responded by standing. A generous offering was received, and Hymn 701, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again", was sung, closing a very profitable meeting with Miss Simpson offering the dedicatory prayer.

THE HOCKEY SEASON OPENS.

The National Hockey League began its long race for championship honors last night when the majority of the teams were seen in action.

The opening of the premier professional hockey organization is a sporting event that is almost on a par in point of interest with the beginning of a new baseball season in fact, from an international viewpoint it is perhaps even more notable.

To Canadians, despite the fact that the popularity with which hockey has won across the line has resulted in heavy inroads in the ranks of amateur teams and that the draining of these teams is likely to be increased as the professional leagues develop and expend, there is a great deal of satisfaction in the rapid climb of hockey as a major American sport.

Sport-loving people in this country are proud of the game as a virile, red-blooded, skilful and speedy sport worthy of being called the national pastime of a people who pride themselves upon possessing the qualities so abundantly demonstrated in hockey.

We are glad to know our neighbors enjoy this fine sport, and glad too, to offer it as a return for some of the entertainment we in our turn receive from the United States.

The time may come when it will be no longer possible for Canada to meet the demand from over the border for high-class hockey stars, but perhaps by that time the United States may have made some progress in developing its own players.

ARMISTICE DAY.

Once again the Armistice Day ceremonies are followed by a widespread expression of public opinion that in Canada a mistake has been made in choosing some other day than the actual anniversary of the signing of the armistice for the celebration of the end of the Great War.

There are many people who believe that the ceremonies should be reserved for the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month instead of being held in some cities on the Sunday before November 11 or in others on the Monday of that week.

Under the present conditions there is no uniformity, and the fine sentiment involved in having the whole country honor the memory of their heroic dead at the same hour is lost by this haphazard arrangement that leaves each community to choose the hour that seems most convenient.

Yesterday a visiting war veteran visited the local war memorial at Confederation Square expecting to participate in ceremonies appropriate to the occasion, and was surprised to find himself alone in front of the memorial when the eleventh hour came—only the wreaths placed at the base two days before serving to indicate that the war, its sacrifices and the death of hundreds of fine young citizens had not been entirely forgotten by the community.

It is to be hoped that the time will come when the fitness of having Armistice Day held on the actual anniversary will be recognized by the powers-that-be.

ON THE WRONG TRAIL.

The protest from Northern Ontario that the insistence of the Federal Government that the working hours under the employment relief scheme shall be eight hours a day is resulting in wage reduction for the workers would seem to be based on a wrong conception of what should be fair treatment for those given employment in this way.

If the men engaged in this relief work cannot make a fair living wage for eight hours' work, the fault surely must lie in the rate at which they are paid.

In the North the rate is 30 cents an hour, which provides a daily wage on the eight-hour basis of $2.40, and there is a strong agitation that the working hours shall be made ten hours in order to enable workers to earn $3.00 a day.

Surely it would be possible in the northern part of the Province to do what is being done in our own municipality and pay the workers 40c, which is a reasonable allowance, having regard to general conditions.

There is no reason why the unemployed in one part of the Province should have to work two hours longer and still receive less wages per day than their fellow-citizens in other sections.

Those in Northern Ontario who are clamoring for longer working hours would do much better if they endorsed the principle of the eight-hour day and demanded instead a more reasonable rate of wages.

To ask for a longer day to ensure a bigger pay envelope is to go backward.

NONE BETTER ANYWHERE.

Peterborough is one of the sixteen cities in Ontario in which retail merchants are co-operating this week with the Provincial Department of Agriculture in a campaign to impress the people of the Province with the fact that Ontario farm goods challenge world competition for value and quality.

The big feature of this drive will be a window dressing competition for which cash prizes, donated by the department, have been augmented locally.

Local merchants will feature and display all week Ontario fruits, vegetables, canned goods, dairy products, poultry, eggs and meats, with the keynote slogan, "We specialize in Ontario goods for Ontario people."

The campaign deserves to succeed, for its success means more to most people than they perhaps have realized.

It will directly aid the Ontario farmer, and as the Globe neatly puts it, "If the Ontario farmer can sell he will be able to buy."

And increased buying power among the farmers of the Province will be followed by better business for Ontario merchants and increased orders for Ontario factories.

When Ontario farm products, the world's best in quality, are available and when by their purchase we can help to create employment for Ontario industries, the wisdom of being careful to ask for home-grown farm foods should surely be apparent to every consumer.

IN THE U.S.A.

"A snarling wolf is howling at the nation's door as the first nip of winter brings its threat of added misery. Hundreds of able hands are snatching up clubs to drive the wolf away."

Thus does the Literary Digest graphically describ this week the economic conditions in the United States, giving a two-page review of the whole situation and quoting numerous big city dailies as to the efforts being made to alleviate distress. It is quite probable that only half the picture is painted in these papers, and if welfare workers could be heard from, the heart strings would be touched, as well as the national purse.

Take Cleveland, for instance. Here is what Roelif Loveland writes in the Cleveland Plain Dealer as to a group given employment in parks:

"Old men and young men and middle aged men were in that group typical of other groups throughout the park system yesterday.

"There were: Alfred Pauley, machinist, who, after being out of work for two years, was darned glad to get a hoe in his hand; George Demeza, machinist, out of work for seven months; Charles Keleshian, machinist, working for the first time in six months; Charles Hallowell, mechanic, without pay during last five months; George Malloy, punch-press operator, unemployed for five months, and George Betzold, machinist, who hadn't had any machines to tinker with for the last nine months.

"But now there was work, for a few at least, and they swung their picks and handled their hoes and shovels with gratitude.

"They carried in their shovels at quitting time and went home with a little more hope in their hearts. To-day they'll probably be pretty stiff from the unacustomed exercise. This will be accounted nothing. If you've got a job, you can buy liniment!"

The same conditions prevail in practically every city of the United States, and even in small towns.

It is just as well for Canadians to realize this, because it has been generally admitted that things are better in Canada all round, although the problem exists here as well. We are not too unwieldy in Canada to handle it. Our machinery should be better. There should be a minimum of distress this approaching winter if there should be any at all, and it is the general belief that better things are in store for the man out of work than have applied during the past months of favorable weather.

This is one crisis, however, in which the average Canadian can be thankful that he dwells in his own country.—St. Catharines Standard.

GREEKS SUPPORT PEACE MOVEMENT.

But for a passing reference made by Premier Eleuthcrios Venizelos the other day, the outside world would scarcely have realized that only about a week ago a revolt was nipped in the bud without disturbing the serenity of either the Greek nation or Government. The conspirators, headed by General Theodore Pangalos, who at one time posed in the role of dictator, thought they saw a favorable opportunity to start an uprising during the Premier's peace mission to Angola, the Turkish capital. It ended ignominously, however, when Pangalos and 200 officers who had supported the attempt were placed under arrest and accused of conspiracy against the peace of the state. These misguided individuals had judged that the Premier's absence would remove his great personal prestige and influence from the scene and they relied on a sudden and unexpected blow to strengthen their position and foment disaffection. They were confident also that the avowed purpose of Venizelos, that of arranging a treaty of peace and amity with the ancient oppressor and enemy of Greece, could be used so that it would appear a direct insult to the national self-respect.

If such were their motives the appeals on which they relied signally failed to interest the Greek populace. Evidently neither the leaders nor their supporters could command enough confidence to make their machinations formidable, nor was their record of a character that inspired faith in their ability to supply a stable administration. For Pangalos had been active in the uprisings that preceded the overthrow of the monarchy and in the frequent changes of government that marked the early days of the new republic. Pangalos, himself, in 1925, managed to become Premier and six months later assumed the role of dictator, from that stepping into the presidency. Then the cabal to which he owed his preferment engineered his downfall, arrested and imprisoned him in a fortress on the island of Crete. Tired of the constant discord and the unsettled conditions, the Greek people placed Venizelos in power, one of his first acts being to liberate Pangalos, who forthwith sank into obscurity and was defeated at the subsequent general election. His latest escapade showed that his previous record had not re-established him in public favor.

This early collapse of the would-be revolutionaries also served to reveal the marked change that has taken place in the attitude of the Greek people. Although the national humiliation sustained when the Greek army was driven out of Asiatic Turkey was keenly felt at the time and continued after the exchange of the alien populations, a generation is growing up that prefers a measure of security before the excitement of land conquest. Greece is learning to be content with its present boundaries and the effort to create a national issue out of enmity towards Turkey has not been welcomed. Rather are they inclined to support the determination of Venizelos to guide Greece along the path that will bring an era of peace and good-will. His negotiations of treaties making for the improvement of relations between Greece and its neighbors have been eminently successful, so much so, indeed, that they have enabled the country to recognize the benefit that will accrue from trade cultivation and development and concentration on the arts of peace instead of on the precarious advantages that are the only fruits of war. Greece is evidently prepared to readjust its attitude toward Turkey on a new basis, despite the appeals of self-seeking politicians.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Dominion status for India may be the result of the conference which began to-day. But will Dominion status satisfy the Indian Nationalists?

President Hoover declares that advertising "is one of the vital organs of our entire economic and social system."

Canadians should remember that their duty toward the men that fought does not end with the purchasing of poppies.

Time brings changes. A German flying boat landing in England on the eve of the twelfth anniversary of the end of the war was enthusiastically acclaimed.

THE SILVER HAWK

By

WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

At the mouth of an avalanche shed a good quarter mile from the Dead Waters, Dorn had to stop; he had run that distance at top speed carrying an awkward, limp burden in his arms. After cutting the wrist and ankle babisches from old Luke, he brought water in his helmet and worked with the Indian till Luke was sitting up.

"You bad hurt, huh?" Dorn asked in a whisper.

Luke flexed his numbed arms and legs, and felt of a burn on his naked thigh. He was bleeding from the nose, and his hair was a mat of blood from the clubbing he had taken when the 'breeds captured him; but he grunted "No." He demanded of Dorn:

"You kill 'em all down there, huh?"

"Why—no," Dorn whispered. He knew what was coming. Old Luke had murder in his heart. His primitive code demanded retaliation in blood upon enemies who had thrust hot iron against his flesh and had tied thongs to rocks to sink him in a lake. Dorn tried to head him off: "I had no chance. Had to grab you, tote you away, before 'breeds come—"

"Huh! You had knife, they lay tumbled there on ground; three, four jabs you kill 'em all."

Dorn knew he could never explain to old Luke his aversion to bloodshed. So he argued: Carter-Snowdon's disappearance would raise a hue and outcry, the Yellow-Stripes would come and trace the guilt, and there would be disastrous consequences for Aurore.

With a trip-hammer beating inside his skull, Luke was in no mood to reason. He snarled:

"You hyas fool, damn' fool! You try fight grizzly with pine bough! You 'bout like all other white man—look one way, row another. Indian paddle where look. When Indian has enemy, Indian kill'm. You . . bimeby you lose young squaw-siche. S'pose we go back to their camp; kill 'em all? . . ."

Because if fell in with what he had in mind, Dorn pretended to agree. He said: "Good. But you stay here; legs wobbly; no account in fight, I'll go down there again, sneak up, kill 'em this time."

He stepped into the mouth of the avalanche shed where the flare of his match was shielded, and prepared a second dynamite cartridge with extra long fuse. Then leaving the old Indian, he crept back along the grade, cut down through the trees and struck the lake edge two hundred yards above Carter-Snowdon's camp. Wading out to shoulder-deep water, he turned and paralleled the shore line, half-wading, half-swimmin; and while the 'breeds were combing the tamarack drogue for him, Dorn was lifting himself into the cockpit of the biplane which once had dogged him and which was a deadly threat against Aurore in her refuge two hundred miles north.

He saw Carter-Snowdon and the detective huddling over the fire, but not the 'breeds, and he guessed: "They're looking for me. They'll look still harder in a couple of minutes. This is worse than shaking a hornet's nest. I'd better take Luke and cut up along the mountain and get home that way."

He planted the cartridge against the rudder bar, lit the fuse, slipped overboard; and reaching a little headland up-shore, he turned to watch. When the explosion came it lifted the heavy machine off the water and tore the engine out of it and crumpled the wings; and a sheet of fire from the bursted gas tanks flared out across the water and lit up the demolished, sinking plane.

Dorn hurried on to the avalanche shed and found old Luke; and the two of them circled up through the mountain pines on their way back home.

CHAPTER XX

SKIRMISHING.

Contrary to what Dorn thought, this capture of Luke Illewahwacet had been more or less an accident; it was no part of the main plan which Soft Shoe had built up to locate Aurore McNain.

It is true that Soft-Shoe at first had counted on getting Dorn or the Indian into his power and so finding out where she was; but he had learned about the dynamite mine and all the precautions Dorn was taking, and he had given over the idea and turned to a more promising scheme. The 'breeds had merely been scouting around on Dorn's island that night—prowling about like slinker wolves to snap up whatever might happen their way; Soft-Shoe had pinned no hopes to them, and after Dorn wrecked the camp and wrested the old Indian out of their hands, Soft-Shoe turned back to his main plan and began pushing it.

By inquiry among the metis at the Station he had found out that Roger McNain and his daughter used to "pitch off" from Titan Pass for their summers in the wilderness, that old Luke had been their guide, that their general direction had been north from the railroad. He shrewdly guessed that wherever they had spent those vacations, there Aurore was hiding now; but a staggering lot of country lay north of the Canadian National, and Soft-Shoe was temporarily at a halt—till Yoroslaf supplied him with a bit of unexpected and priceless information.

Three winters ago Joe Yoroslaf had got into trouble up at Fort Liard. The Yellow-Stripe sergeant at Liard had been watching him suspiciously; the young and pretty Sikanni squaw whom Yoroslaf was living with was not his wife, and the segreant believed that the 'breed knew why her husband had failed to come back from running a deadfall line one blizzard week. A baby was born. Yoroslaf thrust it through the ice of a river, because it was not his own, and because it cried too much. He had amassed considerable experience at covering up crimes, but this time, in some unaccountable way, "the moosebird started talking"; and with the sergeant three pipes behind him Yoroslaf broke for the huge wilderness south of the Lost River Dutchman's post, and escaped. A woolly-whipper caught him in the mountains. For a whole midwinter moon the snow kept climbing up, up, up to the first limbs of the spruces; the Lord Sun was cached: the storm howled down from the land of the Yukon-iho-tannah like ten million loupgarou. During the blizzard Yoroslaf stumbled upon a cabin on an island, and after the storm abated he wandered on south and finally came out to the Canadian National; and hearing that Titan Pass was free of Yellow-Stripes, he went there and grew face-hair.

Now, when Soft-Shoe heard about that cabin—particularly about its comfortable furniture, its double walls and two rooms—he knew that there was the place Aurore was in refuge. Yoroslaf had only a hazy idea how far north from Titan Pass the cabin was; the storm had bewildered him, he had come south by a circuitous route, and his mind in general now was bleary from rotgut houtchini. But he did remember that the lake lay along the old Carrier trade-path, and he did know that by following the trail he could not help finding the lake. He told Soft-Shoe.

"You take me, Charlo, Narcisse, up north in an air machine, set us off; we hunt each way on trail, find cabane hiyu quick."

When Dorn had dynamited the plane that night, Soft-Shoe's scheme was delayed for several days, till Carter-Snowdon brought in a new four-place biplane, together with a small swift monoplane to match Dorn's Silver Hawk. This pursuit craft, carrying a machine gun and a gunner, was to act as convoy to the heavy ship and to shoot Dorn out of the air so that he could not prevent them from closing in upon Aurore.

Then one morning when Dorn was busy mapping a nameless river far away west of Aurore's lake, the two machines went north and set off the three metis; and after arranging a signal system with the 'breeds when they should find Aurore, they came back to Faux Mortes to wait and to watch for a chance to "get" Dorn.

Left in that wilderness, Yoroslaf climbed a neighbouring giant and from its eyrie pinnacle swept and studied the country with long-range glasses. North at the limit of vision he made out a fiery-coloured mesa and a horseshoe range ridden by a star-shaped glacier; and they stirred bague memories in his brain; and he guessed, correctly, that the lake he sought nestled somewhere in that region. It was not his intentio to split the reward money with Charlo and Narcisse; he coveted it all for his own sweet own. So he directed the two 'breeds to work south along the Carrier trail; but he himself, with light tump-pack and rifle, hurried north—toward Aurore's lake.

Dorn's own machine gun came—an air-cooled Lewis. He managed to instal it in a cockpit already crowded, and took it with him on all his trips. Then old Luke, who went scouting every day with his nose up-wind, brought him word of Carter-Snowdon's swift pursuit craft which carried not only double machine guns but a gunner to operate them.

That news hit Dorn hard. He saw this struggle now shaping toward an aerial battle between him and the fighting plane, and he knew that in such a battle, when he would have to pilot the Silver Hawk and work the unsynchronized Lewis too, his own craft would probably go down in flaming wreckage. Dorn never dwelt on the consequences to himself, but only to Aurore. He thought: "This skirmishing will be over with one of these days. When the end comes, it'll come quick and hard. Aurore shouldn't be dependent upon me alone. It's too terrible a risk now. Her safety and protection shouldn't hang on any one person. If they 'get' me they'll 'get' Luke too, so that he could never tell tales. Then nobody would know where Aurore is. She could never come out; she'd die there . . . or some 'breed would happen along. . ."

There was one man he could turn to and pin faith to. He wrote a letter to Kansas Eby relating how Aurore McNain had come to him that night of the meti dance, how he had taken her north, how Carter-Snowdon had established his identity, had fought him, and now had brought against him an armed plane. With this usual restraint Dorn wrote: "If and when you get this letter, son, I'll no longer be doing business; I'm instructing Dad Bergelot to deliver it to you only in case of some 'accident' to myself, for this is my fight, not yours; and to tell you the truth I'm jealous of my privilege of watching out for Aurore McNain. But when you get this, that privilege will have passed to you. Don't betray that you're partner of mine by coming over here and trying to find out what happened to me. Stay away from here. Go north immediately to Aurore and meet her. I know you will like her; and aside from my asking you to, I know you will look out for her to the limit of a man's ability.

"She has told me nothing about her trouble or what stands between her and Henry Carter-Snowdon, but I believe she will tell you because she will know at once that you are human, whereas she seems to think I am an ogre or a sword or a flaming judgment."

Along with this letter Dorn enclosed a map showing Kansas how to get to Aurore's lake; and one night he handed the message over to old Bergelot.

During that interval when his enemies had no planes, and so there was no danger of them air-trailing him, Dorn had visited the Lake of the Dawn every day, at morning or at evening. He would skim over the towering peak-line and drop; and circling once or twice above her island, would wave to Aurore there on the jutting boulder and catch the tiny flutter of her kerchief in answer; but he had no reason to light except to be with her, and there was every reason why that should not be. With no presumption in the world toward Aurore McNain but rather with astonishment that it should be true, Dorn knew that Aurore liked him; and after what she had told him that evening of the rainstorm, he felt it would be dishonest if he should keep on visiting her.

Then after Carter-Snowdon had brought in those two new planes and Dorn could never feel positive that a shiny speck was not hanging somewhere in the sky watching him, he stayed away from Aurore altogether. Each day he put in double his limit of flying hours at cartography; it was high-tension work that kept him from thinking too much, that burned up his nervous energy and made sleep possible when he homed to Titan Pass. At times when he passed within a couple dozen miles of her lakeit seemed that his very compass needles swung in Aurore's direction, and the Silver Hawk seemed to side-slip toward that fiery mesa; but rather than endanger her in the slightest degree, he denied himself even a mere distant glimpse of her.

It was during one of those early days, when Dorn was not afraid of being air-trailed, that Kansas Eby discovered where Aurore was hidden.

At the Lost River Dutchman's post a hundred miles north of the Lake of the Dawn, Kansas had stopped late one afternoon to take on gas and oil from the emergency drums which he and Dorn had planted there. The Dutchman told him that Dorn had just been there and gone straight south. Wanting to talk with his partner, Kansas whipped south full-throttle on Dorn's trail. After a long chase he finally sighted the Silver Hawk far ahead. Watching, he saw the graceful plane skim over a peak-line, dip completely out of sight into a mountain valley, and finally appear and wing on toward home. He thought: "That's a queer manœuvre —losing seven thousand feet of altitude; what did he think he was doing, anyway?"

When he himself sailed out over the blue, beautiful lake and its seven islands, Kansas looked under keel and he fairly jumped, and his hands dropped from the controls when he saw a small human figure on a jutting boulder far away beneath him. Seizing binoculars, he drew the figure close; and once again he swore: "For Lord's sake, it's that girl! Here's where Jim's got her!" Aurore was waving to him, and Kansas realized that to an amateur eye his plane looked like the Silver Hawk. "She thinks I'm Jim, come back!" While he leaned half out of the cockpit with his machine lurching and yawing, he remembered Aurore as he had seen her that night in the lighted vestibule and as she flitted away from him in the cedars; and curiosity ate him up. He thought: "Jim won't tell me anything about her; by the Lord I'll see for myself; I saw her first anyway!"

He shut off ignition and pushed the stick forward and went down in a thundering dive.

A Thought

BEAUTY.

Most of us are practically deaf to the marvelous beauties that are seeking admittance to our minds from the commonest everyday sources. Preoccupation in our troubles, real or imaginary, or dissatisfaction with our life's portion shuts us out from enjoyment of the most beautiful and wonderful things in the universe—things that money could never buy, but which are free to all. Yet these things were all planned for our enjoyment.

What To-day Means To You

"SCORPIO."

If November 12th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a.m. to noon, and from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. Nothing of an important or a compromising nature should be attempted between the hours of 2 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.

There are liable to be signs of dissension on this date and differences with relatives and friends. It will be necessary to exercise great self-control, as only such an attitude can overcome the dangers of strife to which you will be subjected.

A child born on this November 12th, although disappointing in its years of infancy, will develop into a person of determination and concentration.It will also be blessed with patience and a keen and an active mind, and considerable executive ability in the home or office.

Your future is a strong one, and you are very emphatic. You have a deep love of knowledge, not superficial, but fundamental—and science in all its branches makes a strong appeal to you. Gifted with a number of talents—all of which you should cultivate to the nth degree—you are imaginative and poetical and sentimental. Your power of concentration is very strong, so is your will. You impose the latter more freely on yourself than on others.

The "fly in the ointment" is that curiosity predominates in your make-up, and you are a wee bit too fond of gossip to make a safe and reliable friend. You must learn to appreciate the advantages of a still tongue.

Your disposition is a merry one, and, as an entertainer, you are interesting and congenial. You are extremely affectionate, but you are not so conservative with this kindly attribute as prudence dictates. Your tastes are cosmopolitan, rather than individual.

The signs denote that not until middle life will you come into your own, and there is a nebulous indication that some unexpected and good fortunes may befall you at hat time. You are unduly optimistic, and in your cock-sureness that everything will come out all right, you never take or make precautions for unexpected contingencies. While always hoping for the best, it is wise to prepare for the worst. In this way, success is attainable, while defeat does not necessarily spell failure.

SCHOOL CHILDREN SOCIETY'S GUESTS

Nominating Committee for Election of Officers Appointed by Wooler W.M.S.

WOOLER, Nov. 12 (Examiner Correspondence).—The members of the Women's Missionary Society gathered in the church parlors on Tuesday at 11 a.m. when lunch was served by Mrs. John Alley and her group. The school children from the Public and High schools enjoyed the hot lunch provided.

Mrs. S. L. Terrill presided for the meeting which opened at 2 p.m., the usual opening excercises being observed. The president gave a synopsis of the address given by Mrs. J McGillivray, of Toronto, at the United Church, Brighton. Mrs. Lloyd Dorland favored the members with a vocal solo and Mrs. Clarence McMasters gave a talk on the early missionary work in Asia, this being both interesting and instructive.

A nominating committee was appointed to arrange for the election of officers for the next meeting.

QUEENSBORO MAN IS 92 YEARS OLD

Thomas Whiteman Spent Lifetime in Tweed and Barrie Districts.

STILL QUITE ACTIVE.

QUEENSBORO, Nov. 12.—(Examiner Correspondence.) — Thomas Whiteman, one of the oldest residents of Addington county, on Monday, Nov. 10, celebrated his 92nd birthday. Mr. Whiteman was born in Bedfordshire, near Bedford, England, in 1838 and came to Canada when he was one year old. With the other members of his family, he settled near Goose Lake, in Shiefield township, but spent his earlier days mostly in Hungerford, near Tweed. He has lived in Barrie township for the past sixty-five years. He has one brother, Charles, living on the Gore between Shifield and Hungerford. These are the only two left of the family of twelve children. Mrs. Joshua Lloyd, Northbrook, Mrs. Samuel Sedore, Tweed, Mrs. John Morgan, Green Bay, Michigan and Mrs. Daniel Young, Barrie township, are daughters, Thomas in Barrie township, William, near Toronto and Joshua in Flint, Michigan, are sons.

Mr. Whiteman has good use of all his faculties and is smart for his age.

Officers Elected For Tweed Amusement Co.

TWEED, Nov. 12 (Examiner Correspondence). — The annual meeting of Tweed Amusement L.T.D. was held in the Council Chamber recently, when T. Moffatt read the auditor's report which showed total receipts for the season to be $2,399.17 and expenditures of $2,071.33.

During the year the debt was reduced by $300 and two years' taxes and interest were also paid. There is still a debt of $1200 on the property and a big effort will be made to wipe this off during the coming year.

John Quinn was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for his work in connection with the play "Aunt Lucia" which was presented a short time ago.

All officers for the coming year were re-elected.

Club Organized

The annual meeting of the Tweed Hockey Club was held in the Council Chamber for organizing purposes when there was some discussion regarding the future propects of hockey in Tweed. The local team will be strengthened and will make a bid for the championship.

The following officers were elected: Hon. Presidents, W. S. Gordon and W. E. Tummon, M.P.; president, T. E. Moffatt; vice president, James Ryan; secretary-treasurer, Harry Myles; manager, T. Beatty; delegates to annual meeting at Stirling, T. Moffatt and T. Beatty.

What is declared to be the heaviest drawbridge in the world has just been opened to connect the Columbus Pier at Bremerhaven, Germany, with the hinterland.

CANADIAN MINES SHUT DOWN AS RESULT BASE METAL PRICES

Granby Consolidated Announces Suspension of Allenby Operations From November 15.

6 MONTHS' SUSPENSION.

TORONTO, Nov. 12 (Special to The Examiner—Improvement in demand for copper stocks in New York was reported to-day. According to authorities it would not be surprising if advance in price took place within the next 48 hours to be followed by a series of minor increases as soon as plans for curtailment of output have been officially ratified. Though source of the rumor could not be traced, gossip in the boardroom was to the effect the London copper quotations had already been advanced. The street is still at a loss to explain continued softness of the higher priced gold stocks. This group has made an unusually firm showing during past months of declining security prices, but appears at present to be suffering under light liquidation and lack of support.

One well-known broker, commenting on the situation, was of the opinion of weakness in Teck Hughes, following publication of the company's annual report, and may have had an adverse influence on the golds, creating nervousness with regard to other holdings. He reports some selling has come from New York on what he knows to have been margin account which would appear to indicate presence of liquidation forced by conditions on other markets.

Mines Shut Down.

Another suspension of operations as a result of low base metal prices is reported among Canadian mines. Granby Consolidated has announced that the Allenby operations will temporarily be suspended from November 15.

While at this time a statement on the matter is impractical it is understood the closure will remain in force until there is definite improvement in copper prices. This may be from three to six months, according to western opinion. Important New York interests are understood to be sponsoring renewal of development work at the Matheson property of Sudbury Dowling Mines Limited, diamond drilling is to be started immediately and continued throughout the winter. Negotiations are at present under way for listing of the company's stock of the New York Produce Exchange. In connection with the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of Internaitonal Nickel Company of Canada it is interesting to note that reports of improving business are being confirmed. Financial counsel, in answer to an inquiry made of President R. C. Stanley, received a statement that the October business of the company was considerably better than that of September.

This is definite corroboration of rather vague intimations that have appeared lately with regard to the company's prospects for the final quarter of 1930. During October, Alaska Juneau Gold Mining applied $126,465 toward retiring funded debt, bringing the total amount of the original issue of $3,500,000 7 per cent. ten-year gold bonds to $150,000 now outstanding. It now appears certain the company will be able to retire its funded debt completely this year and, after accumulation of small surplus, inaugurate dividends on the common stock in the early part of 1931. For the first ten months ended October 31, profit amounted to $858,300 before depreciation and federal taxes.

Winnipeg Review

Special Service to The Examiner through the courtesy of E. J. Bawlf Company, Grain and Stock Brokers, of Toronto

Following the opening break of around three cents yesterday morning, which was based on the extreme weakness in outside markets Monday morning while Winnipeg closed, wheat showed further weakness before the noon hour, and prices on the extreme dip were 3⅝ to 4⅜ below the close on Saturday. The bulk of the business was done in the first hour when longs liquidated their holdings while a certain amount of buying against the daily bids was going on with odd job lots being filled on the scale down or on the break. During the last hour there was a reaction of ¼ cents from the bottom on the news that it was snowing in Alberta, and during the final moments the market took another little flurry upward with a few belated shorts covering with offerings very light. The trade yesterday was practically all local, as American markets were closed, and while there was possibly a little export business worked on the break, it was quite small. In the cash market there was a fair demand for most grades, with offerings light and spreads unchanged to ¼ better. Exporters did a fairly good business over the week-end, sales of Manitobas being estimated at 750,000 bushels, but very little was done Monday night, if any. Flour business continues quiet, but there appears to be sufficient business coming in from time to time to keep mills running. Liverpool closed ⅞ to 1 penny lower, not fully following the decline in Chicago Monday. The Canadian visible decreased 2,185,000 bushels, but this does not mean very much. The situation looks weak. There is too much wheat in the country and no confidence in higher prices, while Argentine weather conditions are now said to be favorable. Winnipeg futures closed from 3 to 3¼ lower, the deferred months being the weakest.

Coarse Grains.—These markets were all weak. A little domestic business was reported to Eastern Canada since Saturday, but it was only in a small way. Rye followed the trend of wheat, and was very weak, with no demand from any quarter. Oats closed 1¼ to 1¾ lower, barley 1⅛ to 1⅜ lower, rye 3¾ to 3¼ lower.

Flax.—General liquidation was going on by tired and disgusted holders which found no buying demand, and as a result prices broke sharply closing from 6¾ to 9¾ cents lower.

Liverpool due ⅜ to ⅝ lower based on Winnipeg.

HIGHER TONE ON MINE LIST

Noranda and Hudson Bay Advances Following Strength in Copper Shares.

GOLD STOCKS FIRMER.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 12.—(CP)—Rumors of developments in the copper situation were rife on the mining market to-day and feeling throughout the list showed mild improvement.

Copper shares were reported stronger in New York. Better sentiment being reflected in small advances for both Noranda and Hudson Bay. Nickel was easier, however, and Sherritt Gordon, the only Lindsley issue to move, dropped 12 to a new low for the stock of 58.

Copper statistics published to-day, showed a small decline in production of U.S. Mines and Smelters but another increase to slightly over 600,000 tons in stocks of metal above ground in North and South America. New York opinion is that a small advance in price will follow official ratification of plans for curtailment of production and an increase in London copper price was also rumored.

The higher-priced gold stocks, which have suffered under light liquidation and small demand for the past day or so, were somewhat firmer, Lake Shore recovering a quarter to $21 and Teck Hughes 5 to $5.40. Dome dropped to $8 even, however, and Kirkland Lake Gold, Wright-Hargreaves and Mining Corporation were off 4 each at midday.

East Crest reported to have second best production record of Turner Valley companies during October, was up 5 to 70. Nordon Fell 6 to 53, Calmont a couple to 35 and balance of oil section was unchanged.

LIQUID STOCKS SLIGHTLY LOWER

While Food and Chain Stores Mostly Unchanged as Were the Steels.

TRADING SLACKENS.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 12.—(CP)—Relentless pressure against stocks in New York was not without one effect locally but the remarkable feature of the Toronto Stock Exchange market was its ability to maintain present levels or at best to record only minor fraction recessions. Where prices went down, trading slackened.

Buyers on the floor are in majority, but they are waiting, not reaching for stocks. Orders are placed with a limit, consequently buyers wait for those with stocks to make the first move.

Brazilian Traction and International Nickel at midday were selling practically unchanged from where they had left off last night, the former at 25 5-8 to 25¾ and the latter at 17½ or better. C.P.R. held out at 41, while B. A. oil at 15 and Imperial at 17 were unchanged. Imperial dipped below 17 for a time, but snapped back again. International Petroleum was less favored and sold off to 13 5-8. The beverage stocks were soft and slightly lower. Food and chain store issues were mostly unchanged, as were the steels. Ford of Canada slid back to 19, the figure at which it sold earlier this week.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND BRIEFS

A SPECIAL SERVICE TO THE EXAMINER

So soon as the world becomes ill, the economist physicians, the political quacks, gather round the bedsides make their diagnosis and prescribe their cure also and public expects the patient to be up and around as usual next day. The truth is there must be a period of convalescence, time is a necessary healer. As for the opiates to sooth the patient while time passes, there will necessarily be dispute. There are those who loudly shout the ill is mental only, that we are in the midst of good times if we will believe so and that the surest way of overcoming this mental ill is by free spending. Inflation is the keyword of this school. The opposite party, those who are a powerful but less noisy body, advocate deflation. Touching on this controversy, the Brookmire Forecaster believes the expansion of bank credit which results from growing prosperity eventually reaches its limit in the amount of reserves available as did last year—world gold reserves falling to 41 per cent of the central bank liabilities outstanding. The reverse process is then forced that is, deflation. Savings decline at the height of prosperity, causing bank inflation to be that much greater.

If, then, inflation is the real cause of depression, the proper cure would be not more inflation, but deflation and this the world seems to be getting. Since the close of the corporation's fiscal year, June 30, 1930, National Steel Car has improved its liquid position with the amount of funds on call and invested in bonds as well as cash on hand showing substantial increase. As of June 30, 1930, the company had cash on hand and in the bank of approximately $20,000, call loans of $650,000 and investments of practically $3,300 at the end of September last cash of hand was in excess of $125,000 and call loans and investments were close to $1,000,000 with total cash assets of over $1,150,000. This improvement in cash assets has been reflected in increased working capital and the corporation generally has improved its position. Earnings are admittedly lower than in the record breaking 1928-1929 fiscal year, but in that period National Steel Car had profit available for distribution on the ordinary shares equal to $8.83 a share against annual dividend requirement of only $2 a share.

Directors Optimistic.

Directors of Canadian companies are showing confidence in the future by declaring dividends for 1930, even though unearned. It is common knowledge that International Nickel did not earn the required 25 cents in the third quarter of 1930 and financial statements already presented have shown some companies who found it necessary to draw on surplus to meet payments for the period. Fortunately, there are a large number of corporations having accumulated surplus sufficient to meet dividend payments for years into the future. It is not that such companies intend to greatly deplete surplus in paying unearned dividends over a protected period but that officials believe the present reduction in earning power is only temporary and accumulated profit and loss balance is being used to tide the company over until sufficient improvement takes place that will permit payment of dividend out of current earnings.

With the declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on the ordinary stock of International Nickel declaration on an initial dividend of 62½ for the quarter on the new $25 par value common shares of the Canadian Pacific Railway and declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 12½ cents a share and an extra of 50 cents a share by Imperial Oil, all payable in December, dividend distributions by Canadian Corporation show promise of setting a new high record within the next month. International Nickel will distribute $2,439,552; Imperial Oil $16,587,823 and Canadian Pacific $8,325,000 a total of $28,352,375 which is equal to approximately $3 per person for the entire population of the Dominion. At the moment it would appear that the member will see the passing of at least two high marks for dividends payment by Canadian companies.

The large case distribution by Imperial Oil probably constitutes the largest single cash disbursement in the history of the Dominion and should other companies maintain their regular payments due next month it is altogether likely that a new high mark for any one month of any year will be established. It is all the more interesting in view of the fact that this huge total comes at the end of a year which has proven very trying for Canadian industry and one that has met with generally reduced profit.

Youth Steals Poultry From Father's Farm

LONDON, Ont., November 12 (C.P.). — Orval Goldrick, Strathroy youth, found himself charged with the theft of 19 chickens from his father's farm in Metcalf Township, when he appeared in the County Police Court to-day in company with another Strathroy youth. Goldrick and Wesley Douglas are alleged by county police to have stolen the valuable birds from the elder Goldrick's hen house on the night of Thanksgiving.

According to Constable Fred Alfred, Goldrick had been living apart from his father in Strathroy. Late at night, it is alleged that the two youths drove in a car to within a mile of the Goldrick farm in Metcalf Township, making their way on foot to the hen house. They accomplished their purpose with such quickness and lack of noise that Mr. Goldrick never suspected his loss.

PRICES ARE LOW ON MANUSCRIPTS

Work Thought Retraction of Much Written in "Jane Eyre" By Charlotte Bronte Brings $25.

FIRST EDITIONS CHEAP.

(By Thomas T. Champion, C. P. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Nov. 12.—A partial revival of interest in the work of the Bronte family has been noticeable lately. More than ordinary interest was taken today in the sale at Sotheby's of the manuscript considered to be a retraction by Charlotte Bronte of much that she wrote in "Jane Eyre", which hitherto was regarded as a faithful description of her early school life.

This manuscript, it was stated before the sale, had been wrongly described in the catalogue. It was not a forgery but was not written in Charlotte's hand. Consequently it sold for only $26, whereas had it been a true manuscript it would have realized something like $5,000.

The Lowood Institution of the novel is known to have been the clergy daughters' school at Casterton, founded by Rev. W. Carus-Wilson, who figures in the novel as "the black marble clergyman", and the Rev. M. Brocklehurst, who among other efforts "to mortify in their girls the lusts of the flesh" summarily ordered that all their curly top-knots should be cut off.

Hitherto it has always been held that Charlotte Bronte maintained to the end of her days that her account of school life at Casterton was not over-colored. But in the 18 manuscript pages offered to-day is such an extraordinary passage as: "It would occupy too much space to relate the many incidents that occurred during my long pupilage at Casterton, but one circumstance which gave us all pleasure must not be omitted, and that was a visit from our beloved friend and pastor, who always welcomed us with a smile and had a kind encouraging word for all, indeed he took a most lively interest in all our proceedings and it was a scourage of comfort to him when he received tidings of our good report". Yet this "beloved friend and pastor" was he who had described little Jane Eyre as "worse than many a little heathen who says its prayers to Brahma and kneels before Juggernaut, indeed this girl is a liar."

A first edition of Barrie's "Better dead" realized $100, while a three-volume first edition of Lorna Doone brought about $330, the three-volume first edition of Trollope's Barchester Towers, $10; first edition of "Framley Parsonage" only $2.50, and his "Small House at Allington" $28.

Against these poor prices were contrasted the $425 paid for the original manuscript of Kipling's "Last Chantey" and the $33,150 paid yesterday for Kipling's "Recessional", an autographed manuscript.

BODY OF UNKNOWN MAN HELD.

MONTREAL, Que., November 12 (C.P.). — A man whose name is believed to be Brooksmith, first name and address unknown, who was brought to the Montreal General Hospital last night suffering from pneumonia, died to-day. His body has been taken to the morgue. The man was about 60 years, 5 feet 7 inches in height, and weighing 125 pounds.

The body is being held at the morgue for identification.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 12 (C.P.) — Bart Manning, former vice-president of the Union Trust Company, Detroit, and former president of the St. Clair Golf and Country Club, near Windsor, was found this morning lying in a ditch at Lochmoor village, with a bullet wound in his left side. Nearby was a revolver with four empty shells. Manning was reported to have lost millions of dollars in the stock market crash last year.

MANY LOSSES ARE RECORDED

Few Prominent Issues Only Ones to Resist Light Selling Pressure.

U. S. STEEL OFF TWO

(By Claude A. Jagger, Associated Press Financial Editor)

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The stock market was a pallid affair during the early hours of trading to-day, but yesterday's flush of recovery reappeared.

The market was quiet but save in a few prominent shares. It was unable to resist light selling pressure, and losses of 2 to 5 points were numerous. An unexpected advance of ¼ cent in copper, to 10 cents a pound, with reports that large producers were holding out for still higher prices, caused a rally in the copper shares, but further heaviness of the rails kept the list unsettled.

U. S. Steel sold off 2 points, then recovered. American Telephone dropped 4, and recovered 2. Shares declining 3 to 5 points to new lows included Union Pacific, Atchison, Missouri Pacific Preferred, Radio Preferred "B", Penney, Lehigh Valley and American Tobacco "B". Shares selling off 2 to 4 included American Water Works, Dupont, Air Reduction, American Can, Coca Cola, Consolidated Gas, General Electric, Radio, Westinghouse and Alleghany Corp.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Dome Mines, Limited.

Of considerable interest to shareholders of Dome Mines, Limited, is the announcement of the official putting into operation of the new mill on November 6, exactly a year since the disastrous fire. The mill is presently being tuned-up and will operate 1,500 tons per day.

Dome is conservatively capitalized at 1,000,000 shares of no par value. All are issued with the exception of 48,666 shares which have been placed in trust for the Company with the Trusts & Guarantee Company, Limited, the accruing dividends being placed in the treasury. The dividend rate is $1.00 per share per year, being 25 cents quarterly.

Dome is in an excellent financial position, the cash per share value being $7.00. That is to say, should the Company decided to wind up affairs, assets of $6,689,939 would be readily realizable. Seven dollars per share, however, is an extremely ultra-conservative figure and does not take into consideration the many years of profitable production ahead of the mine. It is interesting to note that the insurance realized from the destroyed mill, together with the amount reclaimed from the debris, more than pays for the cost of the new mill. So for the year of non-production the only expense faced by the management will be the divided requirement and cost of underground development work, the former being paid out of the "Dividend Assurance Fund," established years ago for just such an emergency.

Favorable Statement.

The Company's statement for the 9 months is a most noteworthy one. In spite of the fact that the mill was not operating during the period under review, the net loss was only about $3,500. The actual operating loss of $257,500 was largely offset by the non-operating revenue of $254,000. Since the closing down, one year ago, nearly 300,000 tons of new ore has been put in sight, with enough broken ore to feed the mill for one year. Ore reserves, however, have been conservatively estimated at at least four years' supply. Dome's potential wealth cannot be based on this estimate, as it is not consistent to good mine management to develop ore too far in advance of milling requirements. Average grade of ore is placed at $7 to $8 per ton, although higher grade is anticipated in the future.

It is interesting to note that, in the past, Dome has easily earned twice its dividend requirement of $1.00 per year, so that with a better grade of ore being fed to the mill, the possibility of an increased dividend is not too remote. With the shares currently quoted around $8.50 Dome's yield is 11.76 per cent.

In view of the foregoing, it can readily be ascertained that the purchase of Dome at present prices may be considered as a superlative speculative investment offering attractive profit-making possibilities. Not only is the yield exceptionally high, but chances of a market appreciation in the near future are excellent. The shares of this premier Canadian gold mine should be accumulated at current levels.
